Second National Convention of Workers Party Makes History in American Class Struggle

Convention Is Opened with International

With the spirited singing of "The International", the Second National Convention of the Workers Party opened its sessions at the New Yorker Ballroom Temple, Sunday, Dec. 24.

The convention was called to order by the party secretary, C. E. Ruthenberg, who declared that the work of the gathering was to determine the tactics and policies of the party for the coming year, to build a stronger and more powerful organization with which to struggle toward our goal.

William F. Dunne was elected chairman, and J. Louis Engdahl, Jay Lovestone, Committees were elected as follows:

Report of the Central Executive Committee:

Resolutions: William F. Dunne, New York; H. M. Wicks, New York; J. Sullivan, St. Louis; Caleb Harrison, Cleveland; Alexander, Battle, New York.

C. E. C. Report Presented

Secretary Ruthenberg read the report of the Central Executive Committee reviewing the work of the party since its first convention one year ago. The report showed the rapid growth of the party organization, the average membership for March, April, May and June being, 20,000, while for July, August, September and October it had gone up to 37,394, the dues payments for October showing 14,556 members, incomplete reports for November showing 16,500 dues stamps sold.

"It is a safe estimate," declares the report, "that with all the new members recently added to the party thru the Chicago-Slovak Federation, the Michigan Federation, and the United Toilers, that the dues payments for December and January will reach a total of 20,000."

The report makes a special appeal for the building up of the English-speaking membership of the party, the main strength of the party now being in 16 foreign language federations, with the possibility of five more joining the party in the near future. As the words of Secretary Ruthenberg, we will have "an international party all our own".

The report reviews the extensive political campaigns of the party and the industrial work during the past year, also the party's defense work, which has taken on new proportions since the Michigan raid resulting in ents to the abolition of the capitalist social system of profit and plunder.

The Workers Party takes its stand as the defender of the rights of the foreign-born workers, it espouses the cause of the oppressed Negro workers and takes its stand in support of all the class war prisoners.

The party takes its stand against mass emigration of workers to Soviet Russia, feeling that "revolutionary determination can be expressed only by American workers remaining in America and fighting for their emancipation here".

While recognizing the necessity of foreign-language sections, the party demands that their activities be centralized to make the party an effective organization.

Similar centralization and discipline is demanded for the party press, developing that strength that will make it possible to launch in the near future, a Communist daily, the forerunner of a powerful daily press fighting for Communism in the United States.

The necessity for work among the youth and among women workers was recognized and steps taken to promote these activities.

A program for educational work was adopted in recognition of the need for "primary and advanced education in economics and communist tactics in political and labor union work among our party membership.

Resolutions were adopted calling upon the workers to join in a great movement to compel the government of the United States to recognize Soviet Russia and to grant a long time loan for the economic reconstruction of Russia; approving the aims of the Russian-American Industrial Corporation, denouncing the American Legion and Ku Klux Klan, and urging workers to join the World War Veterans, urging all members to become readers of the "Labor Herald," and endorsing the action of the Central Executive Committee in meeting the crisis in the Jewish Section of the Party.

It was with a tremendous feeling of satisfaction that the convention elected the party's central executive committee for the coming year, adopted a cablegram to be sent to the Communist International, and then adjourned with the singing of "The Internationa!" to attend a banquet arranged by Local New York of the party.

We Arrive Thru Struggles

Frequently there crept into the discussions of the convention an indication of some of the struggles thru which the Communist movement in this country has passed before arriving at its present stage of effectiveness.

The delegates were enthused over the fact that on the eve of the assembling of the convention the last of the comrades taken in the Michigan raid had been released. Many of them sat as delegates in the convention including Ouinn, Ruthenberg, Hall, Harrison, Lambkin, Browder, Krumbein, Sullivan, Talltentire and Lerner.

Some of the delegates were but recently released from the Illinois state prison at Joliet, where they had been sent as former members of the Communist Labor Party. These included Ludwig Lore and Niels Kjar.

Delegate James Dolsen had been one of 600 recently on trial as former Communist Laborites at Oakland, Calif. The jury had disagreed and the indictment has since been dismissed.

Many other delegates have spent more or less time in prisons in this country for their loyalty to labor including Wicks, Lindgren and Merrick, who spent 31 months in the Western Pennsylvania Penitentiary for strike activities. Others have been faced with deportation proceedings, while the remainder, if they have not been subject to extreme capitalist persecution in this country, have faced it unflinchingly in the European countries from which they have come.

It may truthfully be said that the great majority of the delegates have gone to prison, at one time or another, to help build up the Communist movement, in this country, that is now the medium thru which greater and more effective Communist work will be carried on during the months ahead.

When the capitalist government of the United States struck at the American Communist movement in January, 1920, sending thousands to prison, it was declared that Communism had been wiped out in America.

Thru the Second National Convention of the Workers Party, Communism rises more powerful, mightier than ever, more firmly entrenched in the hearts and in the minds of the exploited working men and women of America.

REPLY OF THE WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA

W. Moriarty, Toronto, Canada.

The Second National Convention of the Workers Party of America notes with pleasure the establishment of the Workers Party of Canada. Following the same general leadership and attacking closely related problems, the Workers Party of America and Workers Party of Canada will mutually strengthen and assist each other. To the action of the Workers Party of Canada meeting in Toronto, February, 1923, we extend heartiest greetings and instruct the Central Executive Committee to send if possible a fraternal delegate to deliver this message in person and to advise with the Canadian comrades.

C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary.

"Keep Up Fight for the Labor Party!" Decision of Workers Party Convention

Unanimous approval of the action of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, in its campaign for the Labor Party, and in sending delegates to the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action, was voiced by the delegates to the party convention.

It was the feeling of the delegates that the entrance of the Workers Party into the struggle for the Labor Party marked its first appearance as a political force in this country.

The party secretary, C. E. Ruthenberg, one of the delegates to Cleveland, made the report on this question, followed by a discussion in which a large number of the delegates took part.

"The labor party movement is a movement springing out of the new experiences of the workers," said Ruthenberg. "We must be a part of that movement. We must cease to be a sect. We must cease to be a segregated organization."

The resolution on this question adopted by the convention follows:

Resolution on the Labor Party

1. The Second Convention of the Workers Party greets with joy the movement of the industrial workers, farm laborers, tenant farmers and working farmers for the formation of a Labor Party. It sees in this movement for independent political action a new consciousness of the character of the existing system of exploitation and the government which upholds and protects it, which will ultimately develop into a mass struggle to establish the Workers Republic and the Rule of the Workers. We approve of the action of the Central Executive Committee in actively participating in this campaign and in sending delegates to the Cleveland Conference.

2. The formation of the labor party does not mean that we will liquidate the Workers Party. The Workers Party will enter the labor party as an autonomous body, maintaining its own organization and carrying on its distinctive work.

3. We condemn the betrayal of the Labor Party movement at the Cleveland Conference by the reactionary trade union leaders of the Johnston, Stone, Keating type who are trying once more to frustrate the aspirations of the workers and farmers for a political party which will fight their class political struggles. These reactionary leaders are endeavoring to stifle the movement for independent political action and a labor party by committing it to the discredited Gompers' policy of rewarding the friends and punishing the enemies" of labor. They are endeavoring to defeat the demand of the industrial workers and farmers for a political party of their own and make the movement toward that end the tail to the kite of the so-called "progressive" movement of LaFollette, Borah and other middle class leaders.

4. We condemn most emphatically the betrayal of the interests of the industrial workers and farmers by the representatives of the Socialist Party at the Cleveland Conference. The Socialist delegates led by Morris Hillquit, fought with the reactionary trade union leaders against the formation of a Labor Party. They helped to exclude the delegates of the Workers Party and the delegates from the local unions, who they knew favored a Labor Party, from the conference. They voted against the recognition of the Soviet Russia. They voted to limit the movement for release of class war prisoners to those convicted under war-time legislation, thus ignoring Tom Mooney and the scores of I. W. W. and Communists convicted under criminal syndicalist laws.

5. We approve of the policy of the Central Executive Committee in endeavoring thru its delegates at Cleveland to work in cooperation with the representatives of the Farmer-Labor Party, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the Chicago Federation of Labor and other central bodies and organizations who can ried on a sincere fight for the formation of a labor party. Altho these groups lacked militant leadership at Cleveland they earnestly carried on the struggle for the formation of the labor party.

6. The Central Executive Committee is directed to carry on the campaign for the formation of a Labor Party with even greater vigor and to enter into negotiations to bring about joint action by those elements in the trade unions, farmers' organizations and other workers organizations who favor a labor party for the organization of Labor Party committees, to consist of delegates of all working class organizations favoring the labor party, for the purpose of conducting the campaign for the formation of the Labor Party.

7. We declare our opposition to such labor party organizations entering into the primaries of the old parties. The labor party must be a party distinct from and opposed to the parties of the employers and exploiters of the industrial workers and farmers.

Workers Party Leads Fight to Protect the Rights of the Foreign Born Workers

War upon congressional legislation directed against the more radical elements among the foreign-born workers was declared by the Second National Convention of the Workers Party.

This activity will take the form of the organization of committees for the protection of the rights of the foreign-born workers. These committees will include delegates of trade unions and all fraternal organizations and educational societies.

The report on this question was made by Ludwig Lore, editor of the German daily, the Volkszeitung, and resulted in considerable discussion of the offensive of the capitalists and the government against the foreign born, that the report states is "taking on new impetus and activity".

The resolution adopted follows:

Resolution on Protection of the Rights of Foreign-Born Workers

1. The separation of the American workers into two divisions—one the English-speaking workers—the other the foreign-language-speaking workers is the greatest obstacle the unity of action and class consciousness of the American Working Class.

2. The majority of the workers in the basic industries are foreign born, they are one of the important elements of the American working class.

3. The Foreign Born Working Masses are economically exploited and politically oppressed to a greater degree than the English speaking workers.

They cannot write or speak English. They are not citizens. They are therefore robbed of the most important weapons of self protection. They take no part in the political life of the country, to a large extent are not organized industrially, and furthermore among themselves they are divided into scores of national groups. One of the most important tasks of the Workers Party is to draw the foreign born workers into the broad political life of the country.

The offensive of the Capitalists and the Government against the foreign born is today taking on new impetus and activity. Already many states have denied the right to vote to the foreign born workers who could not read or write. Already many states have forbidden foreign born workers to hold meetings in their own languages. Today an unprecedented offensive against the foreign-born workers is being launched by the Department of Labor, which has recommended that [illegible] be enacted giving [illegible] power to revoke naturalization certificates because of gross misconduct or disloyalty occurring subsequent to naturalization, a bill that would be [illegible] by [illegible] of every foreign worker who participates in any strike or makes a speech in any strike meeting. The Government today would register and catalogue the foreign born workers as criminals with photographs and finger prints.

5. It is the duty of the Workers Party to launch an aggressive campaign against this new form of oppression for the protection of the foreign-born workers. The Workers Party must draw the foreign-born workers into the broad political life of the country; into the general labor movement and must convince the foreign-born working masses that the most powerful weapon of protection against the ruthless oppression of the Government is a LABOR PARTY. The Workers Party must convince the foreign born comrades that they can only protect themselves when they fight side by side with the English-speaking workers. At the same time the W. P. of A. must convince the English speaking American workers that an attack upon the foreign-born workers is an attack against them, and further, that the division of the working class into these sections enables the capitalists to pit one section of the workers against another while exploiting both.

6. The Workers Party will organize, on a national basis, committees for the protection of the rights of the foreign-born workers. These committees for the protection of the rights of the foreign-born workers shall consist of delegates from the trade unions and all organizations with foreign born memberships such as benefit organizations and educational societies. Our members must wage this campaign so that every separate nationalist element shall be abolished. We must never emphasize special protection for any national group but always the protection for all foreign-born workers and the solidarity of foreign-born workers with English-speaking workers.

Workers Party Against Emigration of Members to Russia; Needed Here

America's revolutionary workers are urged by the Workers Party to remain in this country and struggle for their emancipation here, and not emigrate to Soviet Russia. This does not prevent economic aid and general relief being sent to the Workers' Republic. The resolution on this question adopted by the party convention says:

1—It is one of the most important tasks of all revolutionary and militant working class organizations to support Soviet Russia by means of every kind of economic aid.

Soviet Russia can, however, best be helped by the workers of every country carrying on a militant class struggle against the capitalist system of their own country.

2—Economic help to Soviet Russia consists in general relief and reconstructive aid in the form of machinery, capital, the furnishing of agricultural and industrial experts and technicians. We, therefore, approve the work of the Friends of Soviet Russia, and the Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia, since they represent large contributions by American workers for the relief of Soviet Russia and for the reconstruction of her industry and agriculture.

3—The trade unions of this country can help Soviet Russia most effectively by taking up concessions and furnishing capital and machinery for the rehabilitation of Russian industry. It is to be hoped that the example already set by one American trade union, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, will be emulated by other influential unions.

4—Soviet Russia needs machinery and capital; she needs but few men. There is plenty of willing labor.

Conditions in Soviet Russia are different from American conditions. As a result, American workers will not be easily assimilated. We, therefore, are against mass emigration to Soviet Russia, whether in an organized or unorganized form.

5—We are against the emigration of Party members, militant workers and all sympathizers of the Communist cause. Sympathy for Soviet Russia and revolutionary will are best expressed by workers emigrating from this country to a country already freed from the yoke of capitalism. Revolutionary determination can be expressed only by American workers remaining in America and fighting for their emancipation here.

6—Emigration of Party members means weakening of the American party and a desertion of the revolution here. The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party will report such desertions to the Communist International and the Russian Communist Party.

To Ralph Chaplin's Harpies

By ROBIN DUNBAR

You took a strong, healthy, bright American lad,
Descended from the best Revolutionary stock,
Away from his home on the rustling corn-fields of Kansas,
And threw him into a dirty dungeon, reeking with poison-damp.
You tore him out of the arms of his weeping wife,
Out of the tender grasp of his tear-stained son,
And stuck him behind low prison bars
Where you are keeping him now.
During the best years of his young, lusty manhood;
And for what? Answer that, ye scum of iron-heeled masters!
For the crime of being true to his class;
A crime in a worker of the greatest turpitude;
A virtue in a parasite of the highest beatitude!
All right! So be it! Keep him there for life.
If you think it will do you any good.
But may be there will come a day here, as it came in Russia;
A day when the worm will turn under the iron heel of Capitalism,
As it turned there under the iron heel of Czarism;
And then how will it go with you, hirelings of hell?
Does not the fate of Czar Nicholas tell you anything?
Do you think to escape scathless here in America,
Just because it once was the land of the free, the true and the brave,
And you have perverted it into a land of bloody shambles?
Woe unto you, panderers, of-scour-gs of Capitalism!
Your last days will be worse than the worst days,
You gave our brave and heroic Comrade, Ralph Chaplin!

Build Powerful Press, Plan for English Language Daily, Says Party Convention

Build for a powerful, centralized, disciplined party press, was the unanimous decision of the Workers Party Convention, in giving instructions to the Central Executive Committee for the coming year.

Prepare the way for an English-language Communist daily, said the convention. It is needed in the struggle to reach the English-speaking workers with the message of Communism.

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of THE WORKER, made the report on "The Party Press," reviewing the struggle of the Workers Party publications during the past year, the obstacles that confront them at the present time and the outlook for the future.

It was shown that while the foreign-language sections of the party had built up a strong press, that the English-language press was still confined to a few weeklies. The party press declaration reads as follows:

1. The building of a strong, centralized and disciplined party organization depends in great part on the centralization of the ownership of all party-controlled papers and magazines.

2. In order to develop uniform party activity it is necessary that all party publications vigorously support the tactics and policies of the party as decided by the National Conventions of the Party, and by the Party Central Executive Committee between conventions.

To this end all party publications must publish in full all the proclamations and manifestoes of the party. They must support all programs of action thru editorials and news articles, on every phase of the action, published continuously during the period of the action, as outlined in these declarations.

3. The language barriers, that are an obstacle to a unified party, also prevent unified editorial action on the part of our press, published in numerous languages.

It is urged, therefore, that Monthly Editorial Conferences of our party editors be held, in all cities where we have publications in more than one language, to discuss and develop joint action on the part of our press, in harmony with the declared position of the party.

4. An English-Language Daily.

WHEREAS, The working class is at a great disadvantage in its struggle with the capitalist class because of its lack of accurate information and news, and

WHEREAS, The press today is a most powerful weapon in the hands of the capitalist class in its war upon the workers, and

WHEREAS, The working class of America today is in dire need of a fighting English-language press to aid in its daily struggles against its exploiters and oppressors, therefore

RESOLVED, That this Second National Convention of the Workers Party of America calls upon the incoming Central Executive Committee to take immediate concrete steps towards the issuing of an English-language daily that shall loyally and unflinchingly serve all the workers in their daily battles against their common enemy, the capitalist class, and,

RESOLVED, That, since such an English-language daily will be a powerful weapon in defense of the interests and for the protection of the foreign-born workers in this country, that we especially urge upon the foreign-language sections of the Workers Party that they give all possible aid in support of such a daily.

5. The District Organizations are directed to establish weekly papers in their districts as early as possible.

Y. W. L. Observer Views Demonstration in Soviet Russia

Our observer from the Y.W.L. of America sent to the third Congress of the Young Communist International sends the following interesting description of the demonstrations in the land of the Soviets:

"The demonstrations in Petrograd and Moscow were gigantic. In Petrograd, Nov. 5, 300,000 marched. This, however, was puny compared to the Moscow demonstration on the 7th. Close to a million workers, men, women, children, soldiers marched. If there was any one in the city who did not, I failed to notice them. The demonstration started at 11 a. m., and at eight in the evening thousands were still parading by the stands. As a demonstration it was unparalleled. Russia is solid behind the Soviets. Let no one make any mistake about that.

"Economically conditions have improved wonderfully for the workers. All are well fed and look happy. They are obviously better fed than the German workers. And they are warmly and well clothed. Russia is on the upgrade economically. The famine is beginning and now it can be pointed out that the Russian workers' conditions will continue to improve while those of the other countries will continually go down. The revolution is going forward and nothing can stop it."

Courses in Agricultural Technique for English Speaking Comrades

The Russian Institute of Technology has opened special courses in agricultural technique for English-speaking comrades. The Institute is fully equipped with all the agricultural machines, which are necessary in order to give the pupils a complete illustration of modern farm methods. Tractors, plow and plow-machine binders, reapers and many other implements make the school one of the best institutions of that kind in the state of New York.

The Institute has been organized by the New York Branch of the STASR. The first already existing group of Russian speaking students has made so fat excellent progress.

Soviet Recognition Wins.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—Immediate recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States won the decision in a debate at Harvard University. It was the first debate of the Harvard Debating Union, organized on the English system. The Progressives favoring recognition defeated the Conservatives who opposed it. The question was vigorously fought, the audience voting 47 to 35 in favor of the progressives.

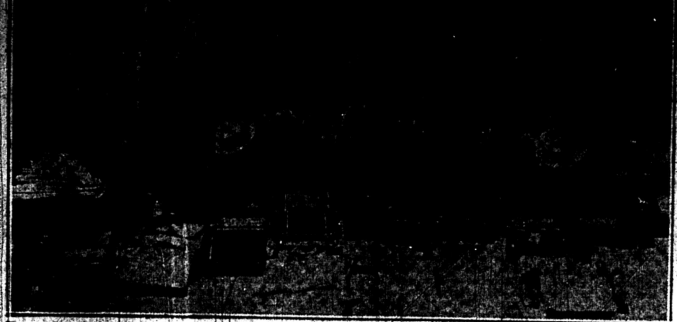
All Out on Bail! Face Trial in Jan. 15th

Has Not Broken Solidarity in the Struggle Against the Bosses

Yugoslavia Enhanced



All the Michigan raid-victims are now out on bail. Many of them were delegates to the Second National Convention of the Workers Party. They face trial on Jan. 15, and the Labor Defense Council is pushing its activities to see that they get a proper defense, the defense that will keep them on the outside.

All Out on Bail!

All of the twenty men arrested in Berrien County, Mich., under the Michigan Criminal Syndicalism law have been released on bail. After four months' confinement the last five have just been given their freedom. They are: Beth Nordling, Portland, Ore.; Norman Tallentire, San Francisco, Calif.; Joseph Zack, New York, and Charles Erickson and Eugene Bechtold, Chicago.

That twenty defendants in this case have now all been released on bail in spite of the outrageously high bond demanded by the Berrien County authorities is a striking manifestation of the solidarity the working class of America has shown in coming to the assistance of their militant brothers.

It is also evidenced by the indignation with which many free thinking Americans who, while not in any way connected with the labor movement are resisting the illegal attacks made by the Burns-Daugherty combination on American civil liberties. More than $150,000.00 in cash, liberty bonds and property have been scheduled for the bail of these twenty men.

The case in Michigan will no doubt now take on a more militant nature than ever. With all of the defendants freed from the custody of the authorities, the defense in this case now becomes more than ever an offensive against the repressive measures of the anti-labor forces of this country.

The Labor Defense Council now for the first time freed of the necessity of devoting so much of its energy to securing release of the defendants on bail, now announces that all of its efforts will be devoted towards an offensive-defensive campaign, which it is hoped, will result not only in the acquittal of the twenty men involved but will result also in crushing and breaking the criminal syndicalism laws in America and the anti-labor campaign of which criminal syndicalism prosecutions are the outstanding manifestations.

Support the Prisoners!

After listening to spirited addresses by Earl R. Browder, Norman Tallentire, William F. Dunne and Charles Krumbein, four of the 20 Communist prisoners taken in the Michigan raids, the Second National Convention of the Workers Party unanimously adopted a declaration calling upon the working class to support everywhere the victims of the White Terror. It pledges the party its whole-hearted support in every endeavor to free all the class-war prisoners.

The convention endorsed the campaign being waged by the Labor Defense Council, the success of which was interpreted as a great demonstration of Communist influence among the masses of America's workers. The declaration adopted in full follows:

Class Struggle Becomes Sharper

The class struggle in the United States is steadily becoming sharper and broader because of the intensified resistance of the workers to exploitation and oppression. Hundreds of militants have been thrown into prison by the capitalist government.

No one phase of American society shows its fundamental class character more drastically than its class war prisoners. Nothing more clearly demonstrates the fundamental cleavage between the written constitution of the United States on the one hand and its application in actual life by capitalism on the other hand.

Capitalist society in America has long outgrown the constitution upon which the legal structure of the nation is based. As a consequence we have the contradiction of its theoretical acceptance as an inspired document together with its practical repudiation wherever its limitations tend to restrict the full exercise of capitalist power. This is particularly true with regard to the guarantees of civil liberty which have been ruthlessly discarded. Thus in the hands of the capitalist government the constitution has become a barricade from behind which is conducted an offensive campaign against labor.

The American Communists, who have been in the front ranks of the workers fight against unbridled exploitation, and who have relentlessly pointed out that the only remedy lies in the complete abolition of capitalism, have, as a consequence, been particularly singled out by the government. This attack on the Communist is part and parcel of the nationwide offensive against the entire working class by the capitalists and their government. It is one sector in that which includes the "open shop campaign." It is another example of the determination of capitalism to wipe out all traces of working class organization.

In addition to the Communists there are still hundreds of workers in prison who were incarcerated for their activity in the labor struggle or upon pretense of violation of war measures. Such are Tom Mooney, and Warren K. Billings in California, Sacco and Vanzetti in Massachusetts, the I. W. W. prisoners in Leavenworth, Jacob Dolla in Pennsylvania and countless others. Many are still in prison from long before the war as Ford and Suhr in California.

The National Convention of the Workers Party pledges its whole hearted support to every endeavor to free all class war prisoners.

We greet the Labor Defense Council, and the National Defense Committee, organized to resist the attacks upon the workers' civil rights, and we especially express our great joy at the success of the Labor Defense Council in raising the tremendous sum necessary to obtain the release on bail of the militant workers arrested in Michigan and in Chicago. We call upon all members of the Workers Party and the working class generally to contribute generously to the defense fund being raised by the Labor Defense Council.

We condemn the traitorous conduct of the Socialists at the Cleveland Conference in opposing the liberation of all class war prisoners and in proposing amnesty only for those workers imprisoned during the war.

We call upon the workers of America to render support to the Gitlow case involving the constitutionality of all criminal syndicalist laws and now under consideration in the Supreme Court.

We call upon the workers to rally to the support of the Communists arrested at Bridgman. The trial of these militant workers involves the right of the workers to meet and organize for self-defense against capitalist aggression.

We call upon all the workers to render maximum support of these working class organizations and call upon all trade unions and working class organizations to unite into one mighty movement for the repeal of the numerous State Criminal Anarchy and criminal syndicalist laws, and for the liberation of all working class prisoners, those convicted for violation of these infamous laws as well as those convicted during the war.

the arrest of 20 of the most active members of the party.

Urges "Make Party Grow" Stamp

The report urges that a special "Make the Party Grow" stamp be issued to be purchased by every party member, and that the foreign language branches be called upon to actively engage in the sale and distribution of the party literature.

The report was so detailed and comprehensive that it called forth but little discussion when the reading had been completed.

Delegate Earl R. Browder, Chicago, associate editor of the Labor Herald, declared the report showed that the party had definitely got on its feet, that it was a promise of future increased party activities and constant progress.

The remainder of the first day's session was taken up with the discussion of "The Labor Party" and "The Party in the Labor Unions". The declarations adopted appearing in another column.

The Party and the International

C. E. Ruthenberg was chosen chairman of the second day's session and Alexander Bittleman, vice chairman.

Following acceptance of the report on the question of the prosecution of foreign born workers, Bittleman reported on the question of "The Workers Party and the Communist International". He showed the collapse of the Vienna (2½) International and then dwelt at some length on the waning strength of the Second (Socialist) Interpational in the face of the growth of the Communist International. He showed that the struggle of the Third International was toward the development of a World Communist Party.

He declared that the "Left Wing Sickness" that had paralyzed the Communist movement in many countries for a time, had now been completely eradicated.

He pointed out that the Workers Party was represented by fraternal delegates at the Fourth World Congress of the Communist International, but that these had not returned to the United States in time to report personally to this convention.

There followed a discussion as to the possibilities of the open struggle for Communism in the face of the black reaction in this country after which the Convention voting unanimously for the report submitted by Bittleman, which appears as part of the party's program, under the heading of "The International". It reads as follows:

Statement Unanimously Adopted

"The Workers Party accepts the principle that the class struggle for the emancipation of the working class is an international struggle. The workers of Russia have been obliged to fight against the whole capitalist world in order to maintain their Soviet Government and to win the opportunity of building their system of production on a Communist basis. In this struggle they have had the support of the enlightened workers of every country.

"The future struggles against capitalism will take the same character. In order to win the final victory in the struggle against world capitalism the working class of the world must be united under one leadership.

"The leadership in the International struggle which inspires hope in the hearts of the workers of the world and arouses fear in the capitalists of every country is the leadership of the Communist International.

"The Workers Party declares its sympathy with the principles of the Communist International and enters the struggle against American capitalism, the most powerful of the national groups, under the inspiration of the leadership of the Communist International.

"It rallies to the call 'WORKERS OF THE WORLD UNITE!'"

Following the adoption of this declaration the delegates and the audience joined enthusiastically in the singing of the "International" and then proceeded to the reading of the proposed party program by Secretary Ruthenberg. It was then taken up for discussion.

Join the Workers Party!

The Second National Convention of the Workers Party issued an invitation to all revolutionary elements in the American working class still outside its ranks to enlist under its standards. This invitation was as follows:

For the Political Unity of All Revolutionary Elements

The achievements of the Workers Party since its first convention one year ago conclusively demonstrate it to be the rallying center of the revolutionary elements in the political struggle of the American Labor Movement. This surely must now be apparent to all those militant elements that still remain outside its ranks.

To all the members of the Socialist Party who consider themselves revolutionists, to those who refuse to give their assent to the cowardly betrayals of Hillquit, Berger, Oneal and the rest of the Socialist delegates at Cleveland, to these we issue our appeal, JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY!

We call upon all the revolutionary English-speaking elements still affiliated with the Proletarian Party, the Socialist Labor Party and similar organizations, to JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY!

We recognize that the foreign-born worker has always been the backbone of the American revolutionary working class struggle. In our ranks we have, therefore, foreign-language federations in 16 different tongues. There are, however, at the present time, organizations of Bulgarian, Armenian, Roumanian, Slovak and French workers. To all these we issue our call, JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY!

To the thousands, if not tens of thousands, who have for one reason or another, mistakenly as we believe, allowed their membership and active participation in the revolutionary movement to lapse during the last three or four years, we now say, JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY, and again become active in the revolutionary struggle.

WORKERS! FORWARD WITH THE WORKERS PARTY! FORWARD TO THE VICTORY OF THE AMERICAN SOCIAL REVOLUTION UNDER THE LEADERSHIP AND GUIDANCE OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL!

"The Party and the Labor Unions" Rouses Interesting Discussion by Delegates

Probably the most interesting discussion of the convention occurred on the report on "The Party and the Labor Unions," submitted by William F. Dunne.

The debate developed into a report of the party's successes in reaching the workers organized into their labor unions in various sections of the country.

Delegate Fred Merrick, Pittsburgh, reviewed the fight in Western Pennsylvania; Kjar, Krumbein, Browder, Dozenberg, spoke for Chicago; Mollenhauer, for Detroit; Sullivan, for St. Louis and Southern Illinois, while among the others who joined in the discussion were Tallentire, Wicks, Askenasi, Harrison, Allonne Ware and Ruthenberg.

Dunne reviewed the efforts that would be made to extend the industrial work of the party during the coming year, and urged in conclusion that:

"Let us so carry out our work in the unions during the coming year, so that next year we may be able to come before you and talk about 'The Work in OUR UNIONS.'"

The resolutions on Industrial Relations were as follows:

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS

The Second National Convention of the Workers Party views with greatest satisfaction the developing movement, organized and directed by the Trade Union Educational League, for the amalgamation of labor's economic organizations into giant industrial organizations of labor under the inspiration and guidance of the Trade Union Educational League.

We greet with enthusiasm the historic achievements of the Conference of the International Committee for the Amalgamation of the Sixteen Standard Railroad Organizations just held in Chicago.

We declare our solidarity with the militant coal miners of District Five (Western Pennsylvania) United Mine Workers of America, in their energetic efforts to cleanse their own ranks of reactionary elements, and to develop a more solidified struggle nationally against the mine owners in preparation for the new crisis growing out of the expiration of the present wage agreement in the spring.

We hail the magnificent battles of the coal miners and the railroad shopmen this year as a tremendous advance in the waging of the American labor struggle, marking as they did, the inauguration by the workers in this country of nation-wide action against the oppression of their exploiters.

Recently, in the textile mills, in the face of big obstacles, there was displayed an encouraging solidarity among the striking masses of the workers in this industry.

All members of the Workers Party must not only become members of but effective workers in the labor unions.

Every member of the Workers Party stands instructed to join the Trade Union Educational League, the organized expression of the militant workers in the unions.

We urge that special effort be made to organize the foreign born workers, as well as the great masses of English-speaking unorganized labor. Only by developing powerful unions in the steel industry, and similar unorganized fields, can labor present a united front to the closely knit forces of the bosses.

Since many unions, justly or unjustly, demand citizenship as a membership qualification, we call upon all foreign-born workers to become naturalized citizens in order that they may become active members of the organized labor movement.

Every possible effort must be made to win all militant unionists to active membership in the Workers Party.

The left-bloc within the unions is the principal channel, at our present stage of development, of communist trade union activity.

5. Every step taken by the W. P. nuclei in the unions should be clearly to advance the interests of the union and its members. Care must be taken, to block the reactionaries in their attempts to misinform the union and file, charging the communists with violating union autonomy, and imposing the will of an outside organization. These inevitable charges, the last refuge of discredited officialdom, is best refuted when an attack upon the W. P. nuclei becomes an attack upon some pressing immediate need of the workers for which the W. P. nuclei are carrying on a fight. The Party industrial activity is upon the healthiest basis when it cannot be attacked without attacking the vital needs of the masses.

6. As the Workers Party more and more, thru its nuclei activities and its correct programs, establishes communist leadership in the trade unions, to that extent the political education of those organizations becomes a matter of prime concern. The work of educational work of the Party within the union is intensified, as its leadership is consolidated; the Party nuclei function more and more openly as the recognized leadership of the organization. This is the goal toward which all communist work drives, communist leadership of the masses, for the conscious struggle to establish the workers' control of industry and society.

THE PASSING OF CAPITALISM

Senator, the end of thy reign draws nigh—
Your time has come.—Prepare to die!
The toilers are rising—Hark! the cry
"COMMUNISM."

Senator, listen! Thy death-knell ringing,
Listen again! 'Tis the toilers singing,
And in the march of triumph bringing
"COMMUNISM."

Long have the toilers dreamed of the day,
When they their fetters cast away,
And greet with hearts that are light and gay,
"COMMUNISM."

At last the day of Freedom draws nigh—
A message of hope spreads o'er the sky.
The toilers are rising—Hark! the cry,
"COMMUNISM."

Soviet Russia Pictorial Arrives

The initial issue of "Soviet Russia Pictorial", just off the press, more than matches up to the advance notices, being a richly illustrated and popularly written number unique in the history of labor publications in America. To mention that it contains thirty pictures and ten articles in addition to several departments like "Book Reviews" and Editorials, gives a measure of the quantity rather than the quality of the magazine.

The pictures, to mention one unusual fact, are very clear, because the publication appears on a fine glossy paper which reproduces photographs excellently. They deal with such divergent phases of contemporary Russian life as reconstruction, new art, American colonists, racial groups within the country, international affairs, and other subjects.

Walsh Speaks for Russia

NEW YORK.—Praising the integrity and ability of the officials of Russia, Frank P. Walsh told the Foreign Policy Association that Russia is the "nation of great opportunity to all men of vision," Walsh, who recently returned from Russia, where he studied legal, economic and political conditions, declared the new economic policy of the Russian government was entered into in good faith, and that business and industry is showing a rapid improvement there.

Talk on the French Party

A talk on the French Communist Party will be given by Comrade Simon Felshin at the meeting of the Harlem English Branch of the Workers Party, this Thursday evening, Dec 28, at the Workmen's Circle 143 E. 103rd St. Comrade Felshin has just returned from a two years stay in Europe where he made a study of the radical movements in the countries which he visited. Workers Party members and sympathizers are invited to be present.

It was delivered in the course of an opinion which, it upheld by the higher courts, will enable American banks to evade payment of perhaps $200,000,000 deposited in their branches in Russia and central Europe, where the banking systems have been taken over by new governments.

Boris N. Sokoloff, a former resident of Russia, now living in this city, had sued the National City bank of New York for $28,365 and interest, which he had deposited before the Russian revolution in the bank's Petrograd branch. The bank refused to honor Sokoloff's checks, contending that the Russian Soviet Government, when it seized the business of all the banks in Russia, became responsible for all the liabilities of such banks.

The court upheld the bank.

At last he stopped. Up jumped James Oneal of the Socialist Party, editor of the notorious yellow sheet, the New York Call, breathless and excited.

Mr. Chairman, is your speech to be had in printed form?"

Unable overcome with emotion that James Oneal should have been so desirous of having a copy, Johnston replied: "We had no money, so we only got out 50 copies."

"Be sure to keep one for me!" replied Mr. Oneal. The famous document will serve as the future guide for the illustrious editor of the New York Call, the vociferous proponent of a Labor Party of the toiling masses the Labor Party that Oneal and the yellow Socialists helped to turn down!

Yellow, oily, smirking, bowing to the representatives of the big unions, with the reactionaries and with the Socialist counter-revolutionaries who have just joined the 2½ International! Hobnobbing with Keating, the ex-congressman from Colorado and present editor of "Labor," one of the most reactionary organs of the day, and joking with Hillquit, champion of the raid on the Workers Party of delegates to the Conference!

Bombastically nominated as permanent chairman of the Conference, as the "best man and most worthy to represent the interests of the workers, for which reason I rise to place in nomination the name of William M. H. Johnston." The poor boob who nominated him was so overcome with the seriousness of his job, that he gave the already seriously handicapped chairman (mentally and morally) the further burden of another initial.

This was Johnston, greasy, slick and smooth, who had already sold out in Washington to the "progressive bloc"—sold his soul (if he had any) and his influence.

William H. Johnston chairman!

THE MACHINE

There is nothing more necessary than a machine. It is the most destructive means of doing work in the most constructive. In Moscow there, governing a machine based on the Soviet Republic intact and safe from any counter-revolutionary attack, in Washington, London and Paris there is a machine made up of diabolical schemers supported by the full force of the government—the diplomatic service, the influence of the bourgeois press and then such little things as the army and navy.

In Cleveland, there was also a machine—reaching from Jewell, the $25,000 a year "worker" at the head of the Railway Crafts Division of the A. F. of L., to Victor Berger, "socialist" congressman from Wisconsin, the big baby of the conference!

The machine worked pretty smoothly. It was well oiled and only creaked a few times, when some delegates seemed to forget that this was a conference for "progressive political action." When, for instance, the delegates from the local labor unions demanded to be seated and the secretary of the Credentials Committee tried to make the conference believe that it did not understand the English language. And when Max Hayes, of the Typographical Union, told Mr. Keating, the reporter of the Credentials' Committee that the conference would not stand for the "vicious practice of the committee reading into the call anything it pleased!"

The machine creaked a little and then went on—reporting the next morning the names of "safe" delegates who were seated, and totally ignoring the others. Otto Bannetter, the loudest of the yellow Socialists, was a member of the same committee and recognized the names of several militant unionmen, such as Merrick, of Pittsburgh, and Harrison, of Cleveland, and others. These would be votes for a Labor Party. Forget it! Their names were not even reported!

It creaked again—a loud creak, a noisy, ominous creak when the Workers Party delegates asked about their credentials.

Ominous silence . . . The secretary replied that "no credentials had been received." He was a Farmer-Labor man . . . the reactionaries and Socialists had tricked him. He did not know that the betrayers of a Labor Party had hidden the Workers Party credential. He did not know that when the credential of the Young Workers' League was found it had the word "held" across the face.

Then the vicious attack by Keating! The machine bellowed! It roared! The epithets flew fast and thick: "un-American," "against the flag and constitution," "disruptive," "the agents of internecine strife," "the delegates of the railroad unions," "the delegates of Moscow." No one must have imagined they were in Daugherty's office in Washington or in Judge Wilkerson's court in Chicago. How familiar were the words, how familiar the scene!

Daugherty and Harding's influence were directing the machine! Attorney Palmer's spirit could be felt!

Then the counter-attack by Cramer of Minneapolis — and then silence again. . . .

The conference could proceed.

Once more, the machine creaked. The next day when the Socialists explained that they voted to exclude the Workers Party not because it was "un-American," but because it was a) "disruptive" element in the labor movement. And when Jack Bradon, of the World War Veterans, denied it, there was a flare-up, and then the machine had things in hand for the day.

But it was fated to creak once again—loud and shrill. The question of the Labor Party could not be evaded. Of course the machine felt sure of its hand. It had canvassed the delegates at the conference and knew their stand. So sure were they that they announced in the press the day before the conference that there would be NO Labor Party.

But they did not know how strong the sentiment for the Labor Party was. They did not know that they would have such a narrow escape. 64 votes to 52! Had the Workers Party delegates and the local labor delegates been seated the vote would have been still closer. Had these delegates been admitted, there would have been a fight in the conference from the start to the finish.

Bill Dunne would have ripped the mask off the face of the "leaders". He would have shown them up. He and Ruthenberg would have mobilized the many vacillating delegates and brought the Labor Party over the top!

That is why the Workers Party delegates were not seated! The machine may crack once in a while, but it is dangerous in these times to expose it to too many possibilities. The Rank and File Conference of the Railroad Unions was in session in Chicago and there was danger that the Workers Party and local union delegates would crystallize the same rank and file sentiment—and bring the machine to a standstill.

The machine withstood the attack of the sponsors of the Labor Party. It creaked—loud. But it remained intact.

It was a good machine—but only for Hillquit, Oneal, Keating, Hayes and Johnston. For the Labor Party it was a Juggernaut!

THE GREAT BETRAYERS

It is a peculiar fact of history that the great apostles of an idea are also its greatest betrayers. Judas, the betrayer, is the symbol of the betrayal by his disciples today!

In 1914—the Social-Democrats betrayed the working class of the world. Beaten by 1919 for the time they were equally ready to traduce it! They did—in Germany, France, England, Austria. In 1917, the Mensheviki in Russia; in 1918, the Social Democrats in Germany; in 1920 the Socialists in Italy and again in 1922 when they declared peace with Mussolini. From 1919 to 1922 in Jugoslavia, Austria, Rumania, Poland, Bulgaria, Lettland, Germany, where they sold out the militant workers and the Communists, betrayed them into the hands of their enemies.

In 1922, the Socialists of America committed another of their betrayals. These loud, blasting defenders of the working class! These valiant champions of a Labor Party!

How they boasted of it! They told the workers that the "American Labor Party" of New York would be the nucleus of the future Labor Party. A Labor Party alone would save the American working class from the further treachery of the capitalists and their parties. At last we would begin the action that British workers had started more than a decade ago.

They, the Socialists, would fight for the Labor Party. Their best men would be present in Cleveland to sound the call for the Labor Party.

Yes, yes, just like the Second and 2½ Internationalists! Bragging of what they would do while the enemy is at arms!

But Cleveland was quite another matter. There stood the stolid leaders of the Railroad Brotherhoods, enemies of a Labor Party. And some of the farmers, who had "tried out" the "rewarding" policy at the last election and found it effective

So the Socialists went in with the gang—of the leaders! Johnston to Hillquit—the whole array of fakers and betrayers of the working class!

The Socialists early gave evidence of their reactionary sentiment in voting not to seat the local union delegates. Again when the Workers Party came on the carpet. But it remained for James Oneal to vote to committee against the Labor Party because "the American workers are not yet ripe for independent political action!"

Just as communism is international reaction is international. In the open struggle against the workers, the world capitalists are natural and loyal allies. The disintegration of capitalist economy which plunges the Italian bourgeoisie into open warfare on the workers, will extend to other parts of the world the same tragic situation that we have in Italy to-day.

Consequently, if we are to have a unified front, we must be united in every struggle, not only in the manifestation of verbal solidarity, but above all in action and in mutual and efficient help.

Comrades! Acquaint the workers of America with the real situation of the Italian proletariat. Advise the American workers to prepare themselves in time to oppose their strength, consciously, to the reactionary offensive which inevitably will break out against them in the same form in which it oppresses the Italian people to-day. Place the American workers on their guard against those leaders that love to navigate in a generic radicalism, as a theory and as a social-democratic practice. The workers of the world should learn from the experience of the Italian proletariat.

Comrades! Be tireless in helping your comrades in Italy. We are not indicating to you the ways and means; you will find them. Remember that recently the Italian "fascisti" have received considerable financial help from their friends and backers in America. While "fascisti" groups are being organized in America, a concrete and powerful answer must be given by you emigrants, that see the threatening tentacles of the reactionary members assisting out over to the shores of America.

The Marxist motto: "Workers of the world, unite!" should find in your eventual action a new aspect of its revolutionary realization.

Long live the unified front of the Italian workers in America!

Long live the unified front of the world's workers, in the struggle against reaction and for the revolutionary conquest of power!

New England Defense Concert

GRAND CONCERT will be given by the NATIONAL DEFENSE COMMITTEE, New England Division, Saturday, Jan. 20, 8 p.m., at DUDLEY STREET OPERA HOUSE, 113-119 Dudley Street, Roxbury, Mass. Best talents of Boston and vicinity will participate. Admission 40 Cents. All fraternal Organizations are kindly requested not to arrange any other entertainments on that day.

Threats of American Defense Society Urge "Civil Liberties" Fight

Anti-labor literature of The American Defense Society confidentially circulated, reveals the big business soul of this organization. Thru its Washington director, R. M. Whitney, the Defense Society recently blasted against the release of political opinion prisoners. Previously the same Whitney published a series of unreliable articles in the Boston Transcript against Wm. Z. Foster, C. E. Ruthenberg and their co-defendants, awaiting trial on Jan. 13, at St. Joseph, Mich., for alleged violation of the Criminal Syndicalism Law.

"What the American Defense Society is working to do," is a subject head of one of the society's broadcasted pamphlets. Enlisting its activities, the organization folds itself in the American flag and makes itself out an industrial Ku Klux Klan.

An outstanding plank in its platform calls for the creation "of Home Defense Committees, to act under proper officials in case of general strikes that public service facilities may continue and the life of American communities may not be at the mercy of irresponsible agitators." Another proposes the elimination of "Labor reds and outlaw strikes."

An interesting bit of psychological terrorism is seen in the Society's plan to "educate" the workers thru their pay envelopes. "Encourage industry and increased production," the pamphlet advises. "The Society provides printed leaflets to be placed in pay envelopes demonstrating that increased production can reduce the cost of living and that all must give their best efforts to increase output."

As a fitting conclusion a selected public is asked "to contribute in support of the work American Defense Society is doing," the circular requests from "your check" be made "as large as your interest permits."

The Labor Defense Council, headed by Frank P. Walsh as chief counsel is concerned not only with the defense of the group of workers arrested in Bridgman last August, but also with the protection of the constitutional guarantees of the entire working class against the anti-social practices of all such organizations as the American Defense Society. Therefore, every sincere militant at least should urge all workers to do their part in winning a big victory for civil liberties against the forces of reaction. Contributions may be sent to the Labor Defense Council at 166 W. Washington St., Chicago, or to its Eastern office at Room 434, 80 E. 11th St., New York City.

Italian Communist Party Sends Greetings to Italian Workers in the United States

On the occasion of the celebration of the Fifth Anniversary of the Russian Revolution, the Italian Communist Party has addressed an appeal to the Italian workers in the United States, as follows:

Rome, Italy, Nov. 7, 1922.

The Italian Communist Party, Section of the Communist International, to the Italian Workers in America:

Comrades:—On the anniversary of the first revolutionary victory of the proletariat, on the day sacred to the martyrs and heroes of Russia, we appeal to you in the name of the Italian workers struggling against the formidable attacks of the capitalist offensive.

On this day on which the hearts of the workers are gladdened by the celebration of a triumphant episode of the Communist revolution we wish to draw your attention to a tragic and little-known aspect of the titanic effort which the heroic Italian proletariat is not tired of the struggle; daily new sanguinary and heroic episodes serve to illustrate the desperate and admirable courage of the workers.

Just as the fascist movement is the centre of reactionary activity, so the Communist Party is in the vanguard of every economic, political and military proletarian battle. In fact, the social-democrats, who in the name of a policy of "pacification of souls" wish to hand over the workers bound hand and foot to the bourgeoisie intent on reducing them to the condition of slavery, because its only hope of political and economic salvation—call us communists the "red fascisti." Well, the communists do not disclaim this definition which, in the foolish intention of those that coined it, should have a meaning full of contempt. We notice that increasingly greater numbers of workers are entering with enthusiasm into the orbit of communist influence and ascribe this fact to the decisive, courageous and profoundly and sincerely revolutionary stand which the Party is firmly maintaining. We can state without hesitation that the Communist Party in Italy to-day concentrates all the revolutionary energies and hopes of the working people. In the flames of the class-war, the Italian proletariat has been able to forge the weapon indispensable to its present and future battles: the class-party, such as our great teachers indicated to us in the Manifesto which with the passing of time does not fade, but is rendered ever richer in lessons vivified by the daily experience of our epoch.

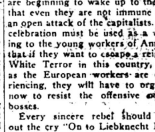
The recent split of the Socialist Party of Italy is a consequence of this process of clarification, which, even in our present tragic state constitutes a formidable promise of proletarian victory. Demagogic and opportunistic "maximalism" is completely liquidated; the revolutionary workers' vanguard, is united under the banners of the Communist Party.

Meanwhile the reformists, forced by the logic of events, have definitely assumed their role of accomplices to the counter-revolutionary plans of the bourgeoisie.

Maximalism is dead; once again, long live the proletariat and the Communist Party!

Comrades! We hope that the bloody struggles of the Italian workers do not find you indifferent, for your brothers are fighting these battles. Materially, your homes and your women left in the native country are in danger. Reaction spares us blows on one hand if to-morrow you should return to what ironically is called the "mother land" immediately the fact that you are workers would place you face to face with the threat of death or starvation at the hands of the implacable enemy.

And further more: in Italy to-day we are witnessing a phase of the eternal class-struggle which is fatally destined to extend itself, sooner or later, to all capitalist countries.



LIEBKNECHT DAY

The Young Workers League of America has joined hands once again with the young workers of the world, in celebrating Liebknecht Day, in calling the attention of the working youth that one of our bravest fighters has been killed. In these days of the Fascisti, in these days of White TERROR, in these days of the "open shop" drive, and the Koo Klux Klan, the young workers of this country are beginning to wake up to the fact that even they are not immune from an open attack of the capitalists. This celebration must be used as a warning to the young workers of America that if they want to escape a reign of White Terror in this country, such as the European workers are experiencing, they will have to organize now to resist the offensive of the bosses.

Every sincere rebel should send out the cry "On to Liebknecht Day," for whether you are young or old, you surely realize that the future belongs to the young, so do all in your power to stir the young workers up and get them to participate on this day. Invite the young workers of your acquaintance to attend, explaining to them who Liebknecht was, and of his valiant fight against Militarism. The youth of this country like a man with nerve, so when Liebknecht's deeds for the working class art told them they will immediately say, "Here was a true working class leader who fearlessly fought to the end, the kind we need in America." The terribly exploited young workers in this country can be reached and this is one way we have of reaching them.

This celebration comes in the midst of winter, after the holiday season is over, also after the much talked of Christmas spirit is gone. The young workers laid off after the holiday rush, begin to realize that the "Christmas spirit" of the bosses is only in words, but in deeds they give them layoffs and wage cuts for Christmas. So this call for a rallying of youth on Liebknecht Day comes at an opportune time, and all that is necessary is for us to throw all our energy in it to make it a landmark in the young movement in America.

With Labor Against Capitalism

J. Walter Newbold, member of parliament from the British Parliament, has been expelled from the Labor Party, due, and as a result will not be permitted to take part in its coming conference. It is not surprising to note that Newbold, a Tammany ally, is a member of the Second International, which has been chosen as the Labor Party ally.

In fact, MacDonald and his friends merely duplicated the action of Hillquit, Oneal and Co., in barring the delegates of the Workers Party from the Conference for Progressive Political Action at Cleveland.

Newbold does not seem to be troubled by the fact that he has been temporarily locked out of the Labor Party's parliamentary group. He announces he will always be found in the same lobby with the Labor Party members against capitalism. He declares he wishes to hasten the Labor Party's advent to office, when he might be found in opposition because his aim would then be to prepare the way for the coming of the Communist Party into power.

Yet, even while Newbold remains as a party unto himself, there are several Communists in the Labor Party group, elected as candidates of local Labor Parties, in spite of their national leadership.

That seems to be the way the Labor Party will come in the United States, first locally, and then the states, then nationally. But whatever the wavering position of labor's reactionary leadership may be, American Communists, as in Great Britain, will be found fighting for the parliamentary victory of the Labor Party, and then on to the conquest of all power, under Communist standards.

Truth and sanity must be kept out of the theological seminaries and so Dr. Arthur Wakefield Slaughter, professor of Biblical Literature and Religious Education at William Jewell College, Kansas City, Mo., has lost his job. He advanced the insane idea that science ought to have something to say about the creation of the world.

Daugherty Feels Vindicated

Attorney General Daugherty claims that his attack on the railroad unions during the shopmen's strike has been vindicated by the conviction of eight workers in the federal courts at Los Angeles. The master class judicial machinery has decided that these men interfered with "interstate commerce" by helping to tie up railroad traffic in the "Arizona desert" last summer.

Daugherty weeps over the inconvenience alleged to have been caused "helpless men, women and children," and glories in the fact that the convicted workers may be sent to prison for two years and compelled to pay $10,000 fines.

The railroad unions will doubtless fight this case thru the United States Supreme Court. It is not expected that favorable action can be secured from the capitalist toadies on the Supreme Court bench who condemned millions of children to slavery in the mills and factories of this country, because our sacred "interstate commerce" must not be interfered with. Daugherty did not then worry about "helpless children."

Interviews secured with the men, women and children stranded at Needles, Arizona, for a few hours last summer, showed they were all on the side of the striking railroad workers. They showed themselves willing to endure a slight inconvenience if it helped the strikers. They enjoyed their vacation, they said, at the expense of the Santa Fe Railroad. They were not hurt. But the workers on the engines had declared their solidarity with the shopmen. "They had refused to haul non-union repaired trains, manned by gunmen, and that was a direct assault upon the power of railroad capital. It is for this that the eight railroaders were convicted under the direction of Daugherty's western representatives.

If those railroad men had taken out defective trains, if a wreck had occurred and people had been killed, nothing would have been said. Human life is cheap under the capitalist system.

But the railroaders committed three great offenses: First, the trainmen displayed solidarity with their fellow-workers, the shopmen; second, they dared revolt to secure better working conditions for themselves, more happiness for their families that comes thru increased wages and the shorter working day; third, they had dared interfere with the running of trains, safe or unsafe, thus violating the first rule of business, "Profits First!"

The courts have vindicated Daugherty and the whole social system for which he stands, that rallied all its strength in capitalism's war on labor in the shopmen's strike. But labor will some day win its own vindication thru abolishing completely the power of capitalist rule and instituting the first social order that has emblazoned upon its banners the slogan: "Humanity First!"

These Are the Progressives

We did not think that the unmasking of the "progressives" that reactionary labor prides itself on having helped elect on Nov. 7, would come so soon. But this gang of four-flushing politicians, with their conservative labor support, is thoroly exposed by the Senate vote for the confirmation of Pierce Butler, the "kept" lawyer, as supreme court justice, following appointment by President Harding.

In all the Senate only eight members voted against putting this lackey of the money changers in a seat on the supreme court bench. Only three of these votes were cast by Republicans, the members of the party of La Follette, Borah and Johnson.

La Follette alone was recorded against Butler. Borah was "absent." Hiram Johnson, endorsed for re-election by Gompers' National Non-partisan Political Campaign Committee, the election campaign expression of the American Federation of Labor, voted to seat Butler, the corporation hireling.

Gompers has always trailed with the democratic party. The democratic senators, Gompers took pride in re-electing last Nov. 7th, and who voted FOR BUTLER and AGAINST LABOR, were Ashurst, Arizona; Bayard, Delaware; Jones, New Mexico; Kendrick, Wyoming, and King, Utah.

These old party senators, elected as candidates of the Wall Street parties, at least had the courage to declare their convictions, to take their stand on the side of their masters.

More slimy is the self-confessed "progressive" who dodges the issue when he is called on to vote. Thus, in addition to Borah, we find Brookhart, Iowa; Capper, Kansas; France, Maryland; Ladd, North Dakota; McKellar, Tennessee; Owen, Oklahoma; Pittman, Nevada, and Swanson, Virginia, all dodging the official Senate roll call.

The crime committed by these men against labor would be sufficient basis for immediate expulsion from any disciplined Labor Party. But Gompers urges the election of these Democrats and Republicans, again and again, and still is allowed to retain his place as head of the American labor movement.

This is the same demi-republican, bipartisan outfit of dollar a year men, in large part, that Johnston-Stone-Keating and Co. dragged so much about at Cleveland, and on the basis of their boasting delayed the organization of a Labor Party.

Wall Street and its political henchmen seem determined to lock the American workers into a Labor Party. But that proceeding should be accompanied by the kicking of a selected assortment of fakirs and traitors out of the organized labor movement into a well-earned oblivion.

Fascism Spreads to Belgium

It has been the stock in trade of the Yellow Socialists to charge that the rise of the Fascisti to power in Italy was due to the methods pursued by the Italian Communist Party, carrying out the policies and program of the Communist International. Thus they hope to create prejudice against Communism everywhere and sympathy and support for their own reformism and compromising betrayals.

The specious arguments of these traitors are completely annihilated by the frantic appeal of the veteran Socialist, Auguste Dewinne, in a recent issue of Le Peuple, the official organ of the Belgian Labor (Socialist) Party.

The growing Communist movement in Belgium is still weak. Its present forces have been brought together in spite of the corrupting jingoism that swept the entire Belgian labor movement during the war, and that has held it in a vicious grip ever since.

Dewinne, therefore, could not heap coals of fire upon the heads of the Belgian Communists as he issued his hysterical outburst attacking the kept press in Belgium for hailing Mussolini, the Italian dictator as a great man, and asking, "Is there so strong man like him among the Belgian leaders of capitalism?"

Belgium will have its Fascisti, just as every other country because the pretenses of democracy, there as everywhere else, are being swept away, and labor is compelled to openly struggle against capitalism.

The Belgian labor movement, before the war, was one of the strongest in the world. It was famed for its powerful co-operatives. Politically its power was measured when the traitor, Emil Vandervelde forced himself into the King's government during the war as minister of justice. In spite of language divisions it has always been organized into strong trade unions. It is against this labor power, rapidly reviving its class conscious spirit and militant strength in spite of Vandervelde and other Second International traitors, that Belgian capitalism must have its Fascisti. It is against this fascist danger that Dewinne exclaims:

"The big bankers, captains of industry, landlords and church dignitaries of Belgium would welcome a Fascisti movement that could break the back of the Belgian Socialist trade union and co-operative movement."

Acknowledging that the Belgian workers have been chloroformed by the years of fake "civil peace" promised them by Vandervelde, we find Dewinne trying to arouse the Socialist membership with the following:

"Today most of our members still fail to see any danger of Fascism on this side. They look upon Italy as a great exception. They forget that the treasuries of our confederations are bulging with funds running up into millions, that our enterprises are thriving, that Asseele's merchant marine with the red flag floats upon the oceans.

"They look with pleasure on the power of Belgian labor built up by themselves. They trust in universal suffrage, believe that we can realize our program exclusively by peaceful means of parliamentarian procedure, and that we can sleep quietly on the pillow of legality.

"But there is the example in Italy, and in France also nor the nationalists also command their armed bands? Do not the German monarchists plot to overthrow the republic.

"The Belgian capitalists also dream of a grand assault on labor, that they hope for some Messiah who like Mussolini shall abolish government by parliament, destroy labor temples, offices and printing plants, rob labor treasuries and save capitalism from the nightmare of Socialism."

Dewinne then throws all pleas to democracy to the winds and claims that the Belgian Socialists will defend themselves. They will not quit without a struggle. In his own words he says the Belgians

"have strong organizations. They have but to get ready for a battle with the Fascisti. It took the Italian Fascisti two years to get their army organized. The Belgian Socialists can get ready in two weeks.

"They have the Young Socialist guards, strong gymnastic battalions, sporting clubs and other militant groups. They can give the Socialist and trade union movement a military organization in a very short time.

"The Belgian Socialists do not conspire for a violent overthrow of capitalism. They prefer the road of peaceful legality. But if the reactionaries do not respect their own laws, they shall be warned that the Belgian labor and Socialist organizations can use force as well as the Fascisti, or even better."

But it is certain that before Belgian labor's struggle with the Fascisti of Belgian capitalism has proceeded very far, that it will be deserted by most of its parliamentary leadership.

Vandervelde, like Turati in Italy, will be pleading for a place in the fascisti government. Some Belgian "Socialist" will turn Mussolini and make war on his former comrades.

It is not even written that the triumph of Belgian labor against the opposing Fascisti will be won under "Socialist" standards, now everywhere hued in yellow. Labor in Belgium, as in Italy, will triumph under the Red Flag of the Communist International, the only flag in the world today that knows no defeat.

Red Celebration in Christiania

Christiania is the capital city of Norway. It will soon celebrate its 300th anniversary.

This tercentennary celebration has suddenly taken on added significance to Norway's workers, because of Communist success at the recent municipal elections resulting as follows: Communists, 33; Socialists, 8; Prohibitionists, 2; and Conservatives, 40.

This gives the Communists, and the Socialists who are forced to work with them, a majority of the city council that will have the direction of the city's festivities. This matter of the city's birthday celebration was considered of such importance by the conservatives that they made a campaign issue out of it. They contended it would be a great disgrace to have the Communists in power on such an occasion. But the workers have shown they thought differently.

The Communist movement in Norway is daily gaining in strength. The Norwegians affiliated with the Communist International in 1919, while most of the trade unions of Norway have affiliated with the Red International of Labor Unions.

The Socialists are to be found in the Social Democratic Party, numerically not an important fraction of the Norwegian Labor Party. In the last parliamentary elections the vote was: Social Democrats, 83,000; Communists, 192,500, out of a total number of 905,000 electors.

Workers thruout the world will follow with interest the Communist celebration in Christiania, Norway, a forerunner of the day not far distant when it is believed Norwegian labor will celebrate the winning of all power in its country.

Who Helped the Coal Miners?

We published last week the detailed auditor's report showing that the Miners Relief Committee of the Workers Party raised more than $9,000 in aid of the starving West Virginia coal miners.

We call the attention of Mr. Abraham Cahan, editor of the New York Forward, also of the editors of the "Socialist" Call to this statement. Or perhaps they fear to peruse it, believing it might shame them into silence in their attacks on the Workers Party and its activities.

This magnificent sum was collected and sent into West Virginia, when the miners there were facing the darkest hours in their struggle with the mine owners. It was gathered together in spite of the indifference of the officials of organized labor in New York City, and against the sabotage of the "Socialist" Forward and its editor.

We may recall that The Call, in its issue of August 25, under two-column headlines, announced that Local New York, Socialist Party, had collected $188.18 and sent it, not to the West Virginia miners in need of it, but to the officials of the United Mine Workers, at Indianapolis, Ind. We do not forget that labor officialdom, at the top of the international unions, usually send relief to those who support their policies. This has been shown very conclusively in the experience of the Fayette coal miners of Western Pennsylvania. Thus the "Socialists" not only raise an insignificant sum but send it where it will do the least good.

We do not hope to change the ways of the "Socialists," nor to convert the reactionary officialdom of labor. All that we can expect to do is to call these facts to the attention of the great rank and file of the coal miners' union, and of labor at large, and ask them to keep them in mind the next time that the yellows, whether "Socialists" or trade unionists, pour forth their venomous falsehoods against the organized Communist movement.

All of the Michigan raid victims are now out on bail. Support the campaign of the Labor Defense Council to win the necessary victory at the rapidly approaching trial. We must keep them on "the outside" working for Communism.

Conquests by Diplomacy

If we are to believe a cable to The Chicago Tribune, the Russian Soviet Government, on the heels of the Baltic Disarmament Congress at Moscow, is proceeding to the unmasking of the peaceful pretensions of Roumania, one of the catspaws of the capitalist allies.

The Moscow Congress failed because the Versailles imperialists would not allow their pawns, Finland, Poland, Latvia and Esthonia, to enter into a disarmament agreement with the Workers' Republic.

That the Russians are in earnest in their proposals to the Roumanians is shown by the extensive concessions they are willing to make: surrender of all claims to Bessarabia and recognition of the Russo-Roumanian frontiers on the following conditions: 1. that the Roumanians make a definite peace with Russia; 2. recognize the Russian government; 3. start economic and political relations with Russia and make the same conventions with Poland; 4. agree to the Russian disarmament program.

Roumania was the only Russian border state absent at the Moscow disarmament gathering. If Roumania is brought into line, Russia may force the other border states to cripple their military machines in spite of the Allies.

Roumania is one of the countries bordering on the Black Sea, thus involving it in the settlement of "The Straits" problem, that is now uppermost at the Lausanne Conference.

Roumania is also one of the strongholds of the Russian emigres, also the last abiding place of White Guard' elements ousted by Soviet Russia, thus making of it an excellent jumping off place for new Allied intervention efforts.

The Workers' Republic, therefore, has much to gain in the diplomatic conquest of the Roumanian monarchy, that was less successful in its attacks on Soviet Rule in Russia than in the overthrow of Soviet Hungary.

Now was a time when the border states refused to have any dealings with Soviet Russia, except to make war upon her. That time is past. The time must come when the peoples if not the governments of the border states will ally themselves with the Workers' Republic against their Versailles overlords.

The Second National Convention of the Workers Party is over. It has made history for American labor. Help translate its decisions into effective action during the coming year.

"They All Work Against Us"

One of the many impressive features of the inspiring address delivered by Lenin before the Fourth Congress of the Communist International is the oft-repeated declaration that the Communist order of society is breaking its way to life, not only without the assistance, but against the opposition of the passing capitalist social order.

Lenin spares no words in placing the heroes and traitors of the Second (Socialist) International with the counter-revolutionary forces of capitalism.

"We stand alone," says Lenin, showing that no help comes to the Workers' and Peasants' Republic from "these wonderful capitalist states."

No credits, no loans from foreign capitalists or governments, while all the much-heralded "concessions" exist, so far, only upon paper.

Yet the Russians have satisfied the great masses of the peasants so that there are no serious complaints amongst them against the Soviet regime; small industry has been set going, the wheels of heavy industry are beginning to move.

Lenin admits that the Russians have made mistakes because "we are a backward country, education is at a minimum, we are without help; no civilized country helps us, on the contrary, they all work against us."

But, Lenin points out, many hundreds of thousands of young people are learning . . . Within a few years we shall have a large number of young people capable of changing the apparatus down to its foundations."

"We are learning so systematically that we are sure of attaining results," says the Communist statesman, in another place, laughing at the charges of the capitalists and the Second International that Soviet Rule has made mistakes.

Lenin claims that the one and one-half years of the New Economic Policy show that Soviet Rule has successfully met the greatest test put upon it. This all the world must now admit.

Communism is rising to power in the world, first in Soviet Russia, because Communism has the only solution for the inhumanity is suffering today. It is a good natured and self-confident smile, that spreads over the face of Nikolai Lenin as he hurls back into the teeth of world reaction his reply: "Our foolish actions are as nothing in comparison with those committed by the capitalist world in combination with the Second International." A new world is being born in spite of the old.

WHO SAID ROBOTS ARE MANUFACTURED?

(Conversation overheard in subway.)

"Happy New Year, Mac!"

"Happy New Year, Joe!"

"Why so gloomy this morning?"

"Oh, trouble enough! Got fired for asking the boss for a raise. Can't find any work to do. Over two weeks that I'm hunting around doing nothing. My wife and kids are laid up with the flu. Can't get any coal for the house. Haven't even money for food and must pay rent this week. How are you, Joe?"

"Not so good. I'm still sick. The doctor said if I don't quit my job I'm going to croak one of these days. I've been receiving forty-two, twenty-five per cent so now the boss has to take in washing."

"Darn it, things are pretty tough. With the high cost of living, shortage of coal and unemployment one should be thankful for being alive. In Europe the workers are eating one another alive. Thanks to the President that things are not as bad here as they are on the other side."

"You know Mac, it's those damned bolsheviks who are the cause of it all!"

"Right you are, Joe. We free Americans ought to kill these damned creatures!"

OUR EMPLOYMENT DEPARTMENT

To help solve the unemployment question, the Bolcons have secured the following jobs for our esteemed statesmen. They are requested to inform us at once whether willing to accept them. These positions will positively not be open after the 10th of this month.

THE FORCES OF ORDER

A house in Germany was lately insured against damage from labor disturbances at the rate of three per cent. The insurer then proposed to protect his property against damages by the police or other agents of the "Socialist" Government. "The rate for that," was the company's reply, "will be twenty-five per cent."

WORTHY OF BOLCLUB MEMBERSHIP

The Workers Party Convention Banquet was held in true Bolcons spirit—thanks to our talented toastmaster. A representative of the staff gathered the following gems for us:

COMRADE DUNNE: "Our next speaker is Dr. Kendrick. I don't entirely approve of her. I believe that some of the astronomers she made at the convention, for instance, the claims that most of the constellations here, don't even look like the constellations in the heavens. Now, that's entirely a matter of fact we try to correct in the Bolcons."

COMRADE KIAR: "New York is a wonderful town. Wherever you go all you get is cash cash and cash cash. Multimillionaires galore. All kinds and grades of millionaires. Why, even here in the Workers Party Convention and what do you think we found? Why, even some of the delegates!"

COMRADE KRUBE: "I personally object to the Soviet Banquet in Moscow. The return wage discussed here to-night. Now, I'm a married man with a family to support. How I maintain that according to the present rate dollars for a week should be enough!"

Morgan Rules in Washington

International Banker Joins Standard Oil in Coalition to Rule the U. S. and for Dictatorship Over Europe

The House of J. Pierpont Morgan and Co. rules in Washington. The Harding republican administration is being forced to adopt the League of Nations idea, that formed the Wall Street-directed Wilson democratic administration in the 1920 elections.

The establishment, guidance of the international bankers, headed by Morgan, the Harding administration, elected on an anti-League of Nations platform, now discovers, in the words of the New York World, that "the peace and order of Europe concern the United States."

Robert Minor, in the January issue of The Liberator, explains that "when J. Pierpont Morgan a few days ago walked into the Department of State at Washington in broad daylight, it was the outward sign of an event in the history of this country as big as its entry into the world war."

Minor explains that the event means "that J. Pierpont Morgan and Co. are arranging to move back into the White House, from which they were ousted on March 4, 1921.

"It means that Standard Oil, Guggenheim and Mellon interests who now own the White House have consented to admit Morgan into a coalition with them for the joint rule of the United States and for the financial and political dictatorship of Europe."

Minor then goes on to explode the theory of the man in the street that "Wall Street" is a single, united force consisting vaguely of "Morgan and Rockefeller." He shows that there are two financial dynasties in America, and that for the past 15 years these two dynasties have been struggling for the mastery of the United States.

He pits the House of Morgan, the official fiscal agents of the British and French governments at the beginning of the War, against the Standard Oil industrial group, predominantly producers, rather than bankers.

Minor's points out that "Each of the two big rival dynasties has its own separate international corporation for foreign trade. That of the Rockefeller group in the 'American International Corporation.' The concern of the Morgan group is the 'Foreign Trade Financing Company,' capitalized at a hundred million dollars, and headed by Stettinius of the firm of Morgan and Co., and with Mr. Herbert Hoover as one of its directors."

It is then declared that:

"When Mr. Morgan called on Mr. Hughes in Washington it was a visit of the head of the Morgan dynasty to the agent of the Standard Oil dynasty. It was made openly for political effect, as king visits king to show that two kingdoms are making a treaty."

Minor then reviews the struggle of these two dynasties during the last quarter of a century, leading up to

Plan War on Cossack Rule

By HARRY GOODMAN

The American Federation of Labor, in connection with the New York State Federation of Labor, has begun a campaign to abolish the New York state constabulary. Both, the national and the state labor bodies, are training their biggest guns on the "Cossack" organization which through its existence has been used as a strike-breaking, union-crushing, head-smashing instrument at the behest of employers.

A good deal more than the issue of the state cossacks or no state cossacks is involved in the fight the trade union organizations have undertaken in this state. The outcome will make plain just how strong organized labor is in New York and how effective or ineffective the A. F. of L. "reward your friends, defeat your enemies" policy has been here.

The union labor vote, both in New York city and New York state, insofar as the leaders could control it, was delivered to Governor-elect Smith and for the most part to Democratic candidates. The "nonpartisan politics" strength of the unions was exerted to help elect Smith and the Democratic state ticket, in return for certain promises and half-promises—including some good jobs.

The drive against the constabulary is being opened by the A. F. of L. thru an appeal which is being sent to all central bodies and affiliated unions in the state to cooperate and furnish evidence against the cossacks, and by the state federation thru a committee which is preparing data to submit to Gov. Smith.

"It would seem," says the statement issued by the state federation, "that when Gov. Miller created two extra troops, his pretext was that police used by the state constabulary there would immediately be opposition and antagonism to the law. Police men are trained like men going into battle instead of preserving peace. Their tactics, as proved by affidavits, are to ride down in a fury of wrath and rider upon some puny striking citizen or striker and beat him into submission—particularly where there is a strike that involves strangers who do not speak or understand English."

Take the Coal Mines!

Rank and File of the Miners' Union Must Push the Fight for "Plumb Plan" and the Labor Party

Crises in capitalist production is appearing anywhere in this country as much as in the coal mining industry.

In spite of vast stores of this fuel underground the nation periodically faces catastrophic crisis in the coal situation. The industry develops speculative profits, overproduction, shortages, sky-high prices, unemployment, gunmen, spies, the murder of miners, a sullen, desperate consuming public.

"Coal" is a favorite subject of discussion in congress. Representative Thomas D. Schall, Minnesota, only the other day delivered a lengthy oration beginning with these words:

"The coal miners have returned under exactly the same conditions as when they struck, yet with cost of production the same, the price of coal at the mines is from three to four times the price in effect at the time the strike was called."

Yet congress does nothing. It offers no relief. The mine owners themselves not only offer no relief, they combat measures for the orderly production of coal, they wage periodical warfare against the miners' union, that alone seeks a solution of the coal problem.

Christ J. Golden, president, District 9, United Mine Workers of America, has just offered a plan for the nationalization of the hard and soft coal mines of the country as prepared by the National Research Committee of the miners' union, that says:

"Any plan must not only provide a decent American standard of living to the worker, but must satisfy his desire for a voice in the management."

The miners are trying to work out a "Plumb Plan" for the coal industry. With their strong industrial union they should make more rapid progress than the divided workers on the railroads.

It is rather comical, however, to read this report declaring that, "The American worker has no use for the thing called 'State Socialism'," adding, "To have a group of politicians at Washington manage coal would be as distasteful to the miner as it would be to the long-suffering people."

Yet the miners seem trouble when they demand a "political labor party," showing that it is not politicians at Washington," but the KIND OF POLITICIANS, admitting that, "until labor is adequately represented in voting strength, government com-

Amalgamation and the Labor Party

The two big issues before the workers of the United States today are "Amalgamation" and "The Labor Party." These issues hold the center of attention at the recent Second National Convention of the Workers Party. They will be discussed in one form or another at every forthcoming gathering of labor.

THE WORKER plans to keep its readers informed, in the future as in the past, as to all the developments in the struggle for "Amalgamation," for "The Labor Party."

In order to do this it seeks the co-operation of all its readers. Send in the news of all developments, local, state or national, for publication in YOUR PAPER. Make your articles short—not more than 200 words, and write legibly.

Three prizes will be given each week for the best material submitted. These prizes will be appropriate books, and will be announced each week. Your articles will be submitted to, and the prize winners selected by a committee of three to consist of William F. Dunne, H. M. Wicks and Joseph Manly. Offensive of Capitalism Is Met by Bolshevik

The Workers Say, "We're on Our Way!"

The "Years of the Russian Revolution and the Prospects of the World Revolution", the Fourth Congress of the Communist International took up, for consideration the world offensive of capitalism against labor. The first speech was made by Karl Radek, editor of Pravda, official organ of the Russian Communist Party. The accompanying article is the first story published in this country of this discussion. It is as follows:

By Radek to Imprekorr (Berlin) and Forwarded by Mail to "The Worker"

MOSCOW, Nov. 15.—Karl Radek, editor of Pravda, official organ of the Russian Communist Party, addressed the Fourth Congress of the Communist International on "The Capitalist Offensive."

He said that the capitalist offensive signified not alone a struggle for wage reductions, but a simultaneous struggle for longer working hours. "The epoch of the proletarian offensive begins with the Russian February Revolution," he said. "Czernin and Ludendorff understood better than the proletariat how to lead an offensive, as may be seen from their memoirs. The world war of the capitalist states gave the Russian Revolution time to draw breath."

Lloyd George Saw Danger

"After the collapse of the Central Powers the proletarian revolution passed into a new phase. While the Mensheviki were laughing at our prophesy of the coming world revolution, Lloyd George wrote in a secret memorandum, during the Versailles negotiations: 'The danger of revolution is actual. The union of Germany with the Bolsheviki is no phantom, and in this case we shall have three hundred million people against us.'

"World-capital attempted to counteract the situation by the defensive in the west and the offensive in the East. In the West great wage concessions were made to the workers. Shorter working hours and social reforms were introduced. But at the same time we saw the commencement of intervention against Russia.

"Soviet Russia passed from the defensive to political offensive. The proletarian offensive in the West began with the Italian workers taking possession of the factories. Unfortunately the offensive broke down and the capitalist offensive set in.

"The position of the workers has Hamrock resigned last Thursday in face of our meeting. Denver branch of Trade Union Educational League extends Civil Liberties Union hearty thanks for effective assistance."

The Party and Industrial Work

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

With the adoption of the report on and the recommendations for industrial activity by the Second National Convention, the Workers Party of America has placed its feet solidly on the ground.

The report and recommendations with the discussion that took place, constitute the clearest statement on which the party position is based ever crystallized into action. No part of the convention proceedings was more Labor Demonstrates on Eve of Communist Trial in Berrien County, Mich.

(Special to The Worker)

NILES, Mich.—Berrien County citizens held a public demonstration, under the auspices of the Federated Shop Crafts, in the local Opera House to protest against the prosecution of William Z. Foster and his co-defendants. The trial of these men, arrested for alleged violation of the Michigan Criminal Syndicalism law is set for Jan. 15 in the court house at St. Joseph.

The speakers of the mass meeting were Eugene J. Brost, of Detroit, chairman of the Michigan Federa-

Recognize Russia! Mass Meeting! Under the Auspices of the National Labor Alliance for Trade Relations with and Recognition of Soviet Russia. Lexington Theatre 51st St. and Lexington Ave. Sunday, Jan. 7, 8:15 SPEAKERS: [illegible]

Demonstrate for Russia This Sunday

Recognition for Soviet Russia will be demanded at a monster mass meeting in New York, Sunday evening, January 7, at the Lexington Theatre, 51st St. and Lexington Ave. The allignment of speakers is one of the most impressive that has appeared on a single platform in recent years, consisting of Dudley Field Malone, Sidney Hillman, Capt. Paxton Hibben, Frank P. Walsh, and Jerome T. De Hunt in the chair.

A similar meeting in Boston some two weeks ago filled one of the biggest halls in the city and thousands had to be turned away. Likewise in Chicago there took place recently a huge gathering to demand the immediate recognition by America of the Soviet Republic. In view of the prominent speakers and the importance of the purposes of the meeting, it is expected that Lexington Theatre will be the scene of a great demonstration by New York workers.

The meeting has been arranged under the auspices of the National Labor Alliance for Trade Relations with and Recognition of Russia, and is backed by an impressive Citizens Committee including such prominent New Yorkers as: Harry Berlin, Pres. Jt. Bd. Dress and Waistmakers Union; Heywood Broun, Author and Critic; A. Brownstein, Mgr. Jt. Bd. Furriers Union; J. M. Budish; Lewis Gannett, The Nation"; Philip Gelibter, Exec. Sec. of the Workmen's Circle; B. W. Huebsch, "The Freeman"; Abraham Lefkowitz, The Teachers Union; Kenneth Macgowan, Drama Critic; Jack Mellado, Cigar Makers Union 133; J. S. Potofsky, Asst. Gen. Sec. A. C. W. A.; Celia Samorodin; Rose Schneiderman; and Theresa Wolfson of the Union Health Center.

Three of the speakers have only recently returned from Soviet Russia, and will speak directly from personal knowledge of the situation there. They are Sidney Hillman, President of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America; Frank P. Walsh, the prominent attorney, and Capt. Paxton Hibben of the Russian Red Cross; Dudley Field Malone has spent two years in Europe and knows from personal study what Russian recognition would mean in the rehabilitation of the whole continent. James H. Maurer is the President of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor.

Recognition of Russia is becoming a more important national problem every day, as the realization gains ground that there can be no escape from the economic chaos of the world without Russia's cooperation. On the other hand, the workers in all countries realize that the Workers Republic must have commerce and seek the end of the virtual blockade involved in non-recognition.

Tickets sell at 25 and 35 cents and may be bought at the following points: Room 606, 110 W. 40th St. (Phone Penn 1738); The Civic Club, 14 W. 12th St.; Forward, 175 E. Broadway; The Rand School, 7 E. 15th St.; A. C. W. A. Gen. Off., 31 Union Square; N. Y. Joint Board, A. C. W. A., 621 Broadway.

What You Get in "The Worker"

The New York Times is having a very exciting time advertising the speech of Nikolai Lenin on Soviet Russia's "New Economic Policy." It says that this speech is "Revealed to the world for the first time," in its monthly, "Current History Magazine." We do not begrudge the editors of The Times recognizing a good thing when they see it, but this announcement by Lenin was published in full in "THE WORKER" several weeks before it was announced for the "Current History Magazine". So, if you want to know what is going on in Soviet Russia, or any other part of the world, read "THE WORKER", where you will get it first.

Morgan Rules!

their present coalition, declaring that "they do not yet condescend to tell what they are going to do with the United States, but it is evident that they intend to do something big. It is fairly sure that what they are going to do is to pledge the conscript lives of the American male population to guarantee a loan of a billion and a half or two billion dollars from the Morgan Banking circle and the Rockefeller, Guggenheim and Mellon banks to the German government. The project has the purpose of saving Morgan's investments in Europe. But it has a further and vaster ambition—the ambition to establish the financial and political rule of Morgan, Rockefeller, Guggenheim and Mellon over Europe, with the American Army and Navy as their police."

In the meantime George Harvey, United States ambassador to London, has come home, while William Randolph Hearst rants thru his sheets against Harding going over to the House of Morgan and cursing the adventurer Harvey. Hearst claims that it was the trickster, Harvey, that sat in on the 2 a. m. conference in Chicago that agreed on the nomination of Harding. Harvey sat in as the agent of the Morgan clique, and Minor draws the conclusion that, "perhaps, after all, Harvey was the go-between of Standard Oil and Morgan and had up his sleeve all the time this impending coalition of the two dynasties."

Coincident with the return of Harvey we are told that Montague Norman, Governor of the Bank of England, who is soon coming to the United States with the British Debt Funding Mission, was in this country last spring, and discussed with President Harding and several government officials and financiers the question of the financial situation in Europe. This information is given us, authoritatively we may be sure, by the New York Times.

During his stay here Mr. Norman saw, in addition to the Presidents, Secretary Hoover and Secretary Mellon, representatives respectively of the Morgan and the Standard Oil groups. Mr. Norman also conferred with J. P. Morgan and other bankers in New York City.

Thus American capitalism musters its forces in an effort to save, if it can, the crumbling capitalist social structure in Europe. This effort will inevitably lead to new war against Russia.

Workers of America! Will you stand idly by while American capitalism plots the crushing of the Russian revolution and the shackling of world labor to its greed for profits.

Workers of America! Smash this effort to drive you into new and bloodier wars. Demand the recognition of the Russian Soviet Republic. Demand the opening of trade relations with Soviet Russia. Demand that loans and credits be extended to the Workers' Republic, that alone has the program to save mankind and the will to carry it out.

Workers of America! Stand by the workers of Western Europe! Stand by the workers of Russia! When you do that, you will be standing by yourselves and your own interests in this country!

Progress Towards Amalgamation

Growing out of the general movement for the amalgamation of the Needle Trades Unions comes the proposal for a convention of the five dominant unions in the Needle Trades industry to devise ways and means of closer affiliation.

The call for a convention, accompanied by a tentative draft of a constitution has been sent out by the General Executive Board of the United Cloth Hat and Cap Makers' Union of North America. The Unions to whom the call has been sent are: The Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the International Ladies' Garment Workers, the International Fur Workers and Journeymen Tailors.

The definite proposal made in the convention call is for a needle trades alliance, branches of which would be formed in all localities where the five unions operate, leaving the membership of the five unions, however, there is a growing sentiment for actual amalgamation in one Needles Trade Union and already there is a National Amalgamation Committee of the Trades Union Educational League carrying on the work for one union in the clothing industry.

If the five organizations summoned agree to a joint convention representative of the membership, there is little doubt that only technical difficulties will stand in the way of amalgamation. The needle trades' workers are the most intelligent organized group in the American labor movement: they accept the idea of industrial unionism and have only the problem of overcoming the inertia of officialdom to solve. Organized for intelligent action they will rapidly solve this problem and one union, the Amalgamated, is already officially on record for one union in the industry.

"Liebknecht Issue" of THE WORKER Next Week

In commemoration of the martyrdom of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg THE WORKER will devote next week's issue, dated Jan. 20, to discussing the significance of Liebknecht's work in behalf of the revolutionary movement. Liebknecht and Luxemburg were murdered in January, 1919, by the capitalist class of Germany, with the connivance and actual aid of the Social Democrats of that country, in order to squelch the uprising of the working masses, led by the valiant Spartacists.

Throughout the world, in the latter part of January, the Communist movement arranges demonstrations to call to the workers attention the murder of Liebknecht and the many other working class fighters, to warn them of like action by the traitorous social patriots, should the workers in their particular country seek to throw off the shackles of capitalism. Foremost in these demonstrations are the Young Communist Leagues of Europe, and in this country the Young Workers League assumes the work of spreading the message of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg.

THE WORKER, Jan. 20, will contain articles on the life of Liebknecht and Luxemburg, their work in the revolutionary movement and especially the importance of the lesson taught by the combination of local patriots and the capitalists when the workers seek to take power into their own hands.

The Young Workers League is arranging mass demonstrations from coast to coast. Special material such as illustrated posters, buttons, pamphlets and an edition of the YOUNG WORKER have been gotten out for this occasion. THE WORKER will be widely distributed at these meetings. Order your bundle of the Jan. 20th issue of THE WORKER now! The young workers, particularly, will find the LIEBKNECHT issue of THE WORKER of vital interest to them. All workers should read this edition of THE WORKER for it points out a lesson none of them can overlook nor fail to realize as affecting them as workers. Send in your orders, at 3½ cents per copy, to THE WORKER, Room 405, 799 Broadway, New York City.

become very much worse. The great number of the unemployed renders it more difficult for those in work to better their position. Attempts at socialisation enlarged.

U. S. Trade Unions Gagged.

"In the United States we see the trade unions gagged by the law courts. Instead of an equal distribution of the war burdens, we have the Treaty of Versailles, throwing tremendous burdens on the conquered. After the Napoleonic wars, Owen pointed out that England's only salvation was her monopoly as an industrial state. And now the sole possibility of salvation would be electrification for the purpose of increasing production.

"This is however impossible, as great sections of the world are impoverished and the markets destroyed. Therefore capitalism seeks to save itself at the expense of the workers only. Stinnes' plan is to relieve the bourgeoisie and to shift the burden on to the broad masses of the people. So this English and French bourgeoisie alike are in full agreement, as well as the new Italian prime minister Mussolini. Their plan is: reduction of wages, longer working hours, and the rendering of all socialization impossible.

"Parallel to this runs their political offensive, the placing of government power in the hands of the most reactionary elements. At the same time illegal counter-revolutionary organizations, under the leadership of Russian monarchists, Horthyists, Fascisti, French militarists, and German Orgesch organizations, are striving to turn Central Europe into a Horth-Hungary. One link of this chain is the Geneva Agreement against Austria.

"The victory of the Fascisti is the greatest defeat which the Italian working class has suffered. The followers of Fascism consist of intellectuals, disappointed petty bourgeois, and participators in the war. In the year 1919 Italy was in a state of dissolution.

"The bourgeoisie was inclined to free-thought and pacifism, and the statesmen began to reconcile themselves with the victory of the revolution. The Italian Socialists did not know how to utilize this victory.

"Mussolini declares, rightly enough: The defeat of the Socialists was the result of their words not being followed by deeds. The bourgeois parties had exhausted their economics, but Fascism became the new faith of the petty bourgeoisie.

"Where Fascism has the advantage is that it ventures to act. After the victory differences are sure to arise in the Fascisti camp. The existence of immense national debts does not permit the Fascisti to place sinecures at the disposal of their intellectuals. In such circumstances the free troops will not be successful. Opposition is inevitable between the agrarian capitalists and the democracy.

"With the victory of the petty bourgeoisie, Mussolini is forced to pursue a policy for the larger bourgeoisie—in which he will not succeed. Our victory in Italy will depend upon our winning over the peasantry, and upon our success in uniting the masses crying for freedom. The Communists must defeat the Fascisti not only with courage, but politically.

"The present world situation is similar to that of the year 1849. At that time the counter-revolutionary period set in, based on the increasing might of capital. The counter-revolution was able to give the people bread. The present basis of the counter-revolution is the decay of capitalism. As the economic crisis is general, the bourgeoisie attempt in vain to retard the collapse by force.

"With our slogan of the united front we have placed ourselves at the head of the proletarian defence. The negotiations with the leaders of the Second and of the Vienna Internationals, are necessary because the workers still believe that these leaders are willing to fight for the demands of the workers. The united front of the proletariat is our defense against the capitalist offensive.

"The masses have lost faith in the speedy seizure of power. Large masses of workers are still in favor of the coalition policy today, and fear expulsion from this coalition. It was this frame of mind which led to the union of the German Social Democrats with the Independents. We must be the bearers of the united front idea for wages, bread, and housing of the workers. The Berlin negotiations with the Second and the Vienna Internationals demonstrated that these Internationals decline to fight even for the partial demands of the working class.

"The import of our united front campaign is this. We want to force a break with the coalition policy. Up to now the united front agitation in the Communist Parties has not been energetic enough. The pressure from below must be increased, but without abandoning negotiations with the heads. Where demands for increased wages do not suffice, questions of politics and organization should be raised.

"The trade union slogan should be the control of production.

"We must fight for the seizure of real values, and not only in Germany, but everywhere, and this is impossible without control of production. We must also demand that the armed forces consist of workers organized in the trade unions. If the Social Democrats will break with the bourgeoisie, and fight for a real workers' government and a real class policy, we are ready to support them. I am not afraid that a Schiedemann or any trade union leader will really fight.

"The slogan of the workers' government is a positive one for the mobilization of the working masses. The bourgeoisie will combat the workers' government, will have recourse to civil war,—by which the workers' government will in a sense be rendered a preliminary step to the dictatorship.

"A new offensive of the broad masses of the workers will begin with the slogan: fight for the control of production and for the workers' government.

"The Communist parties are not only parties for capturing power, but also for carrying on the daily struggle. They do not wait for a fresh wave of revolution, but prove by their fight for a larger piece of bread that they are ready to lead the practical struggles of the proletariat. And to do this requires not only the passing of resolutions but an iron fighting will."

Alien Registration—For Whom?

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

Let there be no doubt that in one respect at least, despite the insurgent spirit disclosed by the recent elections, the Harding administration is going right ahead with its program.

The propaganda campaign for the registration of aliens is being prosecuted vigorously and their relations with the radical movement is presented as the main talking point of the administration propagandists. Alien registration is also supposed to be a panacea for all the ills of the body politic. Aliens are also supposed to believe that we are blessed with a 100 per cent American government, there is discernible no hesitancy in importing foreign agitators for this sort of work.

As usual, the sons of Merry England are in the vanguard of those who are saving civilization. The most recent arrival is one Sir Basil Thompson, formerly the head of Scotland Yard, who is chiefly distinguished for his activities against the English workers during the war while the agents of the German government rate his department entirely unsuspected by Sir Basil.

This earnest worker recently addressed a meeting of members of the New York police department to which representatives of the press were not admitted. According to the New York Times "he gave particular attention to the method and scope of organization of the Red International, and gave intimate details of how Scotland Yard dealt with Communists. . . . He dwelt at some length on the activities of the Reds in America and advised the New York police of the most effective way of causing disintegration within their organization and rendering their efforts ineffective."

So much for Sir Basil Thompson, the British advisor of our department of justice.

A few days later, the British Ambassador, Sir Auckland Geddes, was to have spoken to the Advertising Club. He was unable to attend, so his place was taken by James J. Davis, whom some say is Secretary of Labor and who believes that Welshmen are the only aliens fit for citizenship in this Gary domain.

Secretary Davis did right well we are informed by the Times, that trustworthy purveyor of reactionary utterances. He also dwelt upon the Red menace and the relation of the alien thereto. This gentleman, who undergoes one big iron dollar every time a new member joins the Loyal Order of Moose, said in part: "Every alien in the United States should be registered and I would have each one by a small fee, about five or ten dollars, spread over a period of about five years, from which the alien could be taught what this country means and what American ideals represent. Registration would also give an opportunity to make a survey of them and ascertain the undesirable ones. Mr. Burns of the department of justice tells me that such a survey would disclose about 150,000 who would be eligible to be sent back to the land where they came from. I don't go as high as Mr. Burns, but I do think that close to 70,000 persons have slipped surreptitiously into the United States."

The linking up of the aliens with the revolutionary movement by the propagandists is only to give the campaign a patriotic tinge. The real purpose behind the demand for a registration of aliens is the terrorizing of foreign-born workers so that they will be afraid to take part in ANY form of working class activity. The stoppage of emigration has seriously depleted the reserve stock of unskilled labor upon which the capitalists relied to keep down wages, so the aliens must be prevented from participating in the organizations of the wage-earners by a system of registration that would place them at the mercy of the capitalist and his agents.

Nothing has been said so far about the registration of citizens but as a matter of fact the proposed plan cannot be carried out successfully without a nation-wide registration of citizens and aliens alike. All would have to carry passports for identification so the army of secret service agents which the plan necessitates could distinguish between them.

What is really proposed is a general system of registration that will facilitate the blacklisting of militant workers now practiced to some extent by every large corporation.

Here then is a real issue on which radical and conservative, citizen and alien workers can fight shoulder to shoulder. It is a matter that demands the attention of every section of the labor movement of the United States and no time should be lost in getting into action.

A Voice from Prison

TO ALL COMRADES WHO SENT GREETINGS AND PACKAGES TO ME:

During the last three weeks I received many letters and postcards from Christmas and New Year's greeting. Also some comrades have sent me packages. According to the Penitentiary Rules, I am permitted to write only three letters weekly. This makes it impossible to answer each individual letter or post-card. Thru the columns of THE WORKER, I am sending thanks to all those comrades who, by remembering those who are behind the bars, are showing that our spirit and readiness to fight for our common cause. To all my comrades and friends I am sending my best New Year's wishes and greetings. My spirit (and I think it is also yours) this New Year is to gain more and more victories for the emancipation of the workers.

Denounce Bellaire, O., Convictions

BELLAIRE, O.—The Miners' Defense committee, organized to fight unjust convictions of union miners in the New Lafferty cases, reports that almost 20 miner locals in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana and Illinois have sent in resolutions denouncing the conviction of Dominick Viscardo and Dan Agosti for alleged part in the killing of John Mazar, a union operator, who was one party of striking miners June 7 and was shot in the scuffle.

International of Red Labor Unions Opens

EDITOR'S NOTE.—We herewith publish the first report received on the Second Congress of the Red International of Labor Unions. The Red Labor International is also known as "The Profintern." The report follows:

By Radio to Inprekorr (Berlin), and Forwarded by Mail to The Worker.

MOSCOW, Nov. 21.—The Second World Congress of the Profintern was opened here today.

Present for welcoming the Congress are: the Russian Central Trades Union Council, the Moscow Factory Committee.

After a short speech of welcome from Comrade Losovsky, in which he showed the progress made by the Red International of Labor Unions despite the reinforced attacks of capitalism, the following comrades are elected to the presidium of the congress: Losovsky, Melnichansky, Tomski, Heckert, Monmousseau, Watkins, Pavlik, Dimitroff, Celasse, MacDonald, Gerschinsky, Reinhardt (South America), Kuhtaroada (Japan), Tchakchonki (China).

Further elections are those of the mandate examination commission, of the commission for investigating the question of the co-operatives, the financial and Eastern questions, militarism, unemployment, and the tactics of the Profintern.

This is followed by speeches of welcome from Dudilleux (France), Heckert (Germany), Gerdier (Australia), Pavlik (Czecho-Slovakia), Tasca (Italy), Tchakchonki (China).

Clara Zetkin, greeted with enthusiastic applause, welcomes the congress in the name of the Comintern. Andreyev brings greetings from the Russian Trade Unions.

A proclamation against the White Terror is accepted unanimously.

In the second sitting, on Nov. 22, Losovsky gives the report on the activity of the executive bureau. He gives a survey of the strength of the Profintern and of the Amsterdam international. He reads the correspondence with the Amsterdamers for the purpose of establishing the united front. In the further course of his remarks Losovsky describes the resistance of the R.I.L.U. to the syndicalists, gives a survey of the situation in France, Italy, Czecho-Slovakia, England, America, Norway, Spain.

It is unanimously agreed to send a greeting to the German Shop Stewards' Congress.

The third sitting on November 23, was devoted to the discussion on Comrade Losovsky's speech; the general tone of the debate was in agreement with the speech.

Tomsky wishes for more exact statistical information, and that greater consideration be accorded to England. Smith points out the progress made in England despite the power of the old unions. Heckert agrees with Lozovsky's report. The tactics resolved upon at the first congress have been attended with excellent results in Germany. Heller from the Union expresses his satisfaction at being able to work so well in community with the German Communist Party.

Tomsky reports that the Polish comrades, despite the desire of the reformists for a split, have avoided the split in accordance with the instructions of the R.I.L.U. Jusefovitch desires more energetic work on the part of the propaganda committee. Ghilier is of the opinion that the united front with Amsterdam arouses the mistrust of the masses. He declares himself opposed to the French motion with regard to the statutes. Lefoil reports on the progress of the communists in the Belgian trade unions.

Hais (Czecho-Slovakia) reports on the split in the trade unions of Czecho-Slovakia, and defends the form of organization of the united federation. Hardy (America) discusses the peculiar tasks of the I. W. W. as organizer of the workers not included in the Federation of Labor, and speaks of the winning over of this organization for the R.I.L.U. Aiter, of the Seamen's Union, speaks on the German seamen's strike, and declares himself in favor of recognizing the right of existence of the independent organizations. Kutscher (America) also expresses himself in favor of the maintenance of the independent unions existing in America. Tasca (Italy) and Acevedo (Spain) confirm the correctness of the R.I.L.U. tactics from the experiences of their countries. Jackel gives a survey of the history of the expelled building workers of Chemnitz. Dimitroff is of the opinion that the Amsterdam International is played out in the building trade. Swabeck reports on the activity of the Trade Union Educational League in unions of the Gompers tendency.

After Lozovsky has replied, the general resolution is accepted unanimously. The French delegation abstains from voting as the C.G.T.U. is not affiliated with the R.I.L.U. Members of the executive bureau are elected.

The Fayette County War

Pennsylvania Coal Operators Are Determined to Smash the Miners' Union. Gunmen Are Deputized. Miners Are Arrested and Jailed. Women and Children Are Driven From Their Homes. Workers Are Starved. The Struggle Must Be Won.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

We are told by The New York Times, in its best "law and order" style, that the Pennsylvania Constabulary is on the move to suppress the outbreak of disorders in the Coke Regions of the Connellsville district in Fayette County.

Our readers have been fully informed about the heroic struggle of the 10,000 striking members of the United Mine Workers, coal miners who were unorganized before the recent strike.

These 10,000 coal miners are still on strike, practically deserted by their union, in spite of the $2 per week allowed each family in the form of strike benefits.

In the dead of winter they are now living in tents, freezing, starving. They refuse to return to work except as victors, as recognized members of the miners' union.

Five thousand evictions since April 1st last have not weakened them. J. A. Hamilton, head of the Pittsburgh Miners' Relief Committee, admits that, following a recent visit to the tent colonies, he was haunted for days by the haggard faces of these hungry workers and their famished women and children.

Fathers have been thrown into jail because their ragged children, without shoes, and stockings and half-naked, do not come to school. The charge is a violation of the truancy law. But even this is a thinly veiled effort to drive the strikers back to work. And it, too, has failed.

Now the New York Times promises us a reign of terror by the Pennsylvania Cossacks under the guise of "taking in hand the social and industrial unrest that is seething thru the Connellsville Coke regions."

This is a situation that calls for the united efforts of both the United Mine Workers of America and the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor.

If the fine spirit of the striking Fayette County coal miners is to be broken on the wrack of Pennsylvania Cossack Rule in the present crisis, then it will take a long time to build up an organization in these fields. But the striking miners will win, as they must, even against the treason of the officials in their own ranks, allied with capitalist reaction.

Unrest at Paterson, N. J.

The silk profiteers of the industrial hell that appears on the map of the United States as "Paterson, N. J.," are worrying because the "prestige of Paterson as a silk market is threatened with destruction because of unrest and discontent among the workers."

So they talked it out, the "representative citizens" of this American kaiserdom, at a little gathering the other day. They were joined by the "Banker" Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, in Harding's cabinet at Washington. The department of labor is propagating its own campaign for "eliminating industrial strife."

"Let us put a little more Christian brotherhood in business," pleaded Davis, addressing the silk bosses, who have shown in past struggles that they possessed all the labor-crushing qualities of Rockefeller in Colorado, the low cunning of the coal barons in West Virginia, and the brutal ruthlessness of the textile millionaires of the New England states.

Banker Davis based his plea on the only argument that gets across with an exploiter of labor. He declared, "I want to say to you that where the workers get good wages the business man profits."

We take it that all these gracious sentiments are but an echo of new organization strength displayed by the workers in the silk industry. Instead of bettering the working conditions in the silk mills, the bosses are trying to re-establish the 48-hour week in place of the 44-hour week. It is against this lengthening of the work-week that the silk workers threaten to revolt.

It is said there are nearly 800 silk firms in Paterson with an invested capital of 53,000,000. But there is the great human element, the 25,000 silk workers who go down to the mills to slave and wear out their lives coining great profits for the millionaire silk mill owners.

The gathering that was graced by Harding's special emissary showed that the money invested in silk is rallying its strength against the workers. Let these 25,000 workers push forward to the building up of a strong, centralized organization.

The class war in the United States has shown that not even the "Christian brotherhood" of Secretary Davis, or any other sobsister, has ever gotten them a crumb from the master's board groaning with riches.

They have won only thru their power to take. They must create organizations powerful enough, not only to get a few crumbs in the form of small concessions now, but they must build that power that will ultimately take the whole loaf. The silk workers must struggle more valiantly than ever toward the day when they will be the masters in the silk industry.

Answer Thru Your Deeds

Louisiana farmers raised this year 8,000,000 bushels of sweet potatoes. They will sell less than 1,000,000 bushels. The remainder will be left to rot.

Louisiana farmers also produced 8,000,000 gallons of molasses from their sugar cane. They will not sell 1,000,000 gallons.

These are only two items from the report of the Louisiana commissioner of agriculture. The Louisiana farmers, like their brothers in other states, have produced much and gone broke. The hungry workers in the city couldn't buy, with the result that they don't eat.

These facts are faithfully recorded by Edward Keating, editor of "LABOR," Washington, D. C., in his paper.

This is the same Keating, however, who helped keep Workers Party delegates out of the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action, because these Communists, he said, "desire to overturn our present form of government."

Keating likes capitalism, with its bankrupt farmers, jobless and homeless workers. He believes in capitalism. He is opposed to disturbing its rule. He wouldn't shake its power by even a single shiver.

Communists admit they oppose capitalism. They contend only its abolition will end the ills of capitalist misrule. They hail its downfall.

WHERE DO YOU WORKERS STAND?

Give your answer in deeds for "AMALGAMATION AND THE LABOR PARTY."

"More Russian Hides." is the headline in The New York Times, Dec. 31, over an item stating that, "The number of large hides in stock in Soviet Russia on Aug. 1, 1922, was 2,041,405 compared with 1,611,476 Oct. 1, 1921." But turn it to The Times to get to the day. It adds, "IT IS REPORTED that these are the only Russian stocks which have shown any increase during the past year." This is in harmony with the established policy of The Times TO REPORT such facts as later shown to be false. But we thank The Times for giving us half the truth anyway.

Seek Release of Dolla from Penn. Prison

Efforts are being made to obtain executive clemency for Jacob Dolla, an important unit in the steel workers' organization in 1919, who has been in prison in Pennsylvania since 1920, after being coerced to plead guilty to a charge of dynamiting.

The dynamiting, since shown to have been done by steel trust agents, damaged a porch to the extent of $150. No one was hurt. The guilty plea followed several days of third degree by state constabulary and was made because Dolla's lawyers told him a light sentence would be imposed as a result. The judge gave him 12 to 17 years.

It was important to the steel employers to get Dolla out of the way because he had successfully organized the foreign workers in his town of Lebanon, Pa., where he was a skilled millworker. His picket line stood its ground perfectly and kept within the law in spite of the attempts of John Aldrige, an undercover man, to provoke the men to violence. The dynamiting was then used as a pretext to destroy the organization, and it succeeded.

Dolla's extorted plea of guilty makes a new trial impossible and the only recourse for him is a pardon by the governor of Pennsylvania. With labor organizations taking up the case it is hoped that Amos Pinchot, when he is inaugurated, will give a pardon hearing.

sive Voters' League and G. T. Fraenckel of Chicago, who substituted for Herbert F. Baker, recent progressive candidate in Michigan for United States Senate.

The general keynote sounded in the speeches was struck by Mr. Baker's letter of regret, which follows: "I very much regret my inability to attend the protest meeting at Niles to say a word in favor of the first amendment to the constitution of the United States, guaranteeing to every soul beneath the flag for all time, freedom of thought; freedom of speech; freedom of assemblage; freedom of the press.

Patriotism is said to be, "The last refuge of a scoundrel" and it should be occasion no surprise that attempts quite frequently occurring in these days, to nullify the constitutional guarantees of freedom quoted above, should be camouflaged in the habiliments of super-patriotism and 100 percent proof of Americanism.

"The voice of the people is the voice of God, and any policy or program that cannot stand free discussion and free criticism before the open forum of humanity must go.

"In the matter of upholding the first amendment, our sympathies are with those who are in prison for opinions' sake.

"I hope your meeting will be a pronounced success."

Mr. Brock made a spirited attack upon the Department of Justice which illegally participated in the arrests of these men during the Bridgman raids last August. He recalled the "vagueness" of the Michigan criminal syndicalism law and its possibilities of "misuse" by reactionary politicians and "vested interests" against labor. He declared the unconstitutionality on civil liberty grounds and made a stirring plea for a popular movement, looking towards its repeal.

This situation should react on the defense fund being raised thruout the country to defend Foster and the others and the constitutional issues involved in the case. Contributions should be sent to the Labor Defense Council, National Office, 166 W. Washington St., Chicago, or to local Labor Defense Councils which have been established in all the principal cities of the country; New York City, Room 434, 80 East 11th Street.

Worse Off Than Black Slaves

Blood and tears are spattered on the coal that comes up to New York from Pennsylvania to furnish the power to run the subway trains of the Interboro Rapid Transit Company.

Human misery, suffering, anguish, sacrifice, if it could find a voice in the electrical giant that speeds the long trains underground thru the nation's largest city, might stir the millions of workers in the metropolis to action.

But the facts as reported by Mayor Hylan's committee to investigate conditions in the Berwind coal mines, in Somerset and other Pennsylvania counties, merely finds mute expression on the printed pages of the press.

"Worse than the conditions of the slaves prior to the Civil War," is one exclamation of the committee, as it tells of the harvest of profits reaped by E. J. Berwind, president of the Berwind-White Co., who is also chairman of the Board of Directors of the Interboro Subway.

The strategic position of this profiteer enables him, according to the committee, "to purchase from his own company coal mined under un'air and heartbreaking conditions and reap therefrom enormous profits, amounting in 1921 to over $1,600,000."

The committee confesses that "from the time it arrived in Johnstown until it left, it was constantly under the surveillance of the spies of the coal companies; the rooms of the committee in the hotel were ransacked, and even their mail tampered with."

The committee declares that, "The stories of these povertystricken people were such as would melt any heart excepting that in the stony bosom of a coal baron. No Egyptian Pharaoh rearing, for his glory a towering monument ever drove his slaves harder than these miners were driven. No Czar was more autocratic than were these representatives of predatory so-called big business."

This same Hylan committee, of course, will conveniently forget that similar conditions prevail even in New York City. It is easy to weep crocodile tears over labor in a distant state.

Yet the committee's report helps to show that conditions in Somerset County, Central Pennsylvania, duplicate those in Fayette County, Western Pennsylvania, in fact repeat more or less the struggle of labor everywhere thruout the United States.

Only united labor, fighting for its own, fighting for the abolition of capitalism, can end these evils. Let the year 1923 mark a big step forward under the slogan of "Amalgamation and the Labor Party."

Russia Thru the Shadows, FSR Film, Is Praised by the National Movie Board

The National Board of Review, a nation-wide semi-official censorship board whose decisions carry much weight in all forty-two states, not covered by special official state censorships, has rendered a special report on the seven-reel film, Russia Thru the Shadows, now being toured thruout the country by the Friends of Soviet Russia to raise funds for the Orphans' School-homes.

The board reports, "Very good entertainment value. Excellent educational value. Unusual dramatic interest of history. Good coherence of narrative. Good technical handling. Splendid historical value. High moral effect."

Special comment is appended in which the Board declares "This pictorial history of Russia's struggle is a wonderful example of the vividness with which the motion picture can bring home to us the vital episodes of world progress. Everyone interested in international relations should see it."

Zinoviev Says Russia Is Not Socialistic; Struggle Between Labor and Capital Still On

By ZINOVIEV, President of the Executive Committee of the Communist International.

MOSCOW, Nov. 7.—(By Mail.)—The fifth anniversary of the Russian revolution is being celebrated by the Russian workers and peasants in the midst of the most difficult circumstances. The imperialistic powers of the world have not succeeded in overthrowing the Soviet power, but they have succeeded in preventing the Russian workers from consolidating their victory. The Russian workers and peasants have not succeeded in establishing a socialistic order of society, but they have succeeded in creating a constitution as against the slogan for the creation of Soviets, they fought against the demand for a dictatorship with the slogan of democracy. "Democracy" has already been characterized by Engels as the sole enemy of the victorious proletariat after the revolution.

"The October victory of the Russian workers and peasants was not due to a bold putsch by a minority, nor was it a well prepared move under the leadership of the Russian Communist Party. The Bolsheviki ventured further, and further. The Mensheviki sabotaged the October victory with their demand that a Constituent Assembly be convened. The Soviet Power stands higher than the Constituent Assembly. The idea of combining Constituent Assembly and Soviet Power is nonsense. The dissolution of the Constituent Assembly and the disenfranchisement of the bourgeoisie are historically justified.

"The creation of the Red Army is the greatest deed of the Soviet Power. The intensification of the dictatorship into the terror is an historical necessity; its severity liberates millions of human beings from capitalism.

"The Bolsheviki have employed force, but they have not maintained themselves by force only. Communism can only be realized on international lines.

"The world revolution cannot advance at a run. Errors of calculation in the pace can be conquered again by perseverance and manoeuvring. A modus vivendi had to be found in dealing with the Russian peasantry and with world capitalism."

The speaker goes on to refer to the new economic policy, and points out that the agrarian policy of the Russian revolution is the subject lesson of Marxist thought. The hunger [illegible] land under which 80 per cent of [illegible] peasant population suffered was [illegible] a revolutionary factor. The weakness of the central [illegible] the lack of modern large-scale agricultural undertakings, and of an up-to-date peasant proletariat, determined the agrarian policy adopted by the Russian government. The electrification of the country is the best agrarian reform, accelerating the evolution towards communism."

"The initial aim of the Russian revolution was the socialization of large industrial undertakings, of the means of transport, the banks, and foreign trade; also the control of production. Russia was forced into war-communism by the counter-revolutionary interventions. Despite this it has maintained more than its initial position.

"The concessioned industries will never become masters of the house, as the state power is always on the side of the worker. In Soviet Russia the political power of the proletariat rules. The eight hour day, the socialized industries, the development of social legislation, and the education of the people, have brought about an improvement in the position of the proletariat.

"In Germany, on the other hand, the coalition is working towards placing industry in the hands of the Stinnes party, towards doing away with the eight hour day, and for abolishing the social laws; the masses of German workers, unable to ward off the catastrophe of the falling mark, sink into utter want and destitution. Soviet Russia is the highest type of the proletarian state.

"The policy of the Russian Communist Party is the consequent realization of Marxism. At the same time unity with the masses is preserved. We must learn from the revolutionary idealism of the Russian proletariat. (Applause.)

By BELA KUN, of Hungary

Bela Kun speaks to the following effect: "The task of the participators in the congress is not only to deliver speeches, but to make history. Erroneous theories have been derived from Russian experiences. The communists of the west must learn the actuality of revolutionary policy from the experiences of the Russian revolution.

"The reason why the Hungarian Soviet power was unable to maintain itself lay not only in the circumstance that the small country offered no line of retreat, but in the lack of leadership thru an organized communist party. That was the chief deficiency of the Hungarian Soviet republic.

"The Russian Communist Party is the creation of decades of revolutionary struggle. It has adhered strictly to its class character, and has become a real party of the whole working class.

"As Görlitz the German Social Democrat, and the political situation upon a national and upon an international scale. Russia was in such a situation that political necessities often made it impossible to pay due attention to economic considerations. That was why War Communism had come into existence.

"War Communism was not adopted for the development of the forces of production. If the world revolution had taken place in 1919, evolution would have taken a different course in Russia. Nevertheless, we have secured noteworthy results. The land is in our possession; the Workers' State has the means of transport at its disposal; foreign commerce is a State monopoly. We have the Red Army, the administration, the schools.

"When the civil war came to an end, we were confronted in the capitalist environment to apply capitalist methods. We had to build up the new economic system of a new class by the old methods of the old capitalism. This led us to NEP. (New Economic Policy) which was not merely a concession to the peasantry, but was a necessary phase of socialist evolution.

"In Russia both a socialist and a capitalist accumulation are now in progress. What are our means of power in this struggle? The Workers' State has political power and a socialized large scale industry; Russian capitalism is supported by world capitalism. Despite the unfavorable economic situation, more than one million workers are engaged in State enterprises. There are only 80,000 workers employed in the undertakings that have been leased. The State undertakings are better equipped and worked than the private undertakings. As far as commerce is concerned, the situation is less favorable; but even here State commerce comprises 70 per cent of all the commerce in the country.

"As to the concessions, I must own that there has been much discussion of this matter; but the concessions have not been extensive. There is no opportunity for the capitalists to work in accordance with broadly conceived plans; they live only from day to day; the danger involved by capitalism in Russia is much less serious than the danger which in western States threatens the capitalists from the approach of the world revolution.

"Otto Bauer prophesied as long ago as the year 1917 that Soviet Russia would become a democratic republic. In 1919 he recognized the dictatorship of the proletariat and prophesied the victory of the world revolution. Bauer always has his wallet full of prophecies; now he announces that our willingness to recognize the old debts is tantamount to a capitulation.' We reply that anyone who wishes to incur new debts is obliged to recognize old ones.

"If Bauer thinks that the Soviet Power is an unsuitable form for the development of capitalism in Russia, we reply: That is the very reason why we defend the proletarian dictatorship. Every dominant power, the bourgeoisie no less than others, has made concessions to subordinate classes. The working class, which is now the dominant power in Russia, is making concessions to the bourgeoisie. We are not making concessions in perpetuity, but merely for a transitional period, until the world revolution comes to our aid.

"The yield of our labor is at the present time inadequate. This might be thought a strong argument against us. We point out, however, that revolution has always been an expensive way of transforming an economic system, and that the French bourgeois revolution made the condition of the people worse for several decades.

"But the cost of the revolution is not in productive expenditure. The characteristic of the present situation may be summed up by saying that the working class is not yet competent to seize power, whereas the bourgeoisie has already become incompetent. But the chief reason why the working class is not competent to seize power is that the influence of Kautskyism over the working class is still far too great.

"The present crisis of capitalism is not due to any accidental concatenation of circumstances; it is the historical crisis of capitalism. When the Third Congress was held, there was still a danger of 'Leftism;' now we have to defend the Communist International against the danger of stagnation."

Dolsen and Lerner Go on Long Tours

The Workers Party, Third Division, has arranged a series of mass-meetings to be held under the auspices and for the benefit of the Defense Fund. Besides the Michigan cases, there are 40 defendants arrested as "reds" in this district whose cases will come up in the near future and for whom counsel must be provided.

James H. Dolsen, formerly editor of "Labor Unity," a San Francisco radical labor paper, will be the principal speaker. He is particularly qualified to speak for the defense, as he has gone thru two trials under the California criminal syndicalism law. In both trials, one in 1920 and the other ended last November; he acted as his own attorney. In each case the jury disagreed, with the result that the indictment has been dismissed. Both trials were long and the signal defeat administered to the prosecution has already had a most beneficial effect on similar cases throughout the country.

The schedule of meetings follows: Trenton, Jan. 5; Philadelphia, Jan. 6; Wilmington, Jan. 9; Washington, Jan. 10; Baltimore, Jan. 11; Reading, Jan. 12; Minersville, Jan. 13.

There will be local speakers in addition. A number of other meetings had been arranged but have had to be cancelled because of inability to secure halls and in several cases, because police permits were denied where such were required.

Max Lerner, one of the defendants in the Michigan case and National Organizer for the Workers Party, will start on an organizing campaign in the New England District, his routing being as follows:

Peabody, Jan. 7; Lanesville, Jan. 6; Salem; Jan. 8; Lawrence Jan. 9 and 10; Haverhill Jan. 12; Amesbury Jan. 11; Lowell, Jan. 13 and 14; Nashua, Jan. 15; Manchester, Jan. 16; West Concord Jan. 17; Keene, Jan. 18; Troy Jan. 19; Wilton, Jan. 20; Gardner, Jan. 21; Ashby, Jan. 22; Fitchburg Jan. 23; Worcester, Jan. 25 and 26; Maynard Jan. 28; Clinton, Jan. 27; Boston, Jan. 29, 30 and 31; Wareham, Feb. 1; New Bedford Feb. 2; Providence, Feb. 3, 4, 5 and 6; Springfield Feb. 7 and 8.

The subject of Lerner's addresses will be; "Shall Labor have a Political Party of Its Own?" The tour initiates the new policy of field organization work which is to be carried out in the various districts.

Class in English

Friday, Jan. 5th, at 8 P. M., at 47 Chrystie St. the first session of the class for the study of the English language will be held and all the foreign speaking members of the Workers Party are invited to attend.

Comrade Sonia Lonberg will be the instructor, she having had years of experience in classes of this kind.

Workers Party Levies a Day's Pay Assessment on Membership

Campaign Set for Jan. 15th—Feb. 15th by Labor Defense Council; Every Member Expected to Pay

The Workers Party has levied a voluntary Day's Pay Assessment on its membership for the benefit of the Labor Defense Council in its drive for the defense of the Michigan Criminal Syndicalism Cases.

On recommendation made by the Central Executive Committee the Workers Party convention unanimously endorsed the Day's Pay campaign and invited the Labor Defense Council to set a time for putting it into effect. The dates have been fixed and the campaign is to take place from Jan. 15th to Feb. 15th.

PARTY BRANCHES CALLED TO ACTION

The Party Branches will be the bodies which are to put this campaign into effect co-operating with the National Office of the Labor Defense Council. Every branch will receive in the course of the next week instructions and material printed in the respective languages of the branches.

The latter, which will be printed in sufficient number for every party member, will point out the necessity and importance of the Day's Pay Drive, and will have attached an "Honor Card." This card, when filled out by the comrade paying his assessment, will be signed and sealed by the Labor Defense Council and returned as a memorandum of working-class loyalty.

DEFENSE IS PRIMARY FUNCTION OF REBELS

THE WORKER wishes to add its word to that of the Workers Party and the Labor Defense Council as to the great importance of the defense work in general and this campaign in particular. For the working class, defense of those of its members who are subjected to attack by the enemy has always been a function of the first concern. Every workers' organization, trade union, fraternal society or political party has always taken upon itself wholeheartedly the task of supplying the best possible defense to its militant members, who, being in the first line of offense, are always most likely to be assaulted. The history of militant labor organizations the world over is filled with heroic defenses conducted by their memberships. During strikes and lockouts, in any struggle where the most militant were always the heaviest sufferers, labor organizations and the working class itself have made their most brilliant records of sacrifice and achievement.

Defense is Test of Militancy

For there has always been infinitely more at stake than the freedom of imprisonment of a few militants, the success or failure of a campaign for more wages or better working conditions. It, every major working class defense activity the stake is always the preservation and progress of working-class organization and the onward march of labor militancy.

THE KIND OF DEFENSE WHICH A LABOR ORGANIZATION CAN AND PUT UP UNDER FIRE IS THE ULTIMATE TEST OF MILITANCY, THE CRUCIAL TEST OF THE ABILITY TO MAINTAIN ITSELF.

Michigan Defense Is Responsibility of Workers Party

While the defense in the Michigan cases is the concern of the entire working class, (and the working class has recognized this as is manifested by the support it is giving to the Labor Defense Council) it is preeminently the duty of the Workers Party to give its very utmost in its allegiance to the Labor Defense Council. It is Workers Party members who are under attack in Michigan. It is the Workers Party that will have the most direct gain in an acquittal, the Workers Party that will suffer the most direct blow if these comrades go to jail. Who then can deny that on the Workers Party and the Workers Party membership rests the major responsibility for the Michigan Defense?

Is the Workers Party Militant?

How often have rebels the world over applauded when a labor union assesses its membership in order to carry on a defense for its members? How often have we attested to the labor militancy which such unions have shown in their support of those under fire? How the whole world acclaimed the tremendous sacrifices which the Russian workers and peasants made in helping their comrades who in the famine area were fighting the great fight, not for their lives alone but for the preservation of the Soviet Republic?

Can we then say that we have done everything we could in the sacrificed? Can we say that we have struggle which is being fought most openly in the Michigan cases?

Let us remember that it is not only the twenty comrades who are on trial. The Workers Party itself is on trial both in the Berrien County Court and before the eyes of all American Workers who look to the Party for militant leadership. Is the Workers Party militant? That question will be answered by their support in the Michigan cases. Are the Party members militants? That question will be answered by those who can show their "Honor Cards."

OUR MEMBERS MUST BE DEFENDED.

OUR PARTY MEMBERS MUST MAKE POSSIBLE THE DEFENSE.

OUR PARTY RIDES FORWARD TO NEW CONQUESTS IN A MICHIGAN VICTORY.

OUR PARTY SUFFERS TERRIBLE LOSS IN A MICHIGAN DEFEAT.

On the success or failure of the Day's Pay Campaign depends in large part the success or failure of the Michigan defense.

On acquittal or conviction in Michigan depends tremendously the future progress of our party.

BUY YOUR HONOR CARD! SHOW IT!

IT IS YOUR EMBLEM OF SACRIFICE AND MILITANCY.

Duncan and Yessenin Big Attraction at FSR Handicraft Bazaar

The Russian Handicraft Exhibition and Bazaar run by Local New York, Friends of Soviet Russia, turned out to be a great moral and financial success.

Finally, after six days and nights of dancing, singing, and merry-making, the bazaar found its fitting culmination in an International Masque Ball, with Isadora Duncan and Serge Yessenin, her poet husband, as the central figures of an admiring throng.

Yessenin recited revolutionary poems in a very dramtic style, and when he was thru, Isadora danced to the music of the Internationale.

Then, at the opportune moment, the F.S.R. motion-picture camera appeared on the stage and snapped a scene which will appear in the new seven-reel film, "Russia in the Shadows".

The outstanding feature of the affair is the fact that the Friends of Soviet Russia are as strong as ever, despite the slanderous howls of the entire counter-revolutionary press.

Before and during the bazaar the "Forward" kept its mud-batteries going as usual, in an effort to discredit the F. S. R. and the bazaar by publishing false and misleading statements. But it failed signally to interfere with its success.

The approximate profit from the affair is about $4300. The Russian-American Industrial Corporation sold 137 shares of stock. Hundreds of books and magazines were sold. New friends for Soviet Russia were made at the bazaar. A new, promising spirit pervaded everybody.

The success of the bazaar was due to the devotion and unflagging energy of the many volunteer workers, some of whom stayed in the hall the whole week, sleeping there; to the radical press, which gave the affair its full measure of support; to the artists, singers, and musicians, who gave their services freely; and last, but not least, to the Technical Aid Society and the Amalgamated Food Workers without whose assistance the bazaar would have been impossible.

The New York Office of the Friends of Soviet Russia is now located in Room 32, 201 W. 13th

TEN WORKERS SHOULD READ THIS COPY OF THE WORKER; KEEP IT IN CIRCULATION

The New Party Program

By H. M. WICKS

"Where you formulate platforms of principles then you establish landmarks by which all the world will gauge the height of the party movement."—Karl Marx.

The new party program, prepared as a tentative document and published recently in THE WORKER, was adopted unanimously by the Second National Convention of the Workers Party without dissenting criticism and but few minor changes.

There is a plain statement of the character of the capitalist state as an instrument of oppression against the working class. Starting from this premise the inevitable Communist conclusion is reached that this instrument must be wrested from the hands of the ruling class and in its place must be established the dictatorship of the proletariat thru the Soviet form of government.

There is no equivocation or evasion of the historical destiny of the capitalist class, nor is there any attempt to camouflage the character of the proletarian state.

The new program leaves no doubt in the mind of the worker as to what is meant when we refer to the "Workers' Republic" in our propaganda.

Exposes Fake Democracy

The section dealing with "Election Campaigns and American Democracy" is a real achievement as a contribution to the American movement. The delusion of democracy under capitalism that holds large numbers of workers under its sway is effectively disposed of in a few compelling sentences.

There is to be no following in the footsteps of those enemies of the working class, the Bergers, Hillquits and Oneals, of the discredited Socialist Party, who delude the workers with the idea that the road to power can be found by traveling the way of bourgeois democracy.

"The Workers Party will destroy the illusion fostered by the yellow Socialists and Reformists that the workers can achieve their emancipation from the oppression and exploitation of capitalism thru the election of a majority of members of the legislative bodies of the capitalist governments and the executive officials of that government by using the existing government to establish the new social order."

The program does not stop at the mere statement of fact regarding the inability of the revolutionary proletariat to use the capitalist state apparatus but presents evidence that proves conclusively the impossibility of this state ever responding to the will of the majority of the population. The U. S. Constitution, about which we hear so much from the defenders of capitalism, instead of being an instrument protecting the majority of the population is merely a class instrument conceived by exploiters of labor that thwarts the will of the majority.

Even tho there is an explanation of the manner in which the constitution prevents the expression of majority opinion if it conflicts with the interests of the capitalist class, the program contains no plea for the abstract "rights" of majorities and minorities, but plainly declares in favor of the rule of the thirty million workers in the United States. There is no sickly plea for the rule of that metaphysical entity known as "the people" but a clear statement that the present government of the United States, thru which the capitalist class imposes its will upon the working class must be wrested from the hands of our enemies and in its place must be established the direct rule of the wage workers of America thru a Soviet government of the United States.

The Labor Party

Reaffirming the stand of the Workers Party in favor of the creation of a Labor Party, the program clearly explains the historical necessity for such a Party in the United States at this time. But this Labor Party must stand definitely upon the ground of the class struggle and be independent of and opposed to all capitalist parties.

Such a Labor Party can be formed only thru the labor unions and it is in these bodies that the Workers Party will fight for the creation of such a Party. At the same time the birth of a Labor Party will not mean that the Workers Party will lose its identity in the process of the working class uniting upon the political field. Instead of submerging itself in the Labor Party it will retain its identity and become an autonomous unit of the larger Party.

Likewise the work in the labor unions will be directed toward creating more militant sentiment on the part of the rank and file of labor in order to strengthen the unions so that they can more effectively wage the struggle against the ruling class and also against the reactionary leaders of labor unions who constantly betray the rank and file of labor into the hands of the insatiable capitalist class.

Revolutionary Progress

The height of the party movement can be gauged by the program just adopted in convention and it speaks eloquently for the Party progress that has been made during the past year.

The new program is the scientific application of the principles of communism to conditions as they exist in this country today.

It is a program upon which all the revolutionary elements in the United States can honestly unite, and there is no doubt that before another year rolls by every thoroughgoing revolutionist will be enrolled under the banner of the Workers Party for the purpose of hastening the day when that program will become the basis for the rule of the working class in this country.

Stories and Talk Are Features of Week's Offering at the Garrick

By JOHN DALE

The Theatre Guild took advantage of the holidays to offer a pleasant spectacle in "The Tidings Brought," which opened at the Garrick. Love, sacrificed and faith constitute the interlude of ties that link this 15th Century miracle play with our 20th century existence. Five centuries hence, therefore, we may hope, that audiences as intensely moved as those now to be found at the Garrick, will be attending some similar interpretation of life as it is today.

The play is by Paul Laudel, present French ambassador to Japan, and deals with that period in France when Joan d'Arc was performing military miracles for her king against the British. But these great events only enter the play as something far off. The action depends upon the love of two sisters, gentle, saintly Violaine and jealous, spiteful Mara, for the same man, Jacques, the favored one, stands high in the graces of the father, who decides to go on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem. But before his going, he sets all things in order, as he believes, including plans for the wedding of Violaine, the older daughter, to Jacques.

Violaine is loved by Pierre de Craon, builder of churches, struck down with leprosy as punishment for a surrender to passion. On the day of her bethrotal to Jacques, Violaine is visited by Pierre, and overcome by her pity for him she kisses the leper, thus being enmeshed in the grip of this malady. When she confesses this to Jacques, he rejects her and she is forced to live apart and alone, a thing shunned. Mara marries Jacques and it is eight years later, at Christmas that Mara comes to her sister's leper-cave with her dead child in her arms. The miracle happens. As Violaine holds the tiny corpse to her breast, life comes back again.

But Violaine dies and the father returns from the Holy Land to find a shattered fireside.

The putting on of this play is another bold adventure by the Theater Guild. There is no scenery. Powerful effects are produced by atmospheric lighting and beautiful pictures of the Middle Ages by gorgeous costuming.

If one wishes an evening of frivolous amusement, the Garrick will be a good place to stay away from while "The Tidings Brought to Mary" is being produced. If, on the other hand, there is a desire to get the curtain torn away from histories of history and to get in touch with life in Medieval times, the Garrick is the place you will hunt up of an evening.

"R. U. R." Passes Century Mark

The Capek play "R. U. R." has passed its one-hundredth performance at the Frazee Theater and still going big. It is promised that it will be issued in book form.

The Theater Guild may well put another feather in its cap, since "R. U. R." is only now being put on in Paris, and the production is only being planned for London.

Moscow Art Theater Creates Scare.

As we go to press the outlook is good for the engagement here of the Moscow Art Theater in spite of the charges launched against it by the American Defense Society of superpatriots, that it is coming here to make money for the Russian Workers and Peasants' government and to spread Soviet propaganda. Morris Gest, the theatrical producer, says the engagement here will proceed, opening at Jolson's Theater, Jan. 8.

In the meantime Russian influence continues to permeate American stage productions, seen even in the extensive copying by the Greenwich Village Follies of parts of the Russian variety, Chauve-Souris, at the Century Roof. The "Village Follies" even has Balieff impersonate and thanking his American audience for patronizing the performance and paying 28,000,000 rubles a seat.

Another "World Conference"

President Harding, not at all discouraged by the fiasco of the Disarmament Conference, is planning to settle the troubles of this capitalist world with another "World Conference."

Harding's new world conference is hermaphrodite in effort. It "and the world's economic disorder which the situation in Europe has produced."

Roger Babson, confidential adviser to America's "Almighty Dollar," is a little more outspoken than the less-informed writers for the daily section of the kept press. He says that "Europe is the bugaboo of 1923," and that further drastic readjustment will take place there before long.

But even Babson isn't certain about everything. In the words of Lenin, speaking before the Fourth World Congress of the Communist International, "the capitalists with the Versailles Peace, have created a financial system which they themselves do not understand."

So Babson, the self-confessed prophet for the established order says, "What we do not know is whether the readjustment in Europe will be precipitate and drastic or whether it will work itself out over a longer period."

That gives Babson an alibi as he continues: "If the present plans of the administration for helping European countries are carried out they may avoid a crisis in Europe for another year. The main problem is to prevent revolution until economic readjustment can be accomplished."

The whole subject is furnishing the U. S. Congress an opportunity for extended speech making. But capitalist Europe is slipping into chaos and ruin in spite of confabs and talkfests. New masses of workers are being convinced of that fact and enlisting for the struggle to take all power into their own hands.

Why Not Burns, Too?

Wolfe Lindenfeld, who became famous as "Windy Lindy" on two continents thru the heroic efforts of Attorney General Daugherty's "Windy Bill" Burns, is out on the ocean again. He has been deported after a lengthy stay at Ellis Island, New York.

He is making his return trip to Warsaw, Poland, probably to continue his hunt for that "10,000-Word Confession" supposed to involve the Communist International in the Wall Street Explosion.

Mr. Burns should have been sent along with his protege to help find that "10,000-Word Confession," that was supposed to have been all typed out and sworn to before a notary public, in regular frame-up style.

Why should Mr. Burns be left behind in the United States to face continued efforts on the part of 100,000,000 men, women and children to find out just what that world-famous confession contained?

Perhaps those efforts, if fruitless, will result in a lot of workers losing faith in the Daugherty-Burns government at Washington, which would be seriously undermining American institutions, and that would surely never do.

The deportation of "Windy Linde" is an admission that there never was a "confession" of 10,000 words or any other length, involving workers or workers' organizations in the Wall Street explosion. It is an admission that "Windy Linde" is a fraud, that "Windy Bill" Burns is a fake and fraud, as we have always declared, and that American capitalism is in difficult straits when compelled to employ such discredited agents to defend it.

The workers will gladly join us in saying, "Good Bye, Linde!" but we know that labor would enjoy adding, "Good Bye, Bill Burns," and also add a farewell to the whole system of capitalist exploitation and oppression. But that will also come in time.

Recognize Soviet Russia

No time should be lost in bringing to the attention of every American working man and woman the absolute need of recognition of the Russian Soviet Republic.

The delegates of Soviet Russia, at Lausanne, are alone in waging the struggle that will make future wars inevitable. Ambassador Child for the United States, supports the imperialistic demands of both Great Britain and France.

When the New Year was breaking over the world, the Soviet Delegation at Lausanne issued a memorandum showing that the great powers are continuing their old policy of domination and expansion and are seeking to settle the Straits problem so they might be used as a basis of attack against the Black Sea countries.

"Our most earnest desire is universal naval disarmament, as well as disarmament on land, peace and productive work," says George Chitcherin, Soviet foreign minister. "The Soviet Republic is strong enough to resist aggression, but we must regret that the scheme which has prevailed at Lausanne will compel us to arm and fortify our south coast and will divert us from our fundamental aim-production."

Chitcherin then makes this appeal to America's workers:

"The Soviet Republic earnestly believes that the beginning of the new year will bring us into closer collaboration with the American people for productive work and the opening of our national resources to mankind."

It is this crisis that should result in the holding of thousands of "Recognize Russia!" mass metings over the country. It should bring tens of thousands to the great demonstration planned for New York City, under the auspices of the National Labor Alliance for Trade Relations with and Recognition of Soviet Russia, at the Lexington Opera House, 51st St. and Lexington Ave., Sunday night, Jan. 7. Among the speakers will be Hibben, Hillman, Welsh, Maurer, Malone, De Hunt, names long prominently connected with the recognition of the Workers' Republic campaign.

Workers of New York and vicinity! Join in this demonstration! Workers of America! Rally for the "Recognize Russia" campaign! Take your stand with the Workers' Republic against all capitalist wars of aggression and plunder.

No Time for Isolation

There is any isolation sentiment developing in the Farmer-Labor Party it should be quenched at once in the interests of "The Labor Party."

Instead of deserting the fight for an all-inclusive class party of labor, the Farmer-Laborites should stick and fight all the harder. With the refusal of seats to Workers Party delegates, and thru the betrayals of the Socialist Party delegates, the representatives of the Farmer-Labor Party at Cleveland, had a big burden placed upon their shoulders. It left them fighting in the minority, whereas, no doubt, they would rather have been in the majority. They were caught off their guard, surprised by the well-planned developments, which explains in part why they didn't put up a better fight than they did.

The determination of future activity, whether to go it alone or remain in the Conference for Progressive Action, comes before the National Committee of the Farmer-Labor Party in acting on the report of its Cleveland delegates. The National Committee decision will go to the party national convention, to be held shortly, for approval.

That the Farmer-Labor Party is tainted with the same decentralization that destroyed the Socialist Party is shown by the speed with which the chairman of its Minnesota organization rushes into print to take credit for not sending delegates to Cleveland. It may be brought to the attention of the Minnesota Farmer-Laborite that his senator, Hendrick Shipstead, participated in La Follette's Conference one week before the Cleveland gathering.

We admit all the charges that the Farmer-Laborites make against the Johnston-Stone-Keating outfit, in its efforts to steal Gompers' "nonpartisan policy" and palm it off as something new and desirable. But skulking in isolation will not win the millions of workers represented thru their international officials on the National Committee of the Cleveland Conference.

The fight for the Labor Party has just begun. It will be carried on daily in every organization of labor, political and industrial. The Workers Party urges the Farmer-Labor Party to stay in that fight. Stay in and win "The Labor Party" that is the crying need of the workers, on the land and in the cities, in their struggle against capitalist oppression.

Backwards or Forwards?

Edward Keating, editor and manager of "LABOR," published at Washington, D. C., and recently chief chauffeur of the Johnston-Stone steam roller at the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action, in his paper, lists as one of the four achievements of the gathering in the Ohio metropolis the closing of the doors to the Workers Party.

This great victory is recorded in "LABOR," issue of Dec. 23, as follows: "By unanimous vote refused to accept the credentials from the so-called Workers or Communist Party."

It may be noted that all of the other three recorded achievements were victories against progress, triumphs for reaction. In no case do they register an advance for labor.

"1. No Third Party movement at this time," was a victory against the organization of a Labor Party.

"2. Adopted a short, clean-cut platform dealing with the outstanding issues of the day," is two steps back, in that the platform adopted is more reactionary than Gompers' political straddle maintained by the American Federation of Labor.

"3. Arranged to organize the progressives in every state so they may be ready to achieve big things in the campaign of 1924," will be used by the Johnstons, Stones and Keatings, not to build up Labor Parties in the states, but to oppose, if they can, the drive for independent political action.

And the fourth achievement, the barring of the Workers Party, was definitely a stampede toward the rear, in that it prevented the Cleveland Conference taking on a definite working-class character.

In defense of the ousting of the Workers Party delegates, "LABOR" says, "It was made clear at the outset that this was a gathering of men and women who have no desire to overturn our present form of government, and who support the country's constitution and flag."

That was the position of the British tories, the sympathizers with England's king in this country, a century and a half ago. But the American Colonist-Revolutionists crushed British rule and established their own government.

We cannot help it if the Keatings, Johnstons and Stones are living even as reactionists in a past century. It is their business if they wish to make progress backwards.

We believe, however, that the millions of workers are making progress forwards, that they will receive with joy the passing of capitalism, with its governments, and constitutions and flags for the subjugation of labor's highest aspirations. We are happy to go forward with the workers.

Brookhart, Borah, Ship Supsidy

There is one developing difference between the "nonpartisanship" of Gompers and the "nonpartisanship" of Johnston, Stone and Co., who ruled at the Cleveland Conference.

The Gompers' American Federation of Labor has faithfully trailed with the Democratic party. The variety espoused by the railroad chiefs carries the taint of the Republican party.

This development becomes more apparent with a perusal of the columns of the railroaders' publication, "LABOR," issued at Washington, D. C.

The maiden speech of Colonel Smith Wildman Brookhart, United States Senator from Iowa, against the ship subsidy is heralded as "a quick return for the workers on their political investment of 1922."

All we can make out of the report, in "LABOR," of the speeches by Brookhart and Borah is that both these worthies are extremely worried about the 1924 outlook for the Republican Party. They fear for their party.

Brookhart worries as follows: "When the Republican leadership places itself beyond and above the voice of the common people, it is not only inviting defeat in this congress but abdicating its right to organize the next, and pushing down itself the dire disaster in the election that follows."

Borah sounds his warning thusly: "I submit to my Republican friends on this side of the chamber that we have trifled with our 7,000,000 majority long enough. In the short space of two years we have disposed of a majority of about 7,000,000 and because those who objected to the program did object they were regarded as irregular, or as not being Republicans at all."

The ship subsidy is only one form of plunder. If it fails, as it is admitted it will, the ship owners have other varieties of plunder to enrich their treasure chests. The railroads have their increased rates, the Standard Oil its monopoly prices.

The defeat of the ship subsidy settles nothing. It matters not whether you are robbed by pickpocket or burglar, you lose your money just the same, as long as the robbery system continues.

When the workers and farmers find out that Brookhart, Borah, La Follette and the rest are not making even a dent in the present robbery system, then they will be ready to really challenge capitalism thru effective class action. That will be an unhappy day for the self-styled "progressives." But it will be a big day for the Labor Party and for the American working class.

The British Want "Mosul Oil"

This is the Christmas Season, pleaded the diplomats of the "Christian nations" at Lausanne, on the eve of the holidays. Then diplomats of the "civilized countries" were asking the spokesmen of the Angora Turks to loosen up a little, to be generous, but the Turks replied, "We do not recognize Christmas."

Now that Christmas, 1922 is gone, however, the "civilized" diplomats return to their usual tactics.

Edwin L. James cables to The New York Times, Dec. 27. "Tonight Lausanne is full of talk of war."

Lord Curzon has told Ismet Pasha that Great Britain would murder Turkey for "Mosul Oil." Pasha has told Curzon that "Mosul" must be returned to the Motherland. France, after "Mosul" also, moves to aid the Angora Turks against the British inspired Greeks, now supports England. Thus the six-weeks' debate in the Swiss city moves to an issue, moves toward war.

This is "The World We Live In." British imperialism would push the world into a new slaughter for a patch of earth in Asia that gushes oil. Listen to Curzon's hypocritical plea to justify this new blood bath. He says:

"We were forced into war with Turkey. We defeated the Turks and drove them from the district. We promised the populations to free them from the Turks. We accepted a mandate for this territory. In our treaty with Irak (Mesopotamia) we promised that we will consent to no cession of the territory included in the territory of Irak."

These British are willing to give the Turks a little piece of earth on the borders of Persia, "that contains no oil." How nice of them!

Imagine the British freeing any "populations" from anybody these British imperialists with the blood of Ireland, Egypt, South Africa, India upon their hands; these British imposters who first erect their own regime in helpless Mesopotamia, and then issue hypocritical protests in its name.

It is reported that these British tactics have driven the control of affairs in Angora Turkey into the hands of the "most extreme elements." That is what the British helped do in the days of Kerensky in Russia.

In the Near East, as in the Russia of 1917, British imperialism is fighting to maintain the status quo of capitalism. They fight as they do because they must. It is life or death with them.

But the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia decided they could get along without their own landlords, bankers and capitalists. And that led them also to wage successful war against the aggressions of all foreign imperialist powers.

Great Britain may yet force the workers and peasants of the Near East to solidify their strength with that of the Soviet Power and drive foreign imperialism, not only from the Mosul oil fields, but from the shores of the continent of Asia.

"Europe is hungry and finds herself in servile supplication to America for bread to live. We must aim at being in a position to nourish the revolting workers of Europe with our Russian bread, because America will refuse to give bread to the revolutionary proletariat of Western Europe."—LEON TROTZKY, in address to Communist delegates to All-Russian Soviet Congress.

It Doesn't Mean Anything

Intelligent workers will not get excited about a batch of indictments returned against war grafters.

Attorney General Daugherty must celebrate a little dolled up as he is in his Christmas gift of a coat of whitewash presented by a congressional committee.

So he has a Washington, D. C., grand jury return charges against Benedict Crowell, Assistant Secretary of War under Newton D. Baker, and six other members of the Council of National Defense of the War Department.

These "Dollar-a-Year" pay-triots are charged with fraud in connection with the building of cantonments nearly six years ago. More than four years after the end of the war, a grand jury feeds this dud of an indictment to a gullible American people. Daugherty, Burns and Harding proclaim their government and Daugherty, Burns and Harding proclaim their government and Washington a righteous, upright and fearless institution.

It may be safely stated that these "100 per cent jingoes" will never come to trial. If Palmer was too busy during the war imprisoning anti-war spokesmen to attack the war grafters, of which fraternity he is alleged to be a member, Daugherty is now too much occupied hunting down and prosecuting Communists and striking labor unionists, to give attention to his compatriots.

If all the war grafters were put in jail the 1924 national conventions of the Republican and Democratic parties would have to be held in some federal prison. It is not to be expected that all these politicians will voluntarily lock up themselves and their friends, when there are so many new opportunities for graft still existing on the outside.

Perhaps the greatest fraud in the entire mess is that bunch of self-styled "prbgressives" who would have the voters, especially the workers, believe that this flash in the pan means something.

Let labor realize that this capitalist system produces grafters by the carload, during times of peace as well as war, in such hordes of all kinds, during times of peace as well as war, in such hordes of all kinds, during times of peace as well as war, in such hordes that it would be impossible to house but a small percentage of them in the jails and prisons of the nation. Instead of getting excited about grafters, let labor wipe out this social system that makes grafters. That will mean something.

"Small children with pasteboard tied on the soles of their feet and wrapped around with rags to answer for shoes and stockings," is only one of the many brutal conditions reported by the committee of the United Mine Workers in the coal and coke fields of Fayette County, western Pennsylvania, the "slave-ruled country of Frick, Gary and Rockefeller." And yet the system is permitted to live.

"The place was a flash of diamonds and brilliant colors. One woman who was nearly naked to her waist wore a great' diamond tiara and a wonderful necklace and had great straps of jewels around her body. I'll guarantee she has not the brain to put on the jewels. It was a lady's maid, the daughter of a working man, who put the jewels on for her."—T. CARVAN DUFFY, Labor Member, describing the opening of British Parliament in a speech to his constituents.

—Henry Morgenthau, former American ambassador to Turkey, urges that the capitalist Allies turn Constantinople over to Soviet Russia and thus settle the Turkish problem. He urges this would save the face of Imperialist Britain in that she would be surrendering to Russia, a world power, instead of to insignificant Turkey. Russia might accept the offer and score another victory for the establishment of the European Federation of Soviet Republics. But it is not expected that the Versailles imperialists will give in so easily. Yet stranger things have happened.

Ye Ed (gently): "But"

Proofreader: "There are no "buts" about it. You wanna cut those wild nights out and get down to work."

Ye Ed (more gently): "Won't you please let me explain"

First Linotypist: "I, in the affirmative, maintain that there can be no reasonable excuse and therefore suggest that we kill him so that we may have at least a good excuse to offer the readers for the non-appearance of the Bolcoms."

Second Linotypist: "Not a bad idea but let's have him write the Bolcoms first before we kill him. By the way what flowers do you like?"

Ye Ed (most gently): "Well, if this is how you feel about it, I'll write the Bolcoms down right now; but, by heck, don't blame me if it's circulation drops to minus infinity."

Engdahl: "All right, boys, we'll give him one more chance."

WITH OUR CONTRIBUTORS.

Holidays certainly have had effects. You should have seen our mail box this week! Up till press time we've received over a hundred poems. The first one was from our star contrib, Smaxico, upon whom we have bestowed the B. M. degree. Smaxico B. M. (Bolshi Member) in moonny moods gets poo-etic fits; in co-operation with mocking echo he produced the following masterpiece.

My heart's a lyre—liar; quoth echo
You which you picked—tricked: said echo
Melodious strains—agonies: spoke echo
For me, sweetheart—wee tart: begs echo
Why did you tire?—tire: hints echo
Hurt strained your ear?—rear: says echo
I crave more joy—cy: mimics echo
Come, dear, play more—day: laughs echo.

Smaxico agrees with his ladies'-undies-salesman-acquaintance that Morris Hillquit is the "Sample of Socialism" and . . . judge the stock by the sample. Even happier than Smaxico was Red Bill of Denver this Xmas. See for yourself:

A detective used to be Waiting everywhere for me;
If I went for milk or ride
He was always at my side.
Now he's gone forever more
And crepe hangs upon his door.
Strangely, suddenly he died—
Its committed suicide—
Laughed himself to death, you see,
Reading the Bolcoms with me!

From Mendham, N. J., a sweet little rebel girl, modestly hiding her identity under the initials D. D. sends us the following product of her mental toils:

"MOPPING UP THE REDS"
(Apologies to Lewis Carroll)

If seven "Black Jacks"
With seven mops
Mopped it for a half-a-year—
Do you suppose, Sherlock said—
That we could get it clear?
"Neil and Marie"—we must say,
But Small the chance, I fear!"

The best of all contributions was received from Morris Bortnick. Not it wasn't a "Pome," essay, criticism or nuticism. It isn't for publication. Is it good? You bet! Thanks Morris.

A SAMPLE OF SOCIALISM

A friend of ours, a S. P. secretary was kind enough to show us the following application for membership filled out by a prospective Socialist:

NAME: M. T. Head
BORN: Yes
MARRIED? Twice
BUSINESS: Rotten.

Entire Cast (in unison): Three cheers for the Bolcoms, the hand in the Bolcoms, the glove up!"

And so, dear readers, I must close, even tho I've left out a lot of time all the good stuff you believe me if you care to.

Yours as in 1922, S. P.

P. S. Just looked at the calendar this issue comes out on the 13th. I wonder! . . . Never mind.

American Workers!

Protect the Foreign-Born Workers Against Attack of the Capitalists and the Government

MANIFESTO OF THE WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA:

The capitalists, with the aid of the government, are launching a new attack on the workers of this country. They are preparing thru oppressive laws to make it impossible for the foreign-born workers to fight against the open shop and for better wages and working conditions. They hope that by enslaving the foreign-born workers they will be able to force the open shop and lower wages on native and foreign-born workers alike.

The foreign-born workers have suffered for many years in this country because of their inability to speak the language and their lack of knowledge of the life of the country. The capitalists have taken advantage of this to rob and oppress the foreign-born even worse than they rob and oppress the native-born workers.

They have compelled the foreign-born workers to accept low wages. They have kept down the standard of living of the foreign born workers and compelled them to live under the worst possible conditions. In the mining regions and steel districts and many other industrial centers the foreign-born workers have been herded together in shack-towns, without social life, without recreation, mere slaves of the bosses.

In recent years the foreign-born workers have joined the native-born in the struggle against the bosses, the open shop and low wages. The bosses have learned that they can no longer use the foreign-born workers to cut down the standard of living of all American workers. The great steel strike of 1919 showed that. The repeated strikes of the coal miners, in whose organization there are many foreign-born workers, showed that. The strike of the clothing workers and the textile workers, whose unions are almost entirely made up of foreign-born workers, proved that.

In order to stop the movement of the foreign-born workers to join the native-born in building strong labor unions, which will protect the interests of foreign-born and native-born alike, the capitalists and the government are proposing to pass oppressive laws directed against the foreign-born and intended to keep them hopeless slaves of the capitalists.:

THE FOREIGN-BORN WORKERS ARE TO BE REGISTERED, FINGER-PRINTED AND PHOTOGRAPHED LIKE CRIMINALS. IF NATURALIZED THEY ARE TO HAVE THEIR CITIZEN PAPERS TAKEN FROM THEM IF THEIR CONDUCT DOES NOT SUIT THE BOSSES. THEY ARE TO BE DEPORTED IF THEY PARTICIPATE IN STRIKES OR MAKE SPEECHES IN STRIKE MEETINGS.

All these measures to keep the foreign-born workers in the grip of the employers are now being proposed by government authorities. President Harding, in his message to Congress, recommended the registration of foreign-born workers. The Department of Justice proposes the finger-printing and photographing of these workers. Secretary of Labor Davis asks for the right to revoke citizen papers. Representative Edmons introduced a bill to deport foreign-born workers who participate in strikes and strike meetings.

Workers of the United States! These oppressive measures launched against the foreign-born workers are an attack upon native and foreign-born workers alike. The foreign-born workers are the majority in most of the great industries of the United States. If the bosses, with the aid of the government, can keep these workers unorganized and make it impossible for them to strike it will mean a lower standard of living for all American workers. It will mean an easier fight for the bosses in their campaign to destroy the unions.

Workers of the United States! You must unite in the fight for the protection of the foreign-born workers against these oppressive measures. American-born workers! You must come to the aid of the foreign-born workers. Foreign-born workers! You must unite with the native-born workers in the struggle against the bosses, against the capitalists and their government.

ORGANIZE COUNCILS FOR THE PROTECTION OF THE FOREIGN-BORN WORKERS IN EVERY INDUSTRIAL CENTER. EVERY TRADE UNION, EVERY ORGANIZATION OF FOREIGN-BORN WORKERS, EVERY POLITICAL PARTY OF THE WORKERS SHOULD SEND DELEGATES TO THESE COUNCILS. MASS MEETINGS MUST BE HELD AGAINST THE OPPRESSION OF THE FOREIGN-BORN WORKERS. RESOLUTIONS MUST BE ADOPTED IN ALL WORKERS' ORGANIZATIONS AGAINST THESE OPPRESSIVE MEASURES.

Foreign-born workers! You must join the unions! You must strengthen the political organizations of the workers! Only by joining the union and participating in the political struggles of the workers of this country, by common action against the capitalist exploiters and oppressors, can you protect yourself against the laws directed against you.

Russian Aid Pledged West Europe's Toil

By Radio to Imprekorr (Berlin) and Forwarded by Mail to The Worker

MOSCOW, Nov. 24.—At the Fifth Session of the Second World Congress of the Red International of Labor Unions, today, the delegates took up the discussion of the world offensive of capitalism.

Heckert (Germany) spoke on the capitalist offensive, the disruptive activity of the Amsterdam Trade Union International and the united front tactic. He spoke in favor of maintaining the tactical line of the united front, and demanded the most energetic fight, with all revolutionary consequences, against the capitalist offensive.

Kemeto (Turkey) aroused considerable excitement in the congress with his report on the imprisonment and persecution of Communists in Turkey. The congress rejected on motion of protest, similar to that of the Communist International.

Dudilieux (France) described the struggle against capitalism and reformism. He declared himself in favor of the united front.

Pavlik (Czecho-Slovakia) spoke on the capitalist offensive, accusing the Amsterdam International of treachery and splitting. For the rest he says he sees in agreement with Heckert's remarks.

Zaisser (Germany, Union) considers the united front tactics hitherto pursued to be inconsistent. He is opposed to the creation of new organizations.

Mandel (Switzerland) remarks that the experience gained in the Swiss engineering conflict confirms the conclusions drawn by Heckert.

Hoytkevicz (Poland) points out the success of the united front tactics despite the efforts of the Amsterdamers towards a split) against the capitalist offensive having for its object a legal ten hour day and the introduction of a Czarist labor code.

Tasca (Italy) is of the opinion that all countries are threatened with Fascism, as this is a special form of capitalist organization accompanied by reformist ideology.

Yanson (Rqssia) speaks to the effect that the capitalist offensive only affects Russia indirectly. He promises the Western European proletariat the aid of Russia's workers.

Hertz Sturm: The workers are the most important factor in the process of production. The protection of their interests is of the greatest significance.

Sabotika (Germany) holds it to be a matter of course that in Germany the tactics of the winning over the trade unions should be followed. We must lend the Shop Steward Movement every aid, in order to impart a solid form to the united front of the workers which we are striving after.

Malakka (Java) draws attention to the offensive of the united Dutch and native capital in India. In Java 60,000 out of 200,000 organized natives have gone over to the R.I.L.U. He emphasizes the necessity of creating a Red International of Transport Workers.

A motion proposed by Pavlik, to send a telegram of sympathy to the striking miners in Czecho-Slovakia, is accepted. A telegram of greeting is sent to the Esthonian trade union congress.

Mine Owners Uniting for New Mine War

Editor's Note—The big development in the American industrial struggle today centers about the negotiations between the coal miners and mine owners for a new agreement to take the place of the wage contract that expires March 31. Another conference, this time at Chicago, has adjourned, to be followed by another conference this month in New York City. Tom Tippett, an Illinois coal miner, writes about the Chicago Conference as follows:

By TOM TIPPETT
Federated Press Correspondent

CHICAGO.—The third of the preliminary conferences between soft coal barons and miners, intended to start negotiations for a new contract, followed the others to failure.

Nothing was accomplished that could be put down in black on white, but the unofficial feeling was that the inevitable haggling and disputing is now over with and that the fourth conference, said to be called for New York, the latter part of this month, will see business transacted.

The conference just closed differed from the November and December conferences in that the operators concealed their internal differences in the meetings and presented a fairly united front. In the lobbies, however, it became plausible to infer that the four-state group of operators (northern Ipisiana district (single-state) agreements that operators outside the union hardboiled of the four-state operator group.

The miners stood inflexibly for the four-state agreement and a fixed wage scale free from arbitration clauses. They were willing to accede to the suggestion of the federal coal commission that the present contract be extended another year to March 31, 1924, but the operators opposed this. The commission wanted the extra year in which to gather facts on the industry on which to base conclusions for permanent peace.

Cases of N. Y. Politicals Is Given Hearing

ALBANY, N. Y.—Governor Smith has taken the matter of granting a pardon to Jim Larkin under advisement following a hearing here.

When asked if he were also considering the matter of a general pardon for Benjamin Gitlow, Harry Winitsky, C. E. Ruthenberg, Isaac E. Ferguson, Paul Manko, Ignatz Miaher, Minnie Kalmin and Anna Lefsmann, also convicted under the criminal anarchy act, the governor replied that he could not pass on their cases until formal applications for pardons had been made.

It is understood that such applications will be filed immediately by the Civil Liberties Union.

"We'll Work Mine if We Have to Work It with Blood," Bosses' Threat at Herrin, Ill.

By McALISTER COLEMAN, Staff Correspondent, Federated Press and "The Worker"

MARION, ILL.—From the lips of a dozen witnesses for the defense in the first of the Herrin trials came as strong an indictment of the methods of strikebreakers and the use of gunmen in industrial disputes as has ever been heard in an American courtroom.

"We came down here to work this mine," said C. K. McDowell, the one-legged superintendent of the Lester strip mine, "union or no union, we're going to run it. We'll work it if we have to work it with blood. You tell all the God-damned union men not to pass this way. They're liable to have their heads blown off."

And again McDowell said, "Look out for my guards, they're wild men. I've broken strikes before and I'll break this one too. Let the union men come. We're ready for them."

The superintendent made these boasts days before there was any trouble at the mine.

A guard rushed up to a union man passing by the mine in an auto on a public road a week before the rioting. "I eat 'em alive, I eat 'em alive," shouted the guard, according to the witness. "I love 'em hot. Shoot his damned head off, I want hot blood."

While the miner sat there with his arms high above his head a car came out from the company office. In it was McDowell. "Kick him out," shouted the superintendent who turned to the coal digger and said, "If you don't beat it out of here we'll shoot your head off."

McDowell showed visitors who came to the mine before the rioting high-powered rifles, riot guns and shot guns, revolvers and a ton of ammunition. He boasted that he was ready for anything. He showed one miner, whom his guards had taken from the road and escorted to the company office, a machine gun which he said fired 60 shots a minute.

There was evidence from a number of witnesses that the first shots fired came from a machine gun hidden under a bush at the top of the mine embankment. Jordan Henderson, an unarmed miner sitting with a group of miners in front of a farmhouse, was struck and killed by a bullet from the gun.

Communists Hit Invasion of the Ruhr

At the time this issue of THE WORKER was going to press, the armies of France were again on the march, advancing on Essen, Germany's great industrial center. The announced plan of the French imperialists is to occupy "The Ruhr" since the Germans have defaulted in their payment of reparations.

This advance into Germany was the program advocated by Georges Clemenceau during his recent propaganda tour of this country. It is a program repudiated by Great Britain, and which resulted in an overwhelming demand in the United States senate for the return of all American troops along the Rhine.

Communist representatives of seven countries met at Essen, Germany, on the 11th inst., to discuss the ...ing out of the Versailles Peace Treaty. There were representatives present from the Communist Parties of Germany, France, England, Italy, Czecho-Slovakia, Holland and Belgium, and the tone of the meeting was spirited thruout. A working committee of 11 was elected with representatives of France, Czecho-Slovakia, Belgium and Poland, with three additional committees, composed of French and German delegates, representing miners, railway operating workers and other railway workers.

The leading speakers at the meeting were Marcel Cachin, Communist member of the French chamber of deputies and Willie Callacher, who led the famous British Clyde Shop Stewards' Strike of 1915. J. L. Walton-Newbold, Communist member of the British Parliament, was present.

About Opening of Fourth Congress of the Communist International at Red Petrograd

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the first of two articles just received by "THE WORKER" from Charles Ashleigh, who is in Soviet Russia. This first article tells of the thrilling events incidental to the opening of the Fourth World Congress of the Communist International at Red Petrograd. Ashleigh was sentenced to Leavenworth Prison, Leavenworth, Kans., during the war, with the Industrial Workers of the World. He was released about a year ago and deported to England. Later he tried to go to India to investigate conditions there, but was prevented by the British government. He is now in Russia. Next week he will tell about "A Day with the Red Navy." This week's article follows:

By CHARLES ASHLEIGH

Five years of the Revolution. Five years of the Soviet Republic. We knew that the Revolution had lived five years; we knew that this was the Red Week, the anniversary of the Bolshevist Revolution of November, 1917. We knew it because everywhere, in store windows, in great red signs against the fronts of houses, and upon the walls of public buildings—the fact was blazoned. Wherever you went, there was the great red V, standing for the five years of struggle, under the hammer and sickle. It was all over Moscow before we left, in the long special train, for Petrograd, where the opening celebration of the Communist International was to be held, on November 7th, the anniversary of the birth of the Workers' Republic.

We knew it, because wherever our train stopped, the stations were hung with evergreens and red bunting; and working men and women and Red Guards stood on the platform, with their band, to greet us. Ours was a Red Train. In fact, there were two trains; we were too many for one. It was a first-class train, because honor must be paid to representatives of the workers from other lands. The only people on our special were delegates to the Communist Congress, the Congress of the Red Internation-

Liebknecht Is Big Figure in Struggle for World Revolution

Liebknecht! What a host of recollections that name recalls! What a multitude of associations!

A name that has grown dear to every conscious worker the world over. A name that flashed across continents, and warmed the hearts of struggle-weary rebels. A name dreaded and loved, by a host of Karl Liebknechts!

A colossal figure of the revolutions, whose limitless courage and unexcelled devotion to the proletariat, remains unsurpassed in the annals of revolutionary history. He not only gained devoted friends in the ranks of the working class, but even in the camp of the enemy, he was regarded with admiration.

His name stood the test in the Reichstag, when the German Social-Patriots, revolted by its true nature.

Alone he rose and defiantly he cast his vote against the military budget.

Alone, deserted even by those who

France Opens War on Communists Active in Ruhr Anti-War Meeting

An Associated Press dispatch from Paris declares that the French government has begun raiding Communist organizations after it had been decided to apprehend certain Communist leaders who have recently been in the Ruhr Valley. They are charged with having excited the population to revolt against the entry of the French troops.

Five leading Communists — Monmousson, Marianne, Pietri, Sourdat and Treint — were arrested on the charge of having attempted to violate the internal and external security of the state. Gaston Rene, a carpenter, also was arrested.

Gaston Monmoesson, most widely known of the arrested men, was thought to be still in Essen, but was found to be at his home, as he had been expelled from Essen by the German police.

Semashko Speaks for Lenin.

In a dispatch from Berlin, Semashko, Soviet Commissar of Public Health, en route from Moscow to Geneva, to attend a commission meeting of the League of Nations, denied frequently published reports as to the ill health of Lenin.

Moscow Art Theater Here from Russia

By JOHN DALE

Out of the Russia of the Soviets, out of the land of the "Bolshevik Barnarians," a phrase loved by the best kept of American capitalist editors, out of the Workers' Republic, where the prostitute press has repeatedly claimed "Art is dead!", out of Red Moscow itself, there has come to these shores, "The Moscow Art Theater," now heralded by these same editors and their sheets as "probably the most famous theater in the world."

While it has been repeatedly charged that the Soviet Regime in Russia had practically exterminated artists and art thru persecution and starvation, the Moscow Art Theater has opened a short engagement in this country at Jolsen's Theater, New York City, with "the entire first line of its world famous company intact." How the facts give the lie to reports!

The quotations in the two preceding paragraphs have been taken from The New York World, that go assiduously spread the anti-Soviet propaganda of Emma Goldman, and other Bolshevik-hating notables, who would have the American workers believe Soviet Russia a vast waste of barbarism and ignorance.

We cite these facts here, because the American Defense Society and other 100 per cent plus organizations of American jingoism, that opposed the coming of the Moscow Players, no doubt saw in these world-famed actors a living refutation of the falsehoods they had perpetrated.

In fact, at this moment, we may recount that it is out of the Soviet Russia of the workers and peasants and into the United States of jazz and slap-stick, that there has come these past few months Chaliapin, who filled more than anyone else the place made vacant by Caruso in the Metropolitan Opera Company; Balieff's "Chauve-Souris," copied and imitated by American musical and dancing productions, poverty-stricken in ideas and originality; and also Isadora Duncan, dancer, who has adopted all Russia's children as her own.

And now the Moscow Art Theater, that has grown thru a quarter of a century to a personnel of 1,000, is with us, just for a brief period, because these players are returning again to their home, the Red Capitol of the Soviet Republic.

The first appearance of Constantin Stanislavsky's organization here was in "Tsar Fyodor Ivanovitch," the five-act play of Alexei Tolstoy, the elder cousin of Count Tolstoi.

"Tsar Fyodor" came to the throne of all the Russians, during the dying years of the 16th Century, as the successor of his father, Ivan the Terrible," whose cruel and savage rule has left much blood on history's pages. Fyodor is weak, timid and vacillating, and warring factions battle each other thru the play to his dismay and distress. Nowhere does one get a glimpse of the great masses of Russia's oppressed except in the last act where a few beggars huddle on the steps of one of the Kremlin Cathedrals, the Tsar within praying for "guidance and inspiration".

The Tsar, thru the masterful interpretation of Ivan Moskvin, who has been with the Moscow Players from the beginning, is made to appear a rather ridiculous and pathetic figure. Such weak characters rise to place and power only thru inheritance. Just as it was given Fyodor to rule more than three centuries ago, so we have our characterless "industrial tsars" of today in Rockefeller, Jr., Marshall Field III and others, not to mention the stage door Johnnies among the Whitneys, Gould, Vanderbilts, etc., etc., ad nauseum.

The Russian workers and peasants, really admitted to the theater for the first time under Soviet Rule, will have little respect for the Tsars of the past thru seeing "Fyodor Ivanovitch" strut the stage. They will reflect on the new Communist regime, where men and women rise from the masses to places of responsibility thru sheer power of intellect, and their ability to serve and not oppress.

Thousands of Russian and Jewish workers, as well as those of other tongues, will take from their savings during the next few weeks and purchase admission tickets to feast their eyes on the truly artistic productions of the Moscow Art Theatre that mirror Russian Life with so much realism and beauty. The actors altho interpreting types that lived in a period long past, are the very living symbols of the age they portray. And there is a richness of scenery and costumes that has never been surpassed on the American stage.

It is peculiar of the Moscow Players that they present to the audiences facing them no stars. Altho Moskvin as "The Tsar" is constantly before them, one is equally impressed by the wonderful work of Alexander Vishnevsky, as Boris Godunoff, and Vassily Luzhsky, as "Prince Ivan". heads of the contending factions, while every other character stands out with its separate importance, all blending into a united whole.

The play runs for the week to be followed by Maxim Gorky's "The Lower Depths," the week of Jan. 15.

A Million Programs to a Million Workers!

Liebknecht Is Big Figure in Revolution

ing, and the flame of hostility on the part of the Allied governments. Alone, fearless, defiant, he uttered the thunderous words that first crowded on their heels the fury German Junkerdom. Alone he charged the infuriated representatives of German Imperialism. He alone remained loyal to the class he represented.

It was in the May Day Peace Demonstration in 1916, that he made the anti-war speech, which later caused his arrest, and finally resulted in his conviction to four years and one month of hard labor.

At this time, as irony would have it, Liebknecht was being heralded as a martyr thru the pulpit and press of Entente Imperialism. Especially the yellow press of the United States eulogized his courage and glorified his imprisonment, into what a fury of moral indignation it worked itself at this outrage. At the same time it forgot or feigned to forget that the prisons of the Allied robbers were packed with men and women who voiced the very same opinion that Liebknecht did in Germany.

Then the Russian Revolution came and aroused the slumbering international proletariat. It flared forth in an unconquering fire. It lighted a path for the workers and soldiers of Germany. The German proletariat at home as well as abroad was being rapidly infected by Bolshevik propaganda. The masses were growing restless, the rumbling of satisfaction was growing ever louder and louder. The Hohenzollern Dynasty shook. German Imperialism trembled with fear before the rapidly approaching storm. They clutched at a straw in a frantic attempt to save their skins. Liebknecht was liberated in the hope that this act of clemency would at least partly soothe the bitterness of the working class and would perhaps delay the imminent crash.

But their fond hopes were in vain. Immediately after his release, Liebknecht once more threw himself into the struggle with the same fire of enthusiasm and the same inexhaustible energy.

Stronger, day by day, grew the movement that centered itself about Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, and drew its inspiration from the Russian Revolution. Daily it loomed blacker, more threatening on the horizon of German Imperialism. Scheidemann was growing flabby and horror stricken. He shrieked thru his mouthpiece, the Vorwärts, about the terrible spectre of Bolshevism, and pleaded for unity amongst all "sane" elements to combat the "monsters" growing influence, to be ready to establish a "stable" government should the Hohenzollern machine collapse.

It came. The storm burst. The Hohenzollerns were swept away. Scheidemann found himself at the helm of the state, solidly backed up by the propertied class, who only thru him hoped to save their treasured wealth. Nor was their faith betrayed. No keener watchdog of capitalism ever barked inside the legislative hall. No bloodier hound of imperialism ever feasted on the blood of the exploited, than did the "Socialist" Scheidemann and his faithful lieutenants. Their fangs, dripping blood, tore out the heart of Karl Liebknecht. They forever silenced his fearless partner, Rosa Luxemburg. They trampled with savage joy on the bodies of the revolutionary dead, to the ghastly accompaniment of the full-bellied laughter of the bourgeoisie.

January 19th is the date set aside by the Young Communist International, for its respective sections thruout the world, to commemorate the death of these gallant fighters and martyrs of the proletariat. It is only natural that the commemoration of Liebknecht's death be left in the hands of the young. No other single individual did as much to further the organization of the exploited youth. No one placed more faith than he did, in the ability of the young toilers to lead in the conquest of power from the capitalist class.

But it is not in lamentation, that young and old will gather the world over on that day.

We will gather to refresh our memories, to set our teeth more firmly, to determine more earnestly that they who have fallen in the clash of the struggle will not be forgotten and that the cause they have championed will be carried on to a successful conclusion.

Revolutionists do not weep. Nor do they forget.

Martyred in Struggle of German Workers to Join Russian Comrades in Winning Victory for World Social Revolution

Let Them Free the Prisoners

The recently elected "progressive" governors have taken office. Not one of them celebrated his inauguration by extending amnesty to class war prisoners.

To be sure, the much-heralded Governor Hunt, of Arizona, found an opportunity to pardon a convicted murderer who had a $6,000 a year job waiting for him in New York City. He was not guilty of a crime against capitalism.

This means that labor must raise new demands for the release of imprisoned workers. These demands must be made even upon these so-called "friends of labor." The fight has already started in the two states of Pennsylvania and New York.

THE WORKER, in last week's issue, published the facts about the brutal railroading to prison, for 12 to 17 years, of Jacob Dolla, prominent in the 1919 steel strike. Dolla dared stand against the steel trust in its strongest fortress, the city of Pittsburgh, and he is paying the penalty.

Similarly, two other militant workers, Isadore Blankenstien and Joe Martinowitch, are in prison in western Pennsylvania, serving two to four, and three to five year sentences. Martinowitch is suffering from tuberculosis and will die if he is not soon given his freedom. Nearly two score more workers in western Pennsylvania are also facing a similar fate under the sedition law of the steel trust and the mine owners.

This is the condition that confronts the "progressive" governor, Gifford Pinchot, hailed as a "labor friend." He must be compelled, at an early date, to take a definite stand. Releasing the prisoners is the least he can do, if he has any intentions of budging the iron heel of Pennsylvania Cossack Rule. Watch Pinchot!

Similarly, in New York state, "Al" Smith has assumed the governorship, lauded by reactionary labor officialdom, while Jim Larkin and others still rot in prison. While the cases of Ruthenberg, Gitlow, Ferguson and Winitzky are being fought obt in the courts, leaving them at liberty on bail, Ignatz Mezher, Paul Manko, Minnie Kalnin and Anna Leisman still see the days pass from behind the steel bars of their cells.

While even one of these remains in prison, conservative labor breathes a hypocritical lie in claiming even a passing "friendship" with those in power.

Workers of New York and Pennsylvania! Demand the release of all the Class War Prisoners.

"The Bolsheviki are creeping nearer and nearer!" is the startling news brought back from China to the kept press by Arthur H. Maudsley, an English camphor merchant. Maudsley, in good British imperialist style, admits that his 20 years' experience in the Orient has persuaded him that the Chinese want to go back to the monarchy. But, he feels, those terrible Bolsheviki just won't let them.

Court Rulings Aid Michigan Raid Victims

Frank P. Walsh, chief counsel for the defense in the so-called Michigan "Red Raids" cases, scored the first points in the initial contest with the prosecution. The occasion was a hearing on the defense's motions to quash, to obtain a bill of particulars and to grant separate trials to the twenty defendants. The Court decided in favor of the defense on the last two motions and reserved decision on the first.

The defense has set its feet squarely on the road to victory tho its arrival at the goal or failure depends largely upon the workers.

The moral support of the working class is the sign post along the way, but only financial contributions will buy the seven-league boots that the defense must have. In order to permit Mr. Walsh to take some essential affidavits, the first trial has been postponed until Feb. 26th. The taking of these affidavits in various parts of the country will entail a heavy expenditure and will split the already cracked Defense Fund, unless the individual workers come to its assistance.

Puzzlingly enough, the St. Joseph newspaper, the Herald Press, was arguing a case for "communism" in the public prints, while Mr. Walsh was pleading for his clients in the St. Joseph Circuit Court. One wonders, whether Judge White, the prosecuting attorneys, and Max Burger, the Department of Justice's grasshopper-like agent, read the Press editorial of January 2nd, called, "Dividing Up". A few paragraphs follow:

"Henry A. Dix has turned over his business to the 400 employees of his company in New York. He has introduced a new and worthy idea into the commercial world, a form of communism in trade.

"Seldom, if ever before, has an entire business been transferred to the employees and the experiment will be watched with interest. The progress of a firm might be retarded by the absence of the ability and genius of the founder in such a transfer, but in this particular case that difficulty is avoided, at least temporarily, by Mr. Dix remaining as a director. The control is vested in six old employees, who understand the business and who have aided in its prosperity.

"This is a move which others might emulate, altho it is more than can be expected from the average. It is a division of capital which prevents the piling up of great fortunes in the hands of a few and at the same time a recognition and reward of the faithfulness of those who help make business a success."

Mr. Burger, who was continually guiding the court activities of Berrien County District Attorney Gore and Assistant State's Attorney Smith probably forgot to whisper this editorial sermon in their ears. Attorney General Daugherty and William J. Burns, head of the Bureau of Investigation, are no longer making any effort to conceal the government's participation in the prosecution. They are, however, speaker-stereotyping the Wall Street "interests" which are financing this latest attempt to crucify labor. Neither Berrien County, Michigan, the place of the trial, nor the State of Michigan have agreed or will agree to appropriate sufficient money to prosecute. There is no federal statute, permitting the government to make such an appropriation.

Let the financial slings and arrows of outrageous workers fly at the "Wall Street Gang." Help Foster, Ruthenberg and the rest defeat their enemies, for their victory, comrades, is your victory. Mail that contribution at once to the Labor Defense Council, 166 W. Washington St., Chicago, Ill., or to Room 434, 80 E. 11th St., New York City.

Recognize Russia!

There is one issue on which all the workers of the United States can unite. That issue is the demand for the recognition of the Russian Soviet Republic. This was the spirit of the great demonstration at the Lexington Opera House, New York City, last Sunday. Some of the declarations made by the various speakers were as follows:

JEROME T. DE HUNT:—"Soviet Russia stands today regarded by every liberty-loving people thruout the world. The United States should not only enter into trade relations with Russia, but should recognize her as a sovereign nation."

ARTHUR MAURER:—"The Russian workers and peasants believe in their government. They have stood by it thru five years. Let all labor unite in the demand for the recognition of Soviet Russia."

FRANK P. WALSH:—"Soviet Russia has not been recognized because of the rule of the White International. I charge that it is part of a plot of international bankers to block recognition of Soviet Russia. The big spoke in the wheel is Mr. Herbert Hoover, a member of Harding's cabinet, who wants to see England get into Russia before the United States."

DUDLEY FIELD MALONE:—"Some of our statesmen at Washington object to recognition of Soviet Russia because the Russians have changed their form of government. I want to say that the government that has a supreme court that says the abolition of child labor is unconstitutional has a government that is a lot of changing."

PAXTON HIBBEN:—"Russian finances to-day are sounder than those of any other country in continental Europe. They are already coining gold and silver in their mints. If the United States wants to help the economic life of the world, there is a way to begin and a place to begin; it is by recommencing economic relations with Russia."

The National Labor Alliance for Trade Relations with and the Recognition of Soviet Russia, under whose auspices the Lexington Opera House meeting was held, is planning another demonstration for March 11, at Madison Square Garden, with U. S. Senator William E. Borah as the principal speaker.

Liebknecht—Foe of Capitalist Militarism

By HARRY GANNES

Militarism and anti-militarism before the war never assumed the importance in this country that it did in Europe, but the constant aggression and expansion of American imperialism is forcing the question of a stand against militarism upon the revolutionary movement of this country. With the financiers clamoring for a larger army, with Harding urging an increase in citizen's training camps, the organized workers of this country will be placed in a position where they must express themselves on the question of the arming of the capitalists.

The fundamental examination of capitalist militarism was made by Karl Liebknecht whose work on "Militarism and Anti-militarism" today stands foremost as a clear and fruitful discussion of the question. Who has not heard the axiom expressed by Liebknecht in that book—"He who has the youth has the army." It is the fundamental battle cry of the Young Communist Leagues of the World. The article on militarism in revolutionary periodicals is rare that does not contain that sentence. Liebknecht began his efforts to win over the working-class youth for revolutionary socialism because he knew that to leave them to the mercy of the capitalists was to place them against the workers.

The constant expansion and increase of the Imperialist army of Germany brought the question of militarism to the forefront in Germany in 1905 and '06, just as the demand for a larger army here and an increase in naval armaments will make militarism a pressing question that must be faced by the revolutionists in this country; and Liebknecht took the care to make a thoro study of the problem which resulted in a lecture on "Militarism" at a conference of young workers in Germany.

The important did Liebknecht, and his colleagues, consider this phase of the struggle against capitalist imperialism, that he elaborated the material used in his lecture into the book "Militarism and Anti-militarism."

The capitalists and militarist junkers of Germany could not let a book so dangerous to their interests go by unnoticed, so on the 23rd of April 1907, the book was ordered confiscated and every copy withdrawn from circulation. Liebknecht was jailed and brought to trial on the 20th of October. The trial lasted three days.

One of the most significant incidents of Liebknecht's trial was the fact, as Sidney Zimand tells us, that "the Kaiser was kept constantly in touch with the progress of the trial by a special wire." When he was formally accused of high treason because he had written the book Liebknecht did not hide behind any technicalities of the law. His reply was: "I take entire responsibility for every word I have written."

On the second day of his trial, Liebknecht declared in open court that he was given a verdict of "guilty" had been decided upon. He knew too well the bond between the German Imperialist Court and the military force to be deceived as to his chances for liberty. As Liebknecht predicted, a verdict of guilty was brought against him and he was sentenced to a year and a half for the crime of enlightening the German workers on the role and purpose of the German military machine.

From then on—even to this day—Liebknecht was the symbol of the fight of the workers against militarism. The foundation laid by him in his book "Militarism and Anti-militarism" will stand us in good stead when our younger comrades will have to take up the gauntlet against an American militarism so powerful that the Kaisers military machine will seem as puny as the army of Lilliputs.

We should always remember that "In the last analysis the superiority of physical force is the decisive factor in social domination. In its social aspect such physical force does not appear as the greater bodily strength of some individuals; it rather presupposes the equality of bodily strength of men, taken in the average, superiority thus resting purely with the majority."

Liebknecht's fight against Militarism was not predicated on pacifism; he was as much a foe of pacifism amongst the workers as he was of capitalist militarism. Pacifism, Liebknecht knew, was a bourgeois trap to disarm the workers while at the same time arming themselves.

Also, "Militarism does not only serve for defense and attack against the foreign enemy; it has a second task, one which is being brought out even more clearly with the growing accentuation of class antagonism, defining ever more clearly the forms and nature of militarism, namely, that of protecting the existing state of society, that is, being a pillar of capitalism and all reactionary forces in the war of liberation engaged in by the working class."

Liebknecht's death was part of the proof of the foregoing.

German militarism met its defeat with the uprising of the German working class; American militarism is now beginning to flower and will become with us a more important question than it ever was in imperialist Germany.

Coal Police Fight Women in Big Strike

Editors Note.—The accompanying telegraphed story was received by "The Worker" from a woman of the coal mines in Alberta, Canada. This heroic struggle of the Canadian miners should receive the immediate attention and support of the United Mine Workers of America, to which the coal miners of Canada, as well as those of the United States, belong. The dispatch does not mention, but no doubt the coal police who beat up and turned their guns on the women of Canada's western coal mines, are the same "Canadian Mounted Police," the Canadian brand of the U. S. Constabulary (Cossacks), who get so much heroic attention in the movies. This dispatch paints them in new and true colors.

(By Wire to "The Worker")

EDMONTON, ALBERTA, Canada.—The miners' strike for union recognition and better working conditions has reached an acute stage. A new phase has arisen. The struggle is being accompanied all along the line by persecution and brutal police attacks upon the strikers.

Mass arrests have been made resulting in the incarceration of some 135 miners during the last few days. Intensest against the mass persecution of the miners, their husbands, the wives have organized, demonstrating their solidarity, and decided to picket the mines.

After a mass demonstration on Thursday, Jan. 4, an attempt to picket the Penn mine was made by the women. It resulted in the worst chapter of police brutality on women ever heard of in Canada. Women clubbed, kicked, beaten and fired at, were among the dramatic chapters of the afternoon. As a result of this attack three women are fatally injured, while scores received minor injuries. A strike bulletin with sworn affidavits of these incidents has been issued and these events have awakened public interest as never before. A monster mass demonstration of protest was held in this city, Jan. 6, showing in no uncertain terms how the citizenship feels. There is a great possibility of a general strike of District 18, United Mine Workers, in consequence, and also, should occasion warrant it, a general strike of all workers of Edmonton and vicinity.

T. U. E. L. Holds Successful Meeting in Philadelphia, Pa.

Philadelphia.—The Trade Union Educational League here held a very successful meeting last Sunday evening, with every seat in the hall taken. A poll of the audience showed that, with a few exceptions, those present were trade unionists. The trades represented included: bricklayers, sheet metal workers, painters, moulders, metal polishers, carpenters, printers, cigar makers, bakers, capmakers, auto mechanics, the needle and textile trades, and workers in the food industry.

Joseph Manly, secretary of the New York Trade Union Educational League, outlined the purpose of the League and pointed out how the progressive group in the American Federation of Labor unions could be united in support of the amalgamation and Labor Party movement. After his speech, Wm. F. Dunne spoke briefly on the labor situation. A number of the trade unionists attending then told of the local situation, all promising to engage actively in the organization work. Despite the reaction which grips this city, as so many others, there was a feeling that Philadelphia could be put on the progressive labor map by concerted action according to the program outlined by the League.

The local League meets at the Amalgamated Center, 431 Pine Street every Monday night and urges live wire trade unionists to attend.

Renton, Pa., Miners Ask Aid

Local Union, No. 811, Renton, Pa., United Mine Workers, has sent a resolution to "The Worker," calling upon the officials of their international union and other labor organizations, to come to the rescue of several of their members who have been arrested and jailed.

Help "The Worker" Find THE WORST BOSS!

The Worker wants to publish your story about your boss. Then you can help expose him. For "The WORKER" can tell to the world how he treats his employees. "The WORKER" can tell to the workers in the mine, not to mention a host of other names applied to the "Union" miners.

In every single large-scale industry the worker has to curse the owner. To the worker the manager is usually a myth, heard about but never seen. All the worker knows and hears is the boss with his curses and the smack of his whip.

"THE WORKER" wants to publish your story about your boss. Then you can help expose him. For "The WORKER" can tell to the world how he treats his employees. "The WORKER" offers the following prizes: First Prize, $10 worth of books; Second Prize, $7.50 worth of books; Third Prize, $5 worth of books; Fourth Prize, $2.50 worth of books, and ten additional prizes, each one $1.00 worth of books.

The contest will close on March 31st. The judges will be C. E. Ruthenberg, Elmer T. Allison and Caleb Harrison. Start sending in your stories now. Address: The Editor, "Worst Boss Stories," "THE WORKER," Room 405, 799 Broadway, New York City.

Tasks of the Workers Party Members in the Trade Union Educational League

By H. M. WICKS

For the first time in the history of trades unionism in America the left elements are seriously challenging the reactionary and the slavish clique that has for decades paralyzed effective action on the part of the working class.

The dominant factor in the labor movement in America is the American Federation of Labor, controlled by a reactionary bureaucracy built up thru years of treachery to the working class. It is an at present constitutionally impossible to resist the encroachments of the capitalist class. Its fossilized leadership consistently serves as the hand-maiden of the most vicious and backward tendencies in the capitalist system.

Faced with the terrific assault of the "open shop-ers" against labor shortly after the close of the War, the reactionary leaders were retrenching on all fronts. In spite of the fact that the very life of organized labor was at stake the officialdom of labor opposed the demands of the rank and file for action, thereby aiding the enemy in the attempt to accomplish the general demoralization of labor.

Taking full advantage of the tremendous opportunities created by the industrial crisis the ruling class crushed the ranks of the workers with sledge-hammer blows. This continued for months, with labor beating a steady retreat. The order of the day was lengthening of hours, reductions in wages and a constant reduction of the workers' standard of living. Membership in labor unions declined at a startling rate.

In many industries there was a spirit of militancy developing on the part of the rank and file. Very reluctantly the labor leaders rallied their forces to open conflict with the employers.

So intense was the action and determination of the membership of the United Mine Workers of America in the greatest strike known to history that the bitterness of the open shop agitation was broken.

The strike of the shop men on the railroads is not yet abandoned. Betrayed by the unscrupulous servants of capitalism, masquerading as labor leaders, from the very first, this strike produced evidences of further militancy on the part of the rank and file of labor.

The sympathetic action of the trainmen, engineers, firemen, maintenance of way men and others who defied the mandates of their officials during this struggle were not accidental or evanescent episodes, but were symptomatic of a widespread spirit of militancy that is permeating the rank and file of labor.

At this time, when large numbers of workers are becoming discontented with the old forms of organization and strive to break the fetters that prevent effective action, there appears a unifying force among these militant elements that, although only in existence a short time, has challenged the supremacy of the whole reactionary officialdom of labor. That organization is the Trade Union Educational League.

The Trade Union Educational League is the one organization capable of rallying all the left elements in the labor movement for the struggle against the spirit of Gompersism. The League is convincing ever larger numbers of the working class that labor can never with back the ground it has been forced to yield since the War without fundamental changes in the form of labor organizations in this country. Not only must there be a unified change of leadership, but the fact that unions cannot recuperate with their present obsolete structure must also be emphasized in order to pave the way for effective action against capitalism.

Our Task As Communists

As the vanguard of the working class, and as the natural leaders of the labor militants who see beyond the struggles of today and perceive the goal for which labor is striving, it is our duty to enter the ranks of the Trade Union Educational League. There are all brands of militants or "leftists" in the labor movement and most of these elements are being attracted to the Trade Union Educational League. As Communists our task must be to support the work of this organization with all our power and to endeavor to take the leading role in formulating its policy and developing its action in the labor movement. To evade this important work would be nothing short of a criminal neglect of our plain revolutionary duty.

In places where Leagues already exist it is the duty of the members of the Party to join the existing League. In places where the League has not yet been organized, it is the task of Communists to take the initiative in launching a branch of the League.

There is no provision in the League that conflicts in any way with any laws of labor unions. There are no dues, no application fees, nor anything that can possibly be construed as dualism. A subscription to the Labor Herald, official organ of the League, entitles one to membership in the League, provided there is the willingness to comply with the program of the organization. So it is a very simple matter to launch a League in places where such organization does not exist. Simply get a number of comrades and sympathizers together and collect subscriptions for the Labor Herald and proceed with the launching of the League. The Industrial Organizers of locals and districts will render any assistance necessary.

The tremendous importance of the League work can be fully comprehended only in connection with an understanding of the fact that the great strikes of last year were merely the first steps, the forerunners of ever greater labor struggles that are even now developing in the industrial life of the nation.

History imposes upon the militants in America a two-fold task. We must not only rally the workers to effective action against capitalism, but we must also wage a relentless struggle against the spirit of Gompersism and all its menacing implications. The reactionary machine in control of the American Federation of Labor openly boasts that it is a bulwark of the capitalist system and the capitalist government of the United States. The Gompers machine appeals for support from the capitalists on the ground that it stands between the capitalist government and the working class revolution.

In its desperation the Gompers clique has entered into a conspiracy with the capitalist class to destroy the militant movement in the labor unions. Every attack upon their own leadership is distorted by them into an attack upon labor. The one thing they dread is the rise of the militants in the labor movement to a position of influence in the trade unions. They know full well that a militant bloc and file heralds the doom of their own organized treachery against the labor movement.

As the labor organizations of the North American continent display revolutionary tendencies and as the principles of Communism threaten the existence of the reactionary machine these enemies of the workers will attempt to destroy the labor movement in order that the militants will have neither gun shattered remnants to marshal against the capitalist class.

In order to forestall such a catastrophe the labor movement must utilize all our resources in order to solidify the ranks of labor and build a movement so impregnable that it cannot be destroyed by the combined assults of the capitalist class and its labor lieutenants of the Gompers type.

Millions Only Can Save Labor

Far from desiring the destruction of the labor movement it is only the militant elements in the unions that can save it. Instead of advocating a policy of craft unionism, which vitiates the efforts of organized labor, we propose the amalgamation of all unions in a given industry into one industrial union that will be able to meet and resist the encroachments of the capitalist class. We need no repetition of the history of the disasters labor has suffered as the result of the obsolete policy of craft unionism. The history of the American labor movement is replete with examples of lost strikes and colossal betrayals as the result of pursuing the obsolete policy of craft unionism.

When the Trade Union Educational League formulated the slogan "Amalgamation or Annihilation" it was no idle play upon words, but was rooted deep in the needs of the organized workers of this continent. With intelligent direction of the left forces in the labor movement the majority of the workers of organized labor will come to realize the full meaning of these words. That direction must be the major task of the Communists in the labor movement.

As revolutionist we must so identify ourselves with the labor movement that it will be impossible to separate us from it. We have no interest aside from the interests of the working class.

It is the policy of the reactionary leaders of labor to endeavor to separate the militant elements from the rank and file of labor. This is the detestable work that is now being carried on by the Gompers machine and other labor-faking henchmen of the capitalist class. If the revolutionary elements in the labor movement can be separated from the mass of organized workers the traitors to labor know that their positions are secure.

To overcome the prejudice constantly fostered against Communism by the reactionary machine in its desperate effort to maintain its position as tackey of capitalism requires patient and persistent educational work. But in addition to our own work toward the revolution there is the inexorable march of history on our side. The development of industry itself aids us in proving to the workers that capitalism must pass before there can be any lasting solution of the labor problem.

The development of industry alone will never achieve the emancipation of the working class. The existence of a strong Communist movement is necessary to accomplish that achievement, and that movement can never come into existence until we have developed the mass power of organized labor and mobilized it against capitalism by convincing the majority of the workers that our position is correct. This is why the Workers Party declares that the chief task of the membership today must be the work in the trade unions in order that we may direct the economic struggle of the workers into the final class struggle for political supremacy.

Attend Third Local Conference of the Labor Defense Council.

Amalgamation and the Labor Party

The Proposed Conference of Labor Unions Will Be Held Soon

The call for the conference to be held in Chicago, Jan. 17th and 18th, to consider the question of amalgamation of the railroad unions and the formation of a Labor Party, is now in the hands of the printers and will be issued in a few days. Many unions have already declared themselves in favor of the conference and the appointment of delegates to it. Others are expected to follow suit. Since the call was issued, however, the railroad unions themselves have begun to take steps to amalgamate. Conferences of the representatives of the various railroad unions have been held in the hope of bringing about a more effective unification of the forces of the entire American labor movement. Every attack upon their own leadership is distorted by them into an attack upon labor. The one thing they dread is the rise of the militants in the labor movement to a position of influence in the trade unions. They know full well that a militant bloc and file heralds the doom of their own organized treachery against the labor movement.

EDITOR'S NOTE.—Here you see in that story on the news about the Labor Party and Amalgamation as you cannot in connection with it. Every Federated Union will discuss it and pass resolutions on it. Churches Monuments to Plutocratic Princes

Many churches today are nothing but monuments to plutocratic princes, declared Dr. William Guthrie, rector of St. Mark's in the Bouwerie, New York City, in an address in which he charged that the churches are being run for profit. They are under domination of pewrent payers and contributors, both actual and prospective, he said.

"The affairs of the church are managed by the vestry," he said. "Today the vestry is not elected. The vestrymen of the Episcopal church are chosen by the sexton and a little group. They are usually elderly men with money, chosen for their contributions or for their influence upon contributors or prospective contributors. A clergyman has to be a pretty big person to be independent under such circumstances."

British Jobless March to Tune of "Red Flag"

Shapurji Saklatvala, one of the Communist members of the British parliament, was among the speakers at the tremendous Trafalgar Square demonstrations of the jobless in London, last Sunday. Great parades of unemployed marched to the square from all sections of the city behind drum and fife corps playing "The Red Flag". It was the largest demonstration yet held.

The Tenth All-Russian Congress of Soviets in its closing session has issued an appeal to the workers of the world to support its program of disarmament. The appeal is addressed to the nations of the world, but in terms calculated to reach the toiling masses. A LITTLE STORY FOR CHILDREN ON:

"The Comforts of Home Life"

Little children, boys and girls, of the coal fields, gather around and listen to the story of a princess. It isn't taken from a fairy book. She is not a fairy princess. She is a real live princess. The New York Times, Jan. 7, tells all about her.

You say you are cold and hungry, you children of the coal fields of Fayette County, Western Pennsylvania, because your fathers are denied the right to work, to bring home the wages needed to feed you, clothe you, house you.

All you have is the thin canvass of a tent, provided by the miners' union, to fight back the winter's cold, you say, boys and girls of striking miners of West Virginia.

And you, boys and girls, of Herrin, Ill., you say, some of you, your fathers are dead, or they are in jail, murdered by thugs of mine owners or victims of capitalist justice.

And in all the other thousands of coal camps scattered over the land, you are suffering, boys and girls of the miners. But the tears that drop from your eyes, the quivers of your tender flesh stung by the cold, the pangs of hunger that tear at your youthful stomache, all help to bring ease and comfort and happiness to this fairy princess.

Her name is Muriel H. Wurts-Dundas. She lives at the Hotel Touraine, 9 E. 39th St., New York City. A judge in a court, Surrogate Foley, by name, has just decided that her guardian, George F. Lawrence, of Short Hills, N. J., may have $24,000 each year from the income of the Lippincott coal tract in the anthracite coal fields of Schuylkill County, Pa.

Muriel's guardian wanted $25,000 out of the blood and sweat of your fathers and brothers, and out of your misery, children of the coal mines. But all this fairy princess got was $24,000. Those coal lands were once owned by her grandmuncle, James Dundas Lippincott, to do with as he pleased, and he pleased with all the other coal mine owners throughout the nation to continue the system that makes a few girls and boys happy, the many boys and girls very unhappy.

While thousands of you children of the coal mines, evicted from your shanty-Hoovas by the mine owners, live in huts, in empty barns, in chicken coops, anywhere that a shelter offers, Muriel will spend $5,000 each year for the rent of an apartment; $3,500 for the wages of a companion and two servants; $3,000 for food; $2,500 for clothing; $2,500 for her education, including instruction in music, dancing, singing and voice culture; $2,000 for rent of an automobile, and $3,500 for traveling expenses, physician, church, charities and amusements.

Children of the Schuylkill, Pa., coal mines! Muriel won't even pray for you when she goes to church in her heated car, with her companion at her side, perhaps a poodle dog, too, after a breakfast of rich foods in her $5,000-a-year apartment.

She doesn't know a thing about you, because she is taught that she lives under a "glorious government", the product of "the best social system" the world has ever known. It certainly would be rude if thousands of you, tens of thousands of you, boys and girls of the coal mines, would write her and tell her how you really do live.

Muriel's guardian says he wants to surround her with "the comforts of home life", and he will do it, but at the terrible price of sacrificing all the comforts you should enjoy, at the great cost of shattering the home life of the hundreds of thousands of fathers and mothers, boys and girls of the coal mines of these United States of America.

J. H. Dolsen, delegate from California to the recent convention of the Workers Party will speak at the following places under the auspices of the Labor Defense Council:

Hamilton, Jan. 15;
Rochester, Jan. 18;
and Cleveland, Jan. 19.

He will spend ten days in Canada on his way back to California.

Mine Owner Gave Wife Pearls and Diamonds

By HARRY GODFREY

(Federated Press Correspondent)

NEW YORK.—Mrs. E. J. Berwind, wife of the head of the Berwind-White Coal Co., died here not long ago. Among other trifles, her will disposed of diamonds and pearls and auto wheels which the tax appraiser has valued at $376,944. These she bequeathed to her husband, the will setting forth that she left him no money because she needs none.

Some of the reasons Berwind does not need more money now are disclosed in the report of a committee appointed by the mayor and representing New York City, which recently made an investigation of the conditions under which the mines of the Berwind-White concern in Somerset and Cambria counties, Pennsylvania, are worked. The report is one of the most blistering arraignments of coal mining employers ever put into print. It concludes with a demand that the government take over the coal mines and operate them for the benefit of the people.

"The committee," says the document, "heard harrowing tales of suffering and deprivation, and saw in tents, henhouses, stables and other improvised homes, women and children whose feet were bare and bleeding and whose bodies were thinly clad." "It did not take long to learn," the report continues, "that the Berwind-White company officials treated their employes purely as beasts of burden and sacrificed the lives and limbs of thousands of women and children to build for themselves an industrial autocracy."

"Hid as it is, the danger of underpaying, short weighing and overcharging for food and clothing against the Berwind-White company by its striking employees are only too true. The dejected condition of the miners, the wasted bodies of their wives and the sad faces of their undersized children testified in the strongest terms to their helpless and poverty-stricken condition."

PHILADELPHIA. — The mass meeting held here last Saturday night by the Labor Defense Council was well attended. M. Feinstone, of the Russian local, spoke in Russian. William P. Dunne outlined the economic conditions which produced the Michigan "Red" Raid and appealed for funds to aid the defense. James H. Dolsen, of San Francisco, closed the meeting with an address, relating how, from his own experience as defendant in two trials under the criminal syndicalism law of California, the prosecution frames up for convictions by any means available.

Sixty-one dollars was given in the collection, besides a large number of tickets sold in advance, and a good deal of literature sold.

The Workers Party of Trenton, N. J., held its first defense mass meeting last Friday night. It was addressed by J. H. Dolsen on the appealed case of the Michigan Reds.

"The Worker," The Best Paper

"The Worker" is the best paper I ever read. It is the Workers' paper and I think every worker should read it. I am 13 years of age and I read "The Worker" and there are older people who read the Capitalist paper. I wish every worker would read "The Worker" and "Liberator".

You! Workers of the world, UNITE in the Workers Party and work for Freedom like in Russia. The people in Russia established a workers' government so that all workers have the right in Russia. WE in America must work for a workers' government. The workers of America are squeezed down by the Capitalist. Warren G. Harding and Rockefeller and the rest have an easy life and you SLAVES have to work for them.

WE must work to knock down the Capitalists and put up a workers' government.

Work for FREEDOM, workers! WE must work for a class struggle! And WIN- GO INTO VICTORY FOR FREEDOM ALL OVER THE WORLD!!!

Quarrels Over Money

"All this quarrel over money is very unfortunate," said Harold Spender, English journalist, commenting on Rudyard Kipling's attack on America's part in the world war. "Money is the root of all evil between nations. It is the cause of all wars. Even the War of Independence resulted from a quarrel over money."

Spender is a member of a delegation which has just arrived in New York from the Saligrave Institution in England, on a mission to "promote Anglo-American friendship."

He had better watch out for the American Legion and Pat Hamrock in Colorado.

Help Fire This Broad Side

Next Week THE WORKER will publish the first installment of the story of Jacob Panken, one of the leaders in the convention of 1919, which split the Socialist Party in two, and gave birth to the Communist movement in America. It is told in a series of articles by Panken himself, and will be published with the permission of the Socialist Publication Society, which has the exclusive right to publish the story in book form. Watch for the first installment next week.

Even the Dead Lived in Russia's Red Petrograd on Fifth Anniversary of Bolshevik Revolution of Labor Unions, the Congress of Soviets, the Communist Party, the Red Army and Navy workers and Labor Unions.

Nobody slept on the long night's journey. Everybody was too excited. Then, too, there was much to see in Russia. Petrograd, Congress all day and computer all the night. You get supper at five, eleven, and then you write an article and some letters, and discuss matters with other delegates, and about five. Then you go to the room you share with four others, and do some more talking. And then you have to get breakfast and go to the Kremlin for the morning session. Perhaps you sleep a little, somewhere in between all these things, if you are lucky. Probably you don't. But you don't mind it a bit.

From the station in Petrograd we went to Smolny. Smolny, the dynamo station of the Petrograd uprising. The late genteel finishing school for young ladies had been rudely jolted from its accustomed routine, when the Workers', Peasants', Soldiers' and Sailors' Deputies began tramping its long corridors in their heavy high boots, and the machine guns and armed forces rumbled up its prim lawn to guard it against the soldiers of Kerensky. But it seemed now quite resigned, and as if it had been all its life a centre where rudely clad rebels worked sixteen hours a day at making a revolution.

The great hall of Smolny was where we went to. There we met many delegates to the Congress of Soviets, where we had a most wonderful time. And we all had splendid meetings; and those who got back in time went to the opera; and some of us may have gone to bed.—And the morning of the next day was The Seventh of November.

Red Petrograd. Women of the Revolution—heroic city of conflict and achievement. There was a fair early next morning in Petrograd. The workers were assembling. Red banners came down the streets, bowing and lifting over moving masses of men. Bands came, and flags, and ever more flags; and long lines of workers, converging from a hundred different points into one great stream.

The rain came down upon the banners, and wet them so that they looked as tho they had been soaked in blood. The snow began to melt, and we stood in the slush, ankle-deep, in front of the Winter Palace music along this line; and Great Britain and America were old friends and allies.

It was a meeting of the General Staff of Militant Labor. One after another, the representatives shook up and gave the report of their sector of the world-wide fighting front. And they did not speak as mawkish sentimentalists, whining their cheap sympathy for the suffering of the poor, nor as romantic dreamers, uttering pale longings for a vague Utopia, nor as smug politicians, bartering rhetoric for votes—but they spoke as soldiers in the midst of war, who had come to deliberate the next strategies in a conflict which would be hard and long enough, indeed, but of whose final victory they were assured.

The next day, the military parade. A long fleet of automobiles stood outside the hotel—the Hotel Europe which was reserved entirely for us. This hotel, by the way, was leased from the State by its workers. It was run by the waiters, clerks, elevator boys, cooks and chambermaids. And, whatever they were, asked by the Corinthern as to whether they would put us up, they agreed, and promptly gave their guests—speculators, bourgeois and native—respectful notice to quit within 24 hours.

I saw car after car leave, full of delegates for the Uritsky Square. I did not know what was coming, so I wondered why we did not go by train. My turn came, and I found myself in the next car in the chauffeur; four comrades got in behind me; and we started.

How shall I describe that ride? The well-kept, tree-lined streets around the palaces of an army!

Picture to yourselves the enormous Uritsky Square. Trafalgar Square would look like a back-yard next to it. And Union Square would be lost in it. It was a great oblong, and in the middle of one of the long sides was the reviewing stand. And, drawn up, on the other three sides, were soldiers. But, soldiers were not just in the Square. In the boulevards which led from the Square, there were more soldiers; so that the machine entered the Square, skirted the three sides, left by one boulevard, passed, by a cross street, into the other boulevard, and so back to the Square and to the stand.

That was what we had to face. As we got near the Square, our driver motioned to us to stand up. We did so, but did not know why. We saw the comrades on the car in front of us, also stand and take off their hats as they entered the Square. But we did not know why. We soon knew. We were to receive the salute of the Red Army.

Our car ran into the Square. We went on, at an easy run, passing soldiers drawn up in perfect order, their officers standing at salute. And, as we passed each unit, they cheered.

And as great a cheer as I have ever heard. My turn came. Battalion by battalion, regiment by regiment, with us as we went. Infantry, artillery with their machine and heavy guns, cavalry with their lances, each regiment—an ocean of brown, picked out with red. And still we went on, out of the Square, past rank after rank of brown-clad youths, cheering, smiling—different from all other soldiers I had ever seen, not cowed nor still and lifeless like automatons, but with all their strict formation, like a host of jolly boys, enjoying what they were doing, and knowing they were freemen. They had their representatives on all the local Soviets, these free soldiers, and on the Pan-Russian Soviet; they had a voice and a vote in matters military, and in the general running of their country. And they knew that they were fighting for Communism; and they knew that we were fighting for Communism; and so they liked us, and let us know it. Their faces were not expressionlessly rigid, like capitalism's conscripts, or the poor professional mercenaries of imperialism, for they looked up at us, as we went by, smiling broadly, with a youthful and exuberant friendliness! And their cheering was real cheering.

Out on the next boulevard, and more cheering. And then another rolling out of us, doing as they ahead of us had passed on the traveling again on to Uritsky Square. Here was the army, an army born in the struggle—and a young army in every sense, for there did not seem to be a soldier there [illegible] and most were under twenty. And they were coral. They were for the defense of the people, and not for kings; they fought for the workers, and not for profits. Their hundred thousand bayonets were not made to conquer markets, but to free oppressed peoples. They were not new Crusaders, with armor and lance, who would wrest from the swinish rulers the New Jerusalem, and establish it for ever.

They were Our Army; and I loved them. They were youth, smiling, gallant and gay; and ready to go thru Hell for the Revolution. They were guarding Russia, while the workers built her up. They stood on guard with their lives, while the workers built the new world. They, and the surging shabby parade of the day before, were one great army—they were part of the new, cleansing wonder in the world, which is Revolution. They were the Armed Proletariat, the word of power made flesh.

I felt awfully ashamed of myself. I was standing up in full view of these thousands. I was trying to [illegible] as great men as I could. I was a unit in the battalion of battalions, regiment of regiments, with us as we went. Infantry, artillery with their machine and heavy guns, cavalry with their lances, each regiment—an ocean of brown, picked out with red. And still we went on, out of the Square, past rank after rank of brown-clad youths, cheering, smiling—different from all other soldiers I had ever seen, not cowed nor still and lifeless like automatons, but with all their strict formation, like a host of jolly boys, enjoying what they were doing, and knowing they were freemen. They had their representatives on all the local Soviets, these free soldiers, and on the Pan-Russian Soviet; they had a voice and a vote in matters military, and in the general running of their country. And they knew that they were fighting for Communism; and they knew that we were fighting for Communism; and so they liked us, and let us know it. Their faces were not expressionlessly rigid, like capitalism's conscripts, or the poor professional mercenaries of imperialism, for they looked up at us, as we went by, smiling broadly, with a youthful and exuberant friendliness! And their cheering was real cheering.

Bordiga Tells C. I. Congress about Fascisti

By Radio to Imprekorr (Berlin) and forwarded by Mail to "The Worker"

MOSCOW, Nov. 16.—Declaring that Fascism is a clafical example of the capitalist offensive, Delegate Amedeo Bordiga, delegate of the Italian Communist Party, addressed the Fourth World Congress of the Communist International on the Fascisti movement in Italy. He spoke in part as follows:

"Fascism was founded by the war interventionists. The economic crisis of the post-war period encouraged this trend of feeling in the bourgeoisie.

"Fascism first took up the offensive in the agrarian districts, where socialist communal authorities, the Socialist Party, and the trade union organizations, had locally almost realized the dictatorship.

"Villages and small towns were not able to defend themselves against the military expeditions of the Fascisti. It was not till later that the Fascisti proceeded to exercise terror, incendiarism, ejection of the workers' leaders, and murder, in their war on industrial centres.

"The associations of industrial magnates, the large agrarian owners, as also the medium landowners, officers and petty bourgeoisie, tradesmen and half proletarians, all joined the Fascisti.

"Fascism rules on the pretence of representing national unity. It is supported by three factors.

"Firstly by the state, which gained time to organize the Fascisti and the Royal Guard by means of democratic pseudo-concessions during the demobilization crisis. Where the Fascisti did not defeat the workers, there the state disarmed the workers. At the time of the occupation of the factories, Giolitti and Nitti embodied the pseudo-democracy.

"The second supporting factor is the aid of the greater bourgeoisie and the big landowners; the third factor is the skilful organization of the disappointed middle class. The bourgeois parties possessed no serious organizations. Fascism created such.

"Fascism has no positive program. All it brings is new men, a new organization; but it follows the old bourgeois policy. The Fascist trade unions, formed with the aid of the employers, work with national democracy. France assisted Mussolini not only during the war, but is still assisting him with money.

"The main lesson to be learned from events is that, during the period of revolution, the state apparatus alone is inadequate for the bourgeoisie. A firmly organized party is required as well. Fascism was pressed forward to a rapid seizure of power by an international party crisis, and by exhaustion of the party treasury."

The speaker described how Comrade Togliati, the chief editor of the Communist central organ, was almost shot at the time of the Fascist seizure of power, but is still working further for the party despite this. The position is now clearer than during the period of pseudo-democracy.

The bourgeois parties support Mussolini, the Turati group makes compacts, with Mussolini, and the state apparatus has entered into a compromise with the Fascisti. Mussolini intends demobilizing the Fascisti.

Despite official freedom of the press the party organs Communista, L'Ordini Nuovo, and Lavoratore, can only appear illegally at present. The Communist Party is not disbanded, the trade unions are still working. Fascism will not be able to solve the difficult problems. Disappointment will soon be felt. The struggle of the working class will be severe, for Fascism fights against the proletariat with the whole force of the state apparatus. The first conditions for our victory is strict discipline, the creation of a well organized Communist Party."

General Czech-Slovakia points out that the bourgeoisie of Czecho-Slovakia is not only planning a 50 per cent reduction in wages, but also the closing down of the textile industry. The rise in the exchange value of the crown is a means of doing this. The economic crisis has given rise to wide-spread social discontent.

At the same time the hegemony in its democratic form is threatened by the national minorities, and by the growth of the Communist Party. The next election will give no national Czech majority. The result will be a crisis in parliamentary democracy. The present government is the last stand of the bourgeoisie. A fight to the death will follow with the bourgeoisie, leaning on the aid of the white guard legions and Nokolists, for the proletarian dictatorship.

Our main task is to diminish the social basis of the Czech Fascisti before it comes to this. The slogan of the united front and the workers' government is a suitable medium for gaining the national socialist working masses, who may otherwise become an aid to the Czech Fascisti. Our chief task is to win over the masses. To do this, the primary necessity is inner consolidation of the party, and a party executive which is not disturbed by the mistrust of an opposition, and is supported by the confidence of the members.

Urbans (Germany), contradicts Radek. He maintains that Radek had rendered the opportunists excellent service by his words. The capitalist offensive was much too strongly emphasized. On the other hand, the defensive of the workers was not sufficiently accentuated. According to Radek the possibility of fighting in community with opportunism exists. For us it is impossible, for opportunism is incapable. Radek attached too much importance to negotiations with the heads. But in actual fighting the united front of the workers is no form, only a method, by which the heads can be temporarily forced to work with the workers.

A disposition already exists towards an action of the masses. The last speaker points to the German Soviet movement and the creation of control organs.

Day's Pay for Victory!

The day's pay campaign starts January 15th and ends February 15th. It was initiated by the Workers Party for the benefit of the Labor Defense Council in the Michigan Criminal Syndicalism cases.

The Workers Party levied a voluntary Day's Pay Assessment on its membership to mend the gaping cracks in the Defense Council's funds. This fund could appropriately be called the Workers Party Salvation Fund.

A number of comrades in various parts of the country have written about the campaign to the Labor Defense Council's office in Chicago. These workers are sympathetically to the idea. Such letters, from the fruit-growing regions of the North-west, from the slave-driven mines of Alabama and the man-traps of steel in Pennsylvania are heartening messages of good will and hope. The following communication is typical:

Comrades and Brothers:—I am a miner with a wife and three babies. Sometimes, there is no work and we never have too much money. But a share of what we have belongs to you, and my brave wife says so, too. We want to help those who are arrested, when they were trying to help us. My wife is religious; she lights a candle for the cause. Many workers must feel as we do, and we will not let the prison doors close upon men who have been working to lift us from slavery to freedom."

The membership of the Workers Party in America have never before had such an opportunity to reveal the militant stuff of which they are made. Overseas in Russia and in Hungary the Communist brothers climbed to the peak of sacrifice, unflinchingly; the fire of determination blazed in their eyes and stubborn courage was written large upon the tablets of their hearts. American workers are miles from the peak that the foreign comrades conquered; over here the movement is still in the foothills of sacrifice.

But now there is an emergency. It will test the metal of the radical working class in America; foreign eyes, brave eyes, look out of shallow sockets and dumbly ask the American comrades what they are going to do. They plead with them to get out of the foothills and climb up the slope of the hill of sacrifice. Bloody experience have taught these foreign comrades that the imprisonment of Foster, Ruthenberg and such progressive leaders would crumble the solidarity of militant American labor beyond all repair. Save these Michigan Criminal Syndicalist defendants to save yourselves, if for no other reason, these overseas voices cry out to you.

Our Party members must be defended.

Our Party members must make possible the defense.

Our Party rides forward to new conquests in a Michigan victory.

Our Party suffers terrible loss in a Michigan defeat.

On the success or failure of the Day's Pay Campaign depends in large part the success or failure of the Michigan defense.

On acquittal or conviction in Michigan depends tremendously the future progress of our Party.

Brady Is More at Home with Workers Than with "Rich, Greasy Slobs"

William A. Brady, the famous theatrical producer, was sitting in the midst of an audience made up of members of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union. He was telling these needle workers about his play, "The World We Live In", right in their own beautiful auditorium, in their own building, 3 W. 16th St.

"Say, I like to be here", broke in Brady several times. "I enjoy being here with you. I feel at home with you. I feel more than [illegible] associating with these rich, greasy, well-dressed, fat-headed slobs up at the Hotel Astor".

Brady then went down all barriers between this theatrical producer and the needle workers listening to him. It became a family party.

But "The World We Live In" is still being shown. And Brady is talking about it all over town. Incidentally he is telling everyone he can 'reach that the "Capek boys", who also produced "R. U. R.", are turning out works greater than those of Shakespeare.

"They are giving us these plays out of the hunger and misery of Central Europe," says Brady, "where I saw workers going to their jobs in the morning without shoes on their feet, without a shirt to their backs, and with only a hunk of blackbread in their pockets."

Brady says he has been producing for years what is known in stage language as "hokum", plays such as "Way Down East", "Ben Hur", "The Christian," "Eightnin'" and Warfield's "The Music Master". It has brought him money, so that he now has a bankroll, he has taken care of his family, and he is in a position to experiment with what he calls "the greatest play produced for the masses".

"And there are more plays of the same kind coming from Central Europe", declares Brady.

Since Jolsen's Theater has been turned over to the Moscow Players, Brady has moved "The World We Live In" to the 44th St. Theater.

The Workers Party—A Communist Party

By ISRAEL AMTER

When the Workers Party was organized in December, 1921, no one had any realization of the activity that the Workers Party would be capable of. As the experiment of a militant, revolutionary party entering the political field to direct the workers in their struggles, it was not presumed that the tasks imposed upon the Workers Party would be so comprehensive within a period of one year, or that the Workers Party would be capable of fulfilling them.

Conditions, however, forced the Workers Party to plunge into the fight. The developments of the past year, such as the open shop campaign, railroad workers' and the textile workers' strikes; the open-shop drive of the employers with the open assistance of the Government; the tremendous drive of the unions towards amalgamation; the relief work for Soviet Russia; the raids which resulted in the arrest of twenty Party members and brought the Party into close relation with the trade unions, which protested against the arrests and today are aiding in the defense of the accused men; the campaign for the Labor Party, culminating in the Cleveland Conference, where the militants in the trade union movement were ready to fight for the Workers Party and which has brought the Workers Party close to the labor movement of the country—all of these events evoked action from the Workers Party. Despite its youthfulness, the Workers Party has proven equal to its task. It has met the issues; it has mobilized its forces. It supported the miners and railroad workers. It gathered funds for the relief of the miners starving in Western Pennsylvania. Workers Party members have played a prominent part in the amalgamation drive that is capturing the trade union movement. Workers Party members have done their utmost in the relief of Soviet Russia. The Workers Party was the only party that made a real campaign for the Labor Party and today is continuing this drive.

The Workers Party today is the leader of the American militants! One federation after the other which formerly adhered to the Socialist Party, but since the treacherous days of 1919 has been outside the S. P., has joined the Workers Party. The T. W. W., former stronghold of the militants in the labor movement, has succumbed to the attacks of the Communists. Its best elements are now to be found in the Workers Party. One year of activity has stamped the Workers Party as the bearer of the Communist, the revolutionary spirit among the trade unions and the fighting workers of the country.

The Government of the United States and the capitalist press of the country, also have not failed to note the position of leadership occupied by the Workers Party. The second convention of the Party was an occasion for many expressions of opinion on their part. The convention went on record advocating a proletarian dictatorship operating thru a Soviet Government; it pronounced itself in sympathy with the Communist International and it closed with a message of felicitation to the Communist International. The whole capitalist press proclaimed the Workers Party a Communist party. To be sure, the principles and the tactics underlying all its activities are Communist in the strictest sense of the word.

The Workers Party is guided by the decisions of the Third International. The United Front—the appeal to workers of all classes and shades to unite in a solid front against the capitalists; the call to the revolutionary workers of America to unite under the banner of the Workers Party; to fight against American imperialism; the protection of the oppressed foreign-born workers, and the support of the negro workers; the fight against the American Fascisti—the Ku Klux Klan, the American Legion and the American Defense Society—the militant struggle against the exploiters and the sham "democratic" government that trusts the great mass of the workers of this country; the revolutionization of the trade unions—all of these activities are in accord with the decisions of the revolutionary workers of the world, who are gathered together under the aegis of the Third, the Communist, International.

The membership of the Workers Party is the same as that of the other Communist parties of the world. Perhaps in many respects it is superior; thru the past three years, it has suffered from the brutal persecutions of the Government and the extra-legal agencies operating in the interests of the capitalist class. The membership of the Workers Party has made great sacrifices for the Communist movement of America; it is composed of elements ready to make the supreme sacrifice for the cause. In conformity with this tradition in this country, the Workers Party has worked with the same revolutionary zeal as the Communist parties in other countries.

In all respects but one, therefore, the Workers Party is a Communist Party. It is not yet directly affiliated with the Communist International. It still has to feel its way into the revolutionary channels. Economic and political conditions, the ever greater oppression of the Government, the greater cohesion and solidarity of the working class, and the growth of the revolutionary spirit of the American workers, under the leadership of the Workers Party, will result in ever greater clarification of methods of work.

The rising class struggle will demand ever clearer definition: what distinguishes the Workers Party from the other Communist parties will one day be obliterated and the Party will take its place beside the other Communist Parties, squarely, fearlessly, directly and clearly flying the banner of the Communist International.

Great Need for Communist Daily

It seems superfluous to stress the need for a Communist daily in New York City, voicing the aspirations of the working class. Yet that need becomes increasingly greater.

The direction in which the New York Call is leading is best shown by the fact that "The Report of the Proceedings of New York Call Labor Conference" is published in full in "The Textile Worker," official organ of the United Textile Workers of America, that claims to be "the only organization of textile workers recognized by the American labor organizations."

This is the organization that was formerly headed by Golden who with Dennis Hayes, of the Glass Blowers' Union, John Tobin, of the Teamsters, and a few others, constituted that reactionary group in the American Federation of Labor that out-Gompersed even Gompers himself.

It is this black reaction that now embraces the "Socialist" daily will come into existence, and the fight of militancy will then decay in the labor movement.

Thus it is easy to understand this "Socialist" organ as it heralds the message of New York's new governor (democrat) under the headline, "Smith Urges Many Labor Reforms," and prints laudatory interviews with the conservative officialdom of New York labor under the heading, "Labor Leaders Are Pleased by Smith's Message."

The New York Call is the prisoner of conservative labor The militants in the labor movement must have a Communist daily to carry on their fight for aggressive working-class action against the bosses.

That need is developing more and more. Increased masses of workers will see that need. The forces will be organized. The daily will come into existence, and the fight of militancy will then be carried on with renewed enthusiasm and with greater success.

"Labor Leaders" at Lausanne

The British cause at Lausanne must be getting weak. Otherwise why should the London diplomats be compelled to resort to the propaganda tricks of the late war, and call up the reserves of "labor leaders" to bolster up their case against the Turks?

These British "labor leaders" are Buxton and Young. They are unknown to us. But they are probably the best Bonar Law could get hold off.

Buxton and Young are reported to have told Ismet Pasha, the Turkish representative, that British labor would never support the Government in a war against the Turks to retain control of the oil fields of Mosul, but that unless Turkey satisfied England on the questions of the protection of Christians and other minorities in Turkey, or insisted that the Greeks born in Turkey be expelled, it was most doubtful if Labor would attempt to call a general strike to tie the government's hands in the event of war.

Buxton and Young speak no doubt for their lonely selves. They have no influence over British labor policy. We do not believe that British labor will be blindly led into a new war under the fake slogan of "Protect the Minorities." The brutal rule of British imperialism over its subject nationalities, of every color, race and nationality, as well as religion, is better known to British labor today than it was in 1914. The workers of Great Britain showed this at the last election when they sent 142 of their own representatives to the British parliament, and we do not remember that the names of Bonar Law's stool pigeons, Buxton and Young, were among them.

British labor will not fight another war for British imperialism. Bonar Law confessed this when he refused to go along with the French premier, Poincaré, at their recent meeting in Paris.

Buxton and Young, at Lausanne, therefore, speak with a rattle in their throats. Their kind is passing with the continuous collapse of capitalism, and the gradual rise of the workers to power in every land.

Russia Gives Them "The Blues"

The New York Times seems to be affected with another bad case of the "Russian Blues," a malady that creeps over it at frequent intervals. This mouthpiece of capitalism recently displayed bad symptoms in publishing a lengthy article under the heading "Rigid Communism Gaining in Russia."

The declaration is wirelessed all the way from Moscow, by Walter Duranty, the Times correspondent, that the new constitution of the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic, under which all the Soviet Republics have been closely united, is so flexible that if the workers of Poland, Latvia, Finland or Turkestan desired to join the Soviet Federation, at any time, they could do so, "automatically, without political complications, with a minimum increase of federal administrative machinery, and with great and financially profitable decrease in the central staff and overhead."

It is felt by the Times' correspondent that the Soviet decision to retain the foreign trade monopoly, and not to make any more advances to foreign capital, at present, also indicates the drift back to "rigid Communism."

All this is possible because the Communists in power, confesses The Times, have acquired great experience in business during the past 18 months, because the Russian Communist Party has energy and brains, fanatical courage and self-confidence.

Duranty discovers, what THE WORKER has long pointed out, that the Russian Communists, having made a tremedous success of the Red Army and turned back all efforts at intervention, just so will they triumph in their struggle to rehabilitate Russian industry in spite of the sabotage of foreign capitalism.

"I saw the Red Arms in the early part of 1920," writes Duranty, "It was a pretty sight. I have seen the Red Army lately and it is good enough. So, why not industry? With faith, youth, brains and energy you can work miracles—even in Russia."

Duranty says, the strength of the Soviet Regime today lies in the fact that it has won the confidence and is getting the support of the great peasant masses, concluding that "if the peasants of Russia support the Soviet regime it can afford to disregard the rest of the world."

These are the conditions in the Workers' Republic, in the early days of 1923, that throws The Times, and the profiteers for which it speaks, into a new fit of the blues. But the workers, everywhere oppressed by capitalism, will take courage and join the Russian masses in the march toward to victory—to the triumph of the struggle for their emancipation under Communism.

"If Some Poor Boy Had Killed"

An aged mother, Mrs. Mary O. Peters, with the pennies collected by her neighbors, made the trip from Haverhill, Mass., to Albany, N. Y., to plead with Governor "Al" Smith for "justice" for her boy, Clarence Peters, the former marine, murdered by Walter S. Ward, prominent republican politician, police commissioner and son of the millionaire "Bread Trust" profiteer, head of the Ward Baking Co.

"If some poor boy had killed my son, instead of a wealthy man, I honestly believe he would have been tried and either acquitted or convicted a long time ago," said the Mother to the Governor.

At the very moment that Mrs. Peters was talking to Governor Smith at Albany, a friendless, 19-year-old negro boy, William Battle, was convicted for a murder committed only ten days before, and he will be hanged shortly as "a vindication of Jersey justice," in the words of the prosecutor, and it is not forgotten that not one of the prominent and wealthy suspects in the Hall-Mills murder case at New Brunswick was even indicted.

The negro boy stoutly denies the murder charge against him The millionaire's son openly admits shooting the sailor, Peters

Mrs. Peters claims, she "cannot understand why the indictment against Ward was dismissed without even making him stand trial."

The answer is found in Ward's place in the present social system. He has wealth. Justice is subservient to money. He is a politician, a big wheel in the New York republican machine, of which the democratic machine is the bi-partisan twin. Attorney General Daugherty, at Washington, has already shown how politics can "fix" anything for money. Young Ward was even more. He was also a police commissioner. He had all the escapes needed for the committing of any crime, and he committed the worst—murder. He is today a free man, without charge against him, while the negro boy over in New Jersey waits for the gallows to claim him.

Governor Smith told the mother, Mrs. Peters, what the politicians usually tells. "I'll look into the matter," of the Ward case. That is class justice under capitalism.

Mrs. Peters, a little more toil and care worn, bowed with grief, and still dressed in mourning for her Clarence, will go back home to her five younger children, and the case will be forgotten. Capitalism cares nothing for the life of a boy of the working class.

The First Line of Defense

Governor Alfred E. Smith has taken office in New York state and read his message of approximately 15,000 words at a joint gathering of the democratic senate and republican assembly.

This is Tammany Hall's "Al" Smith that Gompers was proud to help elect, that the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor in New York city and state urged labor to vote for, that Morris Hillquit, New York state's "best man" among the old party candidates. And no doubt those workers who had been deluded again stood on tip-toe as they eyed Albany and listened for "Al's" message.

Yet they all listened in vain for one word on the subject that even the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor claims to be made the basis of labor's fight for progress, the abolition of the New York state constabulary—"The Cossacks."

Glib phrases and oily promises in plenty, there were, about minimum wages, eight-hour day, loyalty tests for teachers, prison reform, home rule, light wine and beer, and all those other topics so valuable in the stock-in-trade of a capitalist politician.

But not a syllable against "Cossack Rule," that the exploiters of the state, as in the Buffalo street car strike, call into action to crush the resistance of the workers. So far as his message is concerned, Gompers' friend "Al" places the stamp of his approval upon this strike-breaking, scab-herding, union-wrecking, head-smashing organization of the bosses, dedicated to the sole task of defeating every effort of the workers to better their conditions. Instead "Al" Smith slobbers over the equally anti-labor state militia in the following language:

"The state has abundant reason to be proud of its National Guard and its Naval Militia. They constitute the State's first line of defense and patriotic citizens who give all their time and energy in the performance of military duty should be encouraged by proposals urged to benefit this important arm of the State's service."

New York state has no foes to fear on her frontiers. There are no Balkanized states along the Hudson River. Capitalist rule in New York state needs "militia rule" and "Cossack Rule," as its "first line of defense" for one reason only, against the rising aspirations of the awakening working class.

"Al" Smith, thru his message, shows he is on the side of capitalist rule, of militia rule, of "Cossack Rule," and the A. F. of L. officialdom, from Gompers down, stand revealed again as traitors to the best interests of the workers.

Such are the enemies of amalgamation; such the foes of the Labor Party. Capitalism has its "first line of defense" in Cossack rule. Let the workers throw up their first line of defense, in spite of their reactionary officials, under the slogan of "Amalgamation and the Labor Party."

Efforts are being made to secure the release of Lothar Witzke from the Leavenworth Penitentiary as "the last prisoner of war". Witzke was convicted by court martial as a German spy and sentenced to death. President Wilson commuted the sentence to life inprisonment and now President Harding is planning to free him. The class war prisoners will still be kept behind prison bars at Leavenworth. They are a greater threat to American Capitalism than German spies.

Eugene Grace, president of the Standard Oil Trust, has been rubbing his hands over the declarations of stock dividends and the division of great profits.

The cruelly oppressed workers in the oil industry were watched with wonder, as Standard Oil stockholders presented themselves with an Xmas gift of $1,000,000,000—more than a billion dollars—in new stock.

Now these workers are waking up. Discontent has first moved them to action in the Standard Oil industrial hell at Bayonne, N. J. It is here that the great Rockefeller concern has mixed blood with oil in its fight to keep wages down and production and prices up.

Five thousand Bayonne oil workers have signed a petition to Standard Oil, 26 Broadway, demanding cheaper housing. That is the start. More is coming.

After the great strike waves of 1914-16, Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., promised the strikers "model tenements." Thirty blocks of shanties and frame shacks were levelled by wreckers. The workers were forced to move into houses that rented at $40 and $60 instead of $10 and $20 per month. They have waited and waited for the "model tenements" that never came. The company's co-operative store that functioned shortly after the strikes has now gone out of business and the workers are again the victims of rapacious middle-class profiteers, taking their cue from the great Oil Trust and charging all the traffic will bear.

The "reform and profit sharing" campaigns and the "industrial democracy" of Standard Oil, with the hypocritical promises of the Rockefellers have thus been thoroly unmasked.

The pledges of the billionaire oil profiteers are on a par with the promises that every exploiter makes to break a strike, only to be forgotten when discontent has subsided.

The opportunity is here for new campaigns of propaganda and organization among the slaves of Standard Oil. Discontent is on the march in the oil industry. But it must be headed in the right direction—toward a compact, militant union of the oil workers.

Workers in the oil industry! Put your heel upon company reforms, profit sharing, Rockefeller "industrial democracy" and all the other diabolical schemes of the bosses. Forward to the amalgamation of all the workers in the industry! Forward to the Labor Party of all the workers in the nation.

"The change that has come over Russia since the accession of Soviet Rule is marvelous. In Russia I found a people animated with hope and heartily backing its government. What a contrast with Germany, where I find a general atmosphere of hopelessness, of despair."—SAVEL ZIMAND, of the Bureau of Industrial Research of New York.

There Are Too Many Farmers

Out on the Pacific Coast the greater part of a crop of 44,500,000 bushels of potatoes is rotting underground!

John Perrin, Chairman of the Board and Federal Reserve Bank Agent of San Francisco, in his November report, says that this crop in the Twelfth Federal Reserve District has been abandoned because growers felt market prices would not cover costs of digging and transporting them to market.

Yet millions are hungry in Russia. Famine conditions prevail thruout Central Europe. Even in our own American cities gaunt want stalks thru the streets with the winter's cold. Those millions of bushels of potatoes could be used to fight starvation and save the lives of millions.

Communism says, use the fruits of the fields and industry to provide for the needs of all. The needs of all must be met.

What does capitalism say? Thru its spokesman, Roger W. Babson, capitalism says that there are 25 percent too many farmers in the United States. One-fourth of those who toil on the land should quit working. What he would do with these millions of unemployed, in addition to the jobless armies in all our cities, he does not say.

But if one-fourth of the farmers would quit working, less food would be produced, and prices would be higher, says this capitalist genius.

Babson has an ardent supporter in Harry N. Owens, editor of Farm, Stock and Home, of Minneapolis, Minn., who was asked during a congressional investigation:

"Do you think that there would be too much food in the United States if every family and person were provided with what they need?"

"Oh," exclaimed Owen, "if that time ever comes it will be a long time from now. I speak in terms of 'effective production,' which means PROFITABLE PRODUCTION. Profitable production is based on what people can buy, NOT WHAT THEY WOULD LIKE TO BUY."

Julius H. Barnes, ex-dictator of the U. S. Grain Corporation, now president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, views with joy the movement of 1,700,000 farmers to the cities from the farms, where they have become unneccessary due to the use of labor-saving machinery.

Barnes does not say why he is happy, but we judge that he chuckles to himself as he sees that great army of workers going to the cities to help beat down the wages of toilers in industry, thus making them still more helpless in their struggle to purchase the necessities of life, especially food from the farms. All of which causes Owens, the farm editor, to confess, in spite of his capitalist affiliations:

"If the purpose of the government and bankers is to reduce the farmer to the level of the old world peasants, with a hut to live in and just enough food to keep him alive, then I'll say we are on the right road at present."

Babson, Owens and Barnes, with the rest of capitalism's apologists, may consider that the right road.

But the tens of millions of workers, on the farms and in industry, are beginning to think differently. They are enlisting more and more in the struggle to wipe out "PROFITABLE PRODUCTION" and plan for the production that will meet the needs of the many, the plan that goes into action with the abolition of the capitalist social order and the inauguration of a Communist system of society.

The Republic of Germany, headed by the "Socialist" President, Ebert, is paying billions of marks annually in pensions to relics of the late kaiser's military machine, including 46,630 retired army and navy officers. In the meantime war cripples and the war insane are suffering quite as much in Germany as in the United States, while the victims of industry receive even less than the victims of war.

Workers' Party Notes

Congratulations, Welcome!

With this issue of the Bolcomm, we celebrate our sixmonth existence. But a half-year has passed since the birth of this institution and we already feel proud of its accomplishments. During this short period, the BOLCOMS have become a factor of vital importance in the newspaper world. It is seriously threatening the existence of all the metropolitan papers. It was due to its untiring efforts that the Sidney Sun was chased underground and the Elevator Express is all up in the air. Since its inauguration, over a dozen revolutions have taken place, scores of cabinets have fallen and multitudes of wars declared. It is no longer a secret that the BOLCOMS are the prime cause of the defeat of Lloyd George, the Labor-ite victory in Australia and the disagreement between the Allies. Modesty does not permit us to mention myriads of our other accomplishments; but we do take the liberty to admit that we are mighty proud of the BOLCOMS and feel that we well deserve the $10,000,000 honorarium that we get for editing them.

THE BOLSHEVICK

I am the wild-eyed Bolshevick,
I rant and traf my hair;
My teeth are red with bloody blood,
I make good men despair.

For breakfast I eat children fried,
For dinner hard-boiled priests;
I wash it down with red, red ink,
It's served at all my feasts.

I am the wild-eyed Bolshevick,
I rant and traf my hair;
I let my hair grow on my face,
I make good men despair. —Sadi.

GETTING THE BOSS'S GOAT

(We are herewith installing this new feature in the colyum. Let the Bolcoms know how someone got your boss's "goat".—Ed.

Jones was a typical white-collar-slave foreman. He was lothed by his workers for the cruelty with which he treated his subordinates.

One day Red Bob, the fellow he despised most, came up to him and asked if he could take the afternoon off.

"What do you wanna take the afternoon off for?" he demanded.

"I'd like to go to a funeral," was the pitiful reply.

"Well, you can't go, that's all!"

"But please, Mr. Jones, I'd feel awfully disappointed if I didn't go to this funeral," tearfully pleaded Red Bob.

Moved by these pathetic words, Jones geatly asked: "To whose funeral do you wanna go?"

"To yours," was the laconic reply.

Needless to say, Bob lost his job.

IT'S TOUGH!

Editing a radical colyum is a nice thing.

If we publish jokes, people say we are cattle-brained. If we don't we are fossils.

If we publish original matter, they say we don't give them enough selections. If we give them selections they say we are too lazy to write.

If we knock some labor leaders we are cruel; if we don't we are yellow.

Now what are we to do?

Please, kindly do not someone will say that we stole this from an exchange. So we did. Belonging, love

New Arrests in Michigan Raid Cases

GET "OUTSIDE HELP"
By Federated Press

ST. JOSEPH, Mich.—Berrien county will not be bankrupted by the criminal syndicalism trials for which preliminary hearings have already been held. Outside money will be available to help the county prosecute the labor men charged with participating in a secret meeting Aug. 21. This promise was made to the supervisors by Dist. Atty. Charles W. Gore, who stated that the county would emerge financially sound from the trials.

Following the white-wash he received at the hands of a packed congressional investigating committee, Attorney General Daugherty and his chief sleuth, "Bill" Burns have started a round-up of the remaining 54 persons who, it is claimed, were at the last August convention of the Communist Party at Bridgeman, Mich. Those arrested so far are:

Alex Gerguson, of Minneapolis.
Taddeo Cuomo, Jersey City.

All three are being held for extradition to Michigan.

Senator-Elect Hits Palmer, Daugherty

Byron L. Wheeler, Senator Elect from Montana, in a letter sent to Labor Defense Council severely criticizes Attorney General Daugherty and laments the fact that the Department of Justice is causing thinking people to lose respect for our government institutions. Wheeler's letter follows:

"Moritz J. Loeb Chicago, Ill.

DEAR SIR:—I am in receipt of your circulars and thoroly agree with you that these raids carried on by former Attorney General Palmer and by the present Attorney General Daugherty, are doing more to break down our constitutional guarantees than anything else that has happened in my time and is indeed causing thinking men to lose respect for our institutions or at least for those persons who are charged with upholding the same.

Respectfully,
B. K. Wheeler."

This letter is typical of hundreds of letters being received by the Labor Defense Council from men and women prominent in the public life of the country. It is merely a coincident that this letter was received on the same date as the one received from Tom Mooney who is himself one of those who has suffered severely by the breakdown of the machinery of justice.

Steel Trust Fury During Big Strike Sent An Innocent Man to Prison Hell for Long Term

This week we publish the facts in the criminal frame-up of Jacob Dolla by the hirelings of the steel trust during the recent steel strike. But we are not content to merely publish the facts. We want you, we want your organization to join the fight, to get into the drive demanding that Pennsylvania's governor release Dolla from prison. After reading this exposure of Dolla's arrest and conviction, sit down and write a letter or send a telegram to GIFFORD PINCHOT, GOVERNOR, EXECUTIVE MANSION, HARRISBURG, PA. Get your labor union to send a telegram. We want Dolla free to help organize the new struggle of the slaves of the steel industry. Here are the facts about the persecution of Dolla:

(Special by Staff Writer to "The Worker")

BETHLEHEM, Pa.—In all the black record of frame-ups by the American Capitalist Class there is no single piece of dirty work more monstrous than the framing of Jacob Dolla, member of the Amalgamated Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, who is languishing in a Pennsylvania prison under sentence of 12 to 17 years, a victim of the fury of the insatiable Steel Trust.

Altho the news of his incarceration is just beginning to come out, Jake Dolla has been in jail since Oct. 5, 1919. He was put there by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, because of his splendid services to the workers in the great steel strike. Figuring on the aid of the large mass of foreign-born workers, most of whom did not belong to the union, the company tried to get away with a 25 per cent wage reduction in its plant at Lebanon, Pa., but the figuring was all wrong. When the inevitable strike was declared the non-union men began to join the union, and one after the other, Cossacks, Hungarians, Russians, Poles and Slovaks came out on strike. Dolla was one of the leaders in this movement and was due largely to the untiring efforts of Jake Dolla, who was born in Hungary and speaks five languages, and whose enormous prestige among the foreign-speaking elements made him a pivotal factor in the strike.

It also made him a marked man with the enfuriated capitalists. They determined that he was to "get his"—just as Tom Mooney and Sacco and Vanzetti had got theirs. One day there was an explosion. Dolla was arrested and sent up for a long stretch, convicted of bombing two dwellings.

Jake Dolla is as innocent of the crime for which he is doing time as if he had never been born. Four other men had previously been arrested in the case and had confessed their guilt. They were now taken in hand by the prosecuting attorneys and their first confession was elaborated upon the understanding being that they were to be let off easy if they would testify that the whole thing had been directed by Dolla. These four men are Clarence Miller, William Mumford, John Sohn and Harry Dissinger.

Altho the dynamiting was supposed to have been the result of lengthy plotting with all of these men, Sohn admitted under cross examination that he never saw Dolla in his life until a few minutes before the explosions. As a matter of fact, it was amply proved at the trial that when the explosions occurred, and for some time preceding them, Dolla was in a Lebanon tea room, chatting and drinking tea with a large party of friends. At the time when Dolla was supposed to be pointing out to his fellow-conspirators one of the houses that was to be blown up, he was working on a crew train for the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, several miles from Lebanon, he had a sworn statement from the railroad company to that effect. Miller, with whom he was charged with stealing the dynamite, has made affidavit that he never saw him until after they were in prison. Dynamite was actually found in the house of Dissinger, who was one of the most important witnesses against Dolla, but for some mysterious reason he was never accused of complicity in the affairs of it. No dynamite was ever found on Dolla, or in his home.

Dolla was accused of organizing and taking part in the bombing of two houses. The front porch of one of these houses was blown up, but there was no loss of life and the total damage is estimated at from $100 to $150. The other house belonging to one Karl Wurzman was never damaged by anyone and is still intact.

A Day with the Red Navy

By CHARLES ASHLEIGH

As a preliminary to our day with the Red Fleet, we went to the opera. The great Opera House of Petrograd is called the Marinski Theatre, and is so named in honor of the sailors of the Russian Navy who fought for the young revolution.

A party of eight of us went to the theater—where they were giving Prince Igor—the evening of the day of our arrival in Petrograd. But we could get no seats—the first act was nearly over, and the box-office was closed. Then the audience poured out into the hall to smoke and talk. Hundreds of sailors were among them; the sailors of the Red Fleet look upon this theatre as their own pet play-house.

One of our number, a stout Welshman who had been in Russia before and who spoke some fifty or sixty words of the language, told a couple of sailors of our disappointment. They consulted together for a moment, and then fetched two of their officers.

Delegat, delegat, Comintern," we heard them say, over and over again.

The magic words worked. The officers went away for a moment, returned and asked us to follow them. We were conducted to a box—a most capacious and luxurious box which must surely have belonged to a Grand Duke. We wanted to pay for our seats. "No, no," said they. "You are

Plan Unity in Political Fight for Chicago

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE
(Special to "The Worker".)

CHICAGO.—Denunciation of the Socialist Party for its reactionary tactics in Chicago, the passage of a resolution calling upon all labor unions and political organizations to mobilize for defense of alien workers and unanimous endorsement of a request to the Chicago Federation of Labor urging a conference of all working class political parties to establish united action on the political field featured the conference of the Farmer-Labor party of Cook county here Sunday.

The resolutions on the defense of alien workers introduced by Jay Brown, National Secretary, Farmer-Labor Party, reads as follows:

"The employers are planning a new offensive against the labor movement in the attack being launched upon the foreign-born workers. President Harding recommended in his message to congress that all foreign-born workers be registered. The Department of Justice urged that the foreign-born workers be photographed and finger printed like criminals. Secretary of Labor Davis asks that the government be given authority to revoke the naturalization papers for dissatisfactory conduct after naturalization. Representative Edmons introduced a bill to make foreign born workers who participate in a strike or speak at a strike meeting subject to immediate deportation.

"All these measures have as their purpose to make it impossible for the foreign-born workers, who are the majority in the basic industries, to carry on a struggle against low wages and to keep them unorganized. By keeping the foreign-born workers unorganized and forcing them to accept low wages the bosses hope to force down the standard of living of all workers in this country.

"We declare our opposition to all these measures directed against the foreign-born workers. We call upon the foreign-born workers to unite with the labor movement in this country thru joining the unions and supporting the political struggles of labor and thus make common cause with all other workers against those who are oppressing them.

"For the purpose of waging the campaign for the protection of foreign-born workers we recommend the establishment of committees for protection of the foreign-born workers, to be made up of representatives of all labor union and political organizations of labor as well as organ-

To All Active Members of the Workers Party in New York and Vicinity

We want to get an increased number of New York's working men and women acquainted with THE WORKER. To do this we want the active members of the Workers Party in New York City and vicinity to help us distribute sample copies of THE WORKER in trade union meetings and gatherings of the Workmen's Circle, the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund and other fraternal organizations. This should, of course, be followed up with an effort to get subscribers. If you want to help call at the office of THE WORKER, Room 405, 799 Broadway, New York City, and ask for the business manager or the editor. Do this today.

Striker Is Lynched; Why Not the Railroad Barons?

Small business men and farmers, who it is claimed had suffered because of the two years' strike on the Missouri and North Kansas Railroad, are alleged to have constituted the mob that lynched a railroad striker, E. C. Gregor, at Harrison, Ark., by hanging him to a railway bridge. Other rail strikers were either horse-whipped, wounded, deported or jailed.

This violent outbreak against the spirited struggle of the railroad workers is said to have been headed by a "Vigilance Committee of 1,000," The object evidently was to direct attention away from the crimes of the railroad barons.

If that mob of blood-thirsty assassins had not been blinded by ignorance and prejudice, it would have known that those who really oppress them are the railroad and banking profiteers, and that if they had vented their lynching appetite on a few of these they would be hitting at their real enemies.

It is not to be expected that the Arkansas Chamber of Commerce will raise a $50,000 fund to apprehend the lynchers and put them on trial and send them to the gallows. They have funds only for the war on organized labor, as at Herrin, Ill.; St. Joseph, Mich., and elsewhere.

The New War Looms

If France is pushing for the dismemberment of the German republic, as it is claimed, then the militarist ambitions at Paris were making headway as this issue of THE WORKER went to press.

The German Fascisti, in Bavaria, under Adolph Hitler, leader of the Germans in that district, were preparing for trouble, with the ambition, no doubt, of establishing separate Bavarian rule. It is not unlikely that France may also seek to establish a

[illegible] Berlin, it is difficult to foretell. The big fact is that the cost of living in Germany has doubled since the French took Essen, the mark now selling at 18,000 to the dollar.

WAR AGAINST WAR!

It is under these circumstances that the Russian Soviet Republic, by every means possible, is urging the workers of all Europe to war upon the threatened new capitalist war.

Such demands have come from the executive committee of the All-Russian Soviet Congress, from the Communist International, from the Red Trade Union International, from the Young Communist International, while repeated appeals are published in "Pravda," official organ of the Russian Communist Party, and "Isvestia," official organ of the Russian Soviet Government.

Russia's first official pronouncement on the occupation of the Ruhr by the French was made by the All-Russian Central Executive Committee Russian Central Executive Committee in the form of a message addressed to "all peoples of the world."

Protest Against French Action

It sharply protests against the action of France and her allies, and calls attention to its belief that war threatens, but makes no statement of what Russia's attitude would be if war ensued.

It charges that France has gone even beyond "shameful Versailles," and that England, Italy and Japan, by washing their hands or only feebly protesting, are equally guilty of breaking the sovereignty of the German people and trampling upon their rights of self-determination.

The call concludes:

"Terrible poverty and suffering threaten the laboring classes in Germany. Europe is threatened with growing economic disorder. Russia warns the peoples of the world of the terrible danger that menaces peace. Your fate is in your own hands."

Want Peace; Ready for War

But while Soviet Russia is demanding peace, the Moscow correspondents of the capitalist press seem agreed that the Workers' Republic is ready for war.

Thus the New York World publishes a special cable dispatch from Moscow, declaring, that

"The Communist Internationale and the Red trade unions are planning to form a 'Committee of Action,' which, if events justify, would take the place of a revolutionary war staff for all Europe.

"These organizations together and

[illegible] Communist [illegible]

"The Soviets place the blame not only on Paris, but on London, Brussels and Tokio as well."

The same correspondent quotes from the appeal of the Communist International as follows:

"Down with the new imperialistic war. Welcome government by the workers and peasants. Welcome a European union of socialist republics. Welcome the proletarian revolution."

The Associated Press correspondent cables that "altho the Russian Communists hope for an ultimate revolution in Germany, the correspondent is informed that Russian Government circles prefer tranquility in that country at this time."

"One widely known Communist asserted that if a workman's revolution took place in Germany now, Russia would probably be obliged to feed the population."

"With Russia short of food herself this would be difficult," he continued. "But the world remembers that we were in worse shape in 1918 than now, yet nevertheless we sent food to aid the German Spartacists, which they refused.

"If any other sort of European war should develop either from the Ruhr situation or the Lausanne conference, it is extremely possible that Russia would be the only great country of Europe sufficiently isolated and sufficiently self-maintaining to remain neutral."

Demonstrate on Liebknecht Day

On Tuesday, the Associated Press again reported that demonstrations against war and the French occupation of the Ruhr were staged by the workmen of many factories in Moscow on Jan 15, after ceremonies in observance of the fourth anniversary of the assassination in Berlin of Dr. Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg.

"Down with the French imperialists; long live the German revolution!" were many of the banners carried in the procession.

Herrin Trial Ending; Alibis for Prisoners

By McALISTER COLEMAN
(Federated Press Correspondent)

MARION, Ill.—As the first of the Herrin trials draws to a close, the case for the five union coal diggers on trial here becomes steadily stronger. Alibis for all the defendants are now in. Witnesses traced the movements of Bert Grace, one of the defendants, from the time he left his home in Marion on the morning of the rioting until long after the killings. Grace was accused by Donald Ewing, a Chicago newspaperman, of having stood astride the body of a dying gunman at the Herrin cemetery refusing to allow the reporter to give water to the gunman.

Ewing was in court and heard the testimony of witness after witness who saw and talked to Grace on the courthouse

Discussed at C. I. Congress

By Radio to Imprekorr (Berlin) and Forwarded by Mail to The Worker

MOSCOW, Nov. 17.—The Mandate Examination Commission made its report today announcing that 61 parties are represented in the Fourth World Congress of the Communist International by 392 delegates, 44 of whom have advisory vote, 6 delegates being admitted as advisory guests.

The debate upon the capitalist offensive was then continued.

Ravesteyn (Holland) in opposition to Trotzky states that in the West there is imminent not a pacifist, democratic reformist tendency but an extreme royalist reaction. In England, Holland, France and Belgium imperialist tendencies are prevailing which strive for the complete abolition of social legislation. The slogan of the workers' government is possible in special cases in Central Europe, but it is impossible in the West with Lonquet, Blum, Clynes and Henderson. In view of the danger of world reaction the tactics of the united front is absolutely necessary for uniting the proletariat.

Stern (Austria) characterizes the capitalist offensive as the last desperate effort of the world bourgeoisie to save capitalism. The best example of this is the Geneva Conference at which the world bourgeoisie ostensibly hastened to the aid of the Austrian bourgeois altho it is impossible to save it. Proletarian action under the leadership of the Communist International is possible in regard to the Austrian question. The Austrian example proves that even small Communist parties can successfully employ the united front tactics towards large Social Democratic parties. The slogan of the workers' government is the counter-cry to the coalition policy of the Social Democrats. The united front tactics no longer mean the covering of the retreat but rather the covering of the advance. It implies no danger for us if the Social Democrats join in at the commencement of a struggle. On the contrary, the situation will be all the clearer when they betray the workers later.

Webb (England) points out that

itations of foreign-born workers. Thru these committees all measures directed against the foreign-born workers should be fought and the campaign should be carried on to draw the foreign-born masses into the unions and the political struggles of labor."

The Farmer-Labor Party of Cook county is the second organization to go on record for the protection of alien wage-earners against the efforts now being made by the employers and the government to register and herd them like cattle, the Workers Party having already taken action at its recent convention in New York City. The measure will receive the full support of the Chicago Federation of Labor as the delegates to the conference were all from unions affiliated with that body.

The Socialist Party was hauled over the coals in a brutal fashion by the delegates following its recent nomination of a mayoralty candidate without consultation with the organized labor movement of Chicago and the demand put forward by the socialists that their candidate be supported to the exclusion of other working class organizations. John Fitzpatrick stated that the Farmer-Labor Party stood ready to cooperate with all working class political parties but that the Socialist party had attempted to jam a candidate down the throats of the organized labor movement in Chicago. Other delegates voiced the opinion that cooperation with the Socialist party was impossible at this time due to their arrogant attitude and said that four years ago when a joint campaign had been staged the socialists, in wards where there was a Farmer-Labor Party candidate, but none of the socialist party, had voted for the democrat and republican candidates as a compilation of the returns showed.

It was evident from the discussion that the attitude of the Socialist delegation at the Cleveland conference—where they threw their strength to the reactionary wing—and their arbitrary action here in Chicago has completely divorced the socialist party from the Chicago labor movement.

A real step toward unity on the political field was made by the conference when it decided, instead of the committee report referring the matter to the executive committee, a substitute asking the Chicago Federation of Labor to call a conference of representatives of the Proletarian Party, the Socialist Labor Party, the Socialist Party, the Workers Party and the Farmer-Labor Party with a view of securing complete unity in election campaigns. There is little doubt but that such a conference will be called by the Chicago Federation of Labor in the near future and it was emphasized in the debate that this will be a real test of the sincerity of political parties claiming to function in the interests of the workers.

During the debate it was stated that thirty delegates representing various unions and who were also members of the Workers Party were in favor of the substitute which carried with one or two dissenting votes.

The conference decided to place no mayoralty candidate in the held for the spring elections but to contest the aldermanic elections in various wards and again the double-crossing tactics of the Socialist Party were the subject of bitter comment in the debate.

Resolutions providing for an intensive membership campaign among the unions with the cooperation of the Chicago Federation of Labor, were adopted as were also a number of others dealing with minor matters.

The convention was attended by 115 delegates representing 40 different unions.

Delegate McVey, of the Lathers' Unions, acted as chairman of the conference. Robert M. Buck was the secretary of the Resolutions Committee.

Workers Party Hailed as Only Real Class Struggle Party in Favor of United Front, Says Communist International in Message to Workers Party

The Communist International has accepted the Workers Party as a sympathizing party, calling upon it to work energetically and with all the necessary enthusiasm for unity. The message is contained in a letter from the Executive Committee of the Communist International to the Second National Convention of the Workers Party. It is dated Dec. 25th, but it has only now arrived in this country. It is signed by Bucharin and is as follows:

TO THE CONVENTION OF THE WORKERS PARTY:

DEAR COMRADES: The Communist International has decided to accept your party only as a sympathizing party. This does not, however, diminish the importance of the task before the Workers Party.

The Communist International considers the most important task of the Labor Movement in America to be, to unite the greatest number of workers possible under the banner of the mass struggle against aggressive capitalism. For this reason, the primary task of your party should be to close up the proletarian ranks, to unite all those elements, not merely on paper, but in fact, not merely by resolutions, but by active struggle put up a resistance to capitalism, and are prepared to carry the fight directly to the masses, to liberate them from the influence of espitalism and its loyal armor bearers like Gompers and Hillquit, are the elementary tasks which you must fulfil before all else. You must, and you will be able to fulfill these tasks only to the extent that the party enters right into the life of the masses, intervenes in every conflict between labor and capital, assists the workers in every strike, watches carefully the every-day life of the masses of the workers, to the extent that your press becomes the sounding board of the everyday needs and every-day struggles of the working class, generalising and systematising the struggle from the point of view of the fundamental ideal of the emancipation of the proletariat from the burden of capitalism.

It is particularly important properly to apply the tactics of the United Front. The crisis and the tragedy of the proletariat lies in the fact that the bourgeoisie has at its disposal loyal servants and agents in the persons of the Yellow reformists in the Trade Unions and the Socialist Parties basing themselves on the aristocracy of labor. The cure and the tragedy of the labor movement lies in the fact that the bourgeoisie has been able to exploit the differences between the skilled and unskilled workers, and between the workers of various nationalities and races. Your young party must, at all costs, learn to unite the masses over the heads, and in spite of the Yellow leaders. These leaders at the present moment desire to split the movement. This was foretold by Jack London in his "Iron Heel." For that reason, your party must systematically expose this betrayal of the Cause of Labor by calling upon it to conduct a common struggle for the fundamental needs of the working class and to unite around these demands broader and broader circles of the masses of the workers.

The question of working in the Trade Unions becomes particularly important. Here you must systematically with position after position, constantly putting forward our demands for the unity of the movement.

Our struggle will be protracted, difficult and stubborn. Only history will decide this struggle in our favor, if you, comrades, will conduct it energetically with all the necessary enthusiasm and unity in your own ranks.

Long live the young Workers Party! Long live the American Working Class!

In the name of the Executive Committee of the Communist International,

(Signed) BUCHARIN.

Tallentire, Michigan Raid Victim, Tells Defense Needs

By NORMAN H. TALLENTIRE

The National Office of the Workers Party, thru the Labor Defense Council, is calling upon all its members to subscribe without delay One Day's Pay for the defense of the Michigan prisoners. This action is in line with the resolution which was passed unanimously by the National Convention, Dec. 27th, which urged every party member to come to the assistance of the Labor Defense Council which stands in pressing need of funds just now.

The need for prompt and vigorous action on this matter was forced home to all class-conscious workers when news was received of the arrest of Alfred Baumgarten and Andrew Cusano by federal agents. These comrades were among the 30 members of our party indicted by the State of Michigan, after the notorious "Red Raid" at Bridgman, Berrien County, Michigan, Aug. 20, 1922, when 20 of our most active members were seized by the Daugherty-Burns agents of the employers.

In addition to the 20 comrades imprisoned on Aug. 22nd, warrants were issued a few days later, for 36 other members of our party. Every one of the 36 in these indictments has been in the fighting line of the workers struggle in America for many years. Among them are some of the best and finest spirits of the militant workers movement in America, many of them having already served one or more prison terms as a result of their loyalty and devotion towards the working class emancipation.

It would seem that the impeachment proceedings in the U. S. Congress against Harry M. Daugherty, had constrained this individual and his satellites to refrain from any further persecution until they were sure that nothing serious was meant by the flamboyant assault on the "honor and intentions" of this latest exponent of "100 per cent Americanism" and "Democracy" in the current investigation. The "whitewashing" graciously granted to Mr. Daugherty by a complacent Congressional Committee, seems to have revived somewhat the drooping spirits of the Harding co-horts after the severe drubbing of November 7th, last and now that Daugherty and Burns feel secure again, they are proceeding to arrest additional W. P. members, whom, they claim, were present at the alleged "Communist Convention" in August.

The most pressing and immediate task of the Workers Party at the present moment, is to raise funds without delay in order that these defendants in Michigan may be provided, with adequate defense. The very life of the Workers Party is in jeopardy in these cases. Every member of the Workers Party and every forward-looking worker must speedily awake to the menace contained towards the workers' movement in this infamous persecution of individuals for their opinion only, against whom no overt act can be charged. If the twenty-three men now seized in the Michigan "Red Raid" are railroaded to the penitentiary, then others will be seized in successive raids and arrests until the agents of the "Union Busters" and "Open Shoppers" have destroyed the most militant expression of the working class, the Workers Party of America. Let us foster no illusions about this. This case is fraught with the most serious consequences to the entire working class movement today and it is imperative that every member of the Workers Party without delay contribute their full quota on the One Day's Pay assessment.

The need for action is desperate. The treasury of the Labor Defense Council being almost empty and money is needed right now in order that proper preparations may be made for the trial, now set for Feb. 26th. "The work of defense is being shamefully neglected because of lack of adequate funds" writes William Z. Foster, under date of January 9th. Therefore, this call is sent to each and every member of this young and vigorous organization, to send in their DOLLARS FOR DEFENSE without delay.

New York City has already blazed the way with seventeen Workers Party branches who voted to assess each member One Day's Pay and have elected special committees to collect same. Over one thousand dollars is already in the hands of branch secretaries in Greater New York, at the end of the second day of the One Day's Pay Drive (Tuesday, Jan 16th). Now every city must be heard thruout the country. Make your donations in thousands of dollars, the answer to the agents of reaction in the persons of Daugherty, Severino, Georgian and Cuomo.

To delay is dangerous. All forces must combine together to meet this latest assault upon the revolutionary organizations of the American Working class. If we mean to exist as a Workers Party in America, the Michigan cases must be won. To provide the necessary funds in abundance for the defense of Ruthenberg, Foster, Browder, Dunne, Harrison, and the rest of the twenty-three defendants in the main cases, and immediate task before us. All other work and activity is contingent on the outcome of the Michigan cases. If we win, we go forward. If we lose, we go backward, at least temporarily. We must win, we cannot lose. All sections must unite in one great push and open up on the One Day's Pay assessment 100 per cent in all sections. Let us show our comrades and the members of the organizations as well as the agents of Daugherty, Burns and Harding, how the members of the Workers Party of America, rally to the defense of their members when they are in danger as a result of their party activity. All together now. Send In Your Dollars! "GIVE UNTIL IT HURTS", and let every section in the country be heard from in the same manner that New York has been heard from, in the first two days of the One Day's Pay Drive.

TEN WORKERS SHOULD READ THIS COPY OF THE WORKER; KEEP IT IN CIRCULATION

in England the capitalist offensive proceeds parallel with the betrayal of the Amsterdam trade unions and leaders of the Second International. The strike of the miners and of the engineers are the best example of this. There now follows the offensive against the railwaymen. A firm coalition of the Communist parties of Central Europe is necessary—and a close approachement to the East, where the Social Democrats have no grip and the revolutionary movement is on the increase.

Hoernle (Germany) declares in the name of the majority of the German delegates that they are in agreement with Radek. In controversy with Urbans he declares that the eternal doubts of the opposition on the question of the united front has a paralyzing effect. The united front is certainly bound up with dangers; but at the same time it tends to purify the party from opportunist elements. An example of this is the secession of the KAG. (Levi Group) from the Communist Party. A closer cooperation of all Communist parties is necessary,—as is the case with the French and German Parties. Fascism has two types in Germany: in Bavaria it consists of the middle peasants and middle bourgeoisie, while in the East Elbe district it also embraces a section of the agricultural workers. "The self-defense of the proletariat must be organized at the right moment.

Rosmer (France) moves the following resolution: A Warsaw telegram reports the arrest of Stephan Rybacki who was returned to Parliament for Dombrova by 32,000 votes, and Comrade Krolikovski who was elected for Parliament by 27,000 votes in Warsaw, languishes in prison. This violation of the will of tens of thousands of workers is only part and parcel of the general terror to which the Communist movement is subjected in the new democratic Polish Republic. After the shameful judicial murder of Comrade Dombal who boldly exposed Communism, the Polish Government is attempting to silence the mouths of the members of Parliament who have been chosen by the people in spite of the unheard-of white terror. The Congress stigmatizes before the world proletariat the barbarity of the Polish Government. It expresses its admiration for the Polish proletariat fighting with sublime heroism for the emancipation of the working class.

The resolution is adopted unanimously.

In his concluding words Radek emphasizes the fact that in the Communist International the two opposing dangers and left wing dangers. The right wing danger, however, is the greater. The greatest danger at present is passivity, which means a lessening of the fighting will of the broad proletarian masses in connection with a one-sided adaptation to the Social Democrats. With regard to Urbans he replies that the left waters also turn the Centrist mill. He charges him with an incorrect estimation of the position. The counter-offensive of the proletariat is not yet begun, it is much more possible that the capitalist offensive has not yet reached its highest point.

The Shop Stewards Movement and the fight for the eight hour day is only a defense against a disastrous undermining of the position of the proletariat. As long as we are the weaker section, the tactics of the united front are necessary. We must endeavor to fight against capital together with the Second and 2½ Internationals, altho the Social Democratic leaders consciously fight every revolutionary movement.

The pressure of the proletarian masses can compel the Social Democrats to break with the coalition. Then we are ready to fight with them but not in the coalition. The Communists must not only vindicate their conviction, they must rather conduct practical every-day struggles. The struggle will also convince those masses who do not believe in the dictatorship that dictatorship is the only way. The continual doubts of the opposition can hinder the organizing of the fight and injure the party. Then exists the danger of Opportunism which passively waits for the revolution the day after to-morrow. The Communist parties have to act to-day and tomorrow. In our tactics for the next period we must not lose sight of the future perspective. Anxiety over the tactics of the united front is injurious. The Communists are practical class fighters. We negotiate with the Social Democratic leaders so long as we get the majority. This way leads to our goal —the dictatorship.

Zinoviev reads out a telegram from which it appears that in England, Newbold is elected as candidate of the Communist Party.

Velti (Switzerland) proposes the creation of a committee for the realization of the International United Front of the Communist Parties against the reaction.

The Communist International Is Against Mass Emigration to Soviet Russia

By ISRAEL AMTER

The Fourth Congress of the Communist International took a definite stand on the question of emigration to Soviet Russia. The Congress unanimously adopted a resolution on relief for Soviet Russia, which contained the following point (Point 5):

"The emigration of foreign workers to Russia should be confined to individual special workers who are specially needed in industry. But even in these individual cases, such emigration should be procured only with the knowledge and approval of the Russian trade unions. At the present stage of Russian economic life, mass emigration of foreign workers to Soviet Russia would mean no support but only a hindrance in the reconstruction of Russia. Under no circumstances, therefore, is it to be encouraged."

This resolution speaks clearly and definitely. There is not the slightest doubt as to its meaning nor does it allow of any interpretation. Soviet Russia is not in a position to accept large numbers of workers. The industries are not yet working in such order that workers of capitalist countries who depend on the use of machinery and are accustomed to a different mode of life, can easily be utilized.

Revolution is revolution. The Russian Revolution has had to suffer as all revolutions suffer—but only to a higher degree. Not only did Soviet Russia have to fight for four years against every kind of counter-revolutionary plot, hand and army, fitted out and maintained by the capitalist governments; not only did Soviet Russia have to suffer the hell of the blockade and of the famine; not only were factories and mines destroyed by the "civilized," "Christian" hordes of the counter-revolutionaries; but worst of all, the Proletarian Revolution was sabotaged by the intelligentsia—by the technicians and experts who were highly necessary for the reconstruction of Russia on the new basis. The economic blockade which still exists, and which prevents Soviet Russia from procuring the necessary quantities of goods, particularly machinery, which she needs in order to build up economic life, is the last link in the chain of horrors thru which the capitalist governments, including America, have endeavored to throttle the young Workers' Republic.

The resolution passed by the Fourth Congress of the Third International is of considerable significance to American workers. Up to the present, there has been a great deal of confusion on the question of emigration to Soviet Russia. Large numbers of workers have been filled with the idea that, despite the adverse conditions under which Soviet Russia is trying to rebuild her industries, unlimited numbers of workers in other countries who are disgusted with capitalist exploitation and seek freedom from it, may emigrate to Russia. This is especially true since the inauguration of the Kuzbas venture. Not only was the truth about conditions not told, but little care was taken in the selection of the proper workers. The result has been, according to information, that Kuzbas has not succeeded and will have to be put on an entirely different basis.

These should have been self-evident truths to any student of revolution and of the primitive industrial conditions existing in Soviet Russia. The recent convention of the Workers Party was the first to take cognizance of the actual conditions and to pass a resolution against mass emigration.

The resolution of the Fourth Congress indicates clearly not only that mass emigration and propaganda for mass emigration must cease, but also that technicians, skilled mechanics and experts should be sent over only upon previous agreement with the Russian trade unions, which occupy a very high place in the Soviet Government and kept know the economic needs of the industries and of the country.

Moscow Art Theater Wins Right to Live

By JOHN DALE

The production of Maxim Gorky's "The Lower Depths" wins for the Moscow Art Theater the right to live thru the years ahead when Soviet Russia will gradually move forward into complete Communism.

One can readily understand how real art spans revolutions, living from one social system to the next, when witnessing the profoundly realistic work of the Moscow Players, at Jolson's 59th St. Theater, in the offering of their second week here.

Gorky has had his little troubles under the rule of the Workers' Republic. He has had his little faults to find with the Soviet Regime. But the Russian Communists have always been charitable with him, as one of Russia's greatest living artists.

Gorky thru the written word, and the Moscow Art Theater thru the medium of the stage, will make this dress section of the life of Russia's submerged under czarism live for all time. And that is the only way that this ghastly picture of human misery and degradation will live on as a memory—for the bright light of Communism, shining stronger and ever stronger over Gorky's Russia of black places and sunken humans, heralds the new day of happiness and good things for all, that czars, capitalists and church dignitaries claimed "can never be".

Altho the Moscow Players passed thru three centuries from the time of their first play, "Tsar Fyodor Ivanovitch", to the period depicted in "The Lower Depths", we, nevertheless, get a repetition of that ensemble acting that keeps one constantly and intensely interested in all the actors upon the stage. This is especially true in the opening scene, where we get acquainted with the habitues of the cellar-dive of a "Night Lodging" in the slums of a city in the Russia that is gone. It is repeated in the chaotic struggle of these human rats called into "The Lower Depths" by the interlocked backyard of "The Night Lodging" by the inviting warm spring sunshine. One of its greatest effects is produced by the dice duel with its shouting and card playing and then as these victims of the downward pull in the human whirlpool chant a low song, an absolutely gloomy affair in character, as "The Baron" rushes in to announce that the discarded, vodka-saturated "actor" has hanged himself.

It is a prisoners' song. Only one song, Soulitzer Wechsler's "Zachodit" (The Rising and the Setting of the Sun), a favorite among the political victims of Russian czarism, that is shunned at this time and that these sacrifices to life's undertow, chained to their environment. The broken "actor" leaves this environment by the route he escapes death.

Those meek qualities that made Ivan Moskvin appear as a weak, vascillating "Tsar Fyodor" last week, now has strength and character as Luka, the Russian pilgrim, who brings his inspiring philosophy into this refuge of the damned. He ministers to the last moments of the consumptive wife of the locksmith, an honest worker who feels his failure keenly.

One of the two directors of the Moscow Players, Constantin Stanislavsky, helps interpret Gorky's philosophy of life as Satine, the cynical derelict, once an intellectual with some education. It was Satine that came to the defense of Luka in the last act, after the Pilgrim had disappeared with the challenge to his fellow-inmates, "He understood man—you don't".

Georgi Burdzhaloff approaches the uncanny as the keeper of the "Night Lodging" while Raisa Shevtchenko, as his wife, Vassilisa, in her sleekness, provides a contrast with her sister, Natasha, to these other prisoners of this underworld. The chief feminine role, however, falls to Olga Knipper-Tchekhova, as Nastya, the painted, cigarette-smoking, novel-reading prostitute, who has known better days, and now finds an escape from her revolting surroundings by imagining herself the heroine of romantic stories that warped her bewildered brain. She was at all times effective. We will not forget Vassily Katchaloff, as "the baron", for many a day, especially for such moments as the one when he is caught, in a fleeting reflection, trying to polish his finger nails in memory of the days of refinement, almost completely forgotten.

The scenic effects of the play and the costuming of these wrecks in human form leave nothing to be desired.

The spontaneous and prolonged outburst of enthusiasm, from an appreciative audience, that greeted the players as the final curtain fell, was a fitting tribute to a great task well done.

Join in Demand that Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, Free Jacob Dolla from State Penitentiary

Furthermore, since Dolla's imprisonment Wittman has admitted that he lied in testifying against him at the trial. Wittman is widely known as an international scab and professional witness in labor trials.

The evidence of Dolla's innocence is overwhelming. All in all, he has no less than 39 affidavits and two sworn statements, one from the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Co. and one from Dr. John Light of Lebanon, to contravert the perjured testimony of Mumford, Sohn, Dissinger and Wittman.

Responsibility for the crime lies squarely on the shoulders of the Steel Trust, whose paid agent, a certain John Aldridge, labored all thru the strike to induce the men to commit some act of violence and later helped Dissinger steal the dynamite which was used in making the bombs. The lawyers of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and the Lebanon Iron Company admit that Aldrige was a company spy, planted among the strikers to help bring about their defeat.

Aldridge, who was a stranger in Lebanon, succeeded in gaining admission to the union by playing upon the sympathies of the workers; he won the confidence of the members in general and even managed to have himself elected trustee. After he was made trustee he began to urge all sorts of acts of violence against the company, against the scabs and against the state police. He was profuse in suggestions, outlining various detailed plans. Finally, his persistent agitation bore its inevitable fruit, and Dissinger, Sohn and Mumford were drawn into a bomb plot.

It was this company spy who explained where the dynamite could be obtained and it was he who directed the actual theft of it. Moreover, according to Mumford's testimony, Aldrige was present when the conspirators rehearsed the technical processes of exploding the bombs. Not only was he the instigator of the crime, but he was a direct accessory to it. Nevertheless, he has not been indicted and no effort has been made to arrest him.

The explosions occurred on September 28, 1919. On Oct. 5, Jake Dolla was arrested. Everybody in town knew that Dolla had been the principal rallying center for all the foreign born workers in the strike and that he had been threatened time and again with punishment if he did not cease his activities. It was common talk in Lebanon that the Steel Trust had at last laid hands on their man.

After undergoing a gruelling third degree by the state police, Dolla was put into a cell and allowed to go to sleep—only to be awakened a howling night and turned over to private Pinkerton detectives for further treatment. Horrible brutalities, both physical and mental, were visited upon him. The Pinkertons threatened to shoot him if he would not sign the confession they had prepared for him. They told him there was a howling mob outside the jail waiting to lynch him and that unless he signed the confession they would let the mob take him. These private detectives, in the pay of the company, were allowed to have their way with him for two hours. Then he was thrown back into his cell.

During the 67 days when he was awaiting trial Dolla was not permitted to leave or have his case out on bail. Time after time he was taken to Solve, Dissinger, Mumford or Miller. The reader will of course understand the reason for this extraordinary persecution. For instance, in court he looked like a wild man. Who would be expected to believe this hairy ape in preference to his neat and well groomed accusers penitently who confessed their guilt and were sorry for it?

The malignant power of the Steel Trust showed itself at every point in the proceedings. Dolla's wife and mother were not allowed to be present at the preliminary hearing. His witnesses were chased away by the state police and told to stay away if they knew what was good for them. The capitalists hired a large staff of special attorneys to assist the prosecution, but when Dolla's wife tried to secure a lawyer for him she found all doors mysteriously closed against her. Finally two law partners agreed to take the case, demanding $1,000 for their services, all the money that Dolla possessed.

From the very beginning Dolla's lawyers acted queerly. In spite of the fact that there was no evidence against Dolla except the lies of Wittman and the self-confessed dynamiters, which was contradicted by scores of witnesses eager to testify in his behalf, they refused to present a case in defense. Instead, they seemed sure that his case was hopeless and that the only solution was for him to plead guilty. They even insisted that his witnesses should not testify at the trial, on the ground that it would prejudice their judge against him. When Dolla resisted their entreaties they began to work on his wife, telling her that a plea of guilty was the only thing that could save him from a 20-year sentence; they brought his wife and children crying to his cell to beg him to follow their advice. He was told that if he signed certain papers the lawyers could get him out of the whole mess.

Upon being assured that he would not have to say anything in open court, he signed the papers, which were hurriedly taken away from him before he had time to read them. They proved to be pleas of guilty to all of the charges against him, including the explosion that never occurred. The judge sentenced him to from 11 to 22 years in the Eastern Penitentiary of Pennsylvania. Mumford was given 5 to 11 years, Miller 3 to 5 years, and Sohn and Dissinger 2 to 4 years. All except Dolla are now free.

One of the most remarkable things about the case of Jake Dolla is the indomitable spirit of the man. With little hope of relief from the outside, knowing that powerful forces have been at work to prevent news of the case from leaking out, he has remained strong in the conviction that some day he will be vindicated. He has not squealed or backed down. During the three years of his imprisonment his loyalty to the cause of labor has never wavered. His ruling passion is to resume his place in the front rank of militant workers who are struggling to throw off the yoke of capitalism.

An irresistible campaign should be started, which will not cease until Jake Dolla is set free. Thru the efforts of some of Dolla's friends in Lebanon, a few outstanding labor leaders have already interested themselves in the case, which has been thorofy investigated:

James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor; Clinton Golden, of the Machinists' Union; and William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League are furnishing active assistance to Dolla. John Fitzpatrick and E. N. Nockels of the Chicago Federation of Labor are also interested.

Unless a pardon can be obtained Dolla will have to spend another nine or perhaps 14 years in jail. A pardon must be secured at all costs. Jake Dolla must be freed. Only the working class can bring the necessary amount of pressure to bear!

We are informed that Dolla is very anxious to get some good books in English. Surely some of our readers will be glad to come to his assistance in this respect. Send all literature to Jacob Dolla, Penitentiary of Eastern Pennsylvania. Books on the labor movement will be especially welcomed.

Language No Real Bar to World Labor

By ANNA LOUISE STRONG
Staff Correspondent, Federated Press
and The Worker

MOSCOW, SOVIET RUSSIA.—(Delayed in the Mails.)—It's a hard job for the workers of the world to understand each other. We sit here in a wonderful hall, the Labor Temple of Moscow, once a nobleman's club. Under the chandeliers of crystal and between the pillars of marble, from a great platform decorated with welcoming banners of red—the speakers hurl at us their remarks in Russian, and German and French, and, occasionally English. We are at the congress of the Red International of Labor Unions.

I should hate to be one of the speakers. For one fourth of his audience listens to him, while all the rest is round at tables, contentedly reading pamphlets or holding whispered discussions, or strolling out to the refreshment hall to get a glass of tea. They couldn't understand him, anyway, so they don't even pretend to listen.

Then suddenly he is thru perhaps a bell tinkles, or somebody calls "translations" and every language group crowds around its own central tables, and hears what the speaker has just said. You hear the French group crowds around its own central group applauding, and then perhaps the English translation is finished, and the delegates settle back in their chairs and the next speaker starts.

Sometimes it is even more complicated. For there are 42 nations represented, from all parts of the world, and some of the delegates cannot even speak any of the four official languages of the convention. So a Chinese makes his talk, and it is translated into Russian, and afterwards from Russian into the other languages. Or an Arab brings a message from the Arabian Workers, and an English comrade translates him; or a Persian tells of the 15,000 Persian workers recently organized, and is translated first into French, and then into the other languages.

And then just when you are saying to yourself: "My God, how can this vast conglomerate bunch of workers, with such sundering traditions, ever understand each other thru the wearisome mechanism of a four-fold language. How can they ever act together, or go forward together?"—just then something dramatic happens.

"Comrade!" says the chairman, Lozovsky, who speaks three languages himself, and is learning the fourth, "two Turkish delegates have arrived. They were seized en route by the Kemalist police, but they have overpowered their guards and escaped to join us. They will now tell us of the labor unions of Turkey."

Applause breaks out over the hall and everybody listens intently while the tale makes its way from Turkish thru French into other languages. Labor unions are illegal in Turkey, they inform us. Yet they have organized 22,000 members in the past four months, 10,000 of them miners, and all of them affiliated to the Red International. Three hundred have just been jailed for belonging to unions; they ask us to send a protest to the Angora government. And they close: "Long live the international union of workers!"

Incidents like this occur constantly. Yes, they understand each other. In spite of the brains wearied under the hammer of four languages; in spite of differences of color and racial tradition; they all come from groups of workers organized to fight exploitation and to achieve control of their own destiny. There is, perhaps, no group in the world that represents so many nations, or whose members understand each other so well.

Needle Trades Amalgamation—Two Plans

By PHILLIP KURINSKY

Amalgamation is now becoming the most burning question among the needle workers. The leaders of the needle trade unions, some voluntarily, others by force, must talk about this question. They must discuss it because among the rank and file the consciousness for amalgamation and this is the reason that the word "Amalgamation" has become so prominent, and swam to the surface of the order of business of the needle trade union organizations.

It is, therefore, necessary that the question of Amalgamation be thorely discussed. We must analyze fundamentally the various plans that are set forth in order to bring about Amalgamation in the needle trade unions, otherwise, it seems to us, that from out of the whole mess of plans, a sickly, freakish thing may spring.

There are two main viewpoints advanced.

One says, "We want Amalgamation—but on condition that every needle trade union be autonomous and shall be permitted to carry on, by itself, its own convention, have its own treasury, its own general executive board, carry on its own strikes and so on.

The second viewpoint sets no conditions. Without a single proviso it states: "We want one big union of all the needle trade unions—one big union under one leadership, under one general executive board, with one treasury and so on."

One naturally asks himself which is better? The first or the second plan?

Let us earnestly consider the main arguments of both viewpoints and we will arrive at a decision.

The main argument of the faction which desires Amalgamation with autonomy is as follows: "We want such amalgamation as will in the best way guard the interests of each division of the trade, for if the interests of the cloakmakers or furriers, for example, cannot be taken care of as they deserve, why do we want amalgamation at all?

The best way to guarantee the welfare of each division is to permit each union absolute autonomy, in every matter concerning its particular trade; but at the same time all the needle trade unions should be united for mutual aid and for certain occasions, but at all times, the plan of amalgamation must be so worked out as not to have one union swallow another—in such a way that its name shall not be forgotten, nor that it may sink into oblivion.

This, we want to say here, is the type of amalgamation as brought forward in the Capmakers Union. Schlesinger of the International may not even accept this plan, but this does not change the fact that such a plan is a limited one and does not go beyond the lines above described. It is a kind of old-fashioned departmental industrialism with modern conveniences, such as even Old Sam Gompers could not but help favor—and he does. IT IS FEDERATION, NOT AMALGAMATION.

Now we will see what are the arguments of that faction which is for an absolute close unity—for the whole needle industry, without a single if or but.

Firstly, that the whole plan of amalgamation is for the purpose of opposing one, strong, solid, united front to the employers—to show such a united strength, that the bosses should virtually fear to come out in opposition, and if they do oppose, they should know that they will meet a solid, united mass, instead of an isolated group. If this is accomplished, it will mean the good and welfare of every section of the needle trade, not alone of one particular division.

The organization must, in practical life, show itself to be the defender, not alone of one group, or trade, but of the whole industry.

Now, we ask, how can this be accomplished, if as the first faction claims, each union will be fortified with autonomy and will handle all matters concerning its special needs alone? And how about the many and varied interpretations of each union's special rights, aside from this guaranteed autonomy, when the occasions arise?

Autonomy means that each union will be able to make its own arrangements with the bosses, separate contracts and on separate conditions. These contracts will tie the workers' hand and foot, and those unions, where even an amalgamation is in force, will be unable to give any aid except that of perhaps a few dollars, and that, one must admit, is being done even at the present time. Of course, under autonomous amalgamation it is possible that the aid given will be greater financially.

The most important thing of all—that of presenting a united front to the employers' assaults—will be impossible, and the same guerilla warfare will again have to be waged, the same vain energy will again have to be expended.

Let us return again to the possible financial aid. Even that will be limited. There will be bargaining. The separate unions will point out the extent of the strike, the number of strikers; they will take into consideration the size of the union—whether great or small, and the extent of the aid given will be governed by the size of the combined fund gathered from the amalgamated unions. Why? Because after all, it will still continue to mean: someone else's business, some one else's troubles, not our own. The bosses will understand this well and their arrogance will not be diminished one iota.

Autonomy means that in case of a strike the shop will not act as a unit, but each trade will have to act as a separate division. For instance, let us examine a shop where there is being made both men's and women's wear, as has recently been begun in the shops of Hart, Schaffner and Marx in Chicago. Let us suppose a strike here of one department—that is the women's wear workers. The workers of the other department may say, if they please, "This is none of our affair" and let us assure you, they would not, in such case, be violating the principle of autonomous amalgamation.

This sort of amalgamation, too, will not in the least, lighten the woeful burden of taxation which the worker now bears.

Perhaps it will save somewhat here and there, but owing to the separate conditions, the separate general executive boards, and the separate staffs of clerks, there will again be the condition existing today, as we see in the International—the disbursements greater than the income; instead of having something in its treasury it is deeply indebted; and the members are therefore loaded down with new and greater taxes.

It would, however, be entirely different under ONE UNION. Due to the amalgamation, the per capita tax, assessed now going into separate treasuries, would go into one central treasury, constituting one huge fund. The cost of maintaining so many separate treasuries and assistants would be eliminated. Imagine, if you can, just ONE CONVENTION. This one item alone, would multiply the union treasury at least five times, for it would mean the elimination of at least five separate conventions held by the different trades at present.

Thus, by amalgamating the treasuries, the general organization expenses and having but one convention, the ONE NEEDLES TRADE UNION would increase income and decrease expense—in fact, it would be possible to reduce the amount of tax on each union member and still have money in the treasury instead of a constant and annually increasing deficit.

Aside from this, we must keep in mind that the bosses would not dare to provoke the number of strikes they do now. Knowing, for instance, that the needle workers have a treasury of $50,000,000, for instance, adding to this the great, class-conscious army of workers, the bosses would certainly hesitate long before attempting to play with strikes as they do today.

There is no question, in that event, that the workers would not fear the threat of a lock-out on the morrow. They could face the future with supreme confidence.

Now let us examine the statements made by some that there would be confusion in the trade if we had absolute amalgamation; that it would be hard to control such a huge mass; and that it would lead to the neglect of certain trades. This is obviously an absurdity. It is just as if a banker were to say, "Let's not take in so much money. We may not be able to keep our accounts straight. We may even go bankrupt." Morgan and Co. will not say this. What would you think of the Standard Oil Company if it were to say that it must stop swallowing any more oil companies because it feared it could not control them? No, the Standard Oil does not say that at all. What might happen, and undoubtedly would, is this: The directorate would say to its paid officers running the amalgamated whole, "If you do not feel capable of controlling such a vast enterprise, resign! There are others who are capable and willing to do so."

The same thing may be said to any union president who does not feel capable of standing at the head of such a huge working enterprise as the ONE UNION.

If those who fear amalgamation because of the possible neglect of certain trades would follow out their natural consequence of their reasoning, they should not only demand no amalgamation, but even a further division of the trades than exists at present.

This, however, is nonsense. We all must have amalgamation, but REAL AMALGAMATION. The development in the needle industry is ripe for it. Modern machinery has brought about the same revolution in this industry as in all others. The process of the division of labor is developing in this, in the same way as in other industries. The bosses here are organized just as strongly, and are becoming just as arrogant, and as stubborn and embittered in the struggle, and whether we will or no, they are driving us to real amalgamation. We must, however, be on guard not to permit the beclouding of the issue of amalgamation with the destructive force of autonomy—nor to permit the dilution of the pure acid of amalgamation with the water of self determination.

Communism Is Taught Sailors in the Red Naval Academies of Soviet Russia

Communist delegates—you are our guests." When this was interpreted to me, I protested—I did not want to be under false colors.

"I am no delegate," I said. "I'm only a poor journalist, alas!"

The stout Welshman interpreted, and then obviously added something on his own account. The officers turned to me, smiling, shook hands, and gently pressed me into a seat.

"What did you say to them?" I asked the Welshman, accusingly.

"I just told them what you said; and then added that you'd been in all three years for the Cause," said this most unreliable and conspiratorial interpreter. So, if I gained nothing else by doing time, at least I got a seat at the opera.

During the next entr'acte a young naval officer was brought to our loge. He was introduced to us as the commander of a naval academy. He was thirty years old, and was in charge of some two thousand cadets. Tall and thin, with a lean dark face, he was active, keen and poised. He had been a sailor of the Czar's fleet when the Revolution came. Now he was barrie glow of Prince Igor, we were inducted into the modern miracle of a revolutionary navy.

In the morning, our Commander turned up on the second of the boats we didn't. Some of us had been allgned into a walk down that great avenue that used to be called the Nevsky Prospekt, but which had been renamed the 25th of October Prospekt, this date being the equivalent, in the old Russian calendar, of November 7th. And as we drifted in, in twos and threes, only about half an hour late, thus disproving, at the first opportunity, the statement we had so often heard in England and America—that Russians were frightfully unpunctual, and that we Business-like Anglo-Saxons were the only persons who ever kept appointments.

First we went to the museum, the Naval Museum, I hate museums and must confess that, when I heard we were going to one, I was inclined to balk. But I am glad I went; for, although I hate museums, I love ships—and there were hundreds of models of ships in this museum. There were Viking galleys and fat, heavy galleons, and lumbering wooden frigates and perky clippers—every kind of ship that had ever sailed the seas, and even some that never had; grotesque inventions that sank as soon as launched, a completely circular steamer, for example, which was designed by the order of some whimsical Czar, whose knowledge of marine architecture, probably, was only equalled by his knowledge of all other subjects.

The whole ground floor of the museum dealt with the pre-revolutionary period. On the second floor they were beginning their collection of revolutionary exhibits. Only one section of the immense corridor was in use. There were flags, the flags of ships which had fought for the Revolution, the Black Flag, and the ships which left Helsingfors which was in the hands of the Whites, and sailed round to Cronstadt to fire their guns over the cowering orators in the Duma—a journey of over two weeks thru a sea which was partly ice—a heroic and almost impossible voyage, a journey of proletarian Argonauts seeking the treasure of freedom thru perilous seas. Torn flags, stained and bullet-pierced flags of red, hanging upon the walls over the photographs of sailors who had died, leading their comrades in the fight, the warrior agitators of the revolutionary fleet.

The Commander—we called him the Commander, not because it was his rank, but as a sort of affectionate nick-name; he was so young and boyishly keen and even naif, with all his responsibility—led us to a ship which lay moored alongside the Neva quay. We did not board this ship, however; the Commander cautioned us not to stray while he went aboard and spoke with the Commissar of the Fleet, to secure permission for us to visit a torpedo boat, a destroyer and a submarine.

He soon returned, and we started for the destroyer. But we went very slowly. One of our number, a Belgian, had a wounded foot; and, at every few steps, the Commander would ask us to go slowly so that our lame comrade could catch up with us. But, after he had made this kindly request about five times, I glanced round and there was our limping comrade, the Belgian, at the head of the party, striding ahead with the best of us. So why should we go slowly? I asked myself. I was not lame, I was not wounded, I was not old, I was not fat. I was in a big hurry. Another second after him, followed by a shouting rabble of sailors, and the rest of the party, including the Commander, came at a run after us.

Marvel of organization! Who said the Russians couldn't organize things, that they weren't efficient, that they were slow? It took us about seven minutes to walk from the one ship to the other, and, when we arrived, there was the whole ship's company lined up on deck, with the officers standing at the gangway at salute, and the band striking up the International—and I am quite sure I failed; and I know that I was exalted. We were introduced to the officers, were led down past the long line of sailors. The band stopped; we stood there bare-headed and received the welcome of the Red Sailors.

"Three cheers for the Communist International!" cried the Commander. And we waved our cosmopolitan hats, and the sailors cheered. Then we were led up to the bridge, and the Commander explained the ship to us. Then came the engine-room, and we passed the good word along in English. Then we replied. Then came a German greeting, and I passed the good word along in English. Then we replied. Then came a German greeting, and I passed the good word along in English. Then we replied. Then came a German greeting, and I

John and Salome in Real Life

Wisconsin "Socialists" Say La Follette Prepares Way for Berger's Election; Similar Situation Shows How the "Progressives" Fall into Laps of Reactionaries in Crisis.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

The movies are featuring Oscar Wilde's version of "Salome." The "Socialists" have evidently taken upon themselves the job of transferring this Egyptian tragedy to real life, not "reel life."

This becomes rather apparent to us in perusing the enthusiastic reports in the "Socialist" New York Call of the frantic efforts of the Wisconsin "Socialist" Salome to inveigle into her meshes the republican "John the Baptist" in the form of the La Follette group in the Wisconsin legislature.

It will be remembered that Salome pleaded long for a kiss from John the Baptist, in prison. Now the Wisconsin Socialists have thrown their support in the state legislature to the La Follette-Blaine program for the organization of both houses. They did this on the ground, as announced by "Socialist" Senator Hirsch and Socialist Assemblyman Duncan, former secretary to "Socialist" Mayor Hoan, of Milwaukee, that "the La Follette group is solemnly pledged to prepare the economic way for the successful inauguration of the Socialist society.

"The mission of the La Follette group," they say, "is to act as a John the Baptist, to prepare the way for Socialism. The La Follette legislative conference in Washington, the Socialist-Farmer-Labor-Nonpartisan Conference, at Cleveland, were John the Baptist groups."

We do not know who wrote that statement for the Wisconsin "Socialist" legislators. But this political "Salome," with well-developed desires for political power and prestige, surely expects much from this kiss of preferment from the La Follette "John the Baptist."—in fact, nothing less than paving the way for the Socialist Society so that the Bergers and the Hoans may step right into the new kingdom, even as Salome would probably enter the Kingdom of Heaven on the lips of the real John the Baptist.

But La Follette showed "at Washington, and his hired man, Keating, showed at Cleveland, that this republican outfit is the sworn foe of revolutionary Socialism. The question then arises, what will "Socialist" Salome do when the La Follette John the Baptist refuses the kiss, when he refuses to prepare the way for Socialism. If the Berger "Socialists" are true to their Salome role, they will stick with the La Follette John, even if they must have him beheaded and steal the kiss from the helpless lips chilled in death.

That is the way the "Socialists" in other countries are maintaining their affiliation with so-called middle-class liberal elements.

The Cuno-Stinnes capitalist regime in Germany witnesses the death and decay of the Social-Democracy and liberalism in the war with Communism. Mussolini, the royalist-militarist dictator in Italy, sneers at Socialist reformism and timid liberalism alike, as he rallies his forces against the Communists.

So also in Wisconsin. The "isms" of La Follette and Berger will go to a common grave. But even as Herod had the voluptuous Salome slain, so the workers in this country will leave the American "Socialist" Salome dead upon the political battlefields of this country, by deserting the party that looks to a confused, wilderness-wandering section of the Wall Street republican party to open the way for the social revolution.

These workers, guided by the dawning light of reason, will more and more turn to Communism, just as they are doing in every other land, to Communism, that definitely draws the class line between them and those who exploit and rob them.

We can see the finish of the American Socialist Party in the John the Baptist-Salome drama as enacted in real life in the Wisconsin state legislature.

It Is Futile to Lament

We are now hearing considerable lamenting from Minnesota where the Farmer-Labor Party elected a United States senator, and where the "progressives" thought they had won control of both the houses of the state legislature.

But when the hour came for organizing the two houses of the legislature, the "supposed liberals" in the old parties were found in the laps of the reactionaries, putting these conservatives in absolute power.

Even "alleged labor men" elected by the old parties from the three cities of St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth, cast their ballots for Nolan as speaker altho they knew he was the candidate of the "Steel Trust," the public utility interests and other great corporations that rule in Minnesota as everywhere else.

This should only result in further solidifying the ranks of Minnesota labor back of independent political action and against trying to capture old party primaries, or picking friends among the candidates of the democratic and republican parties.

It is futile to lament. Workers have no time for regrets. Just as soon as labor discovers its enemies it should repudiate them. Labor in Minnesota has learned, fully and thoroly, that the elected candidates of the two Wall Street parties are the enemies of the workers. Minnesota labor must now know that it can depend only upon its own independent class organization. Labor thruout the land will also learn that lesson in the very near future thru experiences similar to those Minnesota labor has gone thru.

On Page 2, of the financial section, Jan. 14, the New York Times tells us that the "1922 STOCK MELONS TOTAL $1,484,107,719," while on Page 1 of the special features' section, we are told that "TAX-FREE STOCK DIVIDENDS TOPPED $2,000,000,000 IN 1922," the exact figures being $2,149,151,425. It begins to look as if the big profiteers were trying to hide the loot they managed to accumulate during the year of the open shop drive, great unemployment and extreme misery among the workers. The first report is by Dow, Jones & Co., the Wall Street brokers, the second by the U. S. Federal Trade Commission. That may account for the discrepancy, in part.

Charles M. Schwab told the members of the New York State Bankers' Association that it would be a good thing economically if every steel company in the land were grouped under one head. Yes, it would be a good thing for the profiteers now, and it will be a good thing for the workers when they get complete control over the steel industry.

The New York Court of Appeals has fallen into step with British courts in ruling that the Russian Soviet government cannot be sued. Once in a while some good results from this country aping England. Still England is several laps ahead of the United States in developing trade relations with the Workers' Republic.

The New York paper that carried the biggest headlines recently again heralding the "new illness" and probable death of Nikolai Lenin was the Jewish "Socialist" Daily Forward, patron angel of the English-language "Socialist" daily, "The Call." Litvinoff, at Moscow, is the latest Soviet official to deny "this nonsense."

Now the bankers are planning for a super-dictator after the fashion of the movies, baseball, the theater and the dreamasking industry. No doubt his first discovery will be that working men and women are getting too much interest on their meager savings accounts. Anything to save the poor bankers.

Great fear has been aroused in the heart of the editor of the St. Louis, Mo., Globe-Democrat, as he sees that "Russia had definitely decided to establish the United States of the World." The editor pleads with the Russians to follow the United States of America. But in doing that he shows that he doesn't know the Russians.

Dr. Semashko, Soviet Commissar of Health, at Geneva, Switzerland, gives the latest interpretation of conditions in Soviet Russia in the following words: "Agriculture is slowly reviving, industry shows a little betterment and life in the towns is improving."

Divorce Problem Treated in Equity Players' Play, "Why Not?" by Williams

Divorce is justified in the comedy of conventions, "Why Not?" by Jesse Lynch Williams, the offering of the Equity Players at the 48th St. Theater, the third of its season.

This is the first play built around a social problem that the actors have attempted in their own theater. It is hoped that it is the herald of greater efforts in the same direction.

When Joseph Medill Patterson, now one of the Editors of the Chicago Tribune, was a "Socialist," a decade and a half ago he wrote a play called "Divorce" that found quite a response. The result was that the Catholic Church had a play produced in reply to Patterson's effort.

Since Williams writes in a humorous vein, and one is not compelled to be more serious than one desires, the church has not yet challenged "Why Not?" altho there is a constant clash between the Presbyterian and Episcopalian faiths. Finally, the church is turned down completely and all marrying is done by "The Mayor."

One of the high spots in the play comes when it is discovered that the Episcopalian Church will only remarry the innocent victim of a matrimonial sin. The husband declares, "I will not be driven into sin, even by the church," altho he is very anxious to enable his wife to get a divorce so that she may re-marry. In fact, the play concerns two couples who jointly decide they are mismated and determine to "change partners." There are a daughter and son involved, but even they approve of the change, and at the happy ending the only disturbed mind is in the head of a lawyer who repeatedly claimed "it couldn't be done."

While some of the stars that scintillated thru the earlier productions of the Equity Players are missing, others of equal merit take their places. Tom Powers is seen again to great advantage with an able cast supporting him.

Karl Liebknecht

They feared him.
Because he was the lion's offspring.
Because he was Spartacus arisen,
Because he led the slaves to revolt.
They murdered him.
Because we loved him.
Karl Liebknecht's blood on the ground,
His blood on their hands,
Our curse on their heads.
Our tears for Karl Liebknecht.

He arose single-handed against their crimes,
He asked them disconcerting questions,
His words struck on our hearts,
And we went towards him.
Therefore they murdered him—
Because they feared his voice,
Because he was the lion's offspring,
Because he was Spartacus arisen,
Because he led the slaves to revolt.

A Martyr for Russia

By MAX SCHACHTMAN

Among the regiments sent over by Woodrow Wilson on his illegal imperialist filibuster to Siberia was the 149th Infantry, stationed at the Philippine Islands. Anton Karpovitch, a native of New York State, was a member of a machine gun company in this regiment.

While in Vladivostok, he realized that his fighting against the forces of the first workers' republic was not in accord with his working class feelings. One night he disappeared in the hills with a machine gun, munitions and as much equipment as he could carry. He immediately joined the Soviet forces and soon rose to prominence by his brilliant activity in drilling recruits, and taking part in many skirmishes and battles, not only against Kolchakists but against the troops of the Allied interventionists.

During one of the major engagements, he re-entered Vladivostok at the head of a regiment. He was captured and turned over to the American command. After a drumhead court martial, he was sentenced to die and was faced to dig his own grave. His sentence was, however, commuted in time and Karachyn was returned to this country.

The case was appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court, which passed the buck to the U. S. District Court. It evidently feared to pass on the case which would have involved the legality of the presence of troops in a country against which Congress had not declared war.

Now, Karachyn is serving a sentence of from 10 to 20 years in one of the worst military penitentiaries in the country, Fort McNeil's Island.

And the workers of this country, who should have been aroused by this remarkable example of international class solidarity, are doing absolutely nothing to effect his release.

Lerner Finds Spirit of Fine Solidarity Among Isolated Granite Cutters

By MAX LERNER
(Special to "The Worker")

Lanesville, Mass.—There is an excellent spirit prevailing among the workers of Lanesville, the spirit that helped keep up the granite workers' fight for nine long months—nine long months during which the four crafts working in the local granite industry stuck together as one.

I spoke on the subject for which I was scheduled, "The New Unionism." If what I said was new to the granite workers of Lapesville in theory it was certainly not a new thing to them in practice, for they had been working along that line for four months. Isolated as Lanesville may be, way off on Cape Anne, near Gloucester, it had caught the spirit of solidarity, of the united front which is really the essence of "The New Unionism."

The four quarry men's crafts, the Engineers', the Paving Cutters', the Stone Cutters', and the Quarry Workers' Unions had fought it along together. One craft refused to go to work while the other craft was out—it had refused to work with scabs.

All the crafts felt that their interests were alike and that it was the duty of each of them to help along their brothers in the struggle even tho it meant a loss to them in so much wages or in a better agreement or settlement than he rest.

In this nine months' struggle our comrades of the Workers Party have conducted themselves in such fashion that they have proven to their brothers in arms that we are sincere when we talk about the solidarity of labor, when we urge our members to get into the fight and do their utmost to strengthen the unions, and to promote the united front.

Our comrades in the Finnish branch, tho but few of them can speak English well have caught the spirit of our industrial program. They are in the union doing all they can. They have supported this strike with all their enthusiasm and have not hesitated to do any work no matter how hard, to contribute their mite to help win the fight. Lanesville is a bright spot, small as it is, both in the labor movement and in the Workers Party. Its example certainly serves to revive jaded enthusiasm.

GALION, O.—Bishop William Montgomery Brown, of the Episcopal church, whose communist opinions have made him unpopular with his brethren in the house of bishops, admits that he holds heretical opinions. But he will not leave the church unless it goes on record against a heretical naturalistic interpretation of the Bible and in favor of an orthodox supernaturalistic one. Some of the brethren have been conducting a whispering campaign against Brown's sanity.

The Problem of the Hour Is the Coming LABOR PARTY

A political party for Labor looms on the horizon. Its advent is foretold in the wild scramble of anti-labor forces to prevent its formation; and the frantic efforts of labor's mis-leaders in the ranks of organized labor to prevent the unity of ALL workers in a mass political movement capable of interpreting Labor's interests and making the WORKERS a factor in American government.

"For A Labor Party"

States the attitude of progressive labor upon the question of the formation of such a party.

Is this pamphlet is contained the first schemtic study of the conditions which make potaible the organization of a Labor Party in the United States today.

Do you know:

The history of the Greenback Party?
Why the Greenback Party, the Knights of Labor and the Populist Party failed?
Do you know the changes that have taken place in the Government of the United States each time it has gone to war?
Do you know what has happened in regard to centralization of the government since the last war?
What effects has the war and the period since had upon the working class?
Why are the conditions ripe for the organization of a Labor Party?
Why will a Labor Party succeed, whereas all but one of the third parties of the past failed.
What similarity in regard to its economic foundation will there be between the Labor Party and the Republican Party at the time of its birth?

The Murders at Mer Rouge

Murder is an ugly thing. Bourgeois society professes to be horrified at it. The present bourgeois order is so outraged by murder that it commits murder to punish murderers. But when the capitalist state, thru hanging, shooting, the electric chair, and now by the proposed "lethal chamber," commits murder, it is accepted as one of the justifiable functions of capitalist society.

The bourgeois press now professes to be very much disturbed over the fact that the Ku Klux Klan, as shown in the revealing murder trial at Mer Rouge, La., assumed some of the functions of state. It set up laws of its own, deported its victims or subjected them to savage tortures until dead.

It was a self-righteous Governor Parker that hurried to Washington to present the distressing circumstances to President Harding and Attorney General Daugherty who decided it was a "state matter" and that the federal government could not act. Thus the state prosecutions.

THE WORKER has fought the Ku Klux Klan at every opportunity. We have pointed out that, at the proper time, the Ku Kluxers, with the American Legionnaires and other jingo organizations, will become the American Fascisti against America's organized workers.

BUT WE SAY THAT THE COURT ATTACK ON THE KU KLUX KLAN, AT MER ROUGE, LA., IS A LUSCIOUS BIT OF BOURGEOIS HYPOCRISY.

What does Governor Parker have to say about the brutal exploitation of black and white labor in the lumber and sugar camps of Louisiana. Nothing. Yet every uprising of these workers has been crushed and drowned in its bath of blood. Parker is from one of the states that make up "The Solid South", where most lynchings of Negroes take place. Yet about the same time that Parker was in Washington, the democratic and republican "statesmen" endorsed the lynching of negroes by rejecting the Dyer anti-lynching bill.

Capitalist justice, with its grand juries, courts and murder machines, was not moved to action when Frank Little, the I. W. W. organizer, was hanged by a masked mob in Butte, Mont., when Prager met a similar fate in Southern Illinois; no machinery of justice was let loose when 1,100 workers were deported from Bisbee, Ariz.; when an American Legion gang attacked an I. W. W. headquarters at Centralia, Wash.; when Moyer, Pettibone and Haywood were kidnapped and deported out of Colorado to Idaho; when Moyer was dragged thru the streets of Hancock, Mich., by a copper-trust inspired mob, shot in the back and deported; when Foster was deported out of Colorado.

No voices were raised by the kept politicians and their press against the barbaric tortures visited upon the thousands of Communist prisoners taken in the 1920 "Red Raids", no opposition was reported against the "third degree" inquisitions imposed during the steel and coal strikes, leaving their list of dead, or, as in the case of Paul Manko, still in a New York prison, insane.

But all these victims were of the working class, militants struggling against the established order to better the conditions of their fellows. They are legitimate prey. They have committed no social crime. But they are anti-capitalist.

The capitalist state tolerates the Ku Klux Klan because it is not anti-capital. It is, in fact, pro-capital, and as it becomes more and more definitely anti-labor, capital will accept it as an ally. But it can be a valuable ally only as it maintains its "bourgeois respectability".

The Mer Rouge trials will not hurt the Ku Klux Klan. Some of its members may be convicted to satisfy the blood appetite of capitalist law. But that will be Klan, far and wide, as a cleansing of the ranks of this "American Fascisti" of its worst elements. It will thus be lifted to the level of bourgeois respectability in order that it may better serve capitalism.

Yet even this respectability is unmasked, before the great masses of America's workers, as it decays and disappears with the growing intensity of the struggle between capital and labor. It is making one of its last stands in the murder trial at Mer Rouge, La.

A Task for You

There are probably very few passively sympathetic readers of THE WORKER. We take it for granted that anyone who sympathizes with Communism, also has some desire, no matter how small, to spread its message.

It is, therefore, that we now dare to speak to practically every reader of THE WORKER on the subject of the distribution of one million copies of the Communist program adopted by the Second National Convention of the Workers Party.

We join C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary of the party, in feeling that not only one million, but nearer five million copies of this program ought to be spread among the workers of the nation.

Directions to the various party branches and committees for their part in this nation-wide distribution were published in last week's issue. But great results can also be accomplished thru the co-operation of isolated individuals, even those who are affiliated with the party. In fact the distribution of this program in those sections where the party has no organization is extremely important because it crystallizes the sentiment that will come to life in time in a party branch.

Therefore, if you are a lone Communist, or a lone Communist sympathizer in your town, or your neighborhood, get a bundle of these program leaflets and distribute them from house to house. Pass them out among the members of your labor union. Give the members of your Workmen's Circle, your Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Society, or other fraternal organization an opportunity to read it. Order a bundle and carry a few at all times in your pocket, dropping them among the passengers on street cars or railroad trains. This is a task for you, the kind of work that should bring you great joy to think that you have helped.

THE WORKER will publish each week the progress that is being made in the distribution of millions of copies of this program leaflet. Will you appear among those on this Communist roll of honor?

The Thunder of New Wars

The Ruhr and the Entente

We have yet to hear of the views of any imperialist statesman bold enough to contend that the mailed fist of French militarism striking at the German republic thru the Ruhr will in the least check the European social revolution.

Great Britain and the United States adopted a "hands off" policy, because they fear the consequences of any other stand, while Belgium and Italy join France because they must have a share in the spoils, if there are any to be gotten.

It is, therefore, interesting to study the interpretation of the Russian position toward these developments given by Walter Duranty in the New York Times.

This shrewd capitalist observer in Moscow maintains that France is deliberately invading the German republic for the purpose of dismembering it. It hopes to do this thru forcing Communist revolutions in Berlin and Saxony, and monarchist seizures of power in East Prussia and Bavaria, leaving the French in color to wave in undisputed tranquility over the rich Ruhr Valley.

Duranty says that the French imperialists could not then afford to allow the Bavarian monarchists to drown the Communist revolution in blood, since this might result in a united monarchist Germany—the cause of all French fears. So that the ultimate balance will be on the side of Communism and against capitalism.

It is this situation that appalls America's capitalist statesmen at Washington as they fall back on Wilson's favorite policy of watchful waiting. World capitalism indeed seems to have lost its unity and virility thru its five years' war on the Russian Workers' and Peasants' Republic. While the forces of capitalism are disintegrating, the legions of labor thruout the world are developing ever closer unity, the solidarity that will be crowned not only with European, but with world victory.

Death sentences imposed upon 172, sentences to life imprisonment for two, seven died while awaiting trial. That is not a report of Turkish atrocities in the Near East. It is the result of the arrest by the British government of 228 Hindu non-co-operationists at Lucknow, India.

France Has Its Liebknecht

French imperialism's invasion of the Ruhr industrial district, the heart of Germany, has given France its Liebknecht in the person of Marcel Cachin, one of the editors of the Paris Communist daily, L'Humanite, and a Communist member of the French chamber of deputies.

"Treason! Traitor!" were charges hurled at Cachin as he sat in the session of the French chamber that declared its confidence in Poincare's anti-German policy by a vote of 478 to 86.

Cachin had just returned from Essen where he had met with the Communists of seven nations to protest against the new war. Because Cachin, with other Communists, tried to develop peaceful relations between the workers of France and Germany, he is charged with being a traitor to French Capitalism, his parliamentary immunity will be stripped from him and he will be placed on trial for high treason.

The attack produced no such opposition to French jingoism as Cachin and his fellow Communists now offer in the French chamber. Small in numbers, but united, they present an effective resistance to the patriotic clamors of the royalists and nationalists. The "Socialists" are divided as usual, one "Socialist" deputy Ehrlich, even approving Poincare's policies.

We do not know what the immediate future has in store for Cachin, who was recently convicted with others on the charge of carrying on Communist propaganda among the French conscripts. In its present hysterical efforts to maintain itself in power, French jingoism may drive Cachin from its chamber of deputies, it may put him on trial and convict him, it may even put him to death, but the accelerated forward sweep of revolution will continue.

That is what German kaiserism did to Liebknecht, aided in the final chapter by the German Social-Democracy, and this month Communists thruout the world gather to remember him.

May the spirits of Liebknecht and Cachin unite the workers of Germany and France in revolt against their common enemy—capitalism—so that they will move forward together to victory under the emancipating standards of Communism.

Supporters of "The League"

The seizure of the Ruhr Valley by the French definitely raises the question of the spread over western Europe of the Communist revolution.

It is in this crisis that the more timid elements, in the ranks of labor and capital, appeal to the "Black International", the so-called League of Nations.

Ex-Justice John H. Clarke, who left the United States Supreme Court to espouse the cause of "The League", opened his campaign in New York City on the night that the French legions were taking possession of Essen. Clarke fears for the stability of the present social order in the following words:

"The statesmanship is blind that does not see that Russia and Germany, united in misery and despair, would be a menace to our social order not less than to that of Western Europe. In their exhaustion, Britain and France could not stand against it, and what would our prospects become with Russia triumphant to the Atlantic and bent on the conversion of the world? It may be too late in years to prevent this unholy union, but with America in the League, Germany would eagerly enter it, and the danger would be past."

This idea was the central theme of the propaganda tour of this country by Georges Clemenceau, the French war premier. But Clemenceau insisted that the "unholy alliance" between Russia and Germany had already been consummated.

It is not unlikely that Clark and Clemenceau could get the Germany of Ebert and Stinnes into "The League". But it is not to be admitted that the German working class will be caught in this snare.

This matter was thoroly considered at the recent meeting of the Amsterdam Trade Union International. This "Socialist" outfit "places on record once more its emphatic protest". That is a good place to keep a protest,—in a minute book. In the meantime the Communists are being arrested and their headquarters and papers raided because of their active opposition to "the new war".

The Amsterdam International wants the question of reparations settled by some means of arbitration under the League of Nations, thus placing its usual faith in this child of the Versailles Peace. J. H. Thomas, the reactionary head of the British Railwaymen's Union, returns to London from Amsterdam and declares that, "The Communists are already pouring into the Ruhr Valley, ready to take advantage of the situation."

"Obviously", declared Thomas, "If the French pursue this method the effect must be just what those who want Germany to turn bolshevick desire."

It is easy to understand that Thomas, the "British Socialist", with his counterparts in France, Germany and other countries should ally themselves with the ex-justices of the United States

Unmask This Conspiracy

"Private interests" are secretly conspiring to railroad William Z. Foster, C. E. Ruthenberg and their co-defendants under Michigan's Criminal Syndicalist Law to Prison. Like a masked battery, these "private interests" hide behind the Berrien County and Michigan State authorities, who are nominally prosecuting the case.

Berrien County tax-payers concerned about possible onslaughts upon their pocket-books have been told that "Wall Street" is financing the prosecution. This report spread among the people, following a lively meeting of the supervisors with District Attorney Charles W. Gore. These County officials, were told by Mr. Gore that the needed funds would come from outside sources and that there was no intention of crippling Berrien County financially.

Several big business organizations have been campaigning against the defendants ever since the raid on the convention of workers at Bridgeman, last August. These include the American Defense Society, of New York, whose president is Elon Hooker, well-known war profiteer.

The Washington director of this organization, which recently sent General Pershing on an anti-labor lecture tour of the country, is R. M. Whitney, former Bostonian. Whitney himself wrote the Boston "Transcript's" so-called "Red Raid" articles. These, like the subsequent series they inspired in the New York "Herald" and elsewhere, were so obviously biased and contradictory that they cried ineffectively, despite their noise, in a wilderness of popular skepticism.

The fact that invisible "private interests" are using the courts to torpedo labor's more radical van, should muster all workers in labor's general defense. The less radical flanks are within range, and the capitalist forces have plenty of ammunition. Should their attack upon the progressives be successful, the turn of the conservatives will be next. In the emergency, labor will stand ally if united; divided, labor will fall.

To hoist the prosecution with its petard, counsel for the defense, headed by Frank P. Walsh, finds it imperative to take a number of affidavits in different parts of the country. A new development in the case has occasioned this unexpected demand upon the Defense Fund and a fresh appeal for contributions to meet it is made. The burden of the defense's argument rests upon these proposed affidavits and workers everywhere are urged to give their mite for victory. Contributions should be sent to the Labor Defense Council, 166 W. Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

A federal prosecutor out in Buffalo, N. Y., is trying to break into the limelight by starting proceedings to revoke the American citizenship of Boris Reinstein, who has been active in the Russian Soviet Regime since the Bolsheviki revolution. Perhaps this is a move to set a precedent for similar action against others "undesirable" in the eyes of American capitalism.

Dictator for Dress Industry

We are having an increasing number of dictators selected to rule over us: Landis for baseball; Hayes for the movies, and Thomas for the theater. Now comes Mosessohn, for the Associated Dress Industries of America, at $50,000 per year, to be taken out of the sweat and blood of the needle workers.

Mosessohn is the first "dictator" to be appointed in an industry with a large mass of organized labor. He comes face to face with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in the dress industry, said to be the third largest industry in the United States.

"Dictator" Mosessohn claims he will have nothing to do with any "labor policy." Yet it is difficult to understand how a $50,000 adviser, who comes from the legal profession, can keep his attention away from one of the main problems confronting those who employ him.

It is to be expected that Mosessohn will develop unity of action among the dress bosses. His employers already compliment him on achieving some results in this direction during the past few years. Instead of chaotic conditions that once prevailed, with all the little bosses and the big bosses and the middle-sized bosses fighting each other with every possible scheme, with every "unethical" sort of weapon, we are now told that everything is moving ahead beautifully for the "big bosses." Many of the smaller bosses have no doubt fallen by the wayside, as the bankruptcy courts will show. Some remain, however, and these will no doubt be attended to in due time by Mr. Mosessohn, so that complete "law and order" will prevail in the dress industry.

It is then that "Dictator" Mosessohn, or some similar dictator, will turn his attention toward developing solidarity against an even greater enemy of the "big bosses," against the forces of organized labor.

The officialdom of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union constitutes the greatest bulwark against amalgamation of labor's forces in the clothing industry.

Perhaps these officials will now see a danger signal on labor's stormy horizon, in the words of J. J. Goldman, president of the Associated Dress Industries, when he declares that he feels certain the time will come when the entire needle industry, including cloaks and suits, waists and shirts, and garments of every kind, will be formed into one vast association with a super-director at the head.

With the wiping out of the "little bosses," the united big bosses, appetites whetted for greater victories, will advance against the organized workers, more able because of their unity to bring victory to their standards than at any time in the past.

Now is the time for amalgamation of all workers in the needle trades. The official who offers resistance to the drive for amalgamation of all needle workers is a friend of the bosses, an enemy of those who labor in this great industry.

The bosses are amalgamating and selecting their dictators. On another page we publish an article on amalgamation for the workers that should be carefully considered by every man and woman who toils in the needle industry. And let that consideration be followed by action for amalgamation. The workers must beat the bosses at their own game.

Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, jr., is sending invitations to 100 women representing the "best society" of churches in New York City, asking them to come together to talk about the women of India. Nothing will be said about the women of the oil fields controlled by the Standard Oil Trust in this country. ABSOLUTELY NOTHING!

Shaken with sorrow and blinded with tears, we've learned of the resignation of Brother Benjamin Schlesinger from the presidency of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. What a tremendous loss to the Forward, the Call and the Jewish Daily News.

The Latest Prophet—Dr. Coué

The world was getting rotten, its stench so strong and high
That even God could smell it, on
His throne above the sky.
And all the angels sniffed that Chicago stockyards smell
That spread from earth to paradise and down to deepest hell.

Good God, said God, for ages I have tried to fix that sewer,
Jesus, Mohammed and Buddha have worked to make it pure,
And now must I send another sacred plumber way down there?
"Great God!" he said, and stopped, remembering He mustn't swear.

So He made him another plumber, a prophet with whiskers gray
And taught him a new line of chatter, and called him Doctor Coué.
And sent him down in the garbage, the rotters a new prayer to teach
"Day by day I grow better, in every way I'm a peach!"

And now all the Ku Kluxers say it, and the flunkers repeat the prayer,
And the diplomats solve the problem of how they make new wars out of air,
The whole earth is chanting the slogan, but the smell seems to be just as vile.
It's only the little French doctor who gets better (and richer) this while. —MICHAEL GOLD.

The House That Jack Built

This is the house that Jack built;
This is the miner that mined the ore,
that was used in the house that Jack built.

This is the man that built the road, that led to the mine where the ore was mined, to be used in the house that Jack built.

This is the man that ran the train, that carried the ore, that came from the mine and was used in the house that Jack built.

This is the farmer that tills the soil, with the machine that was made from the ore that was mined and all for the house that Jack built.

But the man that owns the house that was built by Jack, also owns the mine and owns the works, and owns the machine and owns the trains and also the farm where the farmer works.

Encore.

But throw him out without any regrets, out of the house that Jack built!

And THEN mine the coal and carry the ore and fill the soil and run the train — — — —

AND LIVE IN THE HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT!" —Sadi.

Labor! How About Arkansas?

Murder of C. R. Gregor Direct Challenge to All Workers

Fayette County, Pa., Miners Demand $1,500,000.00 More Relief from the U. M. W. of A.

Secretary Hamilton, of Miners' Relief Committee, Is Forcibly Ejected from Convention; Notorious Strike-Breaker Van Bitner Imported to Drive Steam Roller Over Fayette Miners; Feeny Does Disty Work.

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, PA.—In the most heartless manner high officials of the United Mine Workers of America, Thursday, Jan. 18, attempted to close the tragic strike of the Fayette County Miners at a convention at New Salem, Fayette County, in one of the stormiest meetings ever held in the stormy history of the Western Pennsylvania Miners.

It was evident from the first that even hardened members of the "machine" like John O'Leary and William Feeny had no heart for their work. It is even reported that Feeny cried during the convention.

However, "The International" had made its decisions and those present, their orders without a murmur, and carried them out.

Van Bitner in Charge

"The International" did not take any chances with sentimental officials and sent the notorious Van Bitner to take full charge of the steam roller and gave his orders like the autocrat that he is. Van Bitner who is a product of this district, undoubtedly the most brazen, high official in the United Mine Workers of America and the most hated as well, especially in this district, where he is best known. He was a former president of district 2 and was literally chased out of the district. He was the individual selected by John Lewis to destroy the organization in District 14 at the time of the Howat trouble. No one knew of his presence in this district until he appeared suddenly on the morning of the 18th at the New Salem Convention.

Everything proves that the "International" realized that the calling off of the strike must be done with terrible swiftness. They knew if the miners had time to study over the matter there would be an upheaval. For this reason, Feeny sent out a call for the convention, but nobody could learn what was to be done there. When the time came for the convention no one but the delegates and the organizers were allowed in the room, J. A. Hamilton, Secretary

Verdict at Herrin Makes Yellows Howl

By CARL HAESSLER
(Federated Press Correspondent)

CHICAGO.—Howling in rage because the blood of union miners is not to be spilled on the scaffold as a result of the first Herrin riot trial, the metropolitan press is skating recklessly on the thin ice that protects the American judicial system from a complete overhauling at the hands of the people.

Because a jury principally of farmers listened to the overwhelming alibi testimony the defense was able to produce, and because the jury believed the relatives and sympathizers of the defendants were telling the truth, the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago Journal of Commerce are beside themselves with fury.

Balked of their bloodlust for union labor by the acquittal on murder charges of Otis Clark and four other miner defendants at Marion, Ill., these papers angrily point out that the men cannot be tried again for the same offense and that the guilty verdict cannot be appealed by the state.

The Journal of Commerce in a boxed front page editorial refers violently to what it calls a miscarriage of justice, revives the "blot on our fair state" talk and comes as close as it dares to an attack upon the American judicial system that permits juries on occasion to free union men on evidence of innocence.

Plan New Trials

MARION, Ill. — Changing its schedule, the prosecution in the Herrin strip mine riot cases has decided to postpone the Shoemaker murder case in favor of the Molkovich case which involves three of the defendants acquitted of the Hoffman killing which came to a close Jan. 19.

Otis Clark, Bert Grace and Peter Hiller are three of the nine men to be tried Feb. 12 for the murder of Antonio Molkovich, Erie, Pa., one of the body of mine guards and strike breakers imported into Williamson county by Wm. J. Lester last June in the expectation of clearing $7000 a day for himself by mining coal during the strike.

Fight Fascisti Terror with the Strike and the Boycott

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

The challenging facts in the bosses' murderous war upon the strikers of the Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad in the state of Arkansas are now available. They tell the story of the greatest threat to organized labor ever made by organized dollars. It is railroad labor's turn to act. If the murder of C. R. Gregor, railroad shop strike leader, at Harrison, Ark., is to go unavenged, then American labor had better get a little more accustomed to its shackles and prepare to keep on licking the boots of the American profiteers for a long time to come.

Gregor was in the front line trenches in this two years' struggle of the Arkansas railroad workers. He defended himself in his own home, at night, when attacked by a cowardly mob. But he was overcome, torn from his family, dragged to a railroad bridge, where a rope was tied around his neck. While the leering mob of respectable 100 per centers stood looking on, he was pushed off the bridge, the noose tightened, his neck was broken and life was strangled out of him. That same rope was just as surely around the neck of all organized labor. That rope tightens and tightens unless labor resists and tears it away.

Gregor's murderers, [illegible] upon business men, merchants and rich farmers, still walk about, they are free men. Franchilla and other strikers, flogged and killed, still live. Hundreds of brutally outraged wives and children of strikers, driven from their homes and into the hills, like refugees of war before an advancing army, are still alive. The thousands of other strikers, their wives and children, all along the line of the Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad, still live, but waiting, waiting for you, workers of America, to act. And the railroad union lives with them, if the organized workers of the land stand and fight for them.

The doddering president of the American Federation of Labor, from his swivel chair, in his comfortable office in Washington, D. C., appeals to the capitalist government of Arkansas to intervene. Gompers asks his democratic and republican friends in the Arkansas state house for help. They jeer back at him. What? Help him attack their friends, jail their pals, indict the best people, the representative citizens along the line of the Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad? How those Arkansas politicians must laugh at poor Gompers!

It is announced that the locals of the federated railroad shopcrafts' unions have launched an effort thru the railway employes department of the American Federation of Labor to raise $3,000,000 for the "discovery" and prosecution of the "Vigilante Committee."

But it is more than money that is needed. The murderers of Gregor are well known. They are "prominent citizens." They flaunt their crime in your very faces, Workers of America! They publish their proclamations openly in their own kept press. They publish lists of their officials. Thus "The Southwest American," Sunday, Jan. 21, of Fort Smith, Arkansas, reproduces a letter sent out by W. L. Snapp, chairman of the "Citizens' Committee," to all local chairmen and secretaries. The leaders of this American Fascisti attack on the labor unionists of Arkansas are as follows:

W. L. Snapp, Chairman of the "Citizens" Committee.
Official list of local chairmen and secretaries:

HARRISON—W. L. Snapp, chairman, general; Dr. Troy Coffman, secretary, general.
LESLIE—W. W. Pendley, chairman; N. G. Sawyer, secretary.
MARSHALL—C. W. Wood, chairman; Z. F. Ferguson, secretary.
ST. JOE—W. L. Henley, chairman; P. M. Walker, secretary.
EVERTON—B. Killebrew, chairman; F. M. Jones, secretary.
ALPENA—J. A. Centers, chairman; Dr. W. L. Watkins, secretary.
GREEN FOREST—A. L. Kinney, chairman; W. G. Coxie, secretary.
BERRYVILLE—Tom Morris, chairman; Oscar Johnson, secretary.
EUREKA SPRINGS—C. E. Sweeney, chairman; Floyd Walker, secretary.
WESTERN GROVE—C. E. Shinn, chairman; Horace Magness, secretary.
JASPER—J. W. Moore, chairman; A. B. Arbaugh, secretary.

This is the gang of anti-labor conspirators, who swept aside all local officials sympathetic with the striking railroad workers and their families, and instituted the dictatorship of the railroad and banking profiteers, a dictatorship maintained by the hangman's noose, by gun, by blacksnake whip, by terror.

What are the remedies? Obviously the situation cannot wait "until the next election." It is just as certain the democratic state politicians and local prosecuting authorities, hypocritically sworn to maintain the law, will do nothing. No voice has been raised anywhere, even by those "progressives" in office, from whom the Gompers and Johnstons have told the workers to expect much.

Organized labor must fall back on direct action in this crisis—ON THE STRIKE AND THE BOYCOTT. The industrial slave in the state of Arkansas, who continues to toil for local capitalists before the Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad has been completely unionized, deserves to wear his chains.

In the meantime American organized labor should place an effective boycott against the State of Arkansas until the murderers of Gregor thru even-handed justice, have been treated to a similar fate.

The workers of Europe boycotted Hungary, they boycotted Spain, they boycotted Jugo-Slavia, because of the White Terror ruling in these countries. Should the workers of the United States do less against the big business terrorists of Arkansas?

Workers of America! Crush the budding American Fascisti movement in Arkansas, NOW, or it will soon spread to the entire nation. The strike and the boycott are your weapons, NOW! Use them before it is too late!

Rail Heads Incited Mob in Arkansas

By H. M. WICKS

It is now definitely established that the destruction of bridges on the Missouri and Northern Arkansas Railroad, which is said to have been the cause of the organization of the so-called "citizens' committee" at Harrison, Ark., was due to defective fire-boxes in the broken-down engines of this road, and not to strikers as has been charged by the prostitute press of the nation, which re-echoed the declaration of the mob that has terrorized the district for the past week.

The efforts of the railroad company to destroy the shopmen's union thru employing strike breakers has resulted in the employment of [illegible] all the engines on the road. Trains are always late and much produce perishes in transit. Many delays have been caused by the burning of bridges. The officials of the company and the petty country newspapers along the railroad lines, mostly edited by hicksputtle editors who receive free pay fare and other favors from the railroad company, have been used by the company officials to vilify and heap contumely upon the heads of the railroad strikers by blaming them for the physical breakdown of the railroad property.

All other means of intimidation, such as the employment of strike-breakers, thugs and gunmen and the general time-worn tactics of corporations engaged in crushing the strike, having failed, the railroad officials determined to fan the flames of mob violence.

It is charged by J. P. Venable, a labor leader of the district who escaped the frenzied mob last week, that the mob was organized and directed by the railroad officials.

Fight for "Open Shop"

The burning of bridges by the defective fire-boxes was merely the excuse of the railroad to start a widespread open shop drive and thru mob action endeavor to destroy every union and drive every union man or woman out of the district.

Engineers who handle the engines on the railroads declare that every day there are hundreds of burned spots along the right-of-way and that there is constant danger of starting damaging fires because of the condition of the engines.

Simultaneous with the outbreak of violence against strikers there appeared large placards in many places of business proclaiming the "open shop". Strikers charge that these posters were prepared long before the outbreak and assert they are evidence that the "uprising" was not spontaneous, but the result of a well formed plot.

A number of stores alleged to be in favor of the strikers were closed by the "committee of one thousand"

Union Heads Move to Crush Brave Miners

(Special to The Worker)

PITTSBURGH, PA.—International Organizer Feeney has refused credentials to 11 coal miners selected by the militant strikers of the Fayette County coal fields to solicit voluntary contributions thruout the United States.

The international officialdom of the United Mine Workers, headed by President John L. Lewis, has also issued notice to the entire membership of the miners' union not to contribute to the hungry and homeless strikers of Fayette County and their families.

Need Unions to Win Social Revolution

By Radio to Inprekorr (Berlin) and Forwarded by Mail to The Worker

MOSCOW, Nov. 21.—"The aim pursued by the revolutionary trade unions is the overthrow of capitalism", declared A. Lozovsky, secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions, in discussing the question of organization at the Second World Congress here.

"The struggle for practical demands must be utilized", he continued. "No worker should remain unorganized. No members should leave the trade unions, no little unions should be formed.

"The social revolution is only possible with the aid of the workers organized in trade unions."

The speaker discussed the organization of expelled members of trade unions, and demands that the utmost efforts be made towards re-unity, use

"For United Front of World's Workers!" Call of Fourth Congress, Communist International

The Slogan of the Fourth Congress: "UNITED FRONT!"

The Fourth Congress of the Communist International, comprising 62 parties of Europe, America, Asia, and Australia, has confirmed that which the Enlarged Executive of the Communist International has already twice resolved: that it is the duty of all Communist parties to devote all their energies towards organizing the working class into a solid united front, in order to resist the attack now being made by world capital on every position of the working class.

Thus the highest tribunal of the Communist parties has confirmed that which has been the aim and object of our last year's work, and has sounded as the slogan for our coming work: "The struggle for the united front of the world proletariat, the struggle for unity, for the common defense of all proletarians, regardless of their political tendency and stainde."

As early as last spring the Communist International already applied to the Second International, and to the Vienna Working Union, with the request that they participate in a Worker's World Congress for the pur-

Toss Kamenev at Banquet in Moscow

By ANNA LOUISE STRONG
Staff Correspondent Federated Press
and The Worker

MOSCOW (by delayed mail).—I never saw such vast, riotous joy in any life. Yet out of sheer gaiety were going home to prison and battle and death.

It was a great banquet held in the Hall of the Unions, The labor unions of Moscow and the city council acted as hosts Every factory and every soviet institution had its chosen representatives, about 1600 of them, including the senior class of Sverdlov university, the university which trains communist organizers.

The guests were 675 delegates to the seven or eight international congresses which had been going on almost simultaneously in Moscow. The Communist International was the largest and, tho it started early in November, it had lasted two weeks longer than expected and overlapped all the others. Then there were the Congress of Labor Unions, the Congress of Communist Youth, and several congresses of special trades, metal workers, building workers and so forth.

Two thousand people sat down to the banquet at 10 o'clock in the evening, after a long day of conferences, ending in a closing session in the Grand Opera House. The dinner consisted of cold meats and cheese and bread, with ice cream, tea and soda waters, but it took three hours to serve, as the waiters forced their way thru the closely packed throng. But the eating was only an excuse, the real festivity was quite different.

Songs, shouts, stamping of feet arose from all parts of the hall at once. The place was so big that half a dozen songs could go on at once, with little interference—an appropriate condition for an international congress. Over in one corner the Italians would start a revolutionary song adapted from the French revolution, and all the French and Spanish and some Russians would join in from all over the hall. And I know that one at least of the Italian delegates had escaped from Italy wounded, and that the veteran leader of the delegation had been warned that he would be shot on his return.

A peculiar Russian custom consists in tossing in the air any man whom the people desire to honor. He is seized by eight or ten comrades and thrown high above their heads, sometimes sitting and sometimes lying. As he comes down, he is caught on 20 outstretched hands and sent aloft again. It is a strenuous honor, but he is supposed to take it good sport and take it smiling.

I saw as many as eight dignitaries, heads of national delegations or favorite speakers, up in the air at once all over the hall. At one time Kamenev, whose position is equivalent to mayor of Moscow and governor of Moscow province combined, was being tossed forward to the platform in this way. He is a very dignified gentleman, and a polished man of the world in appearance. When they got him to the platform in this undignified way they upended him and set him on his feet; whereupon he pulled his clothes into shape and smilingly began to preside at the banquet. At the other end of the vast brilliant hall, Claude Mackay, the Negro poet of America, was going up in the air also, holding himself rigidly in a sitting position, with a broad grin on his face.

Tomorrow again they would be fighting, the little tag-ends of fights left over by the various congresses, which had whipped most of the main conflicts into unified programs for the national sections to take home and work on for another year. There were plenty of disgruntled folks, and folks whose grudges, added to their natural capacity for revolting against everything, would make life unpleasant for their fellow workers later.

Yes, they weren't all heroes, or even agreeable humans. But on this night the differences were forgotten and the spirit of comradeship was unleashed and triumphant. They remembered—or was it the Russian comrades present in such overwhelming numbers that reminded them—that they were one vast army of workers, setting out to conquer the world.

That was the note on which they closed and went home, some to the slow and tedious tasks of labor organization and education, to work for amalgamation by industries and others to face the guns of the Fascisti or the unheralded but even more bloody massacres of India and the far corners of awakening Asia.

Millionaire "Bread Trust" Professor Freed After Murder; Innocent Workers in Prison

By MAX SHACHTMAN

The self-admitted murderer of a penniless ex-Sailor has been released from the indictment returned against him six months ago. The murder, he says, was committed in self-defense as the result of repeated extortions by blackmail of money from the accused by a so-called "ring" of whom the dead man was a member.

The murderer is Walter S. Ward, the eldest son of the head of the Ward Baking Company, "The Bread Trust." He refused to state on what grounds blackmail had been extorted. The members of the "Ring" whom he named were never found, and are believed to be the heroes of one of the most ingenious pieces of fiction of the season.

Ward, Sr., who was given as a witness, ran away from subpoena servers and could not be found. The prosecuting attorney, Fred E. Weeks, who procured an indictment only when public feeling had been raised to a high pitch, vacillated continually in bringing the case before the Grand Jury. During the administration of the party to which Weeks belongs, the Republican, the entire party machinery was brought to bear on every effort to free the murderer without trial. Now the Democratic attorney Mr. Arthur Howland is in office.

On being questioned he said that he could bring up the case to another Grand Jury, but that he had no expectation of doing so at present, which means it will never be done.

Now, why is it that Ward, the millionaire, can murder a man in cold blood, for all the evidence points to the absurdity of the ex-sailor, Clarence Peters, having attacked him. Why is it that this man can concoct such a palpably cock-and-bull story and get by with it? Why was this brute admitted to such low bail as $10,000 merely because he did not want to spend a few weeks in jail? Why were all the powers that be arraigned on his side to see that he should not come to justice? Why the many other incidents that are so incredible but true?

There is only one answer. The murderer is a millionaire, the son of a millionaire, who is head of a millionaire corporation. That is the one and only reason for all the solicitousness shown for his freedom.

Contrast this situation with that of the murderer who was sentenced with such dispatch, Abe Becker, the Bronx truck-driver. Contrast that with the attitude of the courts, the prosecuting attorneys, the political parties of Capital, the administrative bodies of all kinds and the kept press when a Communist or an I. W. W. is brought into court. Compare the servile zeal of the prosecutors in the trial of a poor worker with the laxity shown in the Ward case. Compare the miserable falsehoods of Ward and how they were ignored and excused. Do the rankness of the prosecutor of Sacco and Vanzetti to lump on any minute piece of testimony that did not concur with another. Place side by side the bail figures of a man who admits a murder and of a radical worker who is only accused of, let us say, attending a meeting. Contrast the attitude of the State and National judicial departments in the Michigan Communist cases, with that of the inattentiveness in the Ward case. Compare the evasion of court service by Ward, Sr., to the kidnapping of Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone. Compare the position of tolerance taken by the Judge in the Ward case with the illegal aggressiveness of the kept puppets in the cases of the Chicago wobblies, the New York Communist cases, Sacco and Vanzetti and the innumerable other instances of the bitter persecution of those who give their all for the cause of Labor. Compare, finally, all the angles of the case of the millionaire with those of any case where the ideals and principles of Labor are involved, and you will be forced to come to the same conclusion at which we arrive. . .

The courts, like every other institution under bourgeois democracy, is an instrument for the upholding of the present order and the vindictive suppression of all that opposes it. If a member of the master class is ever brought to trial, he is shown every consideration. If a member of the working class is in the same position he is shown every inconsideration. A confessed criminal of the bourgeoisie can get by with any sort of ridiculous tale. An accused worker finds it bitterly hard to gain freedom with even the most obviously true defense. A fat bourgeois may kill a man, seduce a girl, murder, hang, tar and feather and what not a negro or a worker, with impunity. A political party of the workers must eke out a fugitive existence underground. . .

The scandal of Ward's release stinks so atrociously that even so jaundiced a sheet as the New York "Daily News" lets out a mild squeak of protest. But it will never be mentioned again and they will continue to feed the workers their daily garbage. How different was the protest when Len Small released the Illinois Communists! His resignation was demanded by the fearless hero Jack Pershing, and at a meeting some ass yelled out "Hang Small!"

So it goes under Capitalism. Ward, the murderer goes free. Ford, Suhr, Mooney, Billings, Chicago and Wichita wobblies, Blankenstein and Jake Dolla, the New York Communists, Kowalski, and many, many others still waste their lives in their "steel-bound coffin of a cell". Others are on the waiting list . . . .

This, Workers of America, is Democracy. You know how the fairy tale runs: "Liberty—Pursuit of Happiness—Freedom—Same Law for Rich as for Poor . . . . " which is the euphonious name of the mob of hired assassins.

Committed On Grand Jury

This "citizen's committee" sits on the grand jury, along with the regularly constituted jury and hears "evidence" against rail strikers and participates in the deliberations of this special jury, with the result that there have been twenty-five indictments against union men.

So thoroly is the community under the reign of terror that two men who pleaded guilty to arson when they were accused of firing railroad bridges at Harrison, appeared before a joint legislative committee at Little Rock and admitted that they pleaded guilty because they feared for their lives, altho they were innocent of the crimes charged. Before they pleaded guilty they had asked the judge before whom they appeared for a trial and were informed that while a trial would be granted he would not guarantee that they would be safe.

After reasserting that their lives were in danger the judge promised them they would be tried the next morning. After a conference with their attorney they decided they had better plead guilty to save their lives from the mob, especially since it was plain that the judge was a party to the conspiracy to murder them in case they attempted to defend themselves in court.

Murdered Striker Innocent

E. C. Gregor, the striker murdered last week by the frenzied mob that hanged him on a railroad trestle, was asleep in a bunk house 45 miles from the scene of the burning of the bridges according to a story told by his bunk-mate.

For a long time previous to his lynching Gregor had been at work in a construction camp and had appeared in his home town on the morning of his murder for the first time in months. The fact that he was known as a strong union man resulted in the railroad company's thugs picking him for their first victim.

So thoroly under control of the terrorists is the entire community that every person known to be in sympathy with the strikers has either left the vicinity, or is in hiding, while local, county and state officials by their inaction condone the outrages.

A. F. of L. Starts Probe

The American Federation of Labor from Washington announces that it has started an investigation of the outrages of the "citizens' committee" which included the lynching of Gregor and the wholesale beatings administered to other union men and sympathizers.

The taking over of the local government by the blood-streaked mob of railroad hirelings and their dupes will be thoroly investigated and action by the organization will depend upon the findings, according to the official announcement from the office of the A. F. of L. at Washington.

The shopmen of the Arkansas district have announced that they have started a campaign to raise over a million dollar fund for the detection and prosecution of the leaders of the mob.

It is about time that organized labor abandons its defensive policy in cases of murderous aggression by the vicious tools of the master class and definitely takes the offensive. The gun-thugs use every means of publicity to inflame the small business men and the farmers against strikers, in addition to the economic pressure they can bring to bear upon these elements of the population. Unfortunately there are members of the working class so deluded that they also fall prey to the propaganda lies of the capitalist class organs.

The best service the American Federation of Labor could perform at the present moment in general would be a wide-spread campaign in every strike district in order to pillory the blood-suckers of labor so that they will not dare appear publicly for fear of the wrath of the aroused working class.

In order to effectively fight such outbreaks it is necessary to organize the working class into effective unions, a thing that has been woefully neglected by the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor and the petrified leadership of its affiliated unions.

Effective unionism in Arkansas would have made impossible the successful deportation thru terror of the strikers. The sort of unionism needed to combat such contemptible outrages against the working class is the unionism that made Herrin, Ill., the bright star in the firmament of unionism in America the past year. Teach the jackal pack of capitalism that they cannot with impunity murder strikers and there will be no repetition of the atrocities such as occured at Harrison, Ark.

of the Miners Relief Conference being driven out of the room by physical force.

Feeny Baits Delegates With One Week's Relief

As soon as the doors were closed Van Bitner appeared and ruled with a rod of iron. The first clash came over the selection of a resolutions committee. An attempt was made to elect such a committee from the floor. Van Bitner instantly ruled that nothing of the kind would be allowed. He stated that the committee would be selected by him as chairman of the meeting and this was done. He placed "payrollers" like [illegible] Feeny, etc., in the majority and only two delegates from the Coke Mine region were permitted to sit on the committee. By these tactics the stunned delegates were driven to a vote to call off the strike. Feeny offered the bait that if they would adopt the resolution, the "International" would give them one more week's relief, but if they did not pass the resolution they would immediately be cut off without anything. This was the final argument that put the resolution across after nine hours of angry discussion.

Organizers Fly for Lives

As soon as this was accomplished the organizers rushed away to save their lives knowing that when the delegates got back to their locals and told their members what had happened the storm would break. And it did.

Ever since indignation meetings have been held all over the district and there is serious danger of a dual movement starting as a result of the cruel treatment of these miners.

What About the $1,500,000.00?

What makes the miners particularly bitter, both in the coke field and the organized section in district 5, is relief assessments laid by the "International" on its entire membership of over 500,000 miners of $4 for November and December.

[T]his must have brought in over $2,000,000. The "International" has not spent more than $615,000 in Fayette County Relief. Where are the other million and a half dollars?

These figures of $615,000 were given by Van Bitner at New Salem but I thought best not to give our authority until challenged.

Connected with N. Y. Conference

It is very significant that the calling off of the Fayette County strike by Van Bitner on January 18th was the same day that the announcement was made in New York that Pennsylvania would be left out of the settlement and that only Ohio, Indiana and Illinois would be considered.

There is no question but that these two incidents were carefully staged to occur at the same time.

Fear Progressive Miners

There is no question but that one reason that the Fayette County miners have been handled in the manner that they have is because the machine fears the Progressive Miners movement in this district. It was the Progressive Miners that compelled the "International" to come to the relief of the Fayette County late in October when they thought that they could escape this responsibility. The heavy vote polled by Progressive Miners led by Thomas Myerscough has resulted in scaring the machine as it was never scared before.

No Dual Movement

The Progressive Miners cannot emphasize too strongly at this time that they are absolutely opposed to any Dual or Outlaw Movement. It will only bring disaster to the miners. They must stay inside the organization and fight this thing out to the finish. A definite policy will be decided upon for Fayette County and carried out.

Let every friend of the miners do all in his power to accomplish this.

Merrick Accepts Challenge of the "International" Machine

[illegible] Hall, Coketon, on the afternoon of [illegible] Thomas Myerscough, [illegible] the United Mine Workers of America, [illegible] Fayette County, [illegible] Progressive Miners [illegible] Fayette County, [illegible] Organizer, District 5, United Mine Workers of America, [illegible] Progressive Miners [illegible] Party of America, [illegible] Progressive Miners [illegible] the question of the Fayette County Strike.

Myerscough, [illegible] Progressive Miners, [illegible] but was unable to get Fontoccio down to any date for the debate. [illegible] Progressive Miners in District 5 have [illegible] not only the District Machine [illegible] but the International Machine [illegible] flooding the district with an army of organizers at the expense of [illegible] membership, sending in men of such type as Van Bitner, Fontoccio and Grecula.

The membership of the United Miners should know something about the characters of these people. Van Bitner is so notorious that nothing need be said here concerning him.

Nick Fontoccio, who hails from Springfield, Illinois, has an unsavory record as a renegade radical who traded his influence among radicals for a job on the National payroll.

At a conference of Illinois delegates at the United Mine Workers' Convention, September, 1921, when Thomas Myerscough gave the story of the corruption in the election in District 5, in 1920, Fontoccio was the only Illinois delegate who attacked his exposure. On that occasion Myerscough denounced Fontoccio as one of the leaders of the gunfight at Belleville strike, which caused the Illinois Miners Relief expense of $21,000, and that he deserted the radical miners in return for a job on the "machine" payroll. During his recital Myerscough made the statement that John Grecula, International Bank Organizer, was in the employ of Fontoccio carried the story to Grecula with the result that the latter made a vicious physical assault upon Myerscough the following day in Indianapolis.

Fontoccio was one of only two or three Illinois delegates who fought against Howat in the September Convention.

Early in 1922 Fontoccio, as usual, accompanied by his pugilistic bodyguard, John Grecula, appeared in a meeting of Local Union Cannonsburg, and talked upon a resolution concerning Howat's expulsion from the organization. On this occasion Fontoccio said, "I take off my hat to Van Bitner for his work in Kansas".

As for John Grecula, he is a man of the lowest type. Following the election in District 5, in 1920, he appeared in Pittsburgh and misrepresented himself as a disgruntled and disfranchised International Organizer, and won the confidence of Myerscough and Progressive Miners of the District. Later he got upon a committee of four who acted as trustees for the custody of 20 affidavits getting evidence of corruption in District 5. By legal trick he has been successful in keeping these affidavits locked up in a safe deposit box so they cannot be used at District and International Conventions.

Following the charge made by Myerscough that he was an organization spy, he attacked Myerscough unexpectedly and in a cowardly manner and by kicking him upon the knee knocked him to the pavement where he continued to kick him in the most cowardly and brutal manner.

These are the types of agents that the "International" is sending to District 5, to begin a campaign of intimidation and thuggery. However, they will not be successful. The Progressive Miners will continue to fight for the principles as before.

The Well-Fed Boss and His Check

EDITOR, WORST BOSS STORIES:—Below is a true story of what actually transpired. I being the author.

The hero is the well-fed benevolent boss, the minor character is a wage slave looking for salvation thru the generosity of the fat hero.

After years of back-breaking toil as a fast moving machine in a dusty factory, the wage slave finds herself with about $200.00 in the bank and a good case of lung decay. Not being able to work, 20 cent lunches and small medicine bills eat the best part of the $200.00. At length the climax is reached. The doctor announces either a trip to Colorado or to the grave.

Here is where the hero comes in. A committee of one is sent by a group of the factory slaves to lay the sick girl's appeal before the charitable boss.

The hero listens to the pitiful story with a tired look, yet tempered by the spirit of tolerance which Christian martyrs display on such occasions. At last the hero deigns to speak. "We have organized charities to deal with such cases," he says, "and we support them."

Again the committee speaks. It explains carefully that this particular wage slave still has a little pride left and the humiliating process of going thru the ordeal of "CHARITABLE" investigation would be almost as bad as death.

The benign boss (hero) ponders seriously. At last he speaks. "I shall instruct my bookkeeper to make out a check for a satisfactory sum."

The committee of one grows happy with visions of a check for $200.00 or perhaps $300.00; for what is $300.00 to a rich man.

Soon the bookkeeper arrives with the check, the well-fed boss looks it over carefully with his bleary eyes, and sighing the sigh of a contented man who does his duty well he hands the check over to the committee of one. The committee accepts the check with profuse thanks, not daring to look at it for fear of being impolite.

But a shock was in store for the committee! A glance at the check a moment later showed the word "CHARITY" written across the face of it in bold letters, and the sum was "FIVE DOLLARS!"

Such was the charity of the well-fed benevolent boss!

Such was the reward of the meek slave on her way to the grave!

And so will charity be administered until the meek slaves become MILITANT REBELS and overthrow the system that grinds blood and flesh into wealth and substitute for it a system that will grind wealth into blood and flesh, feeding commodities.

4-Week Drive for R.A.I.C. by F.S.R. Now On

At its last meeting the National Executive Committee of the Friends of Soviet Russia passed the following motion:

"We are in favor of supporting the Russian-American Industrial Corporation with our full strength, and toward that end we shall conduct a four-week drive beginning Jan. 22nd, of which two weeks shall be devoted to especially concentrated and intensive campaign.

"The tremendous task of helping Soviet Russia with constructive relief can only be accomplished thru the support of the working masses of this country and only the trade unions can mobilize the working masses toward this end.

"The RAIC is the first experiment in this direction. It has the backing of the great Union, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

"The success of the RAIC will set a precedent for all other trade unions for further cooperation in the constructive relief work.

"Soviet Russia needs billions of dollars, which can be secured only thru the millions of American workers. The RAIC has set its task the raising of the first million dollars. Already they have sold $300,000 worth of shares. The F.S.R. undertakes the task of selling $100,000 worth of shares. To accomplish this, we shall exploit the full strength of our organization."

Letters are being sent to F.S.R. secretaries, with concrete suggestions for work to be done to put this motion into effect. Literature goes with it that explains the plan of the RAIC in great detail.

All together for Soviet Russia thru the Russian-American Industrial Corporation!

Renew Mine Agreement for Three States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois

After a six-day conference between sub-scale committees of miners and mine owners in the three central competitive states an agreement was reached which renewed the wage scales and working conditions for the 200,000 coal miners in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio.

Details of the agreement are yet to be made public, but it is plain that neither the labor leaders or the operators wanted a repetition of the struggle of last year.

The Cleveland agreement was reached last fall, not because of any action on the part of the reactionary Lewis machine in control of the United Mine Workers of America, but because the strike itself was developing militant sentiment on the part of the rank and file of the members in favor of continuing the strike until the employers were decisively beaten. When the militants of many districts started a concerted move to continue the strike and demand more than simple reinstatement of the old terms, Lewis & Co., always alert to serve the interests of the enemies of labor, hastily called the conference that resulted in the return of most of the strikers to the pits.

Anyone who knows anything about strategy on the trade union field recognizes that there is at present a splendid opportunity for the miners to improve their conditions of work, but the Lewis machine prevents effective action by renewing an agreement that goes no further than merely recognizing the existence of the union.

Compers Still Hunting Heresy in Steno Union, This Time in Omaha

(By Federated Press)

OMAHA.—Organizer Conboy, A. F. of L., has recommended to President Gompers that the charter of the Omaha local of the Bookkeepers, Stenographers and Accountants' union be taken up, on the ground that it has but eight members, with several of them not now working at the trade. Another reason assigned is that the Midwest Labor News, whose editor, J. A. Lochray, is a member of the union, did not adhere to the A. F. of L. nonpartisan policy in the last election but favored independent political action. The paper is the official organ of the Nebraska State Federation of Labor and of the Omaha Central Labor Union, of the Carpenters' District council, of the Women's Union Label league. Gompers communicated with the Omaha central body, which will decide on a course of action after hearing the report of the local organizer.

Charters of the New York and Seattle locals have been taken up and the New York local reorganized.

Amalgamation and the Labor Party

[illegible] Practical Plan for Amalgamation of Metal Trades

Propose Practical Plan for Amalgamation of Metal Trades

By CALEB HARRISON

A practical plan of Amalgamation for the metal trades has just been issued by the Committee composed of a large number of delegates from the following unions of metal workers:

International Association of Machinists.
International Brotherhood of Toolmakers and Helpers.
International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers.
International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.
Metal Trades International Union.
Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers.
International Molders' Union.
Patternmakers' League.

These eight are possibly the most important of all the 24 unions that now exist in the metal industry.

Eight out of 24 does not seem to be many organizations to favor a plan that amounts to all to be completed. Even so, we need only keep in mind that the Amalgamation campaign is but one year old, and has to contend with stiff opposition from all the reactionary international officers of the various unions, and we then get a clear idea of the great progress made.

The convention at which the plan was adopted was not called especially for the metal trades—more attention from the outside was given to the affairs of the sixteen railroad unions. The result was that many metal working unions did not know that a metal union program was to be considered.

Any person employed in the modern metal working industry will appreciate very much the clear description of the development of the metal industry from the blacksmith shop, foundry, and machine shop of the village in bygone days to the gigantic modern metal working establishment of to-day employing thousands of workers of every conceivable trade in metal fabrication. There are many workers still living who witnessed this growth of the metal industry; there are many workers, who actually began work somewhere in some isolated blacksmith shop, machine shop or foundry, and remained part of the industry as it traversed thru the various stages of amalgamation—while the various specialized shops were brought together into the present-day steel mills, electrical plants, etc., all under the dominance of Wall Street bankers.

Craft Unionism Obsolete

Yet how many of these workers understood the social significance of this amalgamating process in industry? How many understood how this change would affect their unions? If any understood they kept very quiet for fear that the significance of the change would have a bad effect upon sacred forms and customs in the realm of unionism. It is now about twenty years since the labor movement was stirred by the industrial unionism movement. The weakness of the craft form of union, its helplessness against the corporations and trusts, employing workers of all trades, was outlined just as clearly as it is outlined today; but for some reason, that the industrial unionist could not understand, the workers failed to respond in large numbers. There never was a response as encouraging as that found in the Amalgamation Conference in Chicago last December, 9 and 10.

One great trouble with the industrial unionist in the past was his impatience with the trade unions. Failing to win the unions over after a few short skirmishes with the reactionary officials he gave up the fight and decided that the trade unions are hopelessly reactionary and corrupt. Then the industrial unionist concluded that if the trade unions would be destroyed and put out of the way the path would be clear for the organization of all wage workers into one powerful industrial union. The most fatal mistake industrial unionists of the past ever made was to think that organizing the working class would be easy just because the industrial union plan of organization is superior to the trade union form.

The Amalgamated circular does not fall into this error. They have taken a leaf from the book of the employers—the employers did not destroy the existing industries when they set out to amalgamate. The employers knew that it would not be easy to organize new industries on the new basis. They amalgamated the old ones, except when some short-sighted owner stood in the way, then they put him out of business.

A Comprehensive Program

There are something like 33 occupations in the metal industry and nearly 4,500,000 workers who are eligible to membership in a union of the metal working industry. If an effective and up-to-date union can organize the majority of these workers more readily than an outworn trade union can, then it is the greater part of wisdom to take the strength that the numbers of the present unions give us and increase that strength thru amalgamation rather than to spend our energies trying to first tear down before we build.

The amalgamation program leaves nothing undone. There is a comprehensive plan that every rank-and-file member of a union can understand. A plan that leaves the reactionaries no argument against industrial unionism.

The seventh aim in the platform of the Machinists' Union reads: We aim, "to adopt and carry out a plan of co-operation with other crafts—with the ultimate purpose of amalgamating all metal trades—thereby eliminating strikes of one organization at a time and by concerted action all reap the full benefit of their labor." No mistake about the intent of the letter and spirit of this aim, but we won't find the International officers of any union getting behind that aim—no, indeed. The membership must get behind in their local lodges and stand ready for the next convention when the metal workers will prepare to put amalgamation into effect.

Duncan Stays to Dance for F.S.R., Feb. 2

Isadora Duncan has decided to remain in America a few weeks longer for the special purpose of giving a benefit performance under the auspices of the Friends of Soviet Russia.

In view of the fact that this great dancer, the acknowledged leader of her art—has been persecuted and maligned since her arrival because of her pro-Soviet sympathies, her appearance under such radical auspices is very significant.

The performance will be absolutely her last on an American stage. She will leave for Soviet Russia as soon after this final appearance as possible. The performance is scheduled for Friday evening, Feb. 2nd, at the Lexington Theatre, 51st Street and Lexington Avenue, New York City.

The program for the evening, Miss Duncan has announced, will be exclusively Russian, and in every respect new. Music will be provided by the Russian Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Modest Altschuler.

Notes of Local New York.

A few more back numbers of the Labor Herald, Russian Review and The Marxian are on sale at the Toiler Book Shop, 208 E. 12th St., all at five cents a copy.

All delegates to the City Central Committee must attend the meeting Saturday, Jan. 27th, at 8 p. m., 208 E. 12th St., as the election of an Executive Secretary for the coming year will take place.

Comrades thruout the Local are cautioned that all tickets for the November 7th and November 29th affairs must be in the local office by February 1st.

Book Review

By H. M. WICKS

"GUILD SOCIALISM," BY NILES CARPENTER, PH.D., PUBLISHED BY D. APPLETON & CO., NEW YORK.

As long as publishers can be found gullible enough to publish such unadorned twaddle as is contained in the 331 pages of this book there will be an abundance of college professors who will write it.

Mr. Carpenter, the author of this book, is an instructor and tutor in social ethics at Harvard University. When we observe the products of American colleges and universities presuming to write upon questions concerning the working class of the world we sometimes wonder about what type of disordered mind fills the university chairs of the nation.

This compilation of drivel from the pen of Mr. Carpenter goes a long way toward explaining how it comes about that the most ignorant people in America are the college and university graduates and why it is that products of the institutions of so-called higher learning must divest themselves completely of their former knowledge before they are of any value in the labor struggle.

The subject of the book is that weird concoction of labor-liberalism that falls under the head of guild socialism, an economic fallacy, harking back to the Middle Ages. The prototype of the modern guild idea is to be found in medieval guilds.

The author does not entirely agree with the idea of guild socialism and his principal objection to it is the fact that it is tinged with Marxism. Of course, Mr. Carpenter does not state just how the movement is influenced by Marxism, but the assertion that Marxism is one of the principles of the movement furnishes the author an opportunity to expose his complete ignorance of the subject he has attempted to deal with and exposes him as a cheap mountebank and literary adventurer who tries to conceal his learned ignorance under the same cloak that conceals Dr. Elliott's five feet of imbecility—Harvard University.

On page 226 of his book, Professor Carpenter declares that the small book "Socialism, Its Growth and Outcome," by William Morris and Belfort Bax is little more than a condensation of Marx's Das Capital.

Such a statement is evidence that the Harvard professor is either a liar or a fool, for by no stretch of the imagination can the book by Morris and Bax be construed as a condensation of the work of Marx. As a matter of fact there is no attempt made by Morris and Bax to explain the economic theories of Marx which are elaborated in his Capital.

Listen to this sublime gem from the fountain of wisdom where our best young men receive their higher learning:

> "There is no need to enter into a detailed examination of the fallacies involved in Marxism; the task has been adequately done many times, both by socialists and non-socialists."

Thus is Marx swept from consideration and in a footnote we learn the names of some of the annihilators of Marxism. The non-socialist critics include the writer, who modestly admits that he once refuted Marx, and also our old friend Boehm-Bawerk, with his marginal utility vagarism that passes among the bourgeois intellectuals for economics because it flatters their own inferiority. The "Realists" who have adequately disposed of Marxism are Bernstein, the revisionist of Germany, and the Italian, Loria, the plagiarist, who first perverted the works of Marx in a clumsy Italian edition and then used Marx's own arguments to reply to his invention.

This man Loria must have been a source of inspiration for Carpenter and we are quite sure that Frederick Engels, were he living today, would apply the same epithets of degradation to Carpenter that he did to Achille Loria, another college professor.

Carpenter imagines the labor theory of value of Marx was originated by certain English economists and tries to belittle Marx by connecting their names with his theory as if in England many years before the publication of Marx's earliest works, that Professor Carpenter, himself, was unfamiliar with the works of Marx is seen from his crude endeavor to explain the labor theory of value. Says Carpenter on page 237:

> "Now, in order to make the labor theory of value signify anything beside the manifestly absurd proposition that value increases directly as the length of time consumed in producing an article, the theory must be loaded down with a set of qualifications which entirely contradict it."

He then explains that it would be more profitable under such a theory who employ lazy, stupid and crippled workmen. It is almost unbelievable that such a miserable perversion of Marx can find its way into print, but this and any school child who has ever read the simplest and most elementary of the economic works of Marx could set the professor straight in regard to what Marx meant.

Marx never held that the value of a commodity was determined by the actual amount of individual labor embodied therein, but that it was determined by the socially-necessary labor, which excludes cripples, idiots and college professors.

This infantile screed by Carpenter has absolutely no value, historically, economically, or sociologically. It is merely one more pebble in the monument erected by college professors that testifies to the impregnability of the Marxian law of value.

The worker who buys this book will not only waste his money, but will waste his time reading it, which is of more importance than money. In reading books the worker should choose the best, as our time is all too limited anyway and every book read should furnish us new weapons with which to fight labor's struggles. Let the calumniators of Marx in the university chairs write their foolish books for the consumption of the ruling class whose boots they are anxious to lick, but the working class should have none of them.

The college professors and colleges and universities generally, are coming into such disrepute that intelligent workmen exist today by the thousands who can successfully refute the shabby pretensions of the so-called educators of America.

World Labor Is Told the Aim of the Revolutionary Trade Unions is the Overthrow of Capitalism

being made of the Shop Stewart Movement.

He warned against the illusions of the Red Trade Union. Lozovsky demanded more activity from trade unions working within the various industrial internationals. At the same time, care must be taken that the unity of the industrial internationals is preserved as far as possible.

Lozovsky also spoke on the tasks of the Communists in the trade unions. He said that the Comintern (Communist International) fought equally against the breaking up of the trade unions and against the liquidation of the Profintern (Red International of Labor Unions).

The offensive of the capitalists, he said, and the tactics of the reformists diminished the number of members in the trade unions. The Amsterdam Trade Union International bravely defends the interests of the bourgeoisie, instead of those of the proletariat; it is cowardly in its relations to the bourgeoisie, but most courageous with regard to the left. The Amsterdam Trades Union International is openly striving to split up the trade unions. This has been seen in France, in Czecho-Slovakia, and in Spain.

The periodical of the General German Trade Union Federation announces: "The enemy is on the left. We must purge our own ranks!"

The German miners' movement prefers to join hands with Catholic and Polish national federations rather than with the Union of Brain and Hand Workers. The German Industrial Union of Clothing Workers is in close association with the Russian trade unions because the latter belong to the Profintern.

In France, Italy, Spain, Holland and America, the anarcho-syndicalists are combatting the Profintern under the watchword of independence, or small group of political vagabondage. Their political ideal is the banal chief Machno.

Neither the anarchists nor the syndicalists recognize the part to be played by a revolutionary party. In syndicalism there are various tendencies. Many recognize the necessity of the proletarian dictatorship. We must work in common with these, despite theoretical differences.

The relations of the trade unions to the party must be adapted to the special conditions in every country. The French party and the French trade unions must come to an agreement as to their mutual relations. The independence of the Union of Brain and Hand Workers in Germany can be maintained.

The members of the French party must however remain communists, even in the trade unions. In France the syndicalists created the first communist party and not the party which promoted the syndicalists of the French party.

We communists must fight against the illusion that in the trade unions there have been expulsions, we must act for re-union. We must create communist groups within the syndicalist, anarchist factions. These groups must be immediately gathered together, to the watchword of re-unity.

If the exclusion of the communists from the Amsterdam International is continued, this will oblige us to gather together the international revolutionary forces. We fight equally against schism and against the voluntary withdrawal of communists from the trade unions.

The party press must devote more attention to the trade union question. We are most desirous of winning the trades union leaders, but the workers.

Affiliation to the Profintern is only possible where a revolutionary trade union organization is in favor of it; where this is not the case, we must remain further in the trade unions. The red trade unions must also remain in the international industrial federations, and fight energetically in them.

The Comintern unites communists only, but the Profintern unites all revolutionary workers really anxious to fight against capitalism and reformism.

The liquidation of the Profintern, as demanded by the Amsterdamers would be a crime against communism.

Lozovsky then read letters from the Communist Party of Germany, from the Communist Party of Czecho-Slovakia, from the Communist Party of Spain, from the Communist Party of Italy, from the Communist Party of Holland, from the Communist Party of Norway, from the Communist Party of Switzerland, from the Communist Party of Bulgaria, from the Communist Party of Poland, from the Communist Party of Finland, from the Communist Party of Jugo-Slavia, from the Communist Party of Rumania, from the Communist Party of Greece, from the Communist Party of Austria, from the Communist Party of Hungary, from the Communist Party of Canada, from the Communist Party of the United States, from the Communist Party of Mexico, from the Communist Party of Argentine, from the Communist Party of Chile, from the Communist Party of Brazil, from the Communist Party of Uruguay, from the Communist Party of Paraguay, from the Communist Party of Peru, from the Communist Party of Ecuador, from the Communist Party of Columbia, from the Communist Party of Venezuela, from the Communist Party of Cuba, from the Communist Party of Porto Rico, from the Communist Party of Dutch India, from the Communist Party of Japan, from the Communist Party of China, from the Communist Party of Korea, from the Communist Party of Australia, from the Communist Party of South Africa, from the Communist Party of Egypt, from the Communist Party of Palestine, from the Communist Party of Persia, from the Communist Party of Turkey, from the Communist Party of Armenia, from the Communist Party of Georgia, from the Communist Party of Azerbaijan, from the Communist Party of Bokhara, from the Communist Party of Khiva, from the Communist Party of Turkestan, from the Communist Party of Tartary, from the Communist Party of Bashkiria, from the Communist Party of Buriat-Mongolia, from the Communist Party of Kirgisia, from the Communist Party of Daghestan, from the Communist Party of Kabardia, from the Communist Party of Tchetchnia, from the Communist Party of Ingushia, from the Communist Party of Karatchai, from the Communist Party of Kalmykia, from the Communist Party of Adygeia, from the Communist Party of Karelia, from the Communist Party of Ossetia, from the Communist Party of Abkhazia, from the Communist Party of Ajaria, from the Communist Party of Crimea, from the Communist Party of Tchuvashia, from the Communist Party of Mordvinia, from the Communist Party of Tcheremissia, from the Communist Party of Votiakia, from the Communist Party of Permia, from the Communist Party of Siberia, from the Communist Party of Ukraine, from the Communist Party of White Russia, from the Communist Party of Lithuania, from the Communist Party of Lettonia, from the Communist Party of Esthonia, from the Communist Party of Finland, from the Communist Party of Iceland, from the Communist Party of Norway, from the Communist Party of Sweden, from the Communist Party of Denmark, from the Communist Party of Holland, from the Communist Party of Belgium, from the Communist Party of Luxemburg, from the Communist Party of Switzerland, from the Communist Party of Germany, from the Communist Party of Austria, from the Communist Party of Hungary, from the Communist Party of Czecho-Slovakia, from the Communist Party of Jugo-Slavia, from the Communist Party of Rumania, from the Communist Party of Bulgaria, from the Communist Party of Albania, from the Communist Party of Greece, from the Communist Party of Italy, from the Communist Party of Spain, from the Communist Party of Portugal, from the Communist Party of France

Fourth Congress of Communist International Issues Call to World's Workers to Unid

ples of organizing the common fight for saving the eight hour day, against wage reductions, against the loss of everything which has been gained by the trade unions, against the renewed armaments, and against the danger of new wars.

At the Berlin Conference of the representatives of the three executives, the representatives of the Communist International made this proposal. The parties of the Second International rejected it. —

As a first condition for the convention of a world workers' congress, the Second International demanded that the Soviet Government abandon its opposition to those parties attempting to induce the Russian proletariat to renounce the most important conquests of the revolution, to give up the possession of the factories and to replace the power in the hands of the bourgeoisie; as a second condition the demand was made that the Communists cease propagating their views within the trade unions, and give up combatting those trade union heads who are in favor of weakening the struggle of the working class against the bourgeoisie, altho the intensification of this struggle is an obvious necessity.

The Communist International was obliged to decline these proposals, for their acceptance would have been tantamount to the abandonment of the whole aim and object of the United Front.

We are working for the united front with the aim of increasing, not lessening, the fighting and defensive powers of the proletariat against the international bourgeoisie.

Six Months of Capitalist Offensive

Another half year has passed since the failure of our proposal to form a united proletarian front for the organization of the proletarian defensive struggle. This half year saw the uninterrupted advance of the bourgeoisie in all countries.

In England the reactionary elements of the bourgeoisie have gained the upper hand. They have put an end to Lloyd George's attempts to conceal the aggressive policy of English capital beneath the phrases expressing anxiety for peace and for the reconstruction of Europe.

The Conservative Party, now reigning supreme, has proclaimed "law and order" as its watchword, and "non-interference of the state in economics", that is, to give capital a free hand in the strangulation of the proletariat.

Its first step was the attempt to do away with the minimum living wage. Bonar Law even refused to listen to the unemployed.

In France the government gave the command to shoot at striking workers in Le Havre, only 4 years after the wholesale bloodbath. The French government attacks the eight hour day openly.

In Germany the coalition government of Social Democrats and bourgeoisie has openly and unequivocally declared that the sole means of stabilizing the mark is to squeeze more work out of the under-nourished proletarian masses. It has openly proclaimed that the last vestige of economic control is to be given a free hand. The new Cuno government is a government of industrial magnates, and the fore-runner of the open dictatorship of the iron and coal barons. The character of this government is so notoriously reactionary, so unmistakably directed against the freer interests of the working class, that the Social Democrats were obliged to refuse to enter it. From Bavaria the extreme conter-revolutionists are preparing to use armed attack on the last remnants of the November Revolution, on the republic. They are encouraged in their efforts by the success of the Fascisti in Italy, where the dictatorship of capital was established without the slightest resistance being offered by the democratic bourgeoisie, where the parliament has become a zero and now aims at no more than the cult of the bourgeoisie, that the working class is to be forced to place itself unreservedly at the disposal of capital, with blood and sweat.

In Czecho-Slovakia the capitalists are throwing thousands of workers into the streets daily. Unemployment increases; one lock-out after another is instituted to reduce the workers' wages.

Austria has been crushed into a colony of the Entente capital. Austrian finance is to be put on a sound basis at the expense of the Austrian working class, by means of starvation wages for the workers and the lower officials of the civil service. The representatives of Entente capital are to be lords over life and death of the Austrian masses.

In the United States of America the employers are attempting to destroy the trade unions by depriving the workers of the right to organize. Capital is to possess its mighty trusts and no one is to drink a glass of milk without tribute to the Trust. But the working class is to be scattered by every puff of wind.—like sand.

In South Africa, General Smuts, the gem of international liberalism, is playing the Grand Executioner. General Smuts, pacifist of the League of Nations, not only commands workers on strike to be shot down, but he has the leaders of the South African mining struggle, provoked by his government, hanged eight months later.

New Wars Ahead

All these are facts showing how the most elementary interests of the working class are being trampled underfoot. But the capitalist offensive is not without counter-blows. Everywhere has the dictatorship of capital called forth the most violent

Put the Mine Owners on Trial

There has been a continuous angry roar from the kept press during the past few days over the acquittal of the five workers placed on trial for their lives in Illinois as a result of the "Herrin Mine War." The blood hungry of the Chamber of Commerce, the Manufacturers' Association, the Union League Clubs, and the spokesmen of American capitalism, from President Harding down to the cheapest stool pigeon of the American Defense Society, has been cheated. The Illinois Mine Workers' Union has won against organized dollars.

It is now the turn of the Miners' Union to demand that the mine owners, their backers in the campaign against organized labor, and the heads of the scab-herding employment agencies in Chicago, be placed on trial for their lives.

No one denies that William J. Lester, owner of the Lester Strip Mine, near Herrin, Ill., tried to operate his mine with scab labor, when the miners were on strike for living conditions.

No one denies that Lester hired thugs and gunmen from detective agencies in Chicago, St. Louis, and other cities to terrorize the neighborhood in the vicinity of his mine.

No one denies that Lester had employment agencies in Chicago recruiting strike-breakers for him; that scabs were lured to the Herrin mine thru misrepresentation and falsehood.

No one denies that two union miners, when they came to the Lester mine to protest against these conditions, were murdered in cold blood by Lester's hired assassins.

It is declared that the United States Steel Corporation, successful in operating the non-union steel industry, supported Lester in his war on the miners' union, the war that resulted in deaths that organized business charged against the organized workers.

The miners' union and its members have been declared innocent by a jury in a capitalist court of justice, the prosecution being financed by big business and carried forward by the labor-hating Attorney General Brundage, of Illinois, who has ambitions to be the dollar governor of the state.

Lester was directly responsible for the Herrin Mine War and its death toll of more than a score of lives. PUT HIM ON TRIAL FOR HIS LIFE.

The heads of strike-breaking employment and thug-herding detective agencies were Lester's accomplices. THEY SHOULD BE PLACED ON TRIAL WITH HIM.

If it can be shown that the Steel Trust stood back of Lester, and an effort should be made to do this, then its officials, even up to Judge Gary, should be put in the prisoners' dock along with Lester and the rest of his union-smashing outfit.

Union miners at Herrin have been arrested, torn from their families, thrown into prison, indicted and forced to face trial on a charge of murder. They have been acquitted.

The Illinois Miners' Union should not, and must not rest until Gary, Lester and all their open-shop gang, have been forced to go thru a similar ordeal. And the chances are that, if this is done, they will be found guilty of the crime which everyone knows they have committed.

The Illinois Miners' Union and its members have been on the defensive since the Herrin Mine War last summer. It is time that the Miners' Union took the offensive against those oppressing its membership.

"Ghastly testimony to political cowardice," comments the New York Times on the acquittal verdict returned in the Herrin miners' trial. It makes the Times feels pretty sick to know that its peculiar brand of legalised lynching failed to work in Illinois.

The Chicago Federation of Labor

It has come to be taken for granted that the Chicago Federation of Labor will support any measure of immediate benefit to the workers. It is for amalgamation, independent political action, it has led in the fight for the class war prisoners, and now calls upon Governor Binchot for the release of Jacob Dolla.

In harmony with this advance stand, the central organization of Chicago's workers has endorsed the declaration of the Second National Convention of the Workers Party for the protection of foreign-born workers.

Similar action will be taken, no doubt, by the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly, the Seattle Central Labor Council, and a few more. But that is about as far as most of these drives get. It is strenuously urged, however, that the campaign for safeguarding foreign-born workers be made the exception. Let every central labor body in the land, every state federation, every international union consider and act favorably on this matter.

Consider these facts. The foreign-born workers have been singled out by the bosses for special attack. President Harding has urged that they be registered; the department of justice that they be photographed and finger-printed like criminals; the "Banker" Secretary of Labor Davis that their naturalization papers be revoked for "unsatisfactory" conduct; and Rep. Edmonds, in congress, that they be immediately deported for participation in strikes.

While the thinking elements among the foreign-born are thus to be gagged, there is to be a special drive in Europe by the employing interests for "selective immigration." Workers from northern Europe, who read and write, will be rejected. It is found that they refuse to come to this country, anyway. They do not relish being converted into human fodder for America's industrial machine. The quotas from these countries under the three per cent law remain unfilled.

These workers of northern Europe know American industry with its brutal exploitation, its union-smashing, open shop policy, its spies and gunmen, its subsidised press and kept churches, its injunction judges, state constabularies and servile lawmakers, in city, county, state and nation.

That is why the bosses drive for "selective immigration" is being made for illiterates from the Balkan states and other countries of Southern Europe where the belief still prevails that the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor stands guard over a land of golden opportunity. These do not know that they are merely exchanging their hard European serfdom for an American slavery just as grinding.

It will not be their unwillingness to engage in the American class struggle against their new exploiters, but ignorance of their new environment, that will make these newly arrived immigrants a powerful weapon in the hands of the bosses to beat down the strivings of organized labor.

It is, therefore, the duty of all American organized labor to support the stand of the Chicago Federation of Labor and the Workers Party to defend the foreign-born workers already here, against every assault of the bosses and the bosses' government, and to develop organs for the assimilation of all newly-arrived immigrants into the ranks of the American labor unions.

The giant need of American labor today is a united front of the native-born with the foreign-born. In the words of a real American patriot, Benjamin Franklin, when the colonists were fighting the British, "We either stand together, or we hang separately." The Chicago Federation of Labor calls upon the workers to stand together and triumph.

Arthur Henderson, the British jingo labor leader, defeated in the recent general elections to the House of Commons, has been victorious in a bye-election. He will prove a wet blanket rather than an aid to the fighting elements among the 143 labor members of the British parliament.

Cachin Goes to Prison

The military dictatorship in France grows in audacity. That it has the French chamber of deputies completely in its clutches is shown by the vote of 371 to 143 denying immunity to Marcel Cachin, one of its Communist members. The fearless editor of L'Humanité, the Communist daily, is now lodged in the Sante Prison, in Paris.

During the days of civil tranquility, capitalist democracy in France, as everywhere that capitalism rules, wraps itself in bourgeois hypocrisies. Among the most fatuous of these is the one absolving members of parliament from prosecution for any utterances they may make, and to a certain extent from any activities they may engage in. This is supposed to be an aid to free and untrammelled expression.

But immediately an utterance or activity can be interpreted as attacking the capitalist state, this immunity is lifted. Communists have no rights in capitalist parliaments when the ruling class fears the loss of its power. Then the lot of Communists is prison and death.

Bourgeois democracy came to an end in Italy with the Mussolini dictatorship. "Democracy" in France took a big step in the same direction when the French chamber handed Cachin over to the public prosecutors to be put on trial for treason against the capitalist state.

French imperialism may well take a warning from the fact that when the vote against Cachin was announced, the Communist members of the chamber began singing "The Internationale." That is the kind of spirit that will triumph against all opposition.

"German Mark Falls to 21,000 for Dollar", is the latest headline on the financial pages of the daily press. Yes, and it is still falling. That means that European capitalism is decaying.

Let the King's Son Work

British aristocracy is sorely troubled over the fact that the financial outlook for the Duke of York, second son of the King of the British Empire, is not of the best. In truth the prospects are very dark.

The Duke is planning to marry Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, daughter of the Earl of Strathmore. The reports agree that the Duke is just as poverty-stricken as the Lady, who comes from an ancient and bankrupt family.

We are told that custom forbids the King's sons working for a living, except as officers of the navy or army, which isn't very strenuous labor and not so well paid.

In the past, a kindly parliament has voted sufficient funds out of taxes wrung from the workers to keep the royal households. But that was before the workers had 143 members in the British parliament.

There are several millions of jobless in England today, unemployed workers who would be willing to take jobs if they were available. The labor bloc in the House of Commons is putting up a fight for these, and the labor commoners would make it very uncomfortable for the King's exchequer if he came before them begging for a huge sum to keep the Duke and his Lady in idle luxury. The debate would be very disagreeable "don't cher know."

Our suggestion to the labor bloc in the British parliament would be to offer the Duke a job on the docks along the Thames in London. That would keep him near his father's house. That wouldn't enable him to earn very much, to be sure, and he would be compelled to break royal precedents. But it would help him work up a little muscle and put a few callouses in his hands against the day when British labor will abolish all bourgeois customs, take the titles away from all the kings, dukes and earls and put all the royal parasites to work, a la Soviet Russe.

The era of new mergers has hit the theatres and we are promised a "$50,000,000 Theatrical Combination" headed by Erlanger and the Shuberts. Get ready to pay more for the little amusement that you now can afford.

The Coming Crash in Europe

There is more inflammable substance in Europe in the present crisis than there was in the summer days of 1914 before the great war burst into flames. Any day may furnish the spark that will set off the new holocaust.

The French armies are sitting around the Ruhr mines but little coal is coming to the surface. Strikes of the German miners and railwaymen are notices upon the Paris diplomats that bayonets are poor tools for digging coal and running trains.

The result is that Germany is pulling France down with her in the general European chaos. This will be evident more and more as French imperialism is compelled to discard the present bold front that has no support in substance.

For the time being, what French capitalism has succeeded in doing is to develop a new spirit of German nationalism, to crystallize the jingoism that is drawing into its deceiving meshes large masses of the German working class. This militates against immediate solidarity of the German workers against both German and French capitalism.

This may be what France desires. Military resistance by Germany would give French militarism an excuse for taking over the remainder of the German republic, with the aid of her allies, Poland, Hungary, Czecho-Slovakia and other French controlled states.

The hand of French diplomacy is now seen in the seizing of Memel by the Lithuanians. The Russians have discovered documents, according to Moscow reports, showing that the French vassal state, Poland, had urged the Lithuanians to seize Memel, hoping thus to keep this Baltic state quiet in the face of new developments.

With Poland attacking Germany from the east, Soviet Russia would certainly be drawn into the conflict as a defensive measure against the extending by France of world capitalism's front against Communism to her own borders.

Thus the world awaits the new crash in Europe. Great Britain and the United States stand back as they fear France is going to her own doom. Soviet Russia would rather spend the months ahead in the great work of reconstruction, in rebuilding her industries and rehabilitating her agriculture. But, if she must fight again for her preservation, her Red Army stands ready. The five years of victory of the Russian Soviet Republic will be followed by a sixth year of new triumphs.

Larkin Is Free Again

Governor Smith, of New York, has freed Jim Larkin from the Sing Sing prison. It is declared that he will also free the other Communist prisoners still confined in New York penitentiaries.

Larkin entered Sing Sing prison May 4, 1920, to serve a five year term. His crime was having joined in issuing the "Left Wing Manifesto," voicing the position of the revolutionary elements within the Socialist Party in 1919. Larkin has thus served two years for expressing his political views, long after the war came to an end.

Governor Smith gives several reasons for "pardoning" Larkin. But he cleverly steers shy of the issue stated in Larkin's first words after leaving prison, "I never deserved to be sent here in the first place."

Larkin's big crime, according to the capitalist court that tried him, was that he urged the "dictatorship of the proletariat" in the form of soviets, and that he favored the general strike.

Governor Smith also takes complete exception to Larkin's views, claiming that, "In a free democracy we know no dictatorship and we endure none," contending that, "Political progress results from the clash of conflicting opinions."

Leniency toward Larkin by Governor Smith is perhaps best explained by New York's executive when he says that, "Our state rests too firmly upon the devotion of its citizens to require for its protection an imprisonment of five years for the mere expression of an erroneous or even illegal opinion,—political doctrine, unaccompanied by any overt act."

In other words, Governor Smith does not fear that Larkin can do any great harm to the capitalist state at the present time. Therefore, it is easy for him now to agree with two dissenting judges of the Court of Appeals that Larkin had been unjustly convicted, and with the judge who wrote the prevailing opinion that the sentence imposed was too severe.

"From the legal point of view," says Governor Smith, "it is a case where a man has received, during the period of unusual popular excitement following the close of the war, too severe a sentence for a crime involving no moral turpitude."

It is because of this that we say, "Larkin is free again." If Larkin continues in labor's struggle, as we doubt not that he will, then new prison terms will confront him, even under the regime of Governor Smith. The next strike, whether in New York or Buffalo, or any industrial center in between, will show that Governor Smith is on the side of the capitalist dictatorship, that he of course strenuously disavows.

The war activities of American capitalism are not now threatened, hence some of the war politicals have been freed. The American capitalist state does not face immediate extinction by a Soviet Republic. Governors Small, of Illinois, and Smith, of New York, therefore, write "pardons" as good political moves during a period of popular protest.

Let labor, however, use this breathing spell to strengthen its forces and consolidate its power to meet the next attack by the frightened hosts of capitalism. It is only by knowing the real meaning of these "pardons" that we can profit by them.

Here is another fitting candidate for a place on the bench of the United States Supreme Court in the person of Ex-Gov. Stephens, of California. Stephens has just marked his retirement from office by granting pardons en masse to convicted murderers, three burglars and two automobile thieves. No clemency was shown for the many criminal syndicalism victims, or the class war prisoners, including Mooney, Billings, Ford, Suhr and a host of others.

Mr. Lewis Brands Himself

John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, seized what he no doubt considered an opportune moment to attack the Red International of Labor Unions.

Lewis will get no applause from the thinking sections of the miners' union for trying to curry favor with the mine owners by condemning a "red raid" of his own against International of the world's militants in the economic organizations of labor.

It was some time ago that THE WORKER reported that the coal miners of Nova Scotia, Canada, at their district convention had voted for affiliation with the Red International of Labor Unions. So far as we are aware, this is the first district organization of the coal miners' union that has taken this action.

The Nova Scotia miners asked their international union for permission to link up with the Red International. No doubt they didn't feel like waiting for the more backward sections of the union to catch up with them. The Lewis administration wasn't satisfied to send its reply to the Canadian miners. Lewis used the opening of the conference with the mine owners in New York City to stage his attack on the Red International in particular, on radicals and Bolshevists in general. There was a big response from the White Guard sections of the kept press.

Lewis repeats the favorite charge of "union-wrecking" against the Communists. This is the indictment so often drawn by Lewis' friend Gompers, who, by the way, has never accepted the challenge of William Z. Foster to debate this question.

The Nova Scotia coal miners, having shown themselves the most radical section of the United Mine Workers, will no doubt disappoint Mr. Lewis by withholding their affiliation with the Red International until the other districts of the miners' union catch up with them. The militants of Nova Scotia realize that nothing is to be gained by flying in the face of the power of the present international officialdom.

The Nova Scotia miners will avoid by every possible means the ruthless expulsion that Lewis and his administration inflicted upon Alex Howatt and the Kansas miners.

Mr. Lewis, by invoking the aid of the capitalist press to attack the best elements in his own organization, has put the brand of "Union Wrecker" upon his own brow. By his repeated acts of betrayal he will burn it there so deep that every member of the miners' union will see it and act accordingly.

Geography and Slanders

One geographical fact usually overlooked by her critics is a rich source of mistaken conceptions about Russia. This fact is that Russia is not "just a country" like Germany, France or even the United States. It is a territory covering one-sixth of the globe; occupying, in fact, half of the European continent and half of the Asiatic continent. The distances are enormous, the transportation facilities insufficient. And so it was a matter of course for Russia, even before the war, that coal, dug in Southern Russia, was exported to Italy while coal for Petrograd had to be imported from England. This method was cheaper and easier than direct transportation from the Don basin to Northern Russia. Sending coal by rail such a distance would consume more coal than the amount shipped. Nobody criticized this method before the Revolution, but at present it has become one of the "proofs" of the inefficiency of the Soviet Government.

From reports coming from Russia thru the Associated Press it appears that a similar situation may prevail the coming winter in the matter of food supplies. Millions of poods of grain will be exported to other countries thru the Black Sea, while grain for the famine sufferers in other regions will have to be purchased from abroad. A procedure which, altho practised already before the war, will certainly be used as a stock argument by the enemies of Soviet Russia.

WE DON'T BLAME THE POLE-CATS A BIT!

A member of the Workers Party, a wobbly and a socialist were out for a stroll in the country one pleasant afternoon, when they came to a cave wherein dwelt various and sundry pole-cats.

The socialist, who had been loudly declaiming that the reduction of the holes in the doughnuts was a more important issue than the dictatorship of the proletariat, was silenced long enough for the three to make a wager. The wager, in brief, was based on who could enter the cave and remain therein for the greatest length of time.

The Workers Party-ite marched in bravely, but in a couple of minutes staggered out, fell in a faint and had to be revived.

Next the wobbly, undaunted and intrepid, entered and emerged in about five minutes, calling for a gas mask. He, too, fell in a faint and had to be revived.

Finally, the socialist went in; and hardly a moment had elapsed when the pole-cats staggered out, fell in a faint and had to be revived.

PHOOLOSOPHY

Deprive a socialist of the right to lie and he would be speechless.

Working-class solidarity is mighty. Indeed, mighty scarce.

A hundred-per-cent American is one willing to give your life for his country.

If brains are power a large per cent of our labor leaders must be paralytics.

In its appeal for funds, the Call writes: "A workers' press is a prime essential of a successful, flourishing labor movement." Maybe that's the reason why the Call fails to raise any money.

Judging by the number of times the Forward reported Lenin's death, someone would think Abe Cahan is the beneficiary of Comrade Lenin's insurance policy.

Support War on New War!

Workers of New York City, in a tremendous demonstration, at the Central Opera House, Tuesday, Jan. 30, took their stand with the Communists of Europe, by declaring war against the new capitalist war. They unanimously adopted a cablegram to be sent to the Communist International, at Moscow, and to the Communist Parties of the countries that sent representatives to the recent Communist Anti-War Conference at Essen, Germany. The cablegram was as follows:

"MASS MEETING UNDER AUSPICES OF WORKERS PARTY SUPPORTS THE CALL OF THE COMMUNIST PARTIES OF GERMANY, FRANCE, HOLLAND, BELGIUM, CZECHO-SLOVAKIA, GREAT BRITAIN AND ITALY, ADOPTED AT ESSEN, GERMANY, FOR JOINT ACTION AGAINST WORLD IMPERIALISM, DOWN WITH CAPITALISM. LONG LIVE COMMUNISM!"

Communists at Essen War Against War

(Special to "THE WORKER" by International Press Correspondence.)

ESSEN, Germany, Jan. 6.—Today there was a meeting here of the representatives of the Communist Parties of France (among others Cachin, and Monmousseau from the C.G.T.U.), England (among others the newly elected member of Parliament Newbold), Belgium, Italy, Czecho-Slovakia, Holland and Germany. There were also present the trade union leaders of the revolutionary railwaymen, metal workers, building workers and textile workers of [illegible]

[illegible] elected to the executive.

Cachin is the first speaker. He calculates with certainty on the occupation of the Ruhr valley. For Poincaré this is a question of to be or not to be. He owes it to his Bloc National. The French workers have taken up the most energetic fight against the fresh adventure of French imperialism. A common committee of action has been formed against the Versailles peace by the French Communist Party and the Confederation Generale du Travail Unitaire (C.G.T.U.)

Monmousseau (C.G.T.U.) speaks to the following effect: This meeting has nothing in common with that notorious conference held in 1918 in Brussels, where Jouhaux and Legien were present. At that time these men made the most sacred promises of peace only to break them afterwards. Jouhaux and Legien, these false apostles of war. We are no pacifists. We are in favor of peace because proletarian interests demand peace. We shall carry out the decisions resolved upon here without reserve. We shall do our utmost to prevent the occupation of the Ruhr valley.

Brandler reports on the position of the German party. This has now been considerably strengthened. Its influence reaches far beyond the limits of the party itself. Still we must not over-estimate our powers. But what we undertake to do at this conference shall be carried out.

Thalheimer gives a general survey of the international situation. Various possibilities are to be reckoned with. It may be that England and America will interfere at the last moment. But on the other hand it is equally possible that the pledges are seized without military measures. Should the Ruhr district be occupied, we must also calculate with the likelihood that the French government will first try to appease the workers with sugarplums, that is, with wages paid in francs, as the best way of corrupting them.? Thalheimer welcomes the energetic attitude adopted by the French workers. They may be assured that we make common cause with them. The present international situation renders it imperative for the German proletariat to issue the foreign political slogan of: A bloc between Germany, Soviet Russia and Turkey, able to defy the Entente.

Gallagher (England) speaks in favor of the sharpest possible action against the occupation of the Ruhr valley.

Ker (France) reports that the position of French industry is com-

Let Workers Restore Europe!

The appeal of the seven Communist Parties at the Essen Conference was as follows:

The Paris conference has failed. The France of Poincaré threatens the military occupation of the Ruhr basin, or at least with the confiscation of all state mines and forests, or with other economic compulsory measures.

Who will profit by it?

Certainly not the working population; neither the French nor the German.

The occupation and the repressive measures will bring no advantages, but will increase the burden of taxation and the exploitation of the working people.

The world conflicts will be rendered more acute, national hatred will be inflamed.

The sole result of the French repressive measures will be: An agreement between French and German capitalists at the expense of French and German workers.

Workers of France, fight for the immediate withdrawal of the troops from the occupied territories!

Oppose every repressive measure against Germany!

Fight until you have replaced these measures by once compelling your own bourgeoisie to bear the costs of the war and of reconstruction!

Agitate for these demands among your brothers in uniform!

German workers, force your capitalists to bear the costs of reparation!

No lengthening of working hours! Adequate wages? No interference with the right to strike! Control of industry and markets; suppression of Fascist organizations!

[illegible] French workers, clerks, small farmers, and tradesmen, [illegible] forward the foundations of your common

Organize National Council for Protection of Foreign-Born

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—The movement initiated by the Workers Party at its second national convention for protection of foreign-born workers against the attack made upon them by the government and the capitalists has secured the support of a large number of labor organizations and a provisional National Council is now in process of formation which will initiate a country-wide campaign.

Organizations which will likely be represented on the provisional National Council are the Farmer-Labor League, the Chicago Federation of Labor, the Minnesota State Federation of Labor and the Workers Party. National officials of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers have also given their approval of the campaign and this organization will very likely be included in those who have representation on the provisional National Council.

It is expected that the membership of the provisional National Council will be announced within the next week. Immediately after its organization this body will send an invitation to all the International Unions asking them to name representatives on the permanent National Council. A manifesto will be issued calling upon trade unionists, labor political organizations and all organizations of foreign-born workers to support the campaign against exception laws directed against the foreign-born workers.

William Z. Foster, Secretary of Trade Union Educational League, one of the organization which will likely be represented on the provisional National Council stated, when asked about the proposed campaign:

"The proposed laws for registration, finger-printing, photographing and punishment of foreign-born workers for strike activities are a blow directed at the whole American labor movement. The bosses hope, by keeping the foreign-born workers unorganized thru such oppressive measures to weaken the whole organized labor movement. The campaign for protection of the foreign-born should not only be directed against these laws but to the end of drawing every foreign-born worker into the unions and into the political struggles of labor."

As soon as the membership of the provisional National Council for protection of the foreign-born workers is definitely fixed a call will be issued by that body for the organization of local councils in every industrial center of the country.

It is expected by thus developing a mass movement against the exceptional laws against foreign-born workers to bring these workers in closer touch with the trade unions and the political organization of labor and thus strengthen labor in its struggle against the open shop and low wages.

Leaders in the movement expect that this campaign will be one of the biggest things in the history of the workers of this country thru uniting all the workers in one great fighting organization in the interest of labor.

Demonstrate Against New Morgan War

One of the most impressive working class gatherings ever held in New York City was called together Tuesday night, at the Central Opera House, under the direction of the Workers Party, to demonstrate against the new capitalist war that threatens with the French invasion of the Ruhr.

Among the speakers were C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary of the Workers Party; William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League; Ludwig Lore, editor of the Volks-Zeitung; M. J. Olgin, editor of the Freiheit; and A. Morgan, who spoke in French. J. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The [illegible]

The cablegram, appearing on this page, was unanimously adopted amidst great enthusiasm and the spirited singing of "The International".

All the speakers stressed the necessity of the solidarity of America's workers with oppressed labor in Europe and hailed the spread of the world social revolution as the only remedy for the evils that now afflict mankind under capitalism.

Outlook for Labor As Its Own Banker

EDITOR'S NOTE.—This week THE WORKER begins the publication of a series of articles by H. M. Wicks on the question of co-operation. This question has come to the front in the American working class movement thru the launching of huge financial enterprises, especially banks, by the railroad brotherhoods. In addition to these articles THE WORKER will gladly publish short contributions by its readers expressing their viewpoint, in agreement with, or in opposition to the views expressed by Comrade Wicks. His first article follows:

The Ruhr Invasion: Imperialism Wrecking the World!

MANIFESTO OF THE WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA

Capitalist imperialism, which gave Europe its blood-bath from 1914 to 1918, is completing the wreckage of that continent.

France, on the brink of bankruptcy because of the destruction of the imperialist world war, is seeking to wring from hungry and starving Germany the means of saving herself, but in place of saving herself merely prepares greater misery for the suffering working masses of both France and Germany.

The imperialist world war let loose forces which have undermined the whole capitalist system of production. The destruction of hundreds of billions of wealth, while the printing presses issued a continuous flow of bonds and paper money, have weakened and threatens the collapse of the financial structure of capitalism. Currency has become practically valueless in many instances. The exchange rates make the normal flow of trade impossible. Tariff walls and trade regulations across the new boundaries of many new governments created by the Versailles Peace Treaty add to the confusion.

European statesmen and financial experts, the agents of ruling capitalist exploiters, have struggled for four years with the net which enmeshes capitalist production. But fruitlessly, hopelessly. The machinery of production has slowed down. Production has fallen. Capitalism goes down to the grave which the imperialist world war prepared for it.

For four years the Entente capitalists have tried to save themselves by putting the burden of the world's overthrow on the shoulders upon Germany. But the destruction and havoc wrought by the war could not be made good by one of the participants in that war. All manoeuvering of the past four years have brought Europe no nearer to repairing the destruction and stopping the disintegration of production resulting from the war.

The French invasion of the Ruhr, the seizure of the heart of industrial Germany and the attempt to make the workers of this section, already the slaves of the German capitalists, also the slaves of French imperialism, can only bring greater wreckage. It cannot solve the insoluble problem of capitalism.

But this invasion does threaten the world with another orgy of bloodshed. It threatens to send into the maw of another imperialist war more millions of human lives and more millions of wealth.

Suffering and misery is already the lot of the workers of Europe. Hunger and starvation stalk through all Central Europe.

And now another war threatens, to complete the work of making a shambles of all that is left of the civilization of the world!

Workers of the United States! You will not be spared if red horsemen of death and destruction again ride across Europe.

Just as in 1916 we were "kept out of the war" and in 1917 were hurled into it because the interests of the capitalist exploiters of this country were in danger, so again we will be thrown into the new imperialist war to give our lives, to suffer and sacrifice to protect the interests and investments of American capitalism.

Workers of the United States! The workers of Europe are fighting to end the horrible system which brings so much misery and suffering upon the people of the world.

At Essen, in Germany, there met the representatives of the Communist parties of France, of Germany, of Holland, of England, of Checho-Slovakia, of Belgium, of Italy. They issued a call to the workers of all these countries, to the workers of the world to unite for struggle to end forever the rule of the capitalist imperialists, to establish their own Workers' Government.

Workers of the United States! The Workers Party (Communist) calls upon you to join with the workers of these countries to end the whole capitalist system, to prevent further destruction, to save the working masses from being sent down deeper into the mire of suffering, poverty and degradation.

Workers of the United States! Show your solidarity with the suffering workers of Europe! Join in mass meetings against capitalist imperialism! Against the capitalist governments which play the game of the imperialist exploiters.

DOWN WITH THE IMPERIALIST WAR! DOWN WITH THE EXPLOITERS AND MURDERERS OF THE WORKING MASSES!

FORWARD TO THE WORKERS' RULE AND WORKERS' REPUBLIC!

Central Executive Committee, Workers Party of America.

Foster Shows T.U.E.L. Makes Big Progress

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

The Trade Union Educational League must be moving ahead fast during these stormy days of struggle between the workers and their bosses in these United States.

At least that is the impression I received as I listened to William Z. Foster, secretary of the T. U. E. L. and editor of its official publication, "The Labor Herald", addressing a New York gathering of workers last Sunday, held under the auspices of "The League".

Foster had come to New York on "talk business". That is what he told his audience. With one hand he announced that [illegible] "no oratory" but with the other [illegible] man "talk."

It began to look as if the New York militants were in for a drubbing for their failure the past months to get across to the masses. But

TO TELL THE STORY OF RUSSIA IN 1922

James P. Cannon, Chairman, Workers Party, Returns from Russia to Tell of Six Months' Experiences

James P. Cannon, Chairman of the Workers Party, who spent six months in Russia as a fraternal delegate of the Workers Party to the Communist International, has returned to the United States. The National Office of the Party is arranging a nation-wide lecture tour for Cannon thru which he will tell the American workers about "Russia, in 1922."

Comrade Cannon has had unusual opportunity to study Russia. For more than six months he has been able to make daily observances of developments in that country and has been in intimate contact with the political and industrial developments in that country.

He has been able to study the conditions in Russian industry. He will tell of the growth of the nationalized industries of the country which are to be the basis for the Communist industrial order. He has gained a clear understanding of the part played by the Russian labor unions in industries, controlling working conditions, deciding the scales of wages for services and in general teaching the workers the art of managing and directing.

Comrade Cannon's picture of Russia in 1922 will include the story of the Red Army, a review of the work of the Fourth Congress of the Communist International and of the general work of the latter body.

The news articles and stories which he will send this country about Russia from time to time give only glimpses of the conditions in that country, from which it is impossible to gain an adequate conception of the progress which has been made.

Cannon will bring the results of six months' observation as a Communist in the work of building a Communist society and his messages will be full of encouragement and new inspiration because of the great achievements of the Russian workers.

Cannon will begin in the New England States about March 1. After covering New England, he will spend several weeks in Eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, and other states. Then his tour will take him thru New York State westward all the way to the Pacific Coast. It is expected that the tour will last at least three months and that Comrade Cannon will address at least a hundred mass meetings during that time.

Branches of the Workers Party are now being circularized in regard to the arrangements for the tour and the first dates will be announced in a week or ten days.

World War Vets Fighting Fascisti Here

(Special to The Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. — A campaign has been launched here by the National Headquarters of World War Veterans, to counteract the poisonous Fascisti propaganda now being spread thru the United States.

The position of the World War Veterans is set forth in a manifesto addressed "To all Lovers of Freedom" as follows:

Dear Friends: The Fascisti are organizing in America! Do you wish them success?

Mussolini's 15th Century condottieri have spread to the United States and now claim a membership of 200,000. Colonel Alvin Owsley, commander of the American Legion, recently declared "* the Legion would not hesitate to take things into its own hands—fight the reds as the Fascisti of Italy fought them.  Do not forget that the Fascisti of Italy are to Italy what the American Legion is to the United States, and that Mussolini, the new premier was the commander of the Legion- the ex-service men of Italy." Perhaps more notorious is that secret and clandestine organization, the Ku Klux Klan, with its "super-government" supported by cowardly punishments, that prohibits the free play of opinion, fomenits civil and religious strife, and seeks to divide America into two classes,—one to rule, another to obey. This they call "one hundred per cent Americanism." When Edward Young Clarke, chief organizer of the membership drive learned that the Chief of the United States Secret Service was being urged to arrest him, he commented thus: "Burns may be persuaded to arrest me, and if so, I shall not be constrained longer to keep off the dogs of war; it may mean a revolution, for I believe the Klansmen would stand by me." A more recent example of the Fascisti spirit occurred in Arkansas when a few hundred "citizens" seized by force of arms an entire community, with lynchings and maltreatment drove out the railroad strikers, their families and sympathizers, deposed regularly elected officials, and now proclaim to the world that organized labor is forever expelled from Harrison, Arkansas.

The ex-soldier swings the Fascisti club in Italy. Shall he swing it here? There are three million unorganized ex-service men in America. Reactionary organizations, subsidized by bankers and chambers of commerce, are trying to enveigle them under their control. With strong financial backing they are enabled to spread their lying propaganda thru numerous publications. These potential Fascisti armies may make plausible pretension of being "one hundred per cent American-ism," but their records are replete with mob violence against lovers of freedom of every school. Whoever practices free speech or questions the divine right of present industrial and political dictatorship is denounced as "red," "radical" and "un-American," held up to an unthinking public as an immoral degenerate, and mobs of ex-service men are incited to believe that such a beast richly deserves tar and feathers of Judge Lynch's noose.

There are one ex-soldiers' organization that declares fearlessly for industrial and political freedom and real lawabiding Americanism. We of the World War Veterans live up to our principles. Our record is clean. So no banker contributes to our welfare, no government diverts funds to our treasury. Whoever joins the American Legion gains distinct advantages—social entertainment, industrial preferment, political prestige. Whoever joins the World War Veterans sacrifices himself for an ideal. We stand, him against fascism, but hamstrung by poverty, are unable to launch a counter attack unless the progressive spirit of the nation is aroused to reinforce us.

"Are we to remain asleep while the net is spread? Shall we squirm helplessly under torch and rope, machine guns and bayonet? Or shall we now with organization and education spike these plans before it is too late, and forestall another Mussolini dictatorship established by force of arms in the name of law and order—"representative government" and "one hundred per cent Americanism,"—all of which interpreted invariably means unfettered freedom of the financial and industrial kings to hold the masses in silent, unresisting slavery?

The ex-soldier carries the Fascisti gun in Italy. The reactionary hands him the same gun here. Every lover of justice and freedom must assist us with a contribution to launch an educational campaign among the ex-service men.

Help us save the nation from disaster and reversion to medieval feudalism. Back us in our fight for liberty, justice and progress.

Fraternally,

HERBERT A. SUMAN,
Acting National Publicity Director,
World War Veterans.

The Struggle of the Miners

Officials Ousted, Convicted, Clubbed, Weapons Seized, Fayette County Troops Smash at Strikers in Latest War Manifestation; Locomotive Engineer Leads an Anti-Bolshevist Crusade; Other Items Before the Public

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

Governor Sweet, of Colorado, has ordered the State Rangers disbanded. This is the outfit that deported William Z. Foster from Colorado under the direction of "Pat" Hamrock, murderer of women and children at Ludlow, Colo. Sweet's next step should be to recruit the state militia from militant trade unionists and organize labor. 100 per cent in this Rockefeller-owned state. That would be getting the class struggle in this state down to fundamentals. We shall be glad to report any inclination on the part of Governor Sweet in this direction, altho we may be rather skeptical.

The Fight in Fayette County

Every militant trade unionist must stand aghast at the tyrannous measures used by the high officialdom of the United Mine Workers of America in driving the Fayette County, Pa., strikers back under the slave whips of the Standard Oil and United States Steel Corporations. We sense a note of protest in the declaration of "The Advance," official organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, when it declares:

"Miners in Connellsville (Fayette County, Pa.) have been advised by the officers of the United Mine Workers to return to work. The advice is tantamount to admission of defeat by the Union. It means that the masters of the Windber and the Standard Oil mining properties are to have their way with the lives of the men, women and children in that region once more."

It is very significant, as pointed out in THE WORKER last week, that the Connellsville miners were sacrificed on the altar of capitalist greed while the mine officials were sitting in conference with the mine owners in New York City. The Pittsburgh coal mine owners were there as "observers."

We judge that the miners' officials forced the Fayette County miners back to work defeated, as a condition of the agreement reached with the mine owners. We believe that if the mine officials had desired, the mine owners could have been forced into unionizing the the Fayette fields as a condition of the mine officials consenting to the agreement.

We, therefore, draw the conclusion that the Lewis administration, in its war upon the Fayette County coal miners, is once more playing into the hands of the coal profiteers, just as it did in the case of Howatt and the Kansas coal miners, just as it did in deserting the non-union fields in the Cleveland agreement, just as it did in inaugurating wars upon the coal miners of Nova Scotia, Canada. In the words of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' official organ:

"The struggle of labor for freedom and self-direction is a war. The Connellsville episode, full of pity and irony tho it is, is a skirmish in the war. Even if it were a battle, to lose it would not be to lose the war. On the contrary, signs are not lacking that the battalions of time are on the side of labor."

Yes, the battalions of time are on the side of militant labor. The forward-seeing workers, and the Fayette miners stand in the vanguard of the Miners' Union, have time on their side, both in the struggle against their oppressors, the mine owners, and against the chief allies of their oppressors, the reactionary and traitor officialdom of their own organization.

Porto Ricans suffering under American imperialist rule are to be "investigated" by a congressional committee. That will be a nice little winter junket for some senators and congressmen, with their families, but we venture to predict that oppression under the U. S. A. brand of imperialism will go on just the same.

Mr. Lewis Smoked Out

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers for the time being, has stood so straight in his consistently reactionary position that he has fallen over backward. He and the back tumblers on the question of nationalization of the coal mines.

Altho the coal miners' conventions for the last twenty years, at least, have been voting for nationalization of the mines, Mr. Lewis now declares that the coal miners have no position on this question, and he repudiates the report recently made public in New York City by Christ J. Golden, of Shamokin, Pa., president of District No. 2, an anthracite field.

Mr. Lewis takes refuge behind a declaration issued by his personal press agent, Ellis Searles, editor of the United Mine Workers' Journal. Searles was taken off a capitalist daily in Indianapolis, where he had no doubt developed qualifications that made him valuable to the Lewis machine. He has spent most of his time on the miners' union payroll attacking the militants in and combatting the progressive tendencies of the organization.

Judging by the statements issued by Mr. Searles, this Lewis press agent spent most of his recent stay in New York City exploiting the possibilities of the great city's Greenwich Village and its night life, Golden pillories Mr. Searles as follows:

"The people of whom he speaks as Greenwich Village reds are the same people who are doing and have done so much for the striking miners thruout our jurisdiction and the most progressive friends, the United Mine Workers have, and, I dare say Mr. Searles would look better to the rank and file of this organization if he had a little red about him, for he is at the present time yellow from head to foot."

We do not agree with the nationalization plan promulgated by Mr. Golden at a recent gathering of the League for Industrial Democracy in New York City. But it was at least an effort to carry out a policy overwhelmingly favored by the membership of the miners' union.

Mr. Lewis, by opposing the Golden nationalization report, shows that the ideas back of his white reactionary regime in the miners' union are even more conservative than the pink policies of those who support him from time to time.

Mr. Golden says that Mr. Searles will get the unanimous applause of the mine owners in giving the proper publicity to the white guard policies of the Lewis administration. That means that Lewis is dancing to the music of the mine owners. It will not take long for the coal miners to get completely disgusted with this situation and settle with Lewis forever. The unanimous chorus from the Atlantic to the Pacific should be, "Raus mit ihm!"

John M. O'Hanlon, chairman of the Legislative Committee of the New York State Federation of Labor, is calling upon all New York state labor unions to oppose the Lockwood bill in the state legislature calling for the licensing and supervision of trade unions. We hope that Mr. O'Hanlon will start his campaign of protest by directing the attention of the New York officials of labor, city and state, a little more against the bosses, and not so much to the hounding of radicals in the unions. No protest campaign of labor will amount to much unless the workers are permitted to create a united front in support of that protest.

It is reported that Albert Thomas, the renegade French Socialist now touring this country, has persuaded the United States Chamber of Commerce to join the employers' section of the international labor office of the League of Nations. Julius Barnes, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, says that his organization wants to level up the workers of the world to the height of American workers. No doubt Barnes was thinking of the hanging railroad striker, Gregor, of Harrison, Ark., murdered by a Chamber of Commerce mob, the same gang that is still trying to send Herrin, Ill., miners to the gallows. That is the kind of an outfit that renegade Socialists usually co-operate with.

Jim Larkin, recently released from Sing Sing Prison, went to Providence, R. I., to speak on "America and Human Liberty." The Providence police were on the job and, altho they confessed the town might be in America, it was not the abiding place of "human liberty" and Larkin was prevented from speaking.

Communists in Reichstag

LEIPSIC, Feb. 13.—The Second workers' international as the result of a meeting of delegates of the Russian, German and Norwegian parties, announces that the Communists have elected 242 deputies to the parliaments of the United States, 10; Germany, 62; German Peoples' Party, 19; Democrats, 9; Centrists (Catholics), none.

This is the same composition of the assembly with one big exception; the communists formerly had nine seats and the centrists one, while now the communists have ten and the centrists none.

The two working class parties have a clear majority, with four votes to spare.

Effort to Uncover Burns Activity in the Michigan Raids

By H. M. WICKS

The latest move made by Frank P. Walsh, as counsel for the Communists arrested in the Bridgeman, Michigan, raids, is an attempt to uncover the activities of the notorious William J. Burns, head of the investigation department of the Department of Justice, and his private detective agency. Walsh wants to know from whence the funds came that enabled Burns' agents to devote so much time to the framing-up of "evidence" against the victims of the raids.

It has developed that one Francis Morrow, who attended the meeting in Michigan under the name of Francis Ashworth, of Camden, N. J., and Philadelphia, Pa., is a Burns stool pigeon and agent provocateur who is now being used to identify people that are being arrested charged with participating in the meeting where a number of men prominent in the labor movement were arrested last August.

Former associates of Morrow have charged that he is absolutely unreliable in every way and that he has long been considered of doubtful character as a worker in the movement. He was arrested in Philadelphia in 1920 for distributing Communist literature but the case against him was dropped while the others arrested for the same offense were prosecuted. His relatives, under examination by Walsh, denied knowledge of his vile occupation, but the belief is general that they all knew about it.

Burns on Defensive

The result of Walsh's investigations, so far, has been to put Wilson Burns, the debased tool of the discredited fiver and detestable labor-hater Harry M. Daugherty, on the defensive and there is much scurrying around by the labor spies and stool pigeons in general to get under cover for fear their miserable game will be exposed.

Attorney General Daugherty and pulling ugly head of his investigation department will find it difficult to separate the assault upon the workers assembled at Bridgemen from their general offensive against labor organizations that reached its height in the infamous injunction obtained against the striking shopmen before Federal Judge Wilkerson.

One Robert M. Whitney, who is alleged to be the author of a series of articles appearing in the Boston Transcript and syndicated to other papers thruout the United States, boasted to a woman correspondent that he was a close associate of the Burns outfit and that he attended the Michigan gathering and planted the "red" propaganda that were duly dug up by the Burns agents. Whitney denied the allegations, but refused to state from what source he secured the information that formed the basis for his articles.

The sum and substance of the activity is that he is a sort of cheap imitation of the William J. Burns private detective agency and that Burns, as the head of the D. of J. furnished the "evidence" to Whitney and order to boost his own private business of labor-spy, agent provocateur and jury corruptionist.

It is coming to be generally recognized that Daugherty and Burns are using the power of the government in order to obtain information regarding the industries of the United States and the labor movement so that it can be placed at the disposal of the employers of labor and the "open shoppers" at a high "fee" thru the Burns Private Agency.

The publicity department of the Burns' agency find willing allies among the fraternity of kept ladies of the press, especially such types of publications as the Transcript of Boston and Frank Munsey's Morganized New York Herald. The frenzied stories of the "Reds In America" are used for the purpose of bleeding the gullible manufacturers in order to induce them to pay tribute to various private stool pigeon factories in order that the aggreration of morons and other perverts can find employment at occupations that will enable them to give full play to their criminal instincts, instead of occupying felons' cells in penitentiaries along (with other murderers, pickpockets, porch-climbers, pimps and procurers, who have not yet sunk low enough in the scale of depravity to become detectives.

Arkansas Assault Upon Union Men Is Still Unpunished

By H. M. WICKS

It is evident that no serious effort is to be made to bring the organized assassins of Arkansas to trial for the murder of C. R. Gregor and for other depredations perpetrated upon the union men and their families in the Ozark region of that state.

From Samuel M. Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, comes the information that positive information is at hand proving that the Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad provided special trains to transport the mob that ruled Harrison, Ark., and surrounding country at the time of the murder, wholesale deportations and floggings incident to the complete reign of terror established against union men and their sympathizers.

D. B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, also claims he has evidence to the same effect and that he will co-operate with the Arkansas authorities in detecting and punishing the mob of criminals.

From other sources comes the information that twelve men constituted a "tribunal" that had charge of the organized mob violence, and that they all were hirelings of the railroad company.

Railroad Accused of Fires

In addition to the theory that defective fireboxes in broken-down engines caused the fires, said to have been the cause of the mob outbreak against the union men, there is also definite information to the effect that the railroad itself caused the fires to be started on bridges in order to have an excuse for driving union men out of the Ozark region.

In one county where there were no fires of any kind the mob of Regenerates in the hire of the railroad company ran all the union men out of the county, inflicting severe punishment upon them and forcing them and their families to wander aimlessly in the hills for days.

Labor Must Resist

Gompers and other reactionaries at the head of the labor movement will not act in this case any more than they have acted in the past in similar cases. Instead of action they indulge in the foolish gesture of offering to assist the authorities of Arkansas to detect and prosecute the leaders of the rapacious hordes of criminals, when they know perfectly well that the authorities had full knowledge of and acquiesced in the atrocities perpetrated in the interest of the railroad company.

These leaders of labor really desired to produce results in Arkansas they would abandon their pussyfooting tactics and devise means of tying up the industries, especially the railroads of Arkansas and force a genuine prosecution with representatives of the rank and file of labor acting as prosecutors. In addition to this tactic they could start whole sale boycotts against the petty business men participating in the outrages.

It is plain that it is futile to expect any results from the so-called courts of law unless labor is organized sufficiently strong to make an impression upon such institutions. More action in the way of effective resistance and less rhetoric is what labor should demand of its leaders. If they will not respond then officials should replace them that will represent the interests of the rank and file of labor.

MEXICO CITY.—In contrast to the United States, which honored Georges Clemenceau, the old-world reactionary, and slowly drove Ricardo Flores Magon to his death in a political prison cell in Leavenworth federal penitentiary, Mexico brought home the body of Magon in state from the land of his oppressors at the moment that the Mexican government was expelling the papal nuncio (special ambassador from the pope) for illegal activity.

Magon's family accompanied his body on a special train which reached this city from El Paso, where they had come from Los Angeles, the residence of his widow and daughter while he was serving a 21-year sentence for violation of the wartime espionage law. His offense was publication of an anti-war article in his paper, Regeneracion.

Delegations from the radical and conservative trade unions marched in thousands with standards flying as a guard of honor for the body as it was taken from the station to the black draped hall of the railroad workers federations.

"The Three Sisters" Shows Moscow Art Players in New Role

By JOHN DALE

We are told by the best brains of capitalism that Communism is destructive of initiative. It would be well for these professors, pulpiteers and press and magazine editors, moulders of the minds of the many, to witness the Moscow Players' presentation of Anton Tchekhoff's "The Three Sisters", at Jolsen's 59th Street Theater, this week.

Not only three sisters, but a brother as well and several other hapless individuals wander thru Tchekhoff's play, lacking all initiative, void of any ability to decide and so do. They are of the bourgeoisie.

And these lived in that period when this capitalist structure was preparing to hold its own against the great revolutionary wave that swept the Czaristic Russia of 1905. World capitalism helped the czar crush this uprising, especially French capitalism. The Paris diplomats gave the czar billions of francs, and they are still trying to collect the bill, at conferences just as helpless as Tchekhoff's creatures, at Genoa, the Hague and Lausanne.

Tchekhoff's sisters and the brother were of that intelligentsia upon which capitalism in all lands prides itself. Yet how incapable of action. Against the class they typify there stands the great initiative, the power to act, the will to struggle of the oppressed workers and peasants of Russia, in the revolutions of 1905 and 1917, the latter victorious.

It was no doubt the result of careful discrimination that caused Tchekhoff to select the garrison surroundings of a provincial Russian town as the scene of his play. Andrei Prozoroff is the son of a brigadier-general, left on his father's death at the head of the household. Prozoroff's ambitions are to get back to Moscow, left 11 years before, and there become a professor in the university. The three sisters also have desires to go to Moscow, but all four are unable to break with their surroundings. Prozoroff is caught in an unsuitable marriage, and Moscow ambitions fade as the children come, and his sisters are lost with him, in spite of fitful struggle.

We have seen no more objective human on the stage than the picture presented by Vassily Luzhsky, as Prozoroff, dejectedly wheeling the infant's carriage containing the second child thru the scenes of the last act.

Similarly the widow of the playwrite, Olga Knipper, as the second sister, Masha, who is bored with her own marriage, and practically throws herself into the arms of the Lieut. Col. Vershinin, himself unhappily married, a part masterfully done by Constantin Stanislavsky. In fact the biggest portrayal of the play is when Masha clings desperately to her lover who is leaving with his command, transferred to Poland. The heavy drama of helplessness prevent them achieving their desires.

Lydia Koreneva is less impressive, but more pathetic as the youngest sister who decides to give herself in loveless wedlock to the Baron, in the hope that that will bring her to Moscow. But the Baron is killed in a duel, and the crushed little group wonders, "why we are living, why we are suffering."

The realistic staging of this production leaves nothing to be desired. It is an achievement in itself.

Next week there will be a repetition of Tolstoy's great play, Fedor Ivanovitch" with which the Moscow Players opened their season here.

Foster Tells New York Labor that Trade Union Educational League is Moving Ahead Fast

Foster didn't scold. He just warmed to his subject—the prospects be- "The League"—warmed up so musically, so genuinely, so persuasively, that I conceded this was the most effective kind of oratory.

What Foster had to say to New York's militants went over big to the several hundred who heard him, and the throne of reaction in the labor movement of the nation's metropolis is going to do a lot of shivering as a result in the days just ahead.

Foster feels that the Trade Union Educational League is going so big that it would not surprise him if the Gompers' officialdom of the American Federation of Labor came out with some sort of fake substitute. He showed that was what had been done in the case of the Federated Press.

"Instead of supporting the Federated Press, the best labor news service of its kind in the world, the A. F. of L. officialdom sabotages it. It has organized a fake news service. So we may expect a fake T. U. E. L."

In fact, Foster pointed out that a reactionary aggregation of labor officials in St. Louis, Mo., had stolen the name of the T. U. E. L., and were using it for a local organization.

Foster also attacked the efforts to offer "federation" as a substitute for "amalgamation" in the needle trades. He declared that federation was not a step on the right direction, that "federation" was just a substitute, something palmed off as being "just as good". He urged the needle workers to go after the real thing, pointing out that in the printing trades, especially at the Montreal Convention of the International Typographical Union, federation was shelved for a definite declaration for amalgamation.

"I think we have all learned the lesson of 'Stay in the Union'," said Foster, announcing that "The League" would have but one program, for each industry, whether it dealt with independent unions, or with groups in the A. F. of L.

Foster said that the Trade Union Educational League was not to be allowed to develop local movements, in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, and other cities, but that it was going to develop as a national organization, as a national movement on the railroads, in the metal trades, the needle trades, and especially the building trades, that would not be split up according to crafts.

One of the things that Foster learned when he came to New York was, the militants were getting restless in the building trades.

Foster said "The League" was planning to hold off organization work among the building workers for a little time yet, but the upsurge of militancy among the carpenters, the painters, and the numerous building trades is forcing the T. U. E. L. to get busy here, too.

Foster told of the strength that had been shown by the railroad militants at their recent Chicago Conference, and by the crystallization of sentiment in the metal industry.

With the progress of the amalgamation movement, with the consolidation, to a reasonable extent, of labor's presently organized forces, Foster promised that "The League" would get busy to help organize the unemployed.

Foster put it in this way: "We'll launch the greatest organization campaign in all the history of the globe."

Yet, that isn't far fetched, when one considers that the unorganized working men and women in this country may be smothered by the tens of millions. Foster showed how the packinghouse workers were merely storing up trouble for themselves by their war on the craft unions. This will create the sentiment and demand for a "huge labor unity" unless in the food industry. Similarly in the steel industry, where Gary's "open shop" still holds away.

"We're going out after the 25 millions, the millions of unorganized", said Foster, "and we'll bring them into the unions so fast that it'll make the old reactionaries in the unions dizzy."

Foster said there had been a tendency among the militants, in the past, to stand to one side. He charged they felt like outlaws. But that is going to change. The militants are going to get into the fight as the leaders in every struggle.

Foster put in a little circulation talk for "The Labor Herald", official publication of "The League", again showing that he is unsatisfied with little things, that he is pushing for big achievements.

"The Labor Herald hasn't enough circulation", he said. "We don't want to go along as a half-dead proposition. The Labor Herald has a message to deliver, and we want to get that message to the masses. We've got a circulation of from 50,000 to 100,000 during the next few months. Concentrate on the Labor Herald and develop a circulation of at least 10,000 here in New York City. Then we can do big things."

Foster then showed that the T. U. E. L. is an industrial, and not a legislative organization. He said that legislative matters must not be sponsored by "The League", but must be part of the unions themselves.

Foster kicked holes in the contention that the conservative is constructive, while the militant must necessarily be impractical.

"That's not so," declared Foster. "There is no fundamental reason why a revolutionist, why a member of the left wing, cannot also be the most practical member of his organization."

He said that that was the triumph of the Russian Communist movement; that men like Lenin, Zinoviev and Trotzky were extremely practical, while at the same time they were not lacking in revolutionary qualities.

"You must know every curve in the psychology of the masses," said Foster. "We now know that we can win among the masses. We can win without tainting or surrendering our revolutionary principles. We know that the militants can get into the practical struggle. We say they can do that without surrendering their revolutionary principles."

Foster then went on to show that official's must not be depended on to fight for amalgamation. He showed that amalgamation is a basic proposition, that it must be supported by a rank and file movement. "Do not put your faith in officials," said Foster. "Officials are followers. All leaders are servants. They do what they are told to do."

"Don't be factionalists," was another point stressed by Foster. "Consider all issues on their merits. Be the soul of the labor movement. Allow your ideas to be tested in the crucible of experience. If you have made mistakes, admit them and resolve to do better."

If I don't care where the membership of the Needle Trades Unions stands now," said Foster. "I promise you that in six month 95 per cent of them will be for amalgamation. Now is the strategic time to carry on this struggle.

"You must not be oppositionists on principle. Don't carry on an anti-Gompers fight. That was the mistake of the old Socialist Party. All issues must be fought out on the basis of policy, whether the working class will be hurt or helped.

"Fight for the living things. Fight for the living issues."

It developed that three steel strike organizers were on the platform of this meeting. Besides Foster, there was Joseph Manley, eastern organizer of "The League", and S. T. Hammersmark, of Chicago, who is in the East for the Labor Defense Council. Joseph Zack, one of the Michigan raid victims, also spoke for the Labor Defense Council.

Reports were made at the conference by the representatives of numerous local T. U. E. L. groups, showing big progress made.

"If we can get Foster's congratulations on the work we have already done," said Manley, in adjourning the meeting, "then let us strive to have a gathering twice the size of this one when we come together the next time."

Progressive Miners of Fayette County, Pa., Check Outlaw Movement, Perform Great Service to the Organized Labor Movement

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, PA.—The Progressive Miners of District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, and officials of the Pittsburgh Miners' Relief Conference have just been successful in accomplishing one of the most difficult tasks ever performed in the history of the labor movement of America.

THEY HAVE CHECKED A GREAT OUTLAW MOVEMENT IN DISTRICT No. 5, WHICH WAS TO INCLUDE ALL OF THE COKE FIELD AND A LARGE PART OF THE OLD ORGANIZED SECTION OF DIST. No. 5.

Three distinct factors entered into the situation:

1. The righteous and justifiable indignation of the rank and file against the outrageous betrayal of the Fayette County Coke Field Miners who had made the last strike of the United Mine Workers of America a success.

2. The desire of the Official ring—both in "The International and the District—to rid itself of the rising tide of progressivism thrudut the organization. They recognized that Fayette County was a hotbed of discontent and must be crushed at all costs.

3. The attempt of the Coal Companies to operate their mines with "Transportation" labor has been such a costly failure that they were even willing to let the men organize an independent union, for the time being, asking a chance of being able to crush it later.

Careful analysis of the recent developments points very plainly to an understanding between the officials of United Mine Workers and the United States Steel Corporation to encourage the demand for an outlaw union and temporarily establish it in the Fayette Field.

Van Bittner Drove Men Toward Outlaw Union

In the first place, the International Executive Board deliberately selected the most hated official in the whole organization to come to New Salem on Jan. 18th, and deliver the cruel ultimatum of "The International" in the insulting and autocratic manner which Van Bittner excels.

By this one act they proved they did not want to placate the indignant miners. They did everything in their power to aggravate them, including the refusal to allow the convention to elect their own resolutions committee. This was a hand-picked bunch. When the delegates returned to their camps with the message that the strike was called off, many of them were almost mobbed, and when A. Hamilton, secretary of the Miners' Relief Conference, went to a mass Convention at New Salem, Sunday, Jan. 21st, and tried to tell the men, that in order to stay in the union they must return to work, he was driven from the hall amid the jeers and cat calls of the assembled miners, who, after many months of efforts in their behalf, now regarded him as a paid agent of the United States Steel Corporation because he advised them, for a different reason, to do the same thing which the officials of the union advised them to do.

Companies Favor Outlaw Union

In the meantime, in a number of different camps, groups of curious miners had called upon the Mine superintendents and had been told that they could return to work as members of an Independent Union, if they would organize one, but not as members of the United Mine Workers of America.

It is not strange, therefore, that these bitter men, after eight months of heroic struggle, betrayed by the leaders of the United Mine Workers of America, seeing the need of some organization should be inclined to fall into the trap of organizing an outlaw union when the companies said they were willing to recognize such a union. Wasn't such a union under the circumstances better than no organization?

This was the situation that the Progressive Miners of District No. 5 faced as he tried to persuade the miners of the Coke Field that they should return to work in order to stay within the fold of U. M. W. of A. The whole thing was a cleverly arranged scheme by the officials of the union and the officials of the big coal companies.

Organized Section Ready to Betide

The worst of it was that the outrageous treatment of many of the local unions in the old organized section of District No. 5 made these locals very sympathetic with the Coke Field strikers.

Many such local unions immediately dispatched committees to the Coke Field and advised them that they would have all the moral and financial support possible if they would start an independent movement. This further encouraged the insurgents.

Progressives Overcome Obstacles

While all this was going on the Progressive Miners were working day and night from camp to camp, and tent to tent, pleading with the men to see their mistake. Working under suspicion, slandered by secret agents of the coal companies and the union machine planted among the Coke Field Miners, they courageously performed their duty, so that when the mass meeting assembled at Brownsville, Jan. 25, at the call of the Pittsburgh Miners Relief Conference, there was a goodly representation from every part of the Coke Field.

However, the miners were in a suspicious mood, and as soon as Chairman Fred H. Merrick, of the Executive Committee of the Miners Relief Conference, began to explain the dangers of the outlaw movement the miners vigorously protested against going back to work.

For four long hours the Progressive Miners' Group, including such leaders as Myerscough, Gosler, and Ray in English, Indof in Slovenian, Cvetnich in Italian, as well as other speakers in other languages earnestly pleaded with the men to listen to reason.

Slowly and painfully, inch by inch, and step by step, with the logic of events staring them in the face, the miners finally yielded conditionally and adopted a resolution recommending to the local unions that on Monday, Jan. 29th, they should apply for their jobs as instructed by "The International." But they refused to vote for this until it was agreed that first there should be a delegates' mass meeting at New Salem, Jan. 27th, to ratify the action of this meeting in Brownsville.

Stormy Meeting Jan. 27th

While everything looked good on the night of Jan. 25th, in Brownsville, the rank and file were to be heard from at New Salem at the delegates' mass meeting Jan. 27th.

Words of the action at Brownsville spread like wildfire and when the meeting was called to order the representatives of the Progressive Miners and the Pittsburgh Miners Relief Conference again faced a hostile crowd. New Salem is in the heart of the coke fields, and miners who did not have street carfare to come to Brownsville could walk to New Salem and were there in mass and packed the hall to watch their delegates vote.

With the eyes of their angry constituents fastened upon them the situation was indeed serious and much of the battle of the previous Thursday had to be fought over again. It was in this situation that William Guiler, of the Progressive Miners Group, who has repeatedly been misrepresented by the 'machine' as a dual unionist rendered valiant service. It was largely due to his sound arguments on this occasion that the delegates finally voted unanimously to apply for their jobs thruout the coke region Monday, Jan. 29th.

Coke Miners Show Clear Vision

It is a stranger were to visit the coke region and see the struggle that these miners are enduring he would not believe it would be possible to think in terms of anything outside of Fayette County.

Instead of this, these men, because they have time to read and think have a clearer vision of the conditions of the coal industry elsewhere than the miners in the other part of District Five. Because of this they decided at New Salem to go on record as demanding an international movement to remedy the rotten condition in the U. M. W. of A. They adopted a stirring resolution which should put to shame the "better organized" fields of the country. It will be interesting to see what response this appeal of starving and betrayed miners brings from the employed miners who profited by the strike of the Fayette miners. The resolution follows:

Appeal of Fayette Miners for International Solidarity in Coal Industry

We, the delegates of the Local Unions of the U. M. W. of A. in the Fayette Coke Field in Special Mass Meeting assembled at New Salem, Pa., Jan. 27, hereby declare that the U. M. W. of A. faces destruction under the present suicidal policy followed by John L. Lewis as shown by the signing of the Cleveland Agreement, the Anthracite Agreement and the District No. 5 Agreement, which left out the coke fields, and finally the New York Agreement, which now leaves District No. 5 to fight alone April 1, 1923, against the U. S. Steel Corporation and the most powerful group of coal operators in the United States, and CALLS UPON ALL OTHER DISTRICTS OF THE U. M. W. OF A. to join us in a fight thruout "The International" to right the grievances of the various districts and change the cowardly policy of the International Executive Board of the U. M. W. of A.

Cleveland Workers Act to Secure Rail Union Amalgamation

The chairman of the Cleveland Amalgamation Committee of Machinists' Union, Local No. 584, Elmer P. Boich, reports tremendous strides towards amalgamation.

In Cleveland there is a city amalgamation committee composed of representatives of machinists, boiler makers, blacksmiths, maintenance of way and signal men, all employed on the railroads who have gone on record in favor of a national referendum among the railroad workers on the proposition of amalgamation.

The plan is to try to persuade the officers to initiate the referendum thru the official channels of the various unions in the railroad industry. If they refuse the referendum is to be taken over their heads and in spite of them.

Already the effect of the amalgamation agitation in Cleveland is seen in the defeat of officials at the Collinswood railroad shops who opposed the progressive and other places taken by avowed amalgamationists.

Amalgamation in Metal Trades

(By Federated Press)

CHICAGO.—Over 7000 union locals in the metal trades are receiving amalgamation proposals drawn up by the joint Chicago committee for amalgamation in the metal and railway industries.

Members of the Order of Railway Conductors who favor reorganization of the 16 standard railway unions into a single industrial union are circularizing their entire membership with copies of the Railway Amalgamation Advocate containing the Minnesota plan which was adopted by the amalgamation conference in Chicago last month.

The members of the telegraphers and railway clerks are doing the same. The Advocate is the official organ of the railway amalgamation boosters.

MOST DANGEROUS TYPE OF "GOOD BOSS"

EDITOR, "WORST BOSS STORIES":—I was hardly two days at the Levy & Seligman firm of Broadway, Brooklyn, when I noticed that the girls' behavior was rather strange.

At work they would sit quietly like mice; not a song, not a laugh, not a single joke would be heard in the shop. When the forelady or boss would ask something the girls would answer in low voices, with eyes cast down as if they felt guilty of some misdeed.

The air was full of something big and significant but I couldn't understand it until once at twelve o'clock all the girls gathered in the dressing room and started to talk all at once in a suppressed tone. I understood that I was witnessing a strike—one of those leaderless strikes that open slowly but surely, spontaneously and whose results depend almost entirely upon the ability of one side or the other to grasp its opportunity.

There was no leader; nobody knew definitely what were the conditions desired, until one girl shouted out: "Girls, we must appoint a committee to talk to the office about a raise and 44 hours, otherwise we'll get nowhere." At these words the boss opened the door of the dressing room. It was evident that he had heard everything. Nevertheless, he asked in a calm voice: "Why don't you go for lunch?" This innocent question rendered us defenseless because it quieted our hatred for him. For a moment we even felt ashamed. He, undoubtedly, saw our confusion and went on: "It's a quarter after twelve already. What's the matter with you girls?"

A grave silence spread over the large dressing room where 50 girls stood shrinking from their single enemy.

"Come on, girls, I'll grant you these fifteen minutes as a present if you go down quietly and have your lunch."

Suddenly we understood that he was trying to bribe us, and a young girl burst out:

"Fifteen minutes wouldn't do, Mr. Levy."

"Oh," he smiled, good-naturedly. "Will twenty minutes do?"

Some girls laughed and I felt that if I didn't act the whole thing would turn out a joke. I scraped up all the pluck I had in stock and said: "All the girls want a raise and 44 hours instead of fifty."

"But you are only two days here, how do you know that it's 44 hours that they want? Maybe it's 40?" He didn't raise his voice an inch higher and kept his face smiling while he continued: "What do you think will I do if they'll want forty hours next week?"

His face with a smile on it was so humane and sympathetic that it gained one's confidence and I ventured to answer jestingly: "Well, I'm afraid you'll have to submit if they'll want it bad enough."

He turned pale but still smiling he asked me: "Is this your opinion, eh?"

"This is not our opinion," jumped out another girl. "Come on down, girls, no use talking now that he knows our demands."

We all rushed out. The boss now tried to stop us but no one listened to him. In fact we were too glad to get rid of him. But he ran down after us and kept on talking to one group or another. I slipped into the first telephone booth and called up the union headquarters, but they told me that they would not be able to send a representative before five o'clock. It took me about a half of an hour to get information about the union office. I had to apply to so when I came out neither the boss nor the girls were in sight. A man from the lower floor told me that as soon as I went into the booth Mr. Levy took the girls to the Plaza Hall to discuss the matter. Evidently he understood whom I was going to call up. I rushed to the Plaza Hall, but on my way I met a girl coming from there. Everything was over. She told me that the boss so frightened the girls by granted their demands when it was really more than the union workers had at that time.

"And you know," the girl was telling me in great excitement, "he was so kind that he promised to pay us for this half day and did not even ask us to go back to work to-day. Why, he said, he didn't want to keep us more than ten minutes, as case some of us wanted to go up to a matinee show. Wasn't it nice of him?"

The poor girls didn't understand that he was simply afraid that the union officials would come to the hall or to the shop and destroy his plans. His policy was so deceitful that he gained the girls confidence and they didn't want to know the union. Until lately, when he was the first one to cut down wages and lengthen the working hours, the girls thought that he was the best boss in the trade. Now he possesses a plant of three large floors, and a new reduction of wages is expected in his girls.

"The Worker" Writes Governor of New York on Peters-Ward Case

Days and days, weeks and weeks, pass and Governor Alfred E. Smith, who claims there is no class government in New York State does nothing toward carrying out the plea of Mrs. Mary O. Peters that Walter S. Ward, son of the multi-millionaire head trust magnate, be given a taste of the justice that capitalism metes out only to workers.

Mrs. Peters, the working class mother of Clarence Peters, murdered by young Ward. She told Governor Smith that she felt there is "one law for the rich and another for the poor." Just to remind Gov. Smith of his no-class government declaration "The Worker" has written him as follows:

New York City, January 27, 1923.

Hon. Alfred E. Smith,
Albany, N. Y.

Dear Sir: In accordance with your declaration made on the occasion of the pardon of James Larkin, that you do not believe in class government, I am calling your attention to the enclosed marked copy of our paper THE WORKER containing an article on the notorious Ward case. This article speaks for itself. May we hope that you will consider it in determining any future developments in this notorious miscarriage of justice

Very truly yours,

"The Worker" Calls on Pinchot to Release Dolla from Prison

In a telegram and a letter to Governor Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, a demand is made upon the chief executive of this industrial autocracy to release Jacob Dolla, imprisoned for a term of 15-17 years during the steel strike. Governor Pinchot is supposed to be a "progressive," and all the facts in the Dolla case have been put before him. The letter sent by THE WORKER reads as follows:

RELEASE JACOB DOLLA

New York City, Jan. 25, 1923.

Governor Gifford Pinchot,
Harrisburg, Pa.

Dear Sir:—This is to confirm my telegram of January 24th which was as follows:

"On behalf of readers of 'The Worker' urge you give Dolla case immediate attention. Believe any consideration of this case will convince you Dolla was sent to prison by brutal tyranny of Steel Trust in your state. Readers of 'The Worker' call for immediate and unconditional release.

"I am enclosing copies of the last two issues of our paper, 'The Worker,' one of which contains a detailed article on the Dolla case.

"I hope this matter will receive your immediate and earnest attention.

Very truly yours,
"J. LOUIS ENGDAHL,

paratively good. The position of the state finance, on the other hand, is very bad. The government realizes this circumstance for purposes of nationalist agitation. It casts the blame on Germany, and makes propaganda for taking military action. The overwhelming majority of the French people however, is opposed to any warlike measures, for it is fully aware that it is the proletariat that foots the bill in the end, with its property and blood. The occupation of the Ruhr valley would cause a mighty storm in the French proletariat.

Great Demonstrations Held

Today, Sunday morning, gigantic demonstrations were held in Gelsenkirchen and Essen. These demonstrations were participated in by workers of all proletarian parties and tendencies.

Speeches were made by French, Belgian, English, Italian, Czech, German, and Dutch communists and trade union leaders. Their speeches were received with frantic enthusiasm. The whole atmosphere was one of readiness to fight.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the session of the international conference was continued.

Kreibich (Czecho-Slovakia) pointed out that the Czech social democrats do not want to hear anything about a revision of the Versailles treaty. They are the most faithful supporters of the policy of Poincare, Beneish.

At the present time Czecho-Slovakia is shaken to its foundations by a severe economic crisis. It is not alone the workers who are opposing the policy of the government, but also the officials, petty bourgeois, and peasants.

The non-Czech bourgeoisie is also antagonistic to the government. The work of the communists is rendered more difficult by the circumstance that their aims are misrepresented as being irredentist.

Our struggle must thus be carried on on international lines, in common with the proletariat of France, England and Italy. When common international action is taken against the Versailles robber treaty, the Communist Party of Czecho-Slovakia will not lag behind.

Monmousseau suggests that in the manifesto to be issued by this conference our attitude should be expressed, not only against the consequences of the Versailles treaty, for this is done grudgingly now and again, even by the Amsterdamers, but against this vile treaty itself, against the vile principle of this treaty. We cannot be completely condemn the whole treaty, as it stands, as it was signed at the time by the Amsterdamers and the leaders of the Second International.

Brandler speaks as follows: Jouhaux and Legien are opposed to the Versailles treaty in words also. This was plainly to be seen at the Unity Conference held in Berlin in April of last year. There the German social democrats, in common with Mr. Vandervelde, most decidedly refused to fight against the Versailles treaty. The Versailles peace treaty must be done away with, and it will be done away with. But if this is done by the bourgeoisie, another Versailles treaty will arise in its place. Nothing but the international action of the proletariat can finally abolish the Versailles treaty.

After this a lengthy appeal to the working population of the Entente states and the vanquished countries is unanimously accepted. It is resolved to have the leading ideas of this appeal posted in France and Germany. (The appeals and the placard are given in another column).

The following resolution was passed on the question of the Ruhr territory relations. A permanent international committee of action is to be appointed, consisting of eleven members, representing the French Communist Party and the C.G.T.U., and the Communist parties of Germany, England, Czecho-Slovakia, Belgium, and Poland. The committee is to be further completed by representatives of the Communist International, the Red International of Labor Unions, and the Youth International. Besides this, special committees of action are to be appointed for the German and French railwaymen, the miners, and the metal workers.

At eight o'clock in the evening a gigantic demonstration was held in the largest hall in Essen. The doors of the hall had to be closed by 7 o'clock, as the hall was already overcrowded by this time.

The speakers at the meeting were Marcel Cachin and the chairman of the C.G.T.U., Monmousseau of France, Newbold from England, Kreibich from Czecho-Slovakia, van Overstraaten from Belgium, de Fischer from Holland, an Italian comrade, and Clara Zetkin. All spoke strongly against the occupation of the Ruhr and their expositions were received with enthusiastic applause.

In the course of the coming week a number of international demonstrations will be held; the one to be held in Cologne, for instance, will be on a very imposing scale.

The Outlook Before Organized Labor as Its Own Banker Is Discussed

means of avoiding open industrial conflicts. Strikes are considered by them, tremendous economic wastes and calamities to be averted if possible.

Such is the outlook of leaders of labor for the most part, although there have been exceptions, to this spirit. The exceptions, however, have been few and far and far between for the reason that they only occur when labor is advancing; when the favorable economic conditions labor is able to successfully resist the assaults of the capitalist class. At such times the rank and file of the working class realizes that its power rests in its ability to withold its labor from industry and, as a consequence, is in no mood to listen to the star-gazers with their fantastic schemes calculated to raise labor to higher levels without resorting to the strike weapon.

The history of the American labor movement is a history of co-operative ventures arising on the ruins of unsuccessful strikes.

Today labor in the United States is confronted with an innovation in co-operative endeavor in the form of labor banks springing up thruout the country. The wreckage of every other kind of co-operative venture tells the pages of labor history in America. These have been fraught with experiments with both producers' and consumers' co-operatives, but never before has this labor movement been confronted with bankers' co-operatives. The question that arises in the mind of a Marxian contemplating this innovation in the labor movement in America must naturally be: is this venture also doomed to the inevitable futility of all its American precursors?

Before we attempt a forecast of the outcome of the co-operative banks it is certainly appropriate that we learn something of the history of the co-operative movement in general in the United States.

Amidst Wreckage of Co-operatives

The Labor movement in America first asserted itself in the form of a strike of printers in Philadelphia in 1786. From that point onwards organizations of workers in various trades sprang up thruout the industrialized East. So effective were these early unions that the employers combined against them and invoked the power of the courts. Thousands of prosecutions of trade unionists under the conspiracy laws failed to destroy the organizations.

That these early organizations perished eventually was not due to the assault of the courts, but primarily to the economic depression that came in the wake of the close of the Napoleonic wars and the consequent collapse of the markets.

But on a few occasions the workers turned to attempts at co-operation. A strike of carpenters in Philadelphia in 1791 ended disastrous and the striking carpenters attempted co-operative contracting at a lower rate than their former employers, but were unable to succeed in their venture.

In the early years of the nineteenth century a few unions undertook productive co-operation after they had been defeated in court.

The trade union movement attained a remarkable growth in the early thirties, due to the exceptionally favorable economic conditions. Higher wages were easily obtainable. The effectiveness of strikes became so pronounced that a threat to strike was usually sufficient to force the employers to yield to the demands of the unions.

In 1836 the employers perfected organizations against the unions and once again invoked the power of the courts, resulting in a number of defeats of strikes. Inevitably defeat was followed by the given union launching producers' co-operatives.

When the protracted industrial depression, beginning in 1837, forced many producers' co-operatives to close their doors. The principle of co-operation, however, was accommodated by ventures in distributive co-operation and special appeals made to consumers in order to secure their support. The superior advantages to be obtained thru patronizing the co-operatives.

After a precarious existence, those establishments that did not perish, passed into the hands of private owners, usually the managers, who had been selected by the co-operators, and the rank and file turned their attention again to the strike as labors' most effective weapon.

Again in 1850-52, following crushing defeats of strikes, the German societies, under the leadership of Wilhelm Weitling, the utopian Communist, who participated in the revolution of 1848 in Germany established co-operatives. Weitling and his delusions met the same fate of former co-operative ventures in America.

A movement for distributive co-operation that arose out of the depression of 1846-49, however, persisted until the Civil War, altho it inevitably perished as the result of its units falling into the hands of private owners. The Civil War wiped out every vestige of the co-operative movement, the small business congresses of various localities showing the remnants.

Following 1860 another batch of co-operators started as the result of lost strikes; they shared the fate of all their predecessors.

The high point in the history of co-operatives in America was attained by a co-operative society calling itself "The Sovereigns of Industry," originating in 1869 and in two years attaining an annual trade of over three million dollars. The failure of this venture was more depressing than that of any of the others, because there was no apparent reason for the collapse.

It might be mentioned in passing, that Terence V. Powderly, head of the Knights of Labor, and a sentimental and impractical idealist was an advocate of co-operation, hoping thereby to avoid strikes and to free the worker from the terrors of the wages system by a widespread system of producers' and consumers' co-operatives.

The rise of the American Federation of Labor, an organization based upon the basis of the closed shop, and the doom of that combination of confusion known as the Knights of Labor. With its demise the last serious effort toward co-operatives in America also perished.

Arrest O'Flaherty in Effort to Stop Meeting in Illinois Steel Czardom

CHICAGO, Ill.—Thomas O'Flaherty, editor of the Voice of Labor, and one of the victims of the Michigan raid, has been arrested on a deportation warrant as the result of an effort by the Labor Defense Council to hold a meeting at Hegewisch, Ill.

Hegewisch, the site of several large steel plants, is part of the city of Chicago, but like all of the steel trust domains has special laws or rather puts special interpretations onto the laws of this country seldom since the steel strike have labor meetings been attempted in Hegewisch and when they are attempted the police are in the habit of interfering. This was the case in a meeting arranged by the Labor Defense Council for January 28th with O'Flaherty billed as the speaker.

On January 27th the owner of Kosciusko Hall where the meeting was to be held was notified by the police not to open the doors. The Labor Defense Council was informed that the meeting would not be allowed. When the South Chicago Police Station officers were questioned as to why this action was taken they replied by reading from instructions they received. "Department of Justice notified Sergeant Mills of the State's Attorney's Office in regard to meeting given by the Labor Defense Council in Kosciusko Hall Hegewisch, Ill., Jan. 28. Lieutenant and Sergeant instruct officers of Post to prohibit same." Eugene Thomas H. Costello, Capt. Police South Chicago, Dist."

The Department of Justice, who questioned as to the cause of the action denied that they had issued any orders or information concerning the meeting. The State's Attorney's knew nothing about it. Sergeant Mills had received no information nor had he given any instructions.

Capt Costello faced with these denials finally admitted that it was on his responsibility that the meeting had been stopped. "No un-American meetings are going to be held in Hegewisch" said he in rich Irish brogue.

"Don't you know," he was asked, "that the United States Constitution guarantees the freedom of assemblage?"

"It don't say nothing about the Soviets in the constitution," was his reply. It was suggested to him that this was probably due to an oversight on the part of the country fathers. "That don't make any difference there'll be no meetings such as this held in Hegewisch."

After a telephone conversation with the Chicago Chief of Police it was decided that the safety of the government was not threatened.

Three Irish cops and a half full of steel slaves attended the meeting.

An Interview with Isadora Duncan

BY EUGENE LYONS

Isadora Duncan is heart and soul with Soviet Russia—fully aware of its shortcomings and frank in discussing them, but convinced of its persistent striving for the achievement of a truly Communist society.

These sentiments were not conveyed in so many words. Miss Duncan is essentially the artist, and her responses to the life about her find expression in artistic rather than political terms. Yet it was the conviction underlying the whole content of a three-hours' conversation in her room at Hotel Brevoort. It was the strongest impression left upon us when we parted. We discussed many things—her views on the current conditions in Moscow, the New York craze for Russian dramatics, the chagrin of her erstwhile friends because of her devotion to the Russian Revolution, the poetry of her husband, Sergei Yessenin. And, through it all, like a vibrant, golden thread, ran the spirit of rebellion against special privileges and narrow art formulae: the two ideas to her are one, since she draws her whole artistic inspiration from the life around her.

"I don't believe in the narrow bourgeois formula of art for art's sake," she told us. "Art must be based upon and flow from life. That is why I went to dance for the masses instead of the few rich. That is why I want to be issued by a real people's audience, such as will come to the benefit for the Russian orphans in Lexington Theatre.

"Each and I attended Mr. Stanislavsky and his Moscow Art Theatre, or the work of the Chauve Souris, I can not get away from the feeling that we are on the old generation. Their art is magnificent but entirely detached from reality. It is an abstract beauty somewhere in a void, rather than the close throbbing identity with the forces of life about us which I seek to establish in my dancing. Art for Art's sake reminds me plainly to be seen at the Unity Conference held in Berlin in April of last year. There the German social democrats, in common with Mr. Vandervelde, most decidedly refused to fight against the Versailles treaty. The Versailles peace treaty must be done away with, and it will be done away with. But if this is done by the bourgeoisie, another Versailles treaty will arise in its place. Nothing but the international action of the proletariat can finally abolish the Versailles treaty.

"My old bourgeois friends cut me cold," she said. "They'll have nothing to do with me. And the anti-revolutionists in the Russian colony in America are of course indignant. They remind me that some of my greatest triumphs were in the old Russia of the czar and his retainers. They call me ungrateful for turning on them, for giving the best of my energies to the people. They are forever talking of the 'good old times,' because the times were good for them, with never a thought for the sufferings of the people."

She read us copies of the telegrams and letters interchanged with Lunacharsky which led to her going to Russia to direct a school in Moscow. They were eloquent of the dedication of her art to humanity. Her letter of acceptance of the invitation, sent from Paris, was read by Lunacharsky to an audience of 3,000 Communists, and received with prolonged applause. In it she asked for nothing more than the essentials of life for herself and her pupils, so that together they could work out dances and present them to the workers of Russia. In it she denounced the bourgeois theatres as houses of prostitution where artists sell their souls bit by bit at two dollars a seat.

"I was sick of artists being forced to adopt the tactics of shopkeepers," she said, "I was sick of theatres filled with fat, rich and stupid money-grabbers. My dream of a school delivered to the expression of life in terms of the dance came true in Russia. Unfortunately, the catastrophe of these last years, especially the famine, have ended the dream. The school now has fifty children, though it started with a thousand. And even these fifty children have not food enough.

"Conditions have changed since I first arrived in Russia. Many of those who were ready to die for their ideals have actually died. The brutal attacks from outside and the greed of many inside have forced a retreat to capitalism. We understand how necessary it has been, how unavoidable, yet the spectacle is a sad one."

Sergei Yessenin was present during the larger part of the interview, a mere boy, flaxen-haired, strikingly the pure Slav type. As he does not understand English, his wife was able to talk of him exclusively in his presence.

"I urged Yesenin to come to America," she said, "as a representative of young Russia to young America. I thought he would be greeted by the young up-reaching artists of this country. The only greeting he got was a huge poked in his ribs, so to speak. The only reception committee—and one which has been very constant—has been a squad of detectives, following us everywhere, peeping through keyholes, listening behind doors. The only time the detectives let us alone is when we bribe them to go away.

"Yet Yesenin has come here as a poet recognized in his own country, honored with superlative praise. He has been called the Pushkin of the Revolution by brilliant men high in the Soviet government. The spirit of self-sacrifice, the yearning for a harmonious life for the mass find beautiful expression in this poet. But America gives him only the recognition that is implied in persecution.

"We have been maligned in the press. We have been called names. An attempt has been made upon our lives. But we go back to Russia as determined as ever to give our art to the Russian people and thru them to the people of the world. Altho I am American born, my citizenship has been annulled because of my marriage. I am a citizen of Soviet Russia and shall indulge in no futile regrets over the fact."

Isadora Duncan's great grandfather, she told us, was an Irish revolutionist. Rebellion is therefore to an extent a family tradition. But wherever she may have gotten her revolutionary spirit, she most assuredly has it as the very marrow of her art.

PHILADELPHIA.—A cable, received by the American Friends Service Committee (Quakers) in this city from their representative in Russia, indicates that the famine is still a reality and is spreading in some districts. The message refers specifically to the territory in the Pugachevsk County, and the Kirghese Republic. Thousands there will die unless outside aid arrives.

Keep Up Famine Fight

By PAUL HANNA,
Federated Press Correspondent.

WASHINGTON.—Russia struck bottom some months ago and is now moving slowly up the long grade toward better times, in the opinion of Allan T. Burns, director of the National Information bureau, who has just completed a three months' tour of 10,000 miles thru the great Slav domain.

At this stage of her convalescence, Burns declares, nothing is more important than a continuation of famine fighting enterprises.

"United Front" in Frisco.

(Special to "The Worker")

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—Mrs. Nolan, widow of the late John I. Nolan, democratic congressman from the Fifth Congressional District, was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of her husband.

Local militants are greatly elated over the showing made by the "United Front" candidate, G. G. Kidwell. The showing was: Mrs. Nolan, 13,000; E. Bath, 11,000; Kidwell, third, 4,000. Other candidates received a few scattering votes. It is estimated that $20,000 were spent to secure Mrs. Nolan's election. She was supported on the old party ticket by the reactionary labor officials. Kidwell was supported by the militants in the labor unions and a "United Front" of labor's independent political organizations.

The Moscow Art Theater

By MAX SHACHTMAN

On June 4, 1897, Constantin Stanislavsky and Nyemirovitch-Dantchenko met in a Moscow restaurant to discuss the Russian theater. The result of this discussion was the organization of the Moscow Art Theater, which was based on the principles of dictatorial directorship and realism of representation. Stanislavsky was elected first director. It was his duty to choose the plays and to direct the rehearsals, the part to be taken by the actors and so on. Nyemirovitch-Dantchenko took charge of the financial end.

In 1898, they produced their first play, Alexei Tolstoi's historical tragedy, "Tsar Feodor Ivanovitch," and it achieved so encouraging success that the Ballot were subsidized by the Czar and wealthy Patrons of Art.

The group became well-known and it went on with Sophocles' "Antigone," plays by Ibsen, Shakespeare, Ostrovski and Hauptmann. The latter dramatist's "Hannele" was, by the way, not permitted by the police, due to a protest against its ungodliness by the Metropolitan of Moscow. For a time certain poorly chosen plays seemed to indicate that the co-operative venture would be a failure. Then the remarkable success of Anton Checkov's "Chaika" (Sea Gull) raised the morale and prestige of the players to a high degree. Checkov seemed to fit them excellently and the troupe became known as "Checkov's Theatre." To this day that author remains one of the most prominent and best-liked of the theatre's repertory.

In spite of the Checkov success, the first season ended with a deficit of more than 40,000 rubles, excluding much of the money invested by the actors. Stanislavsky voted very much in the next few years, but it may be said that if it had not been for the liberal subsidies of a certain Maria Morosova and other rich men, the players would have had hard sledding.

Their subsequent plays were chosen from many authors from all lands and times. There were, inevitably, alternate failures and successes. There was considerable experimenting with all sorts of new theories, many of which were tried to absurd lengths. A few years before the foundation of the Moscow Art Theatre, a troupe of German players from Meiningen under the direction of Cronegk, had achieved a startling success in Russia with their realistic, representations. Their methods were the ones originally followed by Stanislavsky. From that position the theatre went to Naturalism: then to Symbolism, where, for instance, Andreiev's pessimistic "A Man's Life" was performed before a black background; from Symbolism to Impressionism and thence to its present form, where it is known as the "Theatre of Poetic Realism."

In the organization there have occasionally been disagreements between individual actors and the benevolent dictator, Stanislavsky. In 1906 Meyerhold, a well-known actor and member of the corporation, left the group as a revolt against the realism of the production. He is now known as Naturalism; then to Symbolism, where, for instance, Andreiev's pessimistic "A Man's Life" was performed before a black background; from Symbolism to Impressionism and thence to its present form, where it is known as the "Theatre of Poetic Realism."

In 1906 Meyerhold, a well-known actor and member of the corporation, left the group as a revolt against the realism of the production. He is now known as the director of the "Theatre Fantastical," into the details of which we need not go. The spirit of the organization is better shown, however, by the invitation, in 1922, to the American, Gordon Craig, to come to Moscow for the production of "Hamlet," with his own impressionistic "screen settings," a method of presentation which was then at complete variance with the predominating theory of the Art Theatre.

After the Bolshevik Revolution it was prophecied that the "Reds" would destroy the Theatre, that they would kill Art, and so on. But, with the exception of the first few months of the new government, the Moscow Art Theatre, as well as every other center of Art and Science, flourished, and even grew and developed appreciate the beauty of the theatre. Yet, the "Terevsat" (Theatre of Revolutionary Satire) which produces more or less purely propagandist plays, is not so popular or well-filled as is the Art Theatre, whose catholic repertory includes plays by Shakespeare and Ibsen, Hamsun and Moliere, Tolstoi, Gorky, Checkov and Andreiev!

District No. 8 Heads Drive for Day's Pay

In spite of the fact that District No. 8 of the Workers Party (Chicago) had already assessed its membership one day's pay for defense last September and had in this way collected more than $3,000.00, District No. 8 is leading in the Day's Pay campaign (January 15, 1923 to February 15), which is being carried on nationally in the Workers Party branches. District No. 8 has resolved to put the District over 100 per cent by collecting from all the members in its jurisdiction who had not paid in the original assessment. So far in the present drive more District No. 8 branches have responded to the Days Pay appeal than from any other district. 126 branches in New York have taken action and it is reported that over $1,000.00 have been collected but this has not yet been received by the Labor Defense Council National Office.)

District No. 8 branches which have so far reported (Jan. 30) are as follows: Davenport, Iowa, Russian; Canterville, Iowa, South Slavic; Kenosha, Wisc., South Slavic; Cicero, Ill., Polish; Joliet, Ill., South Slavic; Pullman, Chicago, Illinois; and Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Polish.

Other branches whose reports have come in are: Hefta, Ohio, Czecho-Slovak; Cleveland, Ohio, Hungarian; New York City, Lithuanian No. 2; Philadelphia, Pa., Scandinavian; St. Paul, Minn., Jewish; Grand Rapids, Mich., Ukrainian; Bellaire, Ohio, South Slavic; Canton, Ohio, South Slavic; Meadow Lands, Pa., South Slavic; Kansas City, Kans., Russian; Philadelphia, Pa., South Slavic, and Kansas City, Kans., South Slavic.

With ten days of the Assessment Drive gone by the returns so far made, only 19 branches would be very discouraging were it not for the belief that most of the branches have not yet had time to canvass their membership. Indeed information received by the Labor Defense Council from many parts of the country is to the effect that branches are busily making the collections.

It should be pointed out, however that NOW is the time to send in the money. The most urgent need for funds is NOW, when preparations are being made for the trial. Branch secretaries are urged to make their first reports at the earliest possible moment.

The Honor Roll means something to the Workers Party, to the Labor Defense Council, to the American labor movement. To the Workers Party it will mean the record of a task well or poorly done according to the few or many branches which qualify. To the Labor Defense Council and the defense it means success or failure. To the American Labor Movement it will indicate according to its completeness whether the party of the revolutionary workers of America is a party of self appointed leaders, as the reactionaries claim, or it is a party of militants from top to bottom.

Zinoviev Shows "Communist International" Transforming Into World Communist Party

By GREGORY ZINOVIEV

Chairman, Third (Communist) International.

The Fourth Congress of the Communist International made a gigantic stride on the way to the transformation of the Comintern from an alliance of separate parties into a really united International Communist Party.

The Fourth Congress has most successfully defined the tactical resolutions of the previous congresses, especially of the Third Congress, and has determined the manner of their application to the present situation. It has further dealt with communist tactics in each separate country, with the variation of the work in accordance with the conditions prevailing in the various countries. At the same time the Fourth Congress undertook the first great step towards formulating the general program of the Comintern.

This was the chief task of the Fourth Congress.

The Comintern has greatly increased in extent and power. At the Fourth Congress 65 delegations were present (at the Third Congress 52). The greater mass of the work was done in the commissions and sections.

Three quarters of the essential activity of the congress consisted of conferences held by the various parties, in the presence of representatives of the most important brother Parties, for the discussion of their internal affairs, and for the passing of resolutions founded on the experience of the advanced workers of the whole world.

The greatest work of the Comintern lies in having accomplished this. It marks the essential character of the Fourth Congress.

The United Front

The Fourth Congress conclusively formulated the views of the Comintern with regard to the united front tactics in general and the workers' government in particular.

The Third Congress merely opened up these questions in a general form, and issued the watchword, "To the masses!" The Executive Committee and its two enlarged sessions first called into existence the tactics of the united front.

The Fourth Congress has overcome the last obstacles in the way of successfully carrying out these tactics and characterizes the united front as a slogan for the whole period.

The united front tactics, encountered the greatest opposition in the Latin countries, in France, Italy, and Spain. The traditions of the labor movements in these countries at first caused the real nature of these new and complicated tactics to be incomprehensible.

The Fourth Congress noted with much satisfaction the declarations of the Spanish, French, and Italian comrades, from which was to be seen that the United Front tactics are beginning to achieve notable results in their countries. After the Fourth Congress the Comintern is in a position to carry thru "as one man" the united front tactics, the basis of forming the key to the present situation, in complete comradeship and on the international scale.

Unity in Trade Union Movement

The Fourth Congress emphasized with special stress and decision the importance of unity in the trade union movement. Altho at one time there were many comrades embittered by the treachery of the Amsterdamers, who let their feelings run away with them and who declared, "We are not afraid of a split in the trade unions", the Fourth Congress now distinctly declares to the contrary. "We fear the split in the trade unions, we do not want it, we shall not permit it". It is the leaders of the Amsterdam and Second International, who want the split. Objectively considered, they fulfill the special rask of the bourgeoisie with their eagerness for a split. The Amsterdamers and the leaders of the Second International feel that the ground is slipping from beneath their feet. They know that the future belongs to the communists. And before they leave the trade unions, before they abandon their places to the communists, they at least want to slam the door behind them with such violence that all the windows panes rattle. They want to leave nothing but the debris of the trade unions for the communists. Therefore the Comintern must exert every effort to save the unity of the trade unions. At the Fourth Congress Comrade Rosmer said that the Comintern saved the labor movement in the year 1920 when it successfully opposed the "left" tendencies to leave the trade unions. This is correct. In our opinion the Fourth Congress has saved the international labor movement for the second time by issuing the slogan: Maintain the unity of the trade unions under all circumstances".

The Fourth Congress brought about an approach to nearer relations with the best elements of syndicalism with the French communist syndicalists, and the elements closely connected to them. The Fourth Congress made slight organizational concessions to these syndicalists in consideration of the fact that they represent considerable masses of really sincere and revolutionary French workers. These are at present prevented, by the old French traditions and by the weakness of the French communist party, from adopting the correct attitude in the question of the relations between party and trade unions. If we stand for the united front, we must do our utmost to preserve the unity of the best syndicalist elements. This has been attained, and is another point of no little value which has been gained by the Fourth Congress.

Purification of World C.P.

The Fourth Congress was obliged to spend much time in liquidating the relics of social democracy, for all parties belonging to the Comintern have not yet succeeded in getting rid of these. No doubt much malicious joy will be felt in some quarters, that after the Comintern has existed for four years, we are still obliged to occupy the time of our congress with such a question as that of freemasonry.

At the time of the second congress of the Comintern, Serrati proposed that we should include, as a 22nd condition, one forbidding members of our party from being free-masons. At that time I replied to Serrati that we are just as unable to include such a special condition in our statutes as we are unable to make special mention of the fact that it was not permitted to extract handkerchiefs from strange pockets. Alas, we were much too optimistic. None of the parties joining us brought with them the whole of the social democratic incumbrances.

Socialists Re-Murder Liebknecht.

It was left to the so-called believers in Socialism in America to attribute Karl Liebknecht's death to his "own emotions" and his "uncompromising spirit" in a black bordered "Memoriam," which appeared in the Chicago Socialist, Jan. 13.

This definitely lines them up with the betrayers of the revolution in Germany—Scheidemann, Noske, Ebert and the rest. They too laid the blame for Liebknecht's death on himself, when as a matter of fact they had connived at the murder.

Sinclair for F.S.R. Against the Forward

Upton Sinclair, novelist, has become a member of the Advisory Committee of the Friends of Soviet Russia. In accepting this duty he states that he has followed closely the lengthening controversy between the Jewish Daily Forward of New York and the Friends of Soviet Russia and that he is completely on the side of the F.S.R. In the communication, addressed to Rose Karkner, acting National Secretary of the F.S.R., he specifies that he is "entirely willing to have his name used" as a member of the Committee.

In giving his name in support of the great working-class relief organization, Upton Sinclair realizes that he is bringing down upon himself the enmity of those opposed to Soviet Russia. He has in his possession translations of all the articles published by the Jewish sheet against the Friends of Soviet Russia and can judge from those the limits to which the Forward goes in maligning supporters of the Soviet regime.

"I have followed the controversy and my sympathy is with you in this case," he writes. "To make sure however, that he has seen all the facts the national office had sent him copies of all the documents in the case.

The Advisory Committee consists of the following, including Upton Sinclair: Elmer E. Allison, Dennis Batt, I. O. Bentall, Ella Reeve Bloor, Jay G. Brown, Jack Carney, Prof. H. W. L. Dana, William F. Dunn, Max Eastman, I. Louis Engdahl, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, William J. Fecter, Ellen Hayes, Capt. Paxton Hibben, Alice Beggs Hunt, Ludwig Lore, Robert Minor, Edgar Owens, Rose Pastor Stokes, Mary Heaton Vorse, Huler M. Wells and Albert Rhys Williams.

Every Party Branch! Every Party Member! Help Distribute A Million Party Programs!

The Party has undertaken a great campaign to bring the Party principles to the attention of the workers of this country.

It has set out to distribute A MILLION COPIES OF THE PARTY PROGRAM.

The program adopted by the Second Convention of the Party sets forth clearly and directly the Communist principles which the Workers Party supports. The facts which are used in the program to illustrate the principles of Communism are drawn from the experiences of the workers of the United States. The Party in this country has not published a more convincing statement of the conditions which the workers have to meet under the capitalist system and the program of action which must be followed to win their emancipation, than is contained in the party program. This program will not serve its purpose if it remains a document which only the members of the Party and a few sympathizers are acquainted with. It must be brought to the attention of the broad working masses of this country. They must become familiar with the name of our Party. They must know the principles which it is advocating.

This end can be achieved thru the distribution of the program. The members of the Party must take copies of the program to their unions, they must distribute them to the workers in the places where they work. They must give them out in workers organizations of every kind and character. They must distribute them from house to house in the workers section of every city.

Every Party branch must mobilize its whole strength for this work. Every Party member must do his part in distributing the MILLION PROGRAMS.

NO PARTY BRANCH WILL HAVE DONE ITS FULL DUTY IN THIS CAMPAIGN TO REACH A MILLION WORKERS WITH THE PARTY PRINCIPLES UNLESS EVERY MEMBER HAS DISTRIBUTED AT LEAST ONE HUNDRED PROGRAMS.

If a branch has ten members it must distribute a thousand programs. If it has fifty members it must distribute five thousand programs.

We have inserted in our Party Constitution the declaration that only such workers who are willing to participate actively in the work of the Party can join our organization.

THE DISTRIBUTION OF THE MILLION PROGRAMS IS THE FIRST EFFORT TO MOBILIZE THE WHOLE PARTY FOR ONE TASK.

It is not a great task for each member to distribute a hundred copies of the program, but the work of all the members together will mean the distribution of A MILLION PROGRAMS TO A MILLION WORKERS.

HOW QUICKLY CAN WE DO IT!

Workers Party of America.

Sex Equality

JEANETTE D. PEARL

Some of our 100 per cent Marxians contend that we revolutionists accord to women the same rights and privileges as we do male workers, that we accept the abstract principle of sex equality and that the woman's problem is bound up in the general class conflict—conceding which—nothing further is needed in the way of action.

The theoretical acceptance of a principle is not sufficient. As proof we may cite that the National Woman's Party, a most reactionary organization, and we revolutionists alike accept the abstract principle of equality between the sexes, with this difference—while we are passive, the N. W. P. seeks to nullify all protective labor legislation favoring only women, on the ground that such legislation negates the abstract principle of equality; and while we revolutionists place women in a position of interiority. The N. W. P. seeks to annul all laws limiting women in their free competition with male workers and other words, they want working women to enjoy all the privileges of exploiting on the field of exploitation for a greater intensification of exploitation, and naturally, a lower wage scale. The N. W. P. is utilizing sex as a basis for propaganda in the interest of the capitalist class.

We revolutionists must unmask the hypocrisy of such propaganda and reveal the class motive of these agitation when they aim, in the name of equality, to foist upon the working sisters conditions even lower than those now obtaining.

Of course, revolutionists accept the theoretical position of equality of sexes, but surely we are not blind to the fact that at present the social, political and economic status of women is lower that that of the male workers. This lower status of woman presents a problem distinct from that of the male worker, bound up in the general class conflict. It presents a specific problem, very tangible and very real, which can serve as a ready point of transmitting to the broad masses of women our revolutionary message.

The master class exploits sex in their interest and the revolutionary movement must exploit sex in the interest of the working class. What tremendous propaganda can be wrung from that "humanitarian" maternity bill, a bill so generous and lavish, endowing prospective motherhood with the huge sum of some 25 cents for the birth of each child. How magnanimous is capitalism!

Then there is the birth control issue with all its ramifications. Of course, we have only contempt for the "philosophical" chicanry in which Mrs. Sanger has enveloped the birth control issue. But birth control, separated from the promise that it will emancipate the entire human race, is a very real and vital issue, of considerable interest to working women and we must utilize that interest and win it, in favor of the general class struggle.

The scientific dissemination of the prevention of conception among working women is real, so much so that on behalf of it, our European comrades are carrying on an extensive propaganda for it.

Birth control is essentially a proletarian issue. The very fact that the master class, the church and the state are opposed to birth control, should automatically place revolutionists in favor of birth control legislation.

Fortunately enough these forces are opposed only to birth control practiced by working women. Rich women have all the scientific information they desire command. The small size of their families will attest to that fact. It is the working woman that lacks scientific knowledge. The statistics also show that a worker with a large family depending upon him, with few exceptions is a more docile wage-slave and cannot so easily be drawn into class conflicts. And there are other conditions, conditions that directly affect the lives of working women, and that should receive our attention. Women become crippled prematurely old and helpless thru lack of proper sex information and the careless performance of abortion, due to the abortion being illegal.

The marriage problem, too, affects working women more than working men. Then there is the child problem, child labor, the unmarried mother, etc. These are problems acutely felt, tho not so well understood by the broad masses of women.

When we approach the broad masses of women with abstract propaganda on Communism, we achieve no contact. But if we approach them on concrete questions of their daily struggle, and such are the questions we can gain their attention, confidence and trust. That is no mean asset in the revolutionary movement. In addition to training its vanguard Communism must begin now to build up the confidence and trust of the masses for that vanguard. History has proven that in the performance of this task, the broad masses of the women must not be overlooked.

In the World of Books

IMPERIAL WASHINGTON. By C. F. Pettigrew. C. H. Kerr and Co.

By JEANETTE GERSHANICK

In this book, "Imperial Washington," Mr. Pettigrew makes no astounding discoveries for those who understand the class character of government.

He tells the story of this country from 1820 to the present time. While the people were being lulled by such words of liberty and constitutional rights, feeling secure that everything is being cared for, the foundations of the present huge fortunes were laid. After the imperialistic Mexican War of 1848, there was an intensive development of capitalism in the United States. Its organs of land grabbing, control of the volume of currency by the bankers and the tariff, the railroads, and other instant industries began to develop by leaps and bounds. By 1898 capitalism was so well established that it became necessary to utilize the surplus capital which had accumulated from robbing the American workers.

The chapter on "Labor" is particularly interesting. Mr. Pettigrew's philosophy is quite a departure from the usual Western liberalism of Bob Norris and LaFollette. He attacks LaFollette for the latter's weakening position and attributes it to the fact that he is a lawyer and as such is more interested in the past with the preservation of the present system. While he is interested in the land question, he does not allow this problem to overshadow all others. He sees the identity of interests between the industrial workers and the city and the farmers, especially tenant farmers and farm workers.

While one regrets the assertion that the author puts the responsibility of abolishing capitalism thru political action, yet he praises the Russian Revolution, expresses sympathetic understanding for Russia and the proletariat of the world in unchaste, that one feels tempted to forgive him his petty-bourgeois philosophy. He has produced an excellent resume of the growth of imperialism in America.

Under Lock and Key

It is only now that we are getting full reports of the arrests of Communists in France preliminary to the French imperialist invasion of the Ruhr. It is shown that the chief objects of French imperialism were to put as many Communists as possible "under lock and key" during the initial stages of the invasion, in order to insure civil tranquility at home.

Among those arrested, in addition to Marcel Cachin, editor of the Communist daily, L'Humanite, were Monmousseau, secretary, Revolutionary Confederation of Labor; Trient, chief propagandist of the Communist Party; Marrane, Lartigues, Piertri and Gourdoud. All are members of the Communist Party Committee of Action, formed in Paris to combat the menace of the invasion of the Ruhr. Some of these attended the Communist Conference at Essen.

George Slocombe writes in the London Daily Herald that the French police are also looking for five other Communists, among them Genard, secretary of the Left Wing Federation of the Railwaymen. Evidently the French statesmen are not as positive as our own capitalist press that the Communist railwaymen are not strong enough to prevent French workers being sent into the Ruhr to take the places of striking German railway workers.

These Communists are now locked up in the La Santé Prison in Paris, the French counterpart of the Fortress Prison of Peter and Paul, in the Petrograd of the Russian czar. They are charged with "acts likely to injure the French government at home and abroad."

Not even during the gloomy days of the great war did French capitalism invoke the terror against opposing and dissenting elements that she now calls to her aid against the Communists. It is this Communist opposition in France that will be the greatest aid to the German workers in the hour they feel themselves strong enough to strike for a German Soviet Republic. May the French workers be endowed with the same strength in the same hour, and their Communist spokesmen will not have gone to prison in vain.

Attorney General Daugherty, and his chief sleuth, "Bill" Burns, have been officially white-washed by the house of representatives by a vote of 204 to 77. Both Republicans and Democrats voted for these twin enemies of labor. We wonder what happened to that "balance of power" thru which the "progressives" were going to control congress.

Scotching the Herrings

Only one excuse has been advanced by the citizen mobsters in Arkansas for the murder of E. C. Gregor and the flogging and deporting of numberless strikers and their women and children. This feeble attempt at justification is based on the charge that Gregor and other strikers were guilty of burning bridges along the route of the Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad.

Thus these assassins instigated by the railroad owners deviated from the usual charge of train wrecking, so popular among the agents of the bosses during the recent shopmen's strike, especially at Gary, Ind.

But some kind of a stinking herring had to be drawn across the trail of working class indignation that might lead directly to the doors of the railroad profiteers. So there are today multitudes of workers, readers of the capitalist press, who believe that Gregor and his fellow strikers are guilty of the crimes charged against them by their capitalist foes. Thus the American labor giant stands helpless, chained, poisoned with prejudice imbibed from the bosses' sheets.

Organized labor must do everything possible to scotch this herring, to counteract the propaganda of the employers, by bringing to light the truth about Arkansas.

It has now been shown that Gregor could not have committed the burnings charged against him. He was at work far from the railroad, as sworn to before a legislative investigating committee by timekeepers and supporting witnesses. It has also been shown that at least two bridges were set afire very recently by live coals that fell from the fire boxes of engines.

This is only part of the story. But it should be enough to show that Gregor's only crime, the crime for which he was hanged, was loyalty to his class. To be sure, the murderers were just as loyal to their class, the capitalist class. Hence the class war. The question for every worker to settle for himself is, "ON WHICH SIDE AM I? AM I REALLY WITH THE GREGORS, FIGHTING ON THE SIDE OF THE WORKERS, FOR MY CLASS?"

The Dis-United "Socialists"

After more than ten years, the traitors to Socialism will make an attempt to use the pulmotor on the Second Socialist International at Hamburg, Germany, May 21, in an effort to revivify it thru the merging of the Vienna Working Union, with which the American Socialist Party is affiliated, and the Second (London) International.

The last congress of the Socialist International was held at Berne, Switzerland, in 1912, when even Vandervelde swore undying hatred to all capitalist wars. But it is confessed in the call for the Hamburg Conference that "The Socialist International was destroyed by the war," yet all parties are invited that accept, "Recognition of the Labor and Socialist International not only as an effective instrument in peace but as absolutely essential during war."

In spite of the tremendous drift of Socialist elements into the Communist International during the last five years, there are those left in the Vienna and London groups that are skeptical of an "International" bossed by Vandervelde, Scheidemann, Henderson, Thomas, and even Longuet and Adler.

These are the "Socialists" who not only supported the "civil peace" with capitalism during the war, but who even now urge an "industrial truce" with the bosses, a truce that can only be bought at the price of submission to the capitalist offensive against labor.

Thus the Swiss Socialists are in open revolt against the proposed "unity" congress, the call for which attacks the Communist International, rather than seeking a united front with the only bona fide world organization of labor. The Swiss want pledges that the betrayals of the August days of 1914 will not be repeated. If that is all they want, these pledges will surely be forthcoming. Labor politicians are adepts at making pledges before wars, as before elections.

Those elements within the Vienna and London groups, that want something more than pledges, will consider the recent action of the majority Italian Socialists and link up with the Communist International, in response to its appeal for a united front of the world's workers published in these columns last week.

Joffe in the Far East

The Soviet envoy to China, A. A. Joffe, must be getting satisfactory results in the Far East, if we are to consider the numerous attacks directed against him. A great ado is being made of the fact that Joffe's automobile recently collided with a cart containing four Chinese workmen, in one of the narrow streets of Peking, China. It was purely an accident. If it had happened to some imperialist diplomat nothing would have been thought of it. But the enemy press got extremely busy attacking the Red Ambassador. The whole thing wound up with an exchange of diplomatic notes with the Chinese ministry of foreign affairs.

We take it that everything was amicably settled since the cables now report that Joffe is leaving China for Tokio, Japan, sent on his journey with many friendly farewells. On his departure, Joffe assured Sun Yat Sen, head of the Chinese Canton government that China has the sympathy of Russia and can count on Russia's support. Joffe points out that China's great need now is to achieve reunion and national independence.

It will be remembered that Joffe was at the head of the Russian delegation at Brest-Litovsk that won a peace treaty from the Kaiser. He was the first Soviet envoy to Berlin. He now goes to Tokio and it is said that he will secure Japanese withdrawal from Northern Sakhalin, rich in natural resources and famed for its fisheries. It is declared that Japan is anxious to make peace with Russia in order to open the way for commerce with the Asiatic mainland.

This development has considerable significance for the workers of America. We see American industry stilled by refusal to trade with Soviet Russia and by the destruction of the Central European market. Now the Russians look to Japan, rather than the United States, are co-operating with the nations of the Far East. With the divorce of the Orient from the Occident, new markets will be lost in China and Siberia, resulting in an increased stagnation for American industry.

Truly American capitalism is following in the footsteps of King Midas, whose touch turned everything to gold, even the food he tried to eat. So far-sighted America today has the greater part of the world's gold supply. But poverty-stricken Europe cannot buy the fruits of our fields, nor the products of our factories. So the farmers are going bankrupt and our jobless army will soon find new masses of recruits for its ranks.

This is so because Joffe, the red envoy of the Russian Workers' Republic, is on his way to Tokio, Japan, instead of to Washington, D. C. Let the American workers think over this matter and act for their own preservation.

The Revolt in the Pulpits

Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, of the Church of Ascension, in New York City, declares that, "This is a time of wonderful liberation, and we might as well get the benefit of it."

He is getting the benefit of the times by denying the divinity of Jesus Christ, charging that Jesus did not have the power of God, and raising other issues that have left the orthodox pulpiteers gasping. To be sure the more calloused among the occupants of kept pulpits have returned the attack. So the discussion goes heated. It was to be expected that the debate would bubble over the confines of theology and reveal, to some extent, the rule of the almighty dollar over the church. Thus Dr. Grant charges that the National Civic Federation was instrumental in crushing an open forum at the Church of the Ascension. Dr. Grant points out that H. P. Wheeler, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, president of the Union Trust Co. of Chicago, and chairman of one of the committees of the National Civic Federation, had "brought in a resolution at the Church House Conference which was not only presented to the secretary of the convention, but, as I was informed, was printed at the expense of the Civic Federation and distributed in our convention to the members of our convention."

Dr. Grant confesses that the Civic Federation attack on the church's open forum, called "the only free platform during the war," persuaded him that "economic things have a great deal to do today with what apparently is treated as religion."

Dr. Grant admits also that the church directorate is filled with lawyers, and that whenever a social-welfare matter comes up, there is always one of these lawyers who jumps up and says, "I move to lay that on the table," and, "I don't remember a time when it was not laid on the table."

Dr. Grant evidently realizes that the church today, no matter of what denomination or creed, is controlled by the money power. If he does realize this, then why doesn't he get out of it? Merely making a few spectacular speeches, resulting in a temporary discussion, will not alter the situation. So far as we can see, if there is any real revolt in the pulpits today, it is merely a revolt of words. And such a revolt never even dented the rule of the dollar, although it may give a few individuals a feeling of "wonderful liberation."

SATURDAY, JAN. 27—The Near Eastern Peace Conference at Lausanne, Switzerland, has failed again.

Help the Workers Party Grow

Without doubt the most encouraging phase of labor's struggle in the United States has been the growth of the Workers Party. Against every assault of the profiteers' terror, the Workers Party stands today the main bulwark protecting the outposts of American labor.

The correspondence of Max Lerner, party organizer and speaker now touring the New England states, published in last week's issue of THE WORKER, is testimony showing that the most extreme persecution cannot crush the growing American Communist movement.

To be sure the Palmer "red raids" of January, 1919, brought about the desired effect for a time. The workers were intimidated for a while. They were inactive. But the reaction against this tyranny gradually sets in, as Lerner now reports, even from the backward New England states, and there is an accelerated drift among the workers towards the Communist movement, into the Workers' Party.

It is essential that this favorable situation be adequately met by Communist organization and Communist education among the masses of the workers, among the tens of millions of toilers whose only knowledge of Communism is gained from the misleading items in the columns of the capitalist press.

The big effort of the Workers Party right now, to bring its Communist message to the workers, is to carry out the distribution of several million copies of the program adopted by its Second National Convention. This is a big undertaking. It must be accomplished by the party's ardent and enthusiastic workers, all of whom are burdened at the same time with numerous other tasks.

These are the workers who must also shoulder the financial burdens of this task unless they get help. That help should come from you, readers of THE WORKER, who for some reason or other cannot do your share in the distribution of these millions of leaflets containing the Communist program of the Workers' Party. There is no reason why you should not at least send in your contribution to help finance this work. Need more be said? Send in whatever you wish to contribute to THE WORKER, Room 405, 799 Broadway, New York City, and it will be turned over to the National Office of the Workers Party, to be put to immediate use.

Not Enough Credit for All

The elections have been over for nearly three months. But we find the different labor and quasi-labor political organizations still trying to claim credit for their various achievements.

It is to be expected that these claims should clash. Thus the Oklahoma Leader, renegade Socialist daily of Oklahoma City, Okla., attacks the Farmer-Labor Party for claiming the election of Governor Walton, of barbecue fame, when this turn-coat sheet vociferously claims everyone ought to know that he was elected on the Democratic ticket by the Reconstruction League.

We have just been perusing the January "Review Edition" of the "National Leader", official organ of the Nonpartisan League, and it enthuses over the election of "over 950 candidates."

Far be it from us to challenge the political prowess of the Nonpartisan League, but we find that Socialists Henrik Shipstead, U. S. senator from Minnesota, that the Farmer-Labor Party has been claiming all along. Not only that but it puts Victor L. Berger, the Milwaukee Socialist, in its roll of 950. No doubt new and more strenuous objections will be forthcoming from both Socialists and Farmer-Laborites against these "League Victories".

The trouble seems to be that there isn't enough credit to go around. In order to make the total seem astounding, fictitious figures must be used. We do not remember that there has been any taint of such internecine struggles for fame within the British Labor movement since the recent parliamentary elections there.

The difference is that in Great Britain labor is united politically in the Labor Party and elects enough candidates so that there is credit enough for all. If the different political expressions of labor would get together in this country, and organize and fight for labor independently of the old political parties, they might win enough victories, sufficient to bring plenty of credit to all standards, even in these United States of America.

The Hypocrisy of Hearst

William Randolph Hearst has secured owner-ship of quite a number of newspapers and magazines since first his mother set him up in the yellow press business. He keeps a large number of scribblers on his staff to write the things he thinks.

Thus Mr. Hearst appears as president of the corporation that publishes the Cosmopolitan Magazine, and S. E. Kiser is author of a poetic jingle jangle that is given a full-page frontispiece display with an ornamental border.

This literary monstrosity is entitled "Not Guilty," and every stanza starts off with, "I'm glad I'm not the man." Mr. Hearst feels he is not the man who takes the widow's rent, who checks the boy's proud ambition, who spreads distress for aged men and women, who sent the girl, found floating, on the course she took.

This is the usually sanctimonious Hearst, who feels that his political enemies are responsible for all the ills in the world.

With the advice of his highly-paid editorial writer, Arthur Brisbane, to draw on, Mr. Hearst should know that no individual or group of individuals is responsible for capitalism's many evils. He must know that all these evils grow out of the social system under which we live. And since Mr. Hearst upholds this diabolical social system, with all its crimes, he is just as guilty as Rockefeller, Morgan, Armour, Schwab, Ford, Guggenheim, or any other financial or industrial freebooter that profits by its continued existence.

The charge of "Brass Check Press" holds against all of Mr. Hearst's sheets. Verily, Mr. Hearst's publications are the most hypocritical, the most thickly painted prostitutes of all the kept ladies of the rule of guild.

Even if there are no Communists in congress, the bosses see deep red just the same. The transportation law proposed by Senator Brookhart, Iowa, is heralded by the Railway Review as, "The work of a Communist mind as truly Bolshevistic as any measure of the kind ever instituted in Soviet Russia." The education of the editor of the Railway Review on Communism is no doubt limited to one perusal of Harold Lloyd's anti-Bolshevist film, "Sammy in Siberia."

Golden Rules for Workers

If you find your pay reduced don't kick; you likely the boss has just raised his own income a hundred thousand or so.

Never tell the boss what you think of him. Though he may bear a decided resemblance to a pig, don't say it.

Always be at work thirty minutes before the whistle blows, and stay a half hour over time. Let the boss see that even if your wages are low your time is long. That makes him happy.

Never complain. If the foreman kicks you on one cent per hour, don't the other. Perhaps he will repent and join the Salvation Army.

Never join a union. Don't think that because the bankers, manufacturers, coal owners, etc. have their unions that that is a reason for a workingman to join a union. Wait till you become a banker.

Never go on strike. You might gain and the boss might lose. That would be setting a bad example.

Never envy the wealth of the rich. See how their conscience troubles them and be glad you earn only $17.50 a week.

Never listen to working class propaganda. You might begin to think, and besides the boss would get sore.

Never read anything but the sporting news, the funny sheet, the divorce scandals and the bible. This will make you a hundred per center. If you follow these instructions, you will please the boss and eventually land in the poorhouse. So why delay?

SADIL.

Soviet Russia Points Out Dangers of French Imperialism's Invasion of Ruhr Valley

By Radio to the Federated Press and "The Worker"

MOSCOW.—French imperialism in its advance into the Ruhr valley of Germany has again endangered the peace of Europe and has forced the workers and peasants of Russia to strong protests, declares a statement issued here and signed by President Kalinin of the Russian Soviet Republic and by Secretary Sapronov of the All-Russian Central Executive Committee. The statement reads in full:

"To the Peoples of the World:

"The imperialist armies of France have invaded the Ruhr basin. Foreign slave drivers have appeared in the industrial center of Germany.

"Another terrific blow has been struck at the German people and Europe once more finds itself threatened by brutal international slaughter.

"In this crisis the Russian Workers' and Peasants' Republic must speak out. True to its constant struggle against militarism and loyal to its principle that each people has a right to be free, Russia lifts its voice once more in indignant protest against the crime that the government of France is committing.

"It is more than four years since the imperialist world war was ended by the criminally absurd treaty of Versailles. This treaty brought to the light of day and exposed before the entire world the hypocrisy of the statesmen of the entente. During the war they had proclaimed to the ends of the earth that they were fighting only in the interests of freedom and in the name of the right of all nations to freedom.

"No sooner was the war at an end than they immediately forgot their promises and their noble phrases. They assembled at Versailles and dictated to Germany an unspeakable treaty. The treaty of Versailles proves beyond a doubt that the entente statesmen were not thinking of freedom but of tyranny, not of the independence of nations but of their cruel enslavement. Having violently dismembered Germany by depriving her of provinces, having taken away all means of defense, the treaty of Versailles also confiscated almost the entire commercial fleet and attempted to strangle German industry by taking away three-fourths of the iron mines. The treaty heaped colossal burdens on the German people in the name of reparations, which is to say indemnities in money, coal and goods for the destruction caused by the war in France and Belgium. It forged crushing chains on the German people and delivered them up to the mercy of the French imperialists. The treaty of Versailles has perpetuated the reign of hatred among the peoples of Europe and plunged Europe into economic and political chaos.

"The Russian workers' and peasants' republic protested strongly at the time against the brutal and insane treaty of Versailles. Russia predicted the terrible consequences that its enforcement would bring on Europe and the world. These predictions have been completely realized. The years since the signing of the treaty have been years of continual hostility, of increase of armaments, of intensification of the economic ruin of Europe.

"The imperialist government of France has not even been satisfied with this treaty of its own making. In its insatiable greed it has violated its own treaty and once more thrown the sword in the scales of history by its military occupation of the most important industrial regions of Germany.

"But France is not alone to blame. The allies could have opposed the occupation but did not do so. Either they took an active part like Belgium in the occupation or else they folded their hands and uttered verbal protests. The responsibility is shared by the British, Belgian and Japanese governments.

"The sovereignty of the German people has been violated, their independence crushed, the German economic crisis terribly intensified. Appalling misery and unspeakable oppression threaten the workers of Germany. Economic chaos becomes worse in all Europe. The world is on the brink of a new war. The Versailles treaty has converted Europe into a powder magazine.

"The Russian workers and peasants protest once more and warn the people of the world of the slaughter that is being brought on by the incensate French imperialism and that of its allies.

"Peace is in mortal peril. People of Europe awake to the danger!"

Fight This Cossack Rule!

Bosses Seek More Strength for Legalized and Unmasked Ku Klux Klan

Catch Lewis Gang Paying Itself Off

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Tens of thousands of coal miners in this district, who suffered with their families for months during the coal strike, stand aghast at new acts of betrayal of the reactionary officialdom, just coming to light.

It is now being shown that the conservative henchmen of the administration machine of President John L. Lewis, that controls the United Mine Workers of America in the interest of the mine owners, have received all their back pay, which was suspended April 1, when the strike of the miners was called.

In addition to cutting off the Fayette County strike against the desires of the rank and file of the miners in that district, the Lewis machine is rewarding the creatures it used to achieve its nefarious purpose.

At the time the strike was called the reactionary Lewis machine succeeded in gaining the support of most of the strikers by publicly announcing that since the miners were striking and not drawing any salaries or strike benefits the officials would voluntarily surrender their salaries during the period of the strike. Of course, John L. Lewis and his cohorts received their "expenses" and continued traveling in style and living at the best hotels, while the miners in the thick of the fight were lucky to get tents under which to shelter their families.

The back pay alleged to be due these "labor leaders" represents an enormous amount, held by the active tninions of Fayette County to be enough to pay all the stogy debts accumulated by the miners during the entire period of the struggle just brought to a forced close thru the treason of the Lewis machine. Every effort had been made to keep this last act of the machine a secret from the rank and file of the organization, but it inadvertantly leaked out.

Altho the officials made much of the fact that they were receiving no pay—only their "expenses"—during the strike, there has been no publicity on their part accompanying the collection of their pay they were alleged to be "sacrificing" for the good of the organization.

The rank and file of the Fayette miners are highly aroused over this last trick on the part of the officialdom as they were when their strike was abandoned by orders from headquarters at Indianapolis on the eve of a crushing victory over the mine barons.

The time has come for the miners of the United States and Canada to rise against the treachery and perfidy of the traitor Lewis machine and replace it with an officialdom that will respond to the demands of the membership instead of playing the part of contemptible sycophants of the mine owners.

Cossack Rule in America is powerful. Yet it seeks new strength. Efforts are being made in every state legislature in the land to increase the efficiency of this militarist organization of the bosses to fight labor.

When the American Cossack rides where men, women and children struggle toward a better life, he leaves a trail of human blood in his wake, the blood of the working class.

The American Cossack is no ordinary policeman, altho in Pennsylvania they call his kind "The State Police", elsewhere "The State Constabulary", and in Colorado the fancy name of "State Rangers".

The American Cossack, booted and spurred, rides powerful horses, sharply shod. His rifle shoots far. His club is made of strongest wood. His automatic is of the latest make. He is murder in animate form.

The American Cossack rides where labor is on strike. It may be in Western Pennsylvania's coal camps or steel mill towns, where he drives his steed into the humblest shack, to crush in the brains of women and children with his gun or club and drag the father and husband off to jail, if he is permitted to live.

Or the American Cossack may ride in military formation down the streets of Evelin, N. Y., during a car strike, outraging, intimidating, gunning down workers, striking down working class resistance under the [illegible]

It is this labor crushing force that the open shop bosses would develop, strengthen. Today, where state legislatures are in session, new legislation is being proposed, or old legislation revamped to give new power to the mailed fist of the American Cossack.

The Pennsylvania Cossacks have been a weapon in the hands of the bosses in every war on labor. Today these Pennsylvania exploiters of labor are conducting a statewide publicity campaign of preparedness, for new struggles against labor. Huge advertisements in the kept press call for new pressure upon the state legislators at Harrisburg, for a "substantial increase" in this anti-labor military machine.

"If we expect to get back to normalcy we must anticipate disorders of every kind," say the bosses' advertisements, when they know there has never been disorder in any steel or coal strike until the Cossack hordes appeared.

Illinois bankers and manufacturers, spurred on by the bigger profiteers, are at Springfield lobbying for Illinois Cossacks, to legalize such murders of union miners as took place in the Herrin mining district, and at Harrison, Arkansas.

These Illinois spokesmen of the ruling class want 500 Cossacks as a start, with full power to arrest anywhere in the state—without warrant if they believe they have "reasonable" cause.

Similarly in Indiana, Missouri and a host of other states, where labor is gathering together its scattered remnants to fight back this new attack.

Two years ago the bosses started their campaign in Indiana. The workers have thus far prevented the legalizing of the American Cossack in this state. But this month the big business interests are back at the state capitol in Indianapolis, nursing their state constabulary legislation with greater care than ever.

The American Cossack Lobby, before every state legislature, demands Cossack Rule to "enforce the law," to protect the isolated populations in the rural districts. That is the subterfuge used for catching the votes of the farmer members.

Kowalski Asks You to Help Make NDC Bazaar Success

Joseph Kowalski, one of the Communist prisoners confined at the Federal Prison at Atlanta, Ga., has written a letter to THE WORKER, urging support in every possible way of the Second Annual International Bazaar of the National Defense Committee to be held at the Lyceum, Feb. 21-24. The appeal from the Atlanta Bastille follows:

U. S. Penitentiary, Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 28, 1923.

My dear comrades:—I read in THE WORKER the announcement of the SECOND ANNUAL INTERNATIONAL BAZAAR to be held at the Lyceum Feb. 21st-24th. The purpose of the committee in organizing this festival is the raising of necessary funds for the defense and relief of class war prisoners.

As convict No. 14483 at the U. S. Penitentiary of Atlanta, I wish to impress my fellow-workers with the fact that the National Defense Committee is doing all that can be expected to assist the victims of the class struggle. Organized after Attorney General Palmer's raids on Communists in 1921, the National Defense Committee has, by securing legal and financial help for the comrades who fell in the enemy's hands, fulfilled all our expectations. The untiring efforts of a few members have relieved the anxiety of wives and children, the indirect victims of the intolerance of American despots.

The high cost of American justice is an obstacle that can and must be overcome by the united efforts of the working class. It shall not be written in the annals of the Communist movement in America that the apathetic attitude of the workers allowed Ben Gitlow, Harry Winitsky and many others to be railroaded to America's filthy prison hells!

Altho confined within the walls of America's Bastille, I raise my voice in this appeal to my fellow-workers, hoping to hear them answer en masse to the National Defense Committee's call and make the Second Annual International Bazaar the most successful event in 1923.

Fraternally yours,

Jos. Kowalski, No. 14483, U. S. Penitentiary, Atlanta, Ga.

Cannon Tells About Unions in Red Russia

No factor in the Soviet government of Russia has been the subject of more persistent misrepresentation than the trade unions. Such arch reactionaries as Gompers & Co. have been repeating the lies of the master class to the effect that unionism is extinct in Russia, thereby trying to discredit the militants who are in sympathy with the struggles of the Russian workers and peasants in their efforts to maintain the first working class government on earth.

James P. Cannon, chairman of the Workers' Party, has just returned from a six months' visit in Russia and is to begin a nation-wide tour on March 1 for the purpose of telling the truth about the Russia of 1922, as he saw it. Having had exceptional opportunities to observe [illegible] Russia, and being familiar thru years of experience with the labor movement in America no one is better able than he to describe conditions that now obtain in that much vilified nation and compare them to the condition of American labor.

Back Bone of Soviet Power

When asked about the alleged compulsory features connected with the trade unions in Russia, Comrade Cannon said that even during the stage of the civil war, when every bit of energy in the nation was devoted to the task of beating back the assaults of the Czarist generals and Allied hirelings that threw wave upon wave of savage forces against the working class republic, there was no such compulsion connected with the unions as has been claimed by the enemies of Russia. By the very nature of the struggle there was at that time a tendency to make the unions semi-state and some of them showed symptoms of bureaucracy. Such bureaucracy, however, originated out of the unions themselves and were not of the same offensive character as the labor conscription in vogue in by the government of the United States in order to prosecute war on European soil. As a matter of fact there was actual conscription of labor in America while fighting a war on foreign soil that was a thousand times worse than the labor policy of the Soviets, even when hostile armies were on their own soil and marching upon Moscow.

Under the New Economic Policy inaugurated by the Soviet government during Comrade Cannon's stay in Russia, there has been a complete registration of the trade union membership and all compulsory features have been eliminated. The unions now being composed exclusively of those who realize the necessity for organization, they become much more vital in the life of the nation than heretofore.

"They are in reality the very backbone of Russia today," declared Comrade Cannon.

"Furthermore they are many times more effective than here. They have the protection of the government at all times and are for the most part under Communist leadership. There are no injunctions against labor and no lynchings of strikers such as disgrace the pages of labor history in this nation."

Strikes Not Unknown

In discussing strikes he said that strikes are by no means unknown in Russia. There are occasional strikes

New Haven Has Hard Time Breaking Strike; Open Shopper Caught Getting German Scabs; Rail Heads Attack Strikers, Charge Sabotage

(Special to "The Worker")

HARTFORD, Conn.—The unusual arrest here of Julius Miller, Secretary of the Hartford Open Shop Association, for importing ex-soldiers of the German army to act as scabs in the New Haven Railroad Shops, is being quickly hushed up by the business interests. The identification of Fritz Unger, George Zazonen and Juamin Richter, among the scab boilermakers at work in the New Haven R. R. shops, as three of the German ex-soldiers imported by the Secretary of the Open Shop Association on last Armistice Day under contract to break the strike, has aroused the fury of the striking machinists, many of whom were conscripts in the American army.

Big business interests immediately set to work to quiet the matter down. The Open Shop Association has consented to let the Government officials depart without contest the three imported scabs that were caught, tho they must lay off any effort to find others and must shut off the publicity which is injuring the Open Shop movement. It is pointed out in private conversations among business men that the Government is pledged to help the Open Shop movement.

Public attention is being quickly diverted from this exposure of imported scabs.

Mr. C. L. Bardo, General Manager of the New Haven Railroad, has made a sensational attack upon the striking shopmen, alleging that the failure of the New Haven to run successfully was due to "criminal sabotage" of the union men.

On one day last Fall, he said, many locomotives had to be taken from Boston-New York express trains, chiefly between Providence and Boston, because of "hot boxes." He said the engines had been "doctored" in the Cedar Hill yards, near New Haven. After a thoro analysis, nitric [illegible] was found by chemists in the lubricating oil and the subsequent friction had ruined the journals of twenty locomotives and made that many trains late, according to the story.

Chairman De Peyster of the committee asked Mr. Bardo if he knew William H. Johnston, President of the Machinists' Union, and Mr. Bardo said he was acquainted with "the man." He evaded questions intended to elicit direct charges, but refused to deny that some of the strikers knew more about certain queer happenings than he did.

The newspapers are co-operating by sending out big stories of the alleged "criminal sabotage by the union men one day last Fall" and shutting off the news of the arrest of the Open Shop Secretary for importation of German army veterans as strike-breakers.

The Joint Committee on Railroads of the State legislature is making a noisy investigation of engine hot-boxes originating in the scab-manned shops of Cedar Hill "one day last Fall." Mr. Miller, Secretary of the Open Shop Association, who imported the scabs, has been released on $5000 bail, and will of course not be tried; the attention of the law being transferred to a union man, Ernest Schleifer, who has been arrested on affidavits made by scabs who swear that Schleifer made speeches advising the men to "muss things up" so that the railroad would not run so well.

Bardo contends that he will be able to get the New Haven road running with scab labor "as soon as warm weather comes" if he can only be "let alone."

Railroad Owners Urged Killing of German Workers as Kaiser's Soldiers; But How They Love Them as Scabs

By HARRY GODFREY

Federated Press Staff Correspondent

Ex-soldiers of the kaiser's German army are working as strike-breakers in the Hartford, Conn., shops of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. These men, machinists and natives of Saxony, unable to get jobs in their own country, were brought to America by [illegible] who is an employment agent and official of an anti-labor union organization, and placed at work in the very spot where five years ago [illegible] the American workers, to go to war against Germany.

The German ex-soldiers, themselves victims, first of German militarism, then of the economic demoralization caused by the war and aggravated by allied imperialism, and now of American industrial autocracy, are taking the places of strikers many of whom served overseas during the war.

Their names are J. Richter, C. Zamonor and Frederick Unger. They were brought to the United States and taken to Hartford, Conn., by Julius H. Miller, an employment agent of that city, who is secretary of a body called the "Open Shop Movement" there—an organization backed by business and financial interests of Hartford which is trying to destroy labor unions.

The Danger Threatens!

The inspiring appeal addressed to the workers of the allied and vanquished countries by the Conference of Communist Parties of seven countries, held at Essen, Germany, Jan. 7, is as follows:

Workers of Town and Country!

The Paris conference, convened by the governing powers of France, England, Italy, and Belgium, for the purpose of finally regulating the Versailles treaty, has been broken off without attaining any result. Four years after the end of the frightful world war, and three years after the signing of the Versailles robber treaty, the ruling statesmen stand helpless and impotent before the ruins of their own mad creation.

What is the peace treaty of Versailles based upon? It was intended to throw the whole burden of the war, and the costs of capitalist reconstruction, solely onto the vanquished countries, especially upon Germany. In opposition to the burning desire of the working masses for a peace without annexations and indemnities, they wrought a peace of robbery and blackmail, a peace of violence and hate.

What are the consequences of this peace? Increasing ruin among victors and vanquished alike, the impossibility of restoring world economy, the growing misery and want of the broad masses of the peoples, growing

Foster Reports to Red International; Chosen Member of Executive with Jack Johnstone, of Chicago, as Alternate

Editor's Note:—William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, reported on the general situation in the United States to the Second World Congress of the Red International of Labor Unions. With Monatte, of France, and Walcher, of Germany, who joined in the report on "The World Crisis and the United Front." Foster was selected as the American representative on the International's executive, with Jack Johnstone, of Chicago, alternate. That part of Foster's report dealing with the revival in industry and the outlook before the American labor movement follows:

The Revival of Industry

BY WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

The terrible industrial depression, which has wrought so much havoc to the trade union movement, now seems to be passing. About March, 1922, the first signs of a business revival began in a falling off of the number of firms going into bankruptcy.

At that time these totalled 2,463 for the entire country, whereas in August the total had been reduced to 1,714. Practically all the industries are now on the upgrade. Building is particularly flourishing. In 27 North-

New England Shoe Bosses Use Frameup

(Special to "The Worker")

HAVERHILL, Mass.—Again the traditional American institution, the "frame-up" is being invoked against labor. This time it is an active militant, John E. Merrick, of Haverhill, who is in jail charged with "manufacturing an infernal machine."

When first arrested Merrick was charged with planting dynamite near a manufacturing establishment in Haverhill. A suitcase was produced by the prosecution alleged to have contained an infernal machine, or dynamite bomb. A hearing was demanded by the defense and was held last week at which time various conflicting statements were made by witnesses for the prosecution.

One of the policemen contradicted his own testimony in an effort to cause Merrick to be held for the grand jury on two charges, one of manufacturing the machine and the other of planting it near the manufacturing establishment.

The outcome of the hearing was that the police judge before whom the hearing was held dismissed the charge of "planting" the dynamite, but held Merrick on the charge of manufacturing an "infernal machine."

In spite of the fact that one of the charges brought by the police at the behest of the shoe manufacturers was dismissed, Merrick's original bond of $40,000 was not reduced with the result that he was again remanded to jail.

Drive Against Radical Labor

The arrest of Merrick initiates a drive against radical labor on the part of the shoe interests of Haverhill who have become alarmed at the rapid development of sentiment for militant action among the rank and file of the shoe workers. The fight between the shoe manufacturers and the workers is particularly bitter since last summer when the shoe workers organizations became very active in that city and where the labor unrest culminated in a labor candidate on a clear cut class program receiving a vote of five thousand out of the twelve thousand cast for mayor of the city.

Merrick, altho active in the cause of labor, has lately been in business for himself and not particularly the bosses and their hirelings in the police department thought they could railroad him easier than others because of this fact. However, he is still an active member in the shoe workers' union and will receive their backing to the extent they are able to help.

Defense Committee on the Job

A local defense committee was handling the case for the New England Division of the National Defense Committee made a thoro investigation of the case and has united with the local labor for the purpose of seeing that this "frame-up" is exposed and that Merrick is properly defended against the vicious attack of the shoe manufacturers.

The fight will be bitter, as the manufacturers in Haverhill have determined to get rid of prominent local unionists and if they can railroad Merrick they will immediately extend their attack to all other active members of the labor movement.

The action of the police court is in no sense a conviction for the crime charged, but merely means that there is sufficient "evidence" upon which to hold Merrick to the grand jury. Every effort is being made by the police force to secure an indictment and no doubt a protracted struggle will be forced upon labor in order to defend the case of this victim of the "frame-up" system.

"The Labor Party" is the name of THE WORKER'S new pamphlet. It explains the basis for unity in the drive for "Amalgamation and the Labor Party." FOSTER ACCUSES FRANK MORRISON

By ED. BROWN

The February issue of the Labor Herald, official organ of the Trade Union Educational League, contains an interesting open letter from William Z. Foster to Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, in which Foster accuses Morrison of insincerity in his professed defense of the principle of amalgamation.

Morrison has recently been on the Pacific Coast completing arrangements for the Portland convention of the Federation. While there he delivered a number of addresses, wherein he professed to be in favor of amalgamation, but at the same time used the same arguments against amalgamation in the printing industry, to which he belongs, that are used by such notorious labor fakirs as George L. Berry of the Pressmen and Matthew Woll of the Photo-Engravers.

Morrison repeats the story of Berry and Woll to the effect that there was once but one union in the printing industry and that it failed to respond to the needs of the membership, therefore the various craft unions were created as splits from the one industrial union in the printing trade—the International Typographical Union.

Foster shows a keen insight into the history of the printing industry when he declares that the split-up of the printing trades unions was caused by a series of manoeuvres by employers, who desired to divide the workers and by "ambitious individuals looking for jobs as union officials."

A. F. of L. Opposes Amalgamation

Morrison is also taken to task on his declaration that the traditional policy of the A. F. of L. has been to encourage amalgamation. Foster charges the A. F. of L. officialdom with opposition to amalgamation and asserts that the so-called amalgamation projects of the Gompers machine save all been fakes; usually the case of a large powerful organization swallowing up a smaller organization as the culmination of an "amalgamation" campaign.

Foster says to Morrison "In your own union (the Typographical Union) many progressives class you as an amalgamationist, for you made a speech at the last I. T. U. convention which was deemed favorable. But here we find you in Seattle repeating the one argument which is doing more than anything else to prevent amalgamation in the printing industry."

It is certain that Morrison, a printer, knows the history of the splits in the union equally as well as Foster, yet he entirely ignores the plain facts of the history of the splits that resulted in the creation of the various craft unions in the industry.

It is possible that Morrison, altho in favor of amalgamation according to his Atlantic City declaration last fall, has been forced under the discipline of the Gompers machine and now can see nothing on amalgamation propaganda under the guise of speaking in favor of it?

Unless he comes forward with an unequivocal statement repudiating the reactionary implications of his Pacific Coast speeches that must be the inevitable conclusion of all sincere amalgamationists in the printing industry.

Nearing and the Workers Party

By SCOTT NEARING, in a Lecture at the Rand School of Social Science

The Workers Party has fallen heir to the present radical political situation in the United States. Is it built to represent the American worker? So far the radical movement has represented the European worker in the United States.

Since 1512 Socialist Party membership has steadily declined. That means, if it means anything, that in the United States as it is at present organized, the radical movements are shortlived. And if that is true, then the Socialist Party has had its day. Thru the middle west recently I found the Socialist Party almost extinct. Since 1920 it has had first the Communist Party and then the Workers Party as rivals. The Workers Party membership is as follows: March and April, 1922, 8319; June, July, August and September, 12,394; October, 14,566, and the end of November the secretary estimates 20,000.

Citizenship of Foreign-Born to Be Revoked

This last year has seen the scrapping of the child labor law. Today the Secretary of Labor advocates the scrapping of NATURALIZATION PAPERS.

This is part of the Americanization program being put forth by the Governmental spokesmen of the American employers. First of all Secretary of Labor Davis advocates the annual enrollment of aliens, stating "they must be made acquainted with America and America must learn to know them. They must be made worthy of the high privilege of citizenship in the United States. To do this we must know who they are and what they are. For this purpose I propose to enroll the stranger within our gates, to learn to know him, to aid him to become a real American if he is worthy, or to send him whence he came if he prove unworthy."

With the police surveillance established, the work of the alien to the capitalist class can easily be determined, and upon these findings will rest the right of the alien to become a naturalized American citizen. But Davis, the Secretary of Labor, still fears that some of the unworthy may slip thru. And that America may be saved from those who do not continue up to the standard set by capitalists for workers, Labor's secretary advocates, "The law authorizing the Government to institute proceedings for the revocation of naturalization certificates, which have been procured thru fraud or illegality, should be enlarged so that the Government would have the authority to revoke naturalization certificates because of gross misconduct or disloyalty occuring subsequent to naturalization. The purpose of this suggestion is so manifest that further comment or argument in its favor seems unnecessary."

It may be as the Secretary of Labor states that the comment is unnecessary. Undoubtedly the United States Congress to which he was refering his suggestions knew exactly what he meant. The question is, Do the 14,000,000 foreign-born in the United States know? Do the 36,000,000 who are either foreign-born or whose parents were foreign-born do they know?

Or do the 6,000,000 naturalized foreign-born citizens realize the attack which is advocated against their citizenship?

There are today 54,000,000 citizens of voting age in America and these 6,000,000 foreign-born naturalized citizens represent one-ninth or over 11 percent of the voting force. True, the majority of them are workers, but Secretary Davis goes far in thus attacking the foreign-born workers. Let the American working class give its answer.

Négro Question Before Fourth Congress of the Communist International

THE WORKER, in next week's issue, will publish an article by Rose Pastor Stokes on "The Communist International and the Negro". This question will be brought before the Fourth Congress of the Comintern by the American delegates, speaking as they did for a country with a huge negro population. This article should be of interest to every white worker, as well as every negro worker in this country. Order extra bundles for, special distribution at 3½ cents per copy, from THE WORKER, Room 405, 799 Broadway, N. Y. City.

A. L. Trachtenberg Attends World Congress of Educational Workers

MOSCOW.—After hearing the report of the international propaganda committee, the World Conference of Educational Workers, held here by delegates to the Congresses of the Communist International and the Red International of Labor Unions, passed a resolution to the effect that its work can be successful only under the conditions of active participation of the foreign Teachers' Unions.

The suppressed state of the teachers, the predominance of clerical influences, the persecution for the least freedom in instructing, the inclining towards anti-Semitism and away from the bourgeois ideology, all this makes the ground fertile for revolutionary activity among the foremost and class-conscious teachers.

The Central Committees of the Communist parties have, heretofore, neglected these opportunities, and the conference therefore calls upon every party to take measures for the furtherance of this propaganda.

Delegates were present from all parts of the world. Among the Americans was Alexander L. Trachtenberg, fraternal delegate from the Workers Party to the Communist International.

Must Wait Long

NEW YORK.—"If any one thinks he will avail the defenders of the Soviet Government, he will have to wait a long while. For it is as firmly established today as any government in Europe."

This statement was made by Bishop Nuelsen, speaking before the annual meeting of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church held here recently. Bishop Nuelsen has just returned from a trip thru Soviet Russia in behalf of his church.

Such of the Russian clergy as have been sentenced by the Soviet regime the bishop declared, have been imprisoned not for their religion but for political offenses.

Wicks Sees Failures in Co-op Efforts

Editor's Note:—This week we publish the Second Article by H. M. Wicks on the question of co-operation, that has come to the front again thru the establishment of huge financial enterprises by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and other labor organizations. Wicks is not enthusiastic about working-class efforts at establishing co-operatives in any direction. Many of our readers may disagree with him. We shall be glad to publish their contributions. Make them short and to the point. This week Wicks writes as follows:

Why this Widespread Failure

Second Article by H. M. WICKS

Apostles of cooperation have been trying for many years to explain why United States' soil has never nourished cooperatives. The cooperatives of Great Britain and many nations of continental Europe have been able to exist and in some cases have proved beneficial to the working class, also for the most part they have degenerated into capitalist enterprises and were merely caricatures of the earlier cooperatives. Why can they not survive in the United States?

If we become sentimental and view the phenomenon from the plane of the moralist there is no explanation. But only utopians attempt to apply morality to history and economics. To one familiar with the history of the United States the answer is not difficult.

The tempo of capitalist development was so great that the capital required for the successful conduct of industry forced all business to conform strictly to the laws of capitalist economic development or perish. Under such conditions no cooperative establishment having for its purpose the evading of the laws of capitalist development, thru granting special favors to its members, had a ghost of a show.

The vain strivings of the early trade unions for better conditions thru cooperatives are of interest only in that they prove to the scientific investigator the general principle that when strikes fail the unions turn to cooperation in some form or other only to meet disaster. It is impossible to beat the capitalist class at its own game and finally have to return to the one effective weapon labor possesses in its economic struggle—the strike.

Will History Repeat Itself?

No one will deny that the first efforts toward cooperative banking arose at a time when the working class was suffering the first severe reverses as the aftermath of the World War. Mr. Stone and others may protest that they had the idea before the assault upon labor, but that is beside the point. The fact is the venture was only successfully launched after the crushing of the steel strike and the first of the open drives against the railroad workers had started. Altho the rank and file of the railroad workers had not despaired of the strike weapon, the leaders were desperately trying to prevent the use of that weapon in a test of strength.

Now that the cooperative bank idea is spreading thru the American labor movement, the examination of its possibilities is on the order of the day.

Will history repeat itself? That is the question that is in the mind of all who are familiar with the history of labor in America.

Is this elaborate cooperative system of banking another phantom that will vanish into thin air before the realities of the capitalist system?

Without a moment's hesitation I emphatically declare that the most colossal stupidity the mind of man is capable of designing is to propose cooperative banking to the working class of this country on the threshold of the greatest labor struggles in the nation's history.

We revolutionists and Marxists, who know the ramifications of the banking system, would be recreant to our duty to the working class should we remain silent while this movement is developing.

The financial "experts," the statistical genius, the supreme authority in the labor movement on this question is Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

In an interview published in the New York Times, Mr. Stone declares that there is nothing mysterious about running a bank. "Really it is not as complicated as running a grocery store. It is just about as complicated as running a peanut store on the corner."

In an address to the convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers he said, "If you will use the power you hold in your hands, (thru depositing finances) in ten years you can control the financial policy of the United States."

Again we get a glimpse of the truly profound mind of the labor-leader-banker-expert when he assures us in an interview published in the Evening World that "the inevitable tendency of wealth is to create wealth."

Here are this week's stories:

FEEDING THE PARASITES

Editor "Worst Boss Stories":—It was just about 5:30 P.M. when all these workers, called "waiters," were supposed to have been on the floor, while the hired manager was going around mad. "Oh, where can those good for nothings be," meaning the waiters. He kept on repeating as some high, noble gentlemen—highbrows—were hollering for food and drinks. "Oh here they come—oh here they come. Now we will be able to feed two thousand of you gentlemen this evening," said the proud manager as the waiters came tiredly down the stairs into the Grill to work from 5:30 P.M. to 1 A.M. I stood there looking at that proud manager and the captains, who were walking around seeing that these good-for-nothing, old aristocrats got their porterhouse steaks served proper and with obedience by those tired workmen called "waiters." I said to one of the fellow workers, "These managers and captains accomplish nothing without the workers. If the workers only knew that without them nothing can be accomplished then they would not be so tired. They would be men living in a world worth while." All this happened in the Boston City Club, Boston, Mass., in the winter of 1920.

Yours for a world where the human race will not be exploited by a few, for the benefit of profit.—David Stern, New York City.

MEANEST BOSS HE EVER HAD

Editor "Worst Boss Stories":—One of the meanest bosses I ever had, was a man named Morris, who owned a farm at Red Hill, Pa.

My mother had sent me there to board. I was only a lad at that time and was paying a good price. She had gone to Florida and was leaving me there until she could send for me.

Morris put me to work pulling stones out of the ground which were nearly as big as myself. He had me begin work at about 4 P.M. Then when it grew pitch dark, he lit a lamp for me and sent me out to perform some more labor.

All this time he stormed my mail, and made me say that I was "living the life of Riley." Pray, gentle reader, remember that Morris was a heavyweight, and I was nothing but a kid, or I should have knocked him for a goal (the dear soul).

He also forced me long to ejaculate, "feet do your duty, your body's in danger," and I ran away one morning, stealing a great big cake before the assault upon my character for Philadelphia which I presume was about 50 miles away.

The Pennsylvania Dutch were a good old soul and I remember Dad's my cart up" for a feed, I got a hand-out.

If your contest includes military bosses, I can tell you a mouthful about them. I spent five years in the service, 25 months of that being in military prisons. I was in the battalion that brought Sergt. Domingo under martial-law, was captured by the enemy once,—lost in the jungles twice, and became a bandit. All these tribulations were due to onery bosses—Edward J. Irvine.

The Second National Convention of the Workers Party asked every member of the party to help make possible a campaign to MAKE THE PARTY GROW.

The Party faces an unusual opportunity to do effective organization work to build up the Party organization. Conditions are ripe to add thousands of new members to the Party.

The reason why this campaign cannot be pushed aggressively is because the party's financial resources are consumed in its present activities. The organization work under way, the publication of "The Worker," takes all the money that comes in as part of the regular income.

To take advantage of the political situation favorable to the Party growth, the Party must issue new literature; it must put out more field workers; it must send organizers into sections of the country never touched before. The Party must also intensify the campaign for the Labor Party and organize a campaign for the protection of the foreign born workers.

To provide for this work—to make it possible for the whole Party organization to go forward more actively—the Second National Convention asked each Party member to purchase at least one "MAKE THE PARTY GROW" stamp during February or March.

Campaign stamps are being distributed thru the Party channels. Every branch should have a supply at its next meeting.

Every party member is urged to purchase a stamp at the next meeting of his branch. If the stamps have not reached the branch each member should pay in his 50c for a stamp and the secretary instructed to write for them at once.

Place a "Make the Party Grow" stamp in your membership book and MAKE THE PARTY GR W.

Amalgamated Local Protests Raids

Local 54, Lithuanian, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, at its last meeting adopted a strong resolution against the arrests of the 20 communists in Bertsen County, Michigan, and strongly condemned the agents of Burns and Daugherty for their part in the unsavory matter. The resolution has been sent to Michigan's Governor.

Imperialism Faces United Soviet Front

BY ANNA LOUISE STRONG
(Staff Correspondent Federated Press and The Worker.)

MOSCOW.—On the first day of the new year, 1923, the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic went out of existence, and a new federation, known as the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, took its place.

The word Russian is omitted from the title of this great country; it no longer applies to the Ukraine or the Caucasus or to the territory known as White Russia. The name Russia is no longer to be officially given to the vast land which reaches from the pole to the Black sea.

"Our New Year's present to the proletariat of the world," is what the newspaper, Isvestia, calls it. And the declaration made by over 3,000 assembled delegates makes it quite clear what kind of a New Year's gift it is.

"For each republic is guaranteed the right of free exit from the union, and entrance is also open to all socialist soviet republics to those existing and to those that shall arise in the future."

There were present 1727 delegates from Russia, 1229 from the Ukraine, 91 from the Caucasian republics, and 33 from White Russia. The effective votes were divided on a basis of population, irrespective of the delegates present. Russia (including Siberia) had 1212, Ukraine 384, the Caucasus, 373 and White Russia 23.

The declaration which precedes the constitution begins with the statement that the capitalist world has proved thru decades incapable of solving the question of nationality "by combining free developments of nations with the system of exploitation of man by man," that it has merely led to more complicated conflicts. But on the soviet camp it has proved possible to uproot national oppression and lay the basis for brotherly cooperation of peoples." Finally, the class character of the soviet republic "puts it on the road to unity with the one socialist family."

With the preliminary declaration for union is made, on the basis of free and equal republics, uniting to form a firm front against world capitalism.

The powers reserved to the central congress of the union are similar to those which the R. S. F. S. R. previously exercised, most recently confirmed and guaranteed. They include foreign relations, war and peace, finance, railways and post and telegraphs, trade and industrial regulations, the general regulations affecting agriculture and public domain, the general basic laws on education, health and labor.

The congress meets regularly once a year, but can be called in extraordinary session by the central executive committee, by the decision of two republics. One of the most novel features is that the congress, instead of being located in one city, as in the United States, moves from one to another of the capitals of the various republics, the order of rotation being determined by the central executive committee.

One feature of the new constitution that will interest foreign business men lies in the provision that all concessions come under the jurisdiction of the central government. Those who have been dickering with the Caucasian governments will have to take notice.

San Quentin Prison, Cal., Feb. 1, 1923.
NINE O'CLOCK AND ALL'S WELL.

Put out the lights in the prison cells,
Once more our doom the bugle knells
With its mournful call across the years and the hearts of men whose hopes are dead.

One more dread day ground out at last,
In vain we lie, in shadows cast
That Freedom's torch may through the night of slavery's chains, a beacon light.

For thus it was and ever must be
That he that would the world make free
Shall suffer and be hunted and die
Despised and cursed by God and men.

So here we lie, and here we rot
With never so much as even a thought
From those outside of a world of light,
Who go their way and forget our night.

And each man in his numbered tomb
As he lies and stares in the night's black womb
Sees there the spectres of a hectic brain,
A grisly phantom, conceived in pain.

In Quentin prison the night is Hell
After "nine o'clock and all's well."
When the grisly day once more after the bugle's blast
Hands the soul like a voice from the past.

When Californian's sun in the Pacific has sunk,
The man that lies in a prison bunk
Hears the wind by the iron door
Crying like a horrid fiend some horror before.

A barren waste of grit and sand
On which men's lives in vain are spent.
For this is the world, it drinks man's blood,
It wrecks the life and never makes good.

Another day has passed in Hell.
"Nine o'clock and all's well."
And what's the matter that we rot and die
In convict's cheap and the "HILL" class by,
Put out the lights in Quentin's Hell,
For it's "Nine o'clock and all is well."

Foster Reports to the Red International of Labor Unions at Moscow; Chosen Member of Executive

western States the premium will be the first eight months of 1922 would be $2,562,870,000, which is $7,000,000 more than for the whole of 1921.

The automobile industry is undergoing a tremendous boom. During August, 1922, it produced 372,640 passenger cars and trucks—the largest production on record, and an increase of more than 200 percent over January, 1922.

The textile industry, despite a terrific strike, is approaching normal production. During July, 1922, the receipts of wool in Boston were 71,307,000 pounds, as against 27,157,000 pounds in June, 1921. The steel industry, which has been heavily hit by the coal and railroad strikes, is nevertheless operating at 55 percent of capacity. This is more than twice the production average of last year.

As for the railroads, the Labor Bureau (a private statistical organization) says: "The railroads of the United States face what will be the greatest traffic demand in history." In the week ending September 30, 1922, they loaded 988,381 cars, which is 43,000 more than the same week in 1921, and only 3,000 less than the record week in 1920.

Receipts of the United States Post Office are a reliable barometer of American business. In 50 of the largest cities they totalled $19,543,143 in July. This is the largest July business in history, being 11½ percent greater than July, 1921.

August bank clearings for the entire United States were 14 percent higher than the same period in 1921. Postal Savings deposits are 3 percent more than a year ago. The estimated value of the corn, hay, cotton, wheat, potatoes, apples, oats, and other crops, on September 1, 1922, was $6,200,000,000 as against $5,000,000,000 in September, 1921.

This general business revival is carrying with it the inevitable rise in prices and wages. The wave of increase in the cost of living, which started at the outbreak of the world war, reached its summit in the latter part of 1920, when it totalled about 90 percent above pre-war figures.

A period of decrease then set in and, in 1922, prices had fallen to but 66½ percent above pre-war levels. Now prices are advancing again rapidly in all basic commodities. This is particularly noticeable in the wholesale branches, retail prices advancing somewhat slower.

The demand for labor is also increasing and unemployment is on the wane.

In metal mining, automobiles, building trades, shipping, textiles, and other industries, workers are in demand. Wages have taken an upward tendency. The turning point was about in May or June.

At that time United States statistics showed that in the majority of cases where wage scales were changed it was to decrease them.

But in September, of 42 industries reporting, 31 showed increases over August wage scales and 11 decreases. The most striking increase in wages was in the steel industry, where the United States Steel corporation, followed by the smaller independent companies, raised wages 20 percent, September 1, in all its plants.

Will the Labor Movement Recover?

With the stimulus given by the industrial revival, will the labor movement be able to recover the ground it has lost and to march forward again increasing its members and strength? In past years when a period of depression set in, the first thing that happened was a slackening of industry, then prices fell followed immediately afterward by wages, which in turn brought about a weakening of the unions.

Then, when prosperity began to develop, the industries would first become active, prices would rise, then wages, and finally the trade unions would expand and flourish.

Many labor men, with this typical experience in mind, are overjoyed at the present revival of industry, maintaining that it necessarily involves the recovery and re-establishment of the trade union movement.

This is the position of practically all American trade union leaders. From Samuel Gompers downward they proclaim confidently that the "open shop" drive is stopped, and the anti-union plans of the employers defeated.

But these optimists overlook one most vital factor, a new element in the situation. The capitalist class of today is not the capitalist class of pre-war times, slip-shod and willing to semi-tolerate trade unionism. Now it is incomparably richer and more powerfully organized.

And, above all, it has acquired a new militancy and an unshakeable determination to destroy Organized Labor root and branch. It is a full-grown tiger that has tasted blood. One need not be a prophet to see that, industrial revival or not, the "open shop" campaign is going right on as bitterly as ever.

The aggressive, highly-organized capitalists will carry the war to Labor without respite. And so strong have they become, as tasted blood, and organization, that the trade union movement, if it clings to its old methods and notwithstanding the help of better industrial conditions, will not be able to successfully resist them. Unless it modernizes its thinking, tactics, and organization forms, the American labor movement is in imminent danger of being wiped out.

In this critical situation no real leadership may be looked for from the old trade union bureaucrats. Being entirely under the sway of the autocrat Gompers, who has not had a progressive thought for forty years, they are hopelessly reactionary.

They cling desperately to the most antiquated forms of craft unionism, and refuse to recognize the necessity for even the most primitive type of working class political action. They even consider the yellow Amsterdam International as too "revolutionary" for the American labor movement to affiliate with.

They have absolutely nothing constructive to offer. The more the capitalists press them down, the more timid and reactionary they become. If the movement is to be preserved, not to speak of developed, it must be the work of the rebel elements in the trade unions.

They must join hands, all fractions, in a united front against the Gompers bureaucracy. Until its dead dictatorship is broken no movements in America, political, industrial, or co-operative, can amount to anything. Surging up from the bottom, the rank and file militants must make their leaders act aggressively and intelligently or sweep them out of office.

Such a united front of the revolutionary and progressive elements in the labor unions is now developing thru the Trade Union Educational League. With branches in all the leading localities and cities, affiliated with the Moscow International, the general strike, support of the Russian Revolution, industrial unionism thru amalgamation, etc.

Remarkable success is being had. The American working class, always militant in spite of reactionary leadership, is responding in the most encouraging fashion. Particularly is this the case with regard to amalgamation, which is sweeping the labor movement under the direct leadership of the revolutionaries organized in the League.

The Gompers bureaucracy, seeing the handwriting on the wall, are fighting desperately on the defensive. In America the future is bright for a united front on the industrial field, as advocated by the Red International of Labor Unions.

Ruhr Grab Is Scored by New York Toilers

By a unanimous vote at the last meeting of the Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York that body joined the international protest of labor against the French occupation of the Ruhr region.

The resolution was introduced by Benjamin Mandell of the Teachers' Union. There was no debate on the resolution itself, but on a number of occasions during the meeting caustic references had been made by the delegates concerning the invasion of the German industrial territory and the vicious actions of the French military machine in its efforts to make vassals of the German working class and bind them forever to the industries of France under control of the Schneider-Creuzot concern, which controls Poincare and the French government in the same manner that Elbert H. Gary and the Steel Corporation control Warren G. Harding and the American government.

Cablegrams were sent to the Federations of Labor of Belgium, France and Germany commending their action in protesting against the invasion of the Ruhr.

There has not been any protest against the action of New York labor from the reactionary and vicious Gompers machine in control of the A. F. of L., in spite of the fact that Gompers and his clique declare that the labor movement of America is an adjunct of the capitalist class in America and the principal support of "American institutions and therefore should not meddle in European affairs." Not even Hugh Frayne, the watch-dog of Gompers for New York, was heard from on the question.

The resolution may be a sign that the Central Trades and Labor Council of New York may eventually become alive to the vital questions of the day instead of stagnating under the baneful influence of Gompersism.

Fight This Cossack Rule!

abolishing the "Cossack" in his state says he is going to purify the "Pennsylvania Cossack". He is going to lift his moral character, make him respectable. As if it makes any difference what kind of a Cossack pulls the trigger, or wields the club, as long as it is a Cossack that does the job.

Governor Pinchot says he is going to use the Cossacks for chasing bootleggers. That is probably a harmless diversion until the next big steel or coal strike.

John H. Cook, editor of "The Register", of Red Bank, N. J., a farm paper, who has seen the New Jersey Cossacks at work, says, "The state got the state troopers, and what is the result? The state has a tremendous tax bill to pay to support the troopers, but there seems to be no lessening in the amount of crime, little and big, nor does there seem to be any lessening in the amount of bootlegging."

The claim that Cossack Rule has any other purpose than to crush aspiring labor is a fraud. Pinchot, the "Progressive" in Pennsylvania, knows it. Smith, the "friend of labor" in New York state, knows it. Yet neither makes a step to abolish Cossack Rule.

One of the victims of the Pennsylvania Cossacks is Jacob Dolla, steel strike militant, now serving a term of 15 to 17 years in the Eastern Pennsylvania Penitentiary at Philadelphia. His innocence has been established. The Worker, with other publications, and joining with labor's organizations, has demanded his release. Every minute that Dolla stays in prison is a confession, if such were needed that the owners of steel and coal dominate the entire government of Pennsylvania. Having all the facts, knowing all the circumstances of Dolla's imprisonment, this Pinchot politician wrote:

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 31, 1923.

Editor, The Worker,
New York City, N. Y.

DEAR SIR: Your telegram of Jan. 24th has been received. I am exceedingly sorry that in the rush of correspondence it has not been possible to take it up earlier. In view of the fact that you believe Dolla is unjustly imprisoned, I would be glad to have you send the information which leads you to that conclusion to the Attorney General here at Harrisburg. He will give it careful consideration.

Sincerely yours,
GIFFORD PINCHOT.

Thus the new "progressive" governor of the steel and coal cradom of Pennsylvania passes the buck on the crimes the Cossacks have already committed and refuses to clip the wings of Cossack rule for the future. Unless organized labor in Pennsylvania awakens to the danger that threatens it, huge funds will be voted by the Pennsylvania legislature during the next few weeks for an enlarged and more dominant Cossack Rule.

So also Governor Smith, in New York City, who helps keep Walter S. Ward, son of the bread trust profiteer from paying the penalty for the murder of Clarence Peters, falsified worker. The Gompers' labor official-dom cringes wherever Governor Smith places his feet, and Smith is not saying a word for the abolition of the state constabulary.

About the state militia, the first line of defense of Cossack Rule, Governor Smith says, "The state has abundant reason to be proud of its National Guard and its Naval Militia. They constitute the state's first line of defense and patriotic citizens, who give all their time and energy in the performance of military duty should be encouraged by proposals urged to benefit this important form of the State's Service."

More than a month ago the representatives of the American Federation of Labor and the New York State Federation of Labor announced they were launching a campaign to abolish New York Cossack Rule that has always been a strike-breaking, union-crushing, head-smashing instrument to be used at the behest of the bosses.

But organized labor will never abolish Cossack Rule, not to mention the rule of capitalism, in New York State or anywhere else, as long as it is down on its knees before its oppressors.

Labor will not fight its enemies effectively until it stands up straight and gets power into its hands.

That can only be done now thru amalgamation, the merging of craft unions into huge industrial unions on the economic field, the uniting of all the political forces of labor into a Labor Party on the political field.

It can be done now by presenting a united front of the native-born with the native-born workers, according to the program proposed by the Workers Party, and endorsed by the Chicago Federation of Labor, and other organizations of the workers.

Exert every possible pressure, now, upon every state legislature that has the consideration of Cossack Rule before it. To be sure! But asking favors from democrats and republicans, no matter how "progressive" they are rarely if ever, is only an invitation to get yourself kicked in the face, if not something worse.

The Cossacks rule, sharp shod in America today because labor has turned against Amalgamation in the past, because it is not now organized into industrial unions in a Labor Party, and because there is no united front as yet of the foreign-born with the native-born workers, of the skilled with the unskilled.

WORKERS OF AMERICA! Unite, everywhere, for the war against Cossack Rule. Rally for the abolition of the bosses' legalized tyranny of oppression. Rally for the crushing of the unmasked Ku Klux Klan of American industrial and political tyranny.

Seven Thousand See Russian Film

PHILADELPHIA.—One of the most astounding successes of a labor undertaking in the history of the city was achieved by the film, "Russia Through the Shadows" at the Metropolitan Opera House here on Wednesday night. Police reserves had their hands full holding the tremendous crowd that clamored for admission. A second showing had to be made the same evening, and despite the repetition great numbers had to be turned away.

30,000 on Strike to Unionize New York City Shops

A strike of 30,000 members embracing the entire membership of the Children's Dress, Bathrobe and Housedress Makers of New York, a part of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was called last Wednesday morning for the purpose of unionizing the entire industry in New York City.

Most of the workers in the industry are girls and they responded with enthusiasm to the strike call. The last strike on a large scale in which they engaged was in the winter of 1919 when they were out thirteen weeks until the employers conceded their demand for the forty-four hour week.

This strike is not expected to last very long as there is a division in the ranks of the employers, one group expressing a desire to come to terms with the union and permit the unionization of the workshops, while another contractors' group, known as the Association of Dress Manufacturers, Inc., and who provoked the strike by their refusal to recognize union conditions, declare they will not deal with the union.

The principal question on which the break occurred was that of the week work. The union insists upon week work, while the employers demand piece work.

So effective was the strike on Wednesday morning that the strikers were very optimistic, anticipating the early collapse of the employers. About 2,200 shops are affected.

Chicago Is for United Labor Front of All, Native and Foreign Born

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—The Chicago Federation of Labor at its meeting last Sunday considered the attack on the foreign born workers made in a number of bills now pending before Congress and unanimously approved of the campaign initiated by the Workers Party at its Second National Convention for the protection of the foreign-born workers. This proposal was endorsed by the Farmer-Labor Party at its Cook County Convention on January 14.

The Farmer-Labor Party of Chicago has already named Robert M. Buck as its representative on the provisional national council on which the Chicago Federation of Labor, the Workers Party, the Trade Union Educational League, the Minnesota State Federation of Labor and other labor groups will also be represented. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers have also been invited to send a representative to the provisional council.

This provisional council will organize a permanent national council to which the international unions and workers' political organizations and organizations of foreign-born workers will be invited to send representatives.

Slave Labor Bill Is Now Before Congress

With free immigration a possible source of political infection and restricted immigration not bringing the promised freedom from the spread of radical ideas among the American working class, Senator Colt has introduced a bill into the United States Senate which is the capitalists answer.

No longer will the employers be at the mercy of immigration officials and a percentage immigration law. On the other hand the safety of "AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS" and the well known freedom and democracy of these United States is to be preserved. How this was to be done has been the question which has been agitating the American Capitalist for some time. The bill introduced by Senator Colt gives the answer: "CONTRACT LABOR".

Today employers and their agents, the steamship companies, are prohibited by law from selecting immigrants in foreign countries and importing them as slave gangs into America. With the passage of Senator Colt's bill this last restriction upon slave traffic will be swept away. Slaves gathered by the old method of force and deception will be brought to this land of the free, held in bondage by the employers, owned body and soul!

Babson, the economic adviser of the American capitalist class has for some time been pointing out that the bills before congress to change the immigration quotas would not help. For some time he has been advocating the repeal of the Contract Labor law and now he comes out in support of the new Colt Bill, stating "It may result in the letting down of the bars of contract labor to help the present shortage."

Every body of organized labor in America should make its protest heard. This bill is the final answer of the American Government in support of the new Colt Bill, stating "It may result in the letting down of the bars of contract labor to help the present shortage."

Every body of organized labor in America should make its protest heard. This bill is the final answer of the American Government to those who have looked to it for protection of labor. The only body which has any right to restrict or advise immigration is today not in existence. When there is an International body representing the workers of all lands then and only then will the interests of the working class govern the immigration of workers from one land to another.

Cannon Tour Meeting with Approval

Responses to the announcement that James P. Cannon, chairman of the Workers Party, who spent six months in Russia recently, would tour the country to lecture on "Russia in 1922" are reaching the National Office daily.

From the returns thus far it seems that the locals of the party are eager to take advantage of the opportunity to secure first-hand information in regard to the recent developments in Russia and give the workers of their community the opportunity to secure the same information.

The applications thus far are from the eastern section of the country. Among the party organizations which have asked for a Cannon date is Local Washington, which means that Cannon will have the opportunity of telling an audience at the seat of the government the facts about Russia today.

All the information received from Russia indicates that the Russian workers have overcome the difficulties of the hardest period of the existence of the Soviet Russia. They are now rebuilding, going forward to better things.

This view will be confirmed by Cannon from his personal observances of the achievements of the workers and peasants of Russia. The first series of meetings which Comrade Cannon will address will be announced in the next issue of THE WORKER.

Cannon Tells About Role of Trade Unions in Workers' Republic

against private industrialists who endeavor to gain excess profit thru intensive exploitation of labor.

Most of the large industries are under government control and are managed by Communists. Such a business requires a great degree of managerial ability. These managers are confronted with a two-fold task: they must strive to cheapen production and turn out lower priced products and must also protect the interests of the workers and improve their condition.

The Soviet Government will not build industry upon the misery of the workers or permit foreign capital to do so.

Experience so far has shown that both the standard of production and the standard of living for the workers increase at the same ratio.

Steady Improvement of Labor

"There was an interesting comparison between the condition of the workers of Russia and Germany presented at the last All-Russian Trade Union Congress, which I attended," said Comrade Cannon.

"Figures were presented by Eugene Varga, the well-known statistician of Russia, showing that the condition of the working class in Petrograd and Berlin was about the same. That, of course, if poor enough, but there is one very significant difference. In Berlin the standard of living under a decaying capitalism is gradually sinking to lower levels, with no relief in sight, while in Petrograd and all Russia the workers' standard of living is steadily rising. According to the report the standard of living of the working class in industry in Russia is a hundred per cent above that of a year ago and of course there is continued improvement to the extent that productivity is increased."

The slogan in Russia among the workers is, "Our own work is our own salvation". In capitalist nations the labor of the working class enables the exploiters of labor to gain all the benefits of improvement in productive forces, while in Russia it is the working class that gains.

Another feature that deserves special emphasis in the United States is the fact that all unions in Russia are organized upon the principle of industrial unionism and embrace almost the entire working population. We have a long way to go to reach that stage in this country, where only of thirty-million wage-workers about one-tenth of them are organized, and that only into weak and in many instances impotent craft unions.

From the discussion with Comrade Cannon we are certain that he has a store of information to bring to his meetings that will result in making his visit to any city a genuine event in the labor movement.

Communist Appeal to French Troops

When the French troops were advancing into the Ruhr district, it was noted, according to a cablegram from Essen, that appeals in French posted on the walls of many buildings urged them not to do the work of the French and German iron and steel capitalists. These appeals had been put up by members of the National Federation of the Communist Youths of France and formed part of the work for which Marcel Cachin and several other Communist leaders were sub-sequently arrested in Paris. The text of the manifesto as given in the German press read:

"Soldiers! With a criminal order the pretended victors of the terrible war of 1914-18 today call upon you to aggravate the political and economic slavery of your proletarian German brothers.

"Soldiers! Do not forget that you are in the service of the bourgeois class, that the capitalists of Germany and of France have already prepared their strong bases to take in still greater profits.

"Soldiers! For you the war of 1914 has not ended. The peace that followed the armistice has become, thru the Treaty of Versailles, a capitalist conspiracy in the secret of Loucheur, Hugo Stinnes, Schneider, et al, a rich source of profits.

"And you, little soldiers! Young workers from the land, the shops and the offices! You are unconsciously making ourselves accomplices in a crime against your brothers and your fathers in France whom you will deprive of work, the proletariat of German brothers will become the slaves of forced labor, beasts of burden of the French and international capitalists.

"Soldiers! If you advance into the Ruhr, remember that you are destined to serve as a tool against the interests of the proletariat of Germany, of France and of the whole world.

"Soldiers! Workers of the land! "Soldiers! Workers of the shops!

"The capitalists of all countries are your enemies!

"The proletarians of all countries are your brothers!

"You are called upon to serve the cause of the proletariat by the Communist Youths of France.'

Workers! The Danger Threatens! Time Presses! On to the Work! Fight Together in Your Own Defense!

your working hours are lengthened; your crushing burden of taxation is relentlessly increased; your wages, starvation-stared you in the face. The capitalists claim fat dividends, a provocative luxury, a mighty display of their power, and complete freedom from any burden of taxation.

Workers and Peasants of France!

The depreciation of the franc is eating up the savings you have gathered together with so much care and toil; the policy of sanctions is driving you into fresh war adventures; your sons will again be torn from their work, from their families, clad in uniforms, and forced to shed their blood for French imperialism.

Working Men and Women of England!

Your bourgeoisie expresses its thanks to you by continually reducing your wages, by forcing you down to a lower living standard, and by condemning two millions of you to unemployment.

Workers of Czecho-Slovakia! Catastrophic unemployment and ever-increasing costs of living—these are the reward given you by the bourgeoisie.

Proletarians of Italy! Your best champions are being treacherously murdered by the Fascisti, your people's houses destroyed, your organizations scattered. The Fascist government robs you of your eight hour day, and gives you as a present a tax on your wages!

Workers of all countries! The imperialist war drove you into the trenches; it murdered and crippled the flower of your youth, ruined the health of your women. And the imperialist peace is devouring you entirely. Everywhere you go, unemployment, ill-nourishment, and enslavement. You, the productive elements of all countries, you are the real victims, the real vanquished, whether in war or in peace.

But your sacrifices and sufferings will be still greater if you leave the liquidation of the criminal peace, which has just suffered bankruptcy in Paris, to the originators of the imperialist war, to those guilty of the imperialist peace, and to the originators and profiteers of the collapse of the world economy, that is, if you leave this to your ruling classes.

The France of Millerand and Poincare, the France of the plutocrats, is at the gate of the Ruhr valley, ready to lay its hand on this "pledge", to cut its pound of flesh from the body of the debtor.

Capitalist England fears the union of French iron ore with German coal, irrespective of whether this union takes place by force or by agreement, or by both methods at once. It sees its dominance threatened by this possible union, as a mere British colony. But at the present moment England's hands are bound by the strife of the robbers over the Turkish booty. America, the mightiest capitalist country, keeps in the background to watch over the interests of its export trade, above all over any turn favorable to a market for its agricultural produce.

The Germany of Cuno, Stinnes and Co., is still hesitating as to how it can best sell flesh of its working masses, with the least disturbance and greatest profit to itself. It is still undecided as to whether it shall divide the spoil with France, England, or America. But it has no confidence in the possibility of the proletariat's increasing exploitation by its decisions. On the contrary, it exerts the utmost endeavor to intensify the high treason which targets the exploitation, enslavement, and misery of the German workers.

Working People of Europe! The occupation of the Ruhr district signifies a fresh war, even when no armed resistance is offered on the part of the Germans. It will increase the antagonism between the different states, and reawaken nationalist passions to the highest extremity. It will unchain reaction on both sides of the frontier, and clear the path for every variety of Fascism. It will sow the seeds of a new international massacre. And above all, whatever the solution found by the international robbers, it will inevitably have the following consequences: The working masses will work longer and harder, they will pay more taxes, they will have less to eat, and they will have to be prepared to be led to the shambles at any moment.

WORKERS! You alone can stem the tide of the threatened dangers and impending sufferings. But this can only be made possible for you if you set up a united front of self-defense, extending beyond the frontiers of your countries and the limits of your parties, thus enabling you to confront the united offensive of the bourgeoisie with an equally united defense of fraternally united working masses.

Workers of France, Italy, Belgium, Roumania, Czecho-Slovakia and Germany! Unite under extreme danger!

Down with the rapacious peace of Versailles! War to imperialist war!

Down with the reparations and sanctions of the imperialist government! United and cast all the burdens of the war, all the costs of economic reconstruction, onto the shoulders of the capitalists, those really guilty of the war.

Workers of France! Combine, to raise your voices in a mighty and unanimous protest against the occupation of the Ruhr valley, against every attempt to dismember Germany, against the exploitation of German and French workers by the united bourgeoisie! Throw yourselves against the wave of nationalism! Fight for the immediate withdrawal of troops from the occupied territory! Strive for the highest taxation of capitalist property, for the payment of war debts and the reparation of the devastated regions. Organize the fight for self-defense at once in all workshops, factories, and mines, in every office, in every village!

Tell your uniformed brothers and sons that if they fight for the enslavement of German workers, they are fighting at the same time for their own enslavement.

German workers! Your enemy is not the French soldier, neither is the French worker, nor the French small peasant your enemy; these are exploited victims of the bourgeoisie like yourselves. Your common enemy is the German and the French bourgeoisie. Your most urgent duty is to fight against the bourgeoisie of your own country, whether it be of Arian or Jewish blood. At the present time your bourgeoisie is busy making agreements with its class colleagues in France as to the division of the spoil, and as to the best methods of silencing the proletariat.

Force the introduction of the control of production in the workshops, on landed estates, in the railways and in the banks. Control the prices of goods!

Until the Versailles treaty is torn by the victorious fight of the international proletariat, your bourgeoisie will force you to bear all the burdens of the war. Tear up the treaty, and force the bourgeoisie to bear the burden itself.

Form Control Committees of workers and small farmers! Set up a workers' government as a step on the way to a centralised power which will transform your demands into realities, supported by your own class organs.

Oppose the nationalism of the so-called national socialists and their allies, the Greater German parties, and all their flowery phraseology, with international solidarity, and with the common struggle of all workers against the international bourgeoisie. The international solidarity of the workers alone can save the German nation and its future, as a member of the great united family of peoples in the federation of the workers' republics of Europe and of the whole world.

Workers of Europe! The Communist Parties, and the trade unions affiliated to the Red International of Labor Unions, declare openly and unequivocally that which they have always proclaimed: They are ready to fight hand in hand with all workers' organizations in the common defense against the threats and dangers of the capitalist offensive and of a new world war.

It is the duty of the working masses to drive the leaders forward, who have hitherto aided their own bourgeoisie, to force them into the fight against the bourgeoisie, and not to throw obstacles in the way of the united front of the militant proletariat.

Workers, the danger which threatens you is immediate and immense. Time presses. On to the work! Arise and fight together in your own defense!

Ohio Frameup Against Coal Miners Fails

(Special to The Worker)

BELLAIRE, Ohio.—The attempt of the Southern Ohio coal operators to railroad active members of the United Mine Workers of America to the electric chair on framed-up charges of murder is meeting with failure.

Robert Farmer, subdistrict president of the miners and the third victim to be tried, was acquitted in the New Lafferty cases and the State immediately proceeded with the fourth trial growing out of the mine strike of last summer. Mike Museillo, the fourth defendant, was acquitted in less than thirty minutes of deliberation by the jury.

The charges were the same as in all previous cases—first degree murder with the demand for the death penalty. All four were grew out of the killing of one John Majors, on June 27, 1922, while he was on his way to a strip mine which he was operating during the coal strike.

Shortly after the killing of Majors a number of the most prominent workers in the miners' union in that district were arrested, charged with the murder and held for trial without bail. Because most of the men arrested were Italians every effort to fan the flames of race hatred was made by the kept press and pulpit of Bellaire and vicinity.

Dominick Venturato and Dan Agosti were the first victims tried and both were convicted. Venturato was sentenced to prison for life, while the case of Agosti is being appealed.

The Ohio cases are repetitions of the tactics used by the labor-hating interests in West Virginia for the purpose of destroying organized labor in the coal mines.

The mine operators have especially sought to obtain labor from the ranks of immigrants, because they hoped the inability to speak English would prevent the immigrants coming under the influence of the American labor movement. The fact that men of their own race can be found intelligent enough to organize foreign workers infuriates the mine barons, so their hirelings in control of county and state government in mine districts are instructed to legally lynch union organizers.

In addition to those already tried there are two other miners in jail awaiting trials on the charge of murder and five out on bail on manslaughter charges.

But the acquittal of the two men in one week is added incentive to the miners' union to continue the fight until every victim of thy frame-up is freed. The acquittals are taken as evidence that the campaign of slander against the union has spent its force and that the majority of people in that section of Ohio are beginning to understand the real motive behind the persecutions of the men.

The Failure at Lausanne

Imperialist diplomacy has failed again—this time at Lausanne. The Near East Peace Conference at the Swiss resort collapsed for the same reason that the Paris allies saw their efforts at Genoa and The Hague run into the ditch. The Angora Turks, like the Russians, refused to become the economic vassals of the Versailles bandits.

London, Paris and Rome tried to shoulder the Soviet Republic with all the burdens of the old czarist government, forgetting seemingly that a revolution had taken place in Russia. To be sure the big imperialist clique needed the money. To stabilize capitalism, the Workers' Republic had to be put in chains.

Similarly in the Near East, following the victory of the Angora Turks over the British-inspired Greeks. But three months of threatening, cajoling, abject begging at times, on the part of the Americans, British, French and Italians, have come to naught at Lausanne, and Soviet Russia scores another diplomatic victory over Western Capitalism.

The United States was in strong at the finish, with Ambassador Child, Joseph C. Grew and Rear Admiral Bristol, paying a special visit to Ismet Pasha, the Turk, at his hotel in an effort to make him change his mind. No stone must be left unturned to deliver the rich petroleum fields of the Near East into the hands of the Rockefeller world oil octopus.

Turkey remained firm during the three months of the conference, and would no doubt have surrendered more had it not been for the protests of the Russian representatives. The Turks sacrificed the closing of the Straits, abandoned a Garrison in Gallipoli, and accepted the Thracian frontier as proposed by the Allies. But this was not enough to satisfy the imperialist itch for power of Bonar Law, Poincare and Mussolini.

The allied diplomats wanted to choke Turkey to death economically, just as they are choking helpless Austria, and struggling Germany, and just as they would like to, if they could, strangle Russia.

In the words of Ismet Pasha, "The Allies wanted the new Turkish government to subscribe to vast contracts and concessions made by former regimes, especially during the allied occupation, without even knowing what they were. I refuse to accept economic slavery for my country, for the demands of the allies remove all possibility of economic rehabilitation and kill all our hopes."

The failure of Lausanne throws the Turks more than ever toward Soviet Russia. We publish on this page a statement showing that in its first flush of victory over the Greeks, the Angora Turkish Government began an attack on Turkish Communists. It is to be expected that the Lausanne developments will not only put an end to these persecutions, but will result in a definite Communist struggle for power in Turkey. That is what world imperialism fears. That is why a new war threatens in the Near East, just as in the Ruhr, in Germany and at Memel, in Lithuania.

In the words of Ismet Pasha, at Lausanne, "They (the capitalists) do not want peace." So they will get "WAR!"

One Year Old—And Growing

Effective, united, disciplined militancy in the labor unions is one year old. It is now a husky, aggressive chap looking for new worlds to conquer.

For confirmation of these statements get a copy of the February issue of the official publication of the Trade Union Educational League, "The Labor Herald" and take a look at the front cover of this "Anniversary Number". If you are not within reach of a newsstand or radical book store, just drop 15 cents in stamps to 118 N. La Salle St., Chicago, Ill., and get a copy by return mail. Or, better still, send a money order for $1.50 and get your name put on the subscription list for a whole year.

We urge the year's subscription because the 12 months ahead are going to be more interesting than the 12 months just past, in the unfolding of the movement for amalgamation, for the Labor Party, for nationalization, for the united front of suffering as a result of foreign born workers, and those other giant issues that only militancy proposes and that reaction always opposes.

During this first year the Fosters, Browders, Krumbeins, Wangerins, Sullivans, Manleys, Mollenhauers, Kurinskys, Mericks and Swabecks have got a toe-hold on the reactionary colossus in the organized labor movement. Sam Gompers, Matthew Woll and the rest have been dishing out a lot of loafering as a result.

But what has come before is but a mere promise of the howls that will go up from the standpatters when the big drives really get under way among the railroad, metal and mine workers, in the needle, printing and other trades.

Charles Krumbein writes in this, "Anniversary Number" of the Labor Herald, that, "The Trade Union Educational League looks forward with confidence to the oncoming year."

We would like to add that the organized militants are pushing forward on a nation-wide front with an eagerness and aggressiveness born of a huge appetite to tackle big jobs, confident that the standards of decisive victory will be firmly planted on every new conservative rampart assailed.

Workers! Get into the unions! Read "The Labor Herald"! Join the Trade Union Educational League! Be a militant in the big struggles ahead!

John L. Lewis, Ourselves and the Day's Pay

BY JACK CARNEY

The appeal for a day's pay is not meeting with the response that the need for it demands. The reason is not so much due to apathy on the part of the party members as it is to a feeling of self-confidence that is being overdone.

It is true that the Michigan arrests were the biggest and most stupid frame-up imaginable; it is also true that the antics of Monsieur Whitney appear to rival those of Charlie Chaplin, but the demand for the arrests of those involved comes from a class that, while it may at times be stupid, certainly recognizes where the danger lies and those responsible for it.

Their methods of attack are not to be compared with their desire to succeed. If it were so, the numerous frame-ups could be laughed off. COMRADES, IF THE FRONT LINE FALLS DOWN WITHOUT SUPPORT FROM THE REAR THE ENTIRE FORCES OF THE ARMY ARE DEMORALIZED. That is the first principle to be understood.

It will not suffice that we have the clear understanding of tactics, that our program is one hundred percent pure; that our members are doing good work in the unions, if the party as a whole is incapable of meeting the first real attack made upon it. Let the masses witness the failure of your first defensive action and it will entail considerable time and energy to arouse in them a feeling of confidence to support you in the next. The party membership is now being tested. Its support of the Michigan case will be the test. How many have responded to the call of a day's pay? In other words, how many have stood the test?

The Michigan case is not one of personalities. The personalities involved count for little in comparison with the interests at stake. Is it worth while to fight for a united working class? Do we recognize that a united working class is essential if victory is to be ours? IF WE DON'T THE BOSS DOES. His insistent attacks upon those agencies which fight for and promote solidarity amongst masses should clearly demonstrate to us the necessity for safeguarding and strengthening these self-same agencies. All this is understood, you say. Sure it is understood. We are all agreed—in theory. But are we agreed when it comes to a practical application of our understanding? Examine the responses to the appeal for a day's pay. Find out as to whether your branch does agree that knowing without fighting is not worth a tinker's damn. Then show to the working class that your party stands by those who are attacked and supports them to the uttermost. On the other hand if you don't respond, quit condemning John L. Lewis for his treagherous act in deserting the miners of Pennsylvania.

Communists in Chicago Offer Municipal Election Program

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—With candidates for aldermen in four different wards, and co-operating with the Farmer-Labor Party in the Municipal Campaign here, the Workers Party offers to the million voting working men and women of this city its platform as follows:

PROGRAM OF THE WORKERS PARTY

The city of Chicago, within the limits of which are concentrated many of the greatest industries of the country, is controlled and dominated by a gang of capitalist looters who look upon the municipal offices at the disposal of the citizens during the election period as opportunities to accumulate wealth and use the power to serve the public. The accusations now made by each set of grafters against another are merely the battleries of the political buzzards who are fighting for possession of political power in this municipality in order to line their pockets with the spoils of office.

Under the regime of these capitalist hirelings, public institutions are breaking down and the needs of the workers are entirely forgotten. The public school system is demoralized and the school board is the happy hunting grounds for the grafting contractors. The care and education of the children is lost sight of and the feeding of the prisoners and detectives and police officers are known to inflict the most brutal punishments on helpless victims while in their custody. The transit system is a disgrace to any civilized community, but instead of settling down to the task of providing the citizens with efficient transportation system, rival groups of capitalist grafters in the city fight each other because they cannot agree over the division of the spoils. The Lundin Committee, backing the old parties, plans a renewed "Open Shop" campaign.

The Workers Party, on entering the municipal campaign, declares that the evil conditions prevailing in this great city have their roots in the social order, known as the capitalist system. Under this system of production for profit and not for use, those who render no useful service to society are rewarded with immense wealth, while the useful citizens, the workers, live a hand to mouth existence with starvation continually staring them in the face. We declare that until this system is abolished and the Communist form of society established in its stead, that no worthwhile relief from present conditions can be secured. The workers must take possession of the government, build the Workers' Republic on the ashes of this robber system and usher in an era of prosperity for all those who work with hand and brain to add to the comfort and happiness of mankind.

The Workers Party believes that every advantage secured by the workers thru their own efforts puts them in better fighting trim to make further gains. Therefore the Workers Party stands for the following measures and its candidates if elected will fight to put them into operation:

1—The Municipal ownership of all public utilities, including telephone, gas and electric works, elevated and transportation lines. Administration of each of these services by a commission, the majority of which shall consist of workers employed in the service.

2—Representation of the Teachers' Union on the School Board, administration of the educational side of the school system by a Council of Teachers.

3—The right of all municipal employes to join any union of their calling and to affiliate with the American Labor Movement.

4—That city contracts be let out only to firms that employ union labor.

5—In case of strikes or industrial disputes, the mayor shall appoint special deputies from the ranks of the workers involved in the strike to maintain order.

6—The free use of all public high ways, public parks and public buildings, such as schools, libraries, etc., for the discussion of all questions affecting the interest of all workers.

7—The unemployed to be given work by the city at the trade union rate of wages and when work is not available, compensation to be given at the same rate, said compensation to be paid thru the trade unions.

8—Elimination of brutal third-degree methods by the police and the criminal prosecution of all law enforcement officers found guilty of such conduct.

Labor Condemns Arkansas Lynching

The San Francisco Labor Council, considered one of the most conservative labor bodies in the country, adopted a resolution introduced by William G Turner, member of the Workers Party, condemning the lynching of the shop striker, Gregor, at Harrison, Arkansas. When so conservative a body passes such a resolution, the angry feeling of American labor can be well guaged.

Workers Party Has Candidates in City Elections in Chicago

(Special to "THE WORKER")

CHICAGO, Ill.—The Workers Party will definitely become a political factor in the coming city elections here with aldermanic candidates in four wards, Louis A. Cejka, in the 22nd; Abraham Jacobson, in the 24th; Harry Brooker, in the 34th, and N. F. Hohn, in the 35th.

Petitions are being circulated for the nomination of candidates in these wards and the Party in Chicago proposes to utilize every means of making itself felt among the workers.

Altho the candidates are from only four wards, the campaign will be waged upon the principle that its issues are of the workers of the entire city to support these working-class candidates.

Amidst the mud-slinging and the "political" activity of Chicago's gangsters in the camps of the old parties and the anaemic sentimental "better-than-thou" attitude of the discredited Socialist Party the clear-cut class issues raised by the Workers Party in its campaign should result in separating many workers from their apathy and also increase tremendously the activity and prestige of the party.

Start Drive to Organize Rubber Peons

(Special to "THE WORKER")

AKRON, Ohio.—Plans are being made for an intensive organization campaign among the rubber peons of Akron, one of the worst slave towns in the United States, absolutely ruled by the rubber manufacturers, who boast that unionism will never gain a foothold here.

Akron was the scene of a bitter labor struggle just three years ago. At that time the strike was destroyed by the use of agents provocateur employed by a notorious private detective agency of Cleveland, Ohio. The aftermath of that struggle showed the union to have been officered entirely by agents of the rubber trust.

So disheartened were the rank and file of the workers who felt they had been pawns in the hands of unscrupulous conspirators that for a decade Akron has been recognized as one of the most difficult points in the labor movement in America; second only to the domains of Gary and the Steel corporation.

Arise in Spontaneous Revolt

The rubber kings, secure in the belief that their slaves were immune to strikes, have audaciously imposed a series of wage-cuts during the past two years. But on December 28 over 1,000 men in the plant of the Goodyear Company were swept into a spontaneous walk-out in answer to an announced wage cut of 12½ per cent. As not enough impetus had been gained for the walk-out to reach as there were no organizers in the field able to develop the movement into a strike, the workers were finally defeated on January 15 and forced back into the slave pen.

The American Federation of Labor now has an organizer in this field devoting his entire time to the rubber industry and the Central Labor Union of Akron has a special committee on the job for the purpose the proportions of a real strike and of forwarding the work of organization.

It is a difficult task to attempt to break the "open shop" clique in the rubber industry, but then labor advances only thru surmounting difficulties. The spontaneous walk-out is a healthy sign and proves that the workers of Akron have sufficient vitality to respond against the unrequited slavery that has been and is their lot under the sad conditions now prevailing in this locality.

Plan United Front for Spring Elections at Minneapolis, Minn.

(Special to The Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—A united front of all workers' organizations in the forthcoming elections is seen from the conference just held here. On the initiative of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly, delegates convened from the Workers Party, Working People's Political League, the Farmer-Labor Party and the Socialist Party, and discussed the situation. No candidates for Mayor or other officers were nominated because of the prevailing opinion that this should be done later.

The Workers Party took a prominent part in the conference. The chairman of the meeting was R. D. Cramer, editor of the Labor Review, and spokesman for the fight put up at the late lamented Cleveland Conference, for the admission of the delegates from the Workers Party. The secretary of the conference was Alderman Isaac G. Scott, a prominent member of the Minneapolis Labor Assembly, and an active worker in the Trade Union Educational League.

It is confidently expected that with the united front in the campaign, a full city ticket will be elected.

The Communist Party and Spies

In connection with the work of the defense of the Communists arrested for the alleged crime of having gathered for a convention in Bridgeman, Mich., unmistakeable proof was obtained about the activities of spies and agents provocateurs.

These findings inspire the capitalist press, and, as it becomes its station and its task, the "socialist" press in its front rank, to build up the theory of a "Party of Spies." The convention was arranged by spies; the documents were written by spies; spies detected the convention; spies arrested the conventions, and when they looked over their catch they found that all they had arrested were—spies.

If the "Call" and its many other more decent capitalist press products intended to ridicule the "great" Burns, of Linde fame, one could only dispute the quality of their method. But when they built up the theory of the man who was Thursday, in an attempt to discredit the revolutionary organization, their motives must be questioned.

From what we know of the convention in Michigan it was a Communist convention. In spite of all the agents of Burns it carried out just its legitimate work. It was arranged not by spies, but in spite of them. Its documents were not written by spies but in defiance of them. And all the insinuations of all the capitalist papers, including the "Call", will not be able to decorate Burns with the achievement of having framed a convention on the Communists out of which the prosecutors at St. Joseph, Mich., are to spin a rope to hang the Communists on.

The "Call" we might say that if its friend Burns would take his job seriously his agents could easily obtain proof of the fact that that institution obtains money from the working class public under the false pretense of being a working class paper, and a revolutionary one at that. But as Burns is engaged in the same work as the "Call", that is not working for the public but working the public, the "Call" does not run any danger and can continue its existance as a cheat.

As for the Communist Party we might say that it has its Azefs, without a doubt, tho the low standard of intelligence of the Burns institution could not possibly produce one of the danger of the original. But what of that? If a party which claims to represent the interests of the working class, will no longer be considered sufficient danger to the ruling class that the latter need not watch it and spy upon it any longer, the working class may just as well make up its mind and condemn that party as having sold out.

No fighting organization of the working class, no union, be it ever so conservative in its political conceptions, is without spies. Yes, we venture to say that in spite of the frantic attempts of the Socialist Party and its organ, the "Call" as well as the "Forward", to serve as an agent of capitalism against the working class and especially against the Communists, there are Burns agents in the S. P. After all, capitalism is a dying order. And the greater the danger of its impending destruction becomes apparent to its representatives the less discriminating they become in the selection of their tools. If a spy does not seem utterly reliable they meet the emergency by setting another spy upon the first one. Thus even the well meant services of Branstetter, "The Call" or the "Forward" are surely rewarded by Burns by setting spies upon them. As to capitalism, a Socialist Party and a Burns, a Socialist paper and a Burns agent, all are considered mere devices for the safety of its order.

And a revolutionary party, representing the order of the morrow, endangered by the poison of Burns agents from within, made the center of sinister attacks by Socialist papers from without, has only one course left to pursue—travel the road of revolutionary duty. Revolutionary principles, clear policies and united action, that is the road.

Socialist papers may accuse it of crimes; but never of crimes against the working class. Spies may betray it; but they can never misdirect it.

Russia and the Armenians

It is interesting to watch the reaction of the conservative press in America to Russia's extension of hospitality to some 250,000 persecuted Armenians. The Armenians, of course, have long been the special proteges of the American press, so to speak.

Whenever the needs of the oil interests dictated intercession in the Near East, the "Christian minorities," and particularly the Armenians, constituted the public excuse for action.

To find that the first really great help extended to this Christian minority and promptly accepted by it has come from unmentionable Soviet Russia is, of course, disconcerting to the writers of editorial commentaries.

Admitting that the action of the Russian Government is the first constructive solution of the Near Eastern problem that has come out of Lausanne, the press hastens to add that it is not only "an act of generosity" but "a very shrewd diplomatic move," to quote the N. Y. World.

Against the background of intrigue and greed so apparent in the Lausanne negotiations, any generous act stands out with astounding vividness.

Despair is putting a little fight in the starving Austrian workers. When Ludendorff came to Klagenfurt, Carenthia, to address the National Peasant Congress, they spoiled his ambition with cries of "Germany's grave digger", "hound" and "murderer". Pan-German and nationalistic street decorations were torn down and burned. Ludendorff will no doubt strike Austria off his visiting list. He'd better stick to monarchist Bavaria under the Germany of "Socialist" Ebert.

While Uncle Sam has his sleuths watching at every port to prevent the entrance of "reds" into this country, it is charged by the Russian Soviet Government that fugitive white guardists in great numbers, crossing the Behring Straits from Siberia to Alaska, are permitted to land on U. S. soil without objection. More than that, they are permitted to dispose of looted private property of the Soviet Republic, especially great quantities of furs. The American statesman always did know his kind.

The three boils of world imperialism, the Rhineland, the Near-East and Memel are rapidly coming to a head and may burst at any moment. Or perhaps a good lancing job may be performed by the workers' revolution.

Tammany Hall, the Liberator Ball, March 2nd

We Say:
Liberator Ball,
Tammany Hall,
March Second,
That's all!

But you had better get those few words firmly fixed in your mind, so that you will not miss the big event of this revolutionary year of 1923.

Last year the Liberator Ball went up to Yorkville, to the Lyceum on 84th St., and the crowds that were turned away at that time, we are sure, will be early arrivals this year.

This year the Liberator Ball comes to 14th St., between Third and Fourth Aves. Tammany Hall is the place. "Charley" Murphy and his Indian Chiefs have promised to move out for the night to make room for the Liberator "Reds".

It is going to be a Costume Ball; which is a ball in which you may wear anything you please, the official uniform of the Scissor Bill—the Universal Overalls; or the light dancing draperies of an Isadora Duncan. You are not even compelled to hide your identity behind a mask.

Elmer T. Allison, business manager of The Liberator, announces officially that this Costume Ball is going to be the place "Where Near East Side and Far West Side meet in one glorious United Front".

Two elaborate prizes are announced, one for the best costume and one for the most original. Tickets in advance $1, at the door $1.50. Buy them most anywhere you see a poster and at the office of The Liberator, Room 405, 799 Broadway, New York City.

New Weapon In Class War

The lengths to which the government was prepared to go in its effort to crush the railroad shopmen's strike last summer was partly revealed by Brigadier General Amos A. Fries in a recent address before the Engineers Club of Baltimore.

According to the general there were hundreds of tanks of tear gas shipped by the government to various army posts thruout the United States "for emergency use." Of course it is perfectly plain that the only emergency that could arise, requiring the use of tear gas within the confines of the United States, would be a strike. But in order that none in the audience could possibly misunderstand the motive of the government Mr. Fries emphasized the fact that these shipments took place during the railroad strike.

Mr. Fries may argue that tear gas is superior to bullets from a humanitarian point of view, inasmuch as it does not instantly kill the victims—it simply blinds them. Death does not ensue unless accompanied by some organic weakness, or unless one gets too much.

The speech of the brigadier general is the first acknowledgment on the part of governmental officials that this weapon is to be used against strikers. To those meek and mild labor leaders, who constantly repeat the capitalist litany to the effect that there is no such thing as the class war, such brutal revelations on the part of army officials may come as a distinct shock.

But to the revolutionist, who correctly visualizes strikes as symptoms of the class struggle and who realizes that the capitalist state is an instrument of coercion in the hands of the ruling class of America for the purpose of imposing slavery upon the working class, it occasions no surprise, unless it be surprise that an army officer should be permitted to expose the sinister plans of the government.

This utterance should impress upon the minds of those who claim to ignore the class war, that it is rather absurd to refuse to recognize that which so palpably exists and asserts itself in ever more vicious forms. It is also a reminder that altho some workers may ignore the class war the class war will not ignore them if they endeavor to defend their economic interests thru strikes.

The American capitalist class has never hesitated to take full advantage of every improved military device to crush labor in the past and the addition of tear gas to its anti-labor arsenal is by no means the least of its innovations. In case tear gas is not adequate the government has aeroplane bombs and liquid fire, not to mention poison gas and other instruments of "civilized warfare."

Lee May Quit Trainmen

William G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, announces that he "may" resign as head of the Brotherhood in order to devote his talents to the service of a ten million dollar corporation, the proposed improved military device to crush labor in the past and the addition of tear gas to its anti-labor arsenal is by no means the least of its innovations. In case tear gas is not adequate the government has aeroplane bombs and liquid fire, not to mention poison gas and other instruments of "civilized warfare."

At present Lee is employed to serve the corporation without pay, but will retain his fat salary as head of the Brotherhood. He will not let go of one soft job until he is assured a better one. Instead of frankly admitting that his connection for the rank and file of labor extended only to the point of covering his own salary and no further, Lee hypocritically clothes his real aspiration to become a full fledged capitalist—instead of merely a labor lieutenant of capitalism—in benevolent language; he accepts the proposition only because "he believes he can effectively serve the railroad workers and the travelling public."

It is manifest indeed that Mr. Lee has so suddenly become interested in the welfare of railroad employees. He might better have evinced some of that concern at a time when the railroad labor board was slashing the wages of railroad workers, instead of viciously suppressing every sign of militancy on the part of the rank and file of his own membership who were anxious to strike in sympathy with the shopmen. At that time the valiant president of the trainmen forced his membership to work in spite of the fact that thousands of them viewed their own action as plain scabbery.

If playing the contemptible role of scab-herder and strikebreaker is manifesting concern for the welfare of the railroad workers, William G. Lee, certainly surpassed all others in devotion.

Scarcely had the capitalist press announced the prominent headlines that Lee had quit the presidency of the Trainmen, this is not so and there are a number of things to be taken into consideration before he will be out of the Trainmen—he is continually maltreated in the interest of the railroad owners. For even tho the device proves to be all he claims for it there is still the question of profits and losses to be considered.

Railroad magnates are first of all business men and do not indulge in humanitarian illusions. "There is no sentiment in business."

Before safety devices are ever installed on railroads the statisticians of the road compute the expense of the installation and maintenance of such devices. Against this they balance the cost of the number of death and accident benefits they will likely have to pay to continue operations profitably. Only when the former is preferable to continue operation with the old system and kill railroad workers and part of the traveling public Mr. Lee will be compelled to keep his job as head of the Trainmen — to the detriment of organized labor.

Schlesinger's Resignation

In an editorial in "Justice," organ of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, appears a eulogy of the career of Benjamin Schlesinger as president of that organization, and an alleged explanation of the cause of his resignation.

According to the editorial the principal reason for his retirement was the "slanderous attacks made upon him from the various unclean union-smashing sources."

This is palpably an effort to continue the policy of vituperative malice that Schlesinger himself inaugurated against the representatives of the rank and file of the organization who were struggling to improve the condition of the union and to rescue its control from the hands of reactionaries and enemies of trade union progress. This struggle against the machine Schlesinger had created in order to perpetuate himself in power was conducted by the group known as the "left" in the union. Against this group every device known to organized trickery was used. The Cleveland convention was one of the most loathesome exhibitions of official wrecking of a labor organization that was ever witnessed.

At this convention, held last May, Schlesinger indulged in a spectacular gesture to the effect that he wanted to resign, as a pretext for having his alleged wish ratified before the convention by those two virtuosos in palaver, Mr. Samuel M. Gompers and Abraham Cahan.

Mr. Cahan, the editor of the Jewish Daily "Forward," a notorious servant of the bourgeoisie, indulged in a cheap tirade against the militants and the rank and file and in favor of official bureaucracy.

The next task of the membership of the International is to send the balance of Schlesinger's machine into retirement to keep him company, and elect officers who will represent the union.

When a conspiratorial machine sinks so low that it must enlist the services of Abraham Cahan of the notorious Jewish Daily "Forward" and its English language echo, the New York "Call," the rank and file as a matter of self-preservation must annihilate it.—H. M. W.

Since the Protestant churches are battling over the question of the divinity of Jesus Christ, and the Jewish synagogues are the center of a struggle over the use of sacramental wine, or just plain grape juice, the kept press is kept pretty busy and has ceased to discuss the young Communists of Soviet Russia and their attack on the myth of Santa Claus.

These are busy days at Madison, Wisc., with the Berger "Socialists" and the "Republicans" tugging and hissing in fond embrace. They are going to burn "La Follette's War Record" on file in the university library, signed by a large number of professors. But there are no indications that capitalism's war on the workers will be in the least fractured.

Gompers' War on Militants in Omaha, Neb.

Editors' Note.—One of the militant centers in the American labor movement is Omaha, Neb. The workers here passed the first resolution, forwarded to the executive council of the American Federation of Labor last summer, calling for a general strike in aid of the coal miners and railroad shopmen. Gompers wants to smash this radical sentiment. Just how he is trying to do this is shown in the accompanying statement, a report of one skirmish in the developing struggle between reaction and militancy in the organized labor movement.

BY J. A. LOCHRAY
Editor "Mid-West Labor News"
(SPECIAL TO "THE WORKER")

OMAHA, Neb.—Last May, T. J. Conboy, organizer for the A. F. of L., came to Omaha, presumably to do organization work. I cooperated with him in every way possible. The most serious complaint he had against me was my introducing an amalgamation resolution in the State Federation of Labor, in September, which was carried. Tho he tried his best to have the motion reconsidered, he did not succeed, and he did not even offer to speak for his point of view.

Some of the reactionary local job holders suggested that I could be "got" thru the Stenographers' and Bookkeepers' Union of which I was a member. Gompers' consent was obtained to make an investigation of the union. This was done by Conboy in October, and in December, the Central Labor Union got a letter from Gompers authorizing them to take up our charter and giving as reasons, the fact that the union is composed of only eight members, and because I, as editor of the Mid-West Labor News, was not in accord with the policy of the A. F. of L. in the last campaign.

Altho we have sent the per capita tax to Morrison, he has not sent us any dues stamps. The executive of the A. F. of L. probably thought that the C. L. U. would take up our charter, and therefore suspend us without hearing anything official.

My reputation here is established as a progressive unionist, and I can easily secure an honorary membership in any one of a dozen different unions. But the union is being broken up because my paper has always advocated greater solidarity in the ranks of labor and has always fought for amalgamation. That is the only issue involved.

Emmett Flood, another A. F. of L. parasite from Chicago, came here just before the holidays and tried to bulldoze me into changing the policy of the paper. But there's nothing doing.

I might add that in Omaha there are several locals that are just holding a charter and that is all. These are not bothered, but the "Mid-West Labor News" and myself as editor are the bone of contention. We seek principles I advocate have been getting a little too much popularity to suit the powers that be.

These are the facts of the case, no matter what the Gompers' machine may do to twist the truth.

Holidays With Moscow Players

There will be extra holiday matinees of Gorky's "The Lower Depths" by the Moscow Art Theater at Jolson's 59th St. Theater, on Lincoln's Birthday, Feb. 12, and on Washington's Birthday, Feb. 22. This week Tolstoy's "Tsar Feodor Ivanovitch" is being given, and next week Chekhoff's "The Cherry Orchard".

"The Makropulos Affair" is the title of a new play by Karel Capek, author of "R. U. R." and co-author with his brother, Josef, of "The World We Live In". It is now running in Prague, but soon the Theatre Guild will present it in New York City. In this play Capek disagrees with George Bernard Shaw's "Back to Methuselah" that long life is desirable.

There was a triumphal opening of Hendrick Ibsen's "Peer Gynt", the latest Theater Guild production, at the Garrick, with Joseph Schildkraut in the title role. Included in the cast is Lillebil Ibsen, granddaughter-in law of the poet. The next production of the Theater Guild will be "The Adding Machine" by Elmer L. Rice.

Dr. Percy Stickney Grant wants to know if the "church is going to be able to stand that laughter much longer". The laughter he refers to is the mirth aroused by Jesse Lynch Williams in his play, "Why Not?", opened by the Equity Players at the 48th St. Theatre. The play ridicules the stand of the church on divorce.

"The World We Live In", the Capek play being produced by Brady, closes at the 49th St. Theatre this week and goes to Chicago.

N. Y. Central Labor Council Hears Labor Defense Appeal

At the last meeting of the New York Central Trades and Labor Council held at Beethoven Hall, 210 East 5th Street, a stirring protest was voiced against the following order taken from a confidential copy issued from the Vancouver Barracks, Washington, Office of the Intelligence Officer on October 16, 1922:

"The Intelligence Service of the Army has for its primary purpose the surveillance of all organizations or elements hostile or potentially hostile to the Government of this country, or who seek to overthrow the Government by violence."

"Among organizations falling under the above head are radical groups as the I. W. W., World War Veterans, Union of Russian Workers, Communist Party, Communist Labor Party, One Big Union, Workers International Industrial Union, Anarchists and Bolsheviki, and such semi-radical organizations as the Socialists, Non-Partisan League, Big Four Brotherhoods, and AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR."

"It is requested that you inform this office as to any of the aforementioned or other radical organizations coming to your attention under such headings as a) Location of headquarters, b) names of leaders, c) strength of organization, d) activities of the organization, e) strikes and methods of carrying on same, and f) attitude of members. We will be glad to receive copies of pamphlets, handbills, or other radical propaganda spread in your vicinity." This authorized statement from an Intelligence Officer of the U. S. Army proves conclusively that the Burns, Daugherty and other Government spies and agents are out to spy upon and eventually destroy the American labor movement.

Samuel T. Hammersmark, a member of the Executive Committee of the Chicago Federation of Labor, then spoke to the assembled delegates pointing out that there is always a "boogie man" held up to scare the workers from supporting their active trade union leaders, so that the bosses can put them out of the way. Hammersmark appealed to the delegates for help in the defense of the active trade unionists arrested in Michigan last August. His appeal was received with much applause and enthusiasm.

In addition to this good news, the LABOR DEFENSE COUNCIL reports that money is piling up in the One Day's Pay campaign initiated by the Workers Party.

To date the following branches have contributed: Jewish Dress Town, $34.00; John Reeder, $50; English Branch, $1.00; Bronx English, $5.00; English Harlem, $5.00; Bronx-Tremont, $5.00; Bronx County C. C. C., $5.00; German Br., Yorkville, 10.00; Russian Branch, $5.00; South Slavic Yorkville, $1.00; German Br. 1, Bronx County, $6.00; Finnish Branch, 20.25; English West Side, $1.00; Finnish Harlem, $15.00.

FUN, FRIVOLITY, HILARITY, COLOR—All These and More

Will be Present in Unprecedented Quantities at THE LIBERATOR COSTUME BALL, Friday, March 2nd, TAMMANY HALL

"It Is Impossible"

The French invasion of the Ruhr raises the question of Germany turning to Soviet Russia for aid, military as well as economic. In fact, while discussing this question, General French war premier, raised the bogey of a Russian-German-Turkish alliance.

Leonid Krassin, head of the Russian Trade Mission in London, declares it is hard to picture Russian and German soldiers side by side. He says, "It is impossible."

Of course, what Krassin means, is that he cannot conceive of Russia's Red Soldiers co-operating with the military of Ebert-Cuno-Stinnes German capitalism. The Russians wouldn't object. Those German soldiers would prove rich soil for Communist propaganda. But the German militarists would be sore afraid.

Krassin says: "I cannot conceive of a German army officer allowing one of his battalions to be quartered near a Russian battalion."

Such co-operation will only be possible when the German soldiers, sailors, workers and peasants have overthrown the rule of the social-democratic-capitalist alliance and have created their own Red Army and Red Navy. And, it may be added, that for such a union of labor strength no effort, no matter how great, will be impossible.

"We are hungry; we want bread!" chant the jobless filling the galleries of the Austrian National Assembly. And just to show how helpless it is, the Austrian parliament adjourned. No doubt it will refer the matter to the League of Nations.

To the Three Millions!

Three millions of you, Young Workers of America, were taken from your homes and put into the uniform for Wall Street's last war.

You are back in your homes now, those of you who were not killed, or didn't die from your wounds, or still languish in hospitals. You are back at work, at your jobs.if you have one, fight ing in another war—THE CLASS WAR.

You have seen your working-class brothers shot down by the bullets of the mine owners at Herrin, Ill. You have seen your class brother hanged by the bosses' mob at Harrison, Arkansas.

It is in this crisis that the World War Veterans addresses an appeal to you declaring that, "The Fascisti are organizing in America! Do you wish them success?"

The World War Veterans asks:

"The ex-soldier swings the Fascisti club in Italy. Shall he swing it here?"

Colonel Alvin Owsley, commander of the American Legion, declared recently that, "The Legion would not hesitate to take things into its own hands—fight the reds (which means the workers) as the Fascisti of Italy fought them!

Think these things over, you three millions of workers, ex service men, just out of the uniform. Consider your position in the growing class fight at home.

Desert the American Legion. It is the enemy of the workers and therefore your enemy. Join the World War Veterans. It is on the side of labor in every struggle. It is your friend, your organization. Take your stand, you three millions.

President Harding's "friends" are urging him to tour the country to show he is the real leader of the republican party. That is what Wilson tried to do in 1919. And look at him now. Harding has some poor advisers among his "friends".

An End to Their Crimes

The labor officialdom in Germany, that betrayed the Socialist revolution of November, 1918, into the hands of the Stinnes' industrial kaisers, must be in difficult straits in these days of the Ruhr invasion.

They rush from one act of treason to another. They placed their faith in Wilson and his 14 points. They enslaved the German working class to the Versailles peace. And now they perpetrate the still greater fraud of appealing to the American Wall Street congress, of republicans and democrats, for "right and justice."

The success with which these labor traitors broke the back of labor's revolt against Kaiserism may be judged from the fact that the November, 1918, revolution placed the army and government in Socialist hands. Now the capitalist Cuno rules with the "Socialist" Ebert as figurehead-president. These traitors confess the greatness of their crime when they appeal to the American congress declaring:

"We have been reduced to a nation which is chronically hungry: our infants are wrapped in paper, instead of swaddling clothes, while our women and children are succumbing to physical misery."

These are the labor officials who scoffed at the Russian Soviet Revolution. These are the misleaders who join with the social traitors of London and Paris to war on the Communist International and the Red International of Labor Unions.

Even today they oppose a workers' revolution. In the words of Paul Grassman, vice chairman of the executive board of the German General Federation of Labor, that Legien and Scheidemann sold to Stinnes during the revolution:

"There is something more than the Ruhr Basin at stake. If Germany is still a land of apparent order and organization, it is only because the dozen cool-headed men in charge of organized labor's ranks have prevented the workers in all lines from becoming dangerously restive. THE SITUATION, HOWEVER, NOW THREATENS TO GO BEYOND CONTROL."

That is the way Kerensky talked in Russia. He is hot-footing it around a London restaurant, as a waiter, according to a recent statement by Mrs. Philip Snowden, who wept much when the Georgian "Socialist" republic, pawn in the hands of Allied Imperialism, went down to make way for a Soviet Republic.

Herr Grassman and his cool-headed friends may soon be accommodated by British capitalism with similar "hpt-foot" jobs. The traitors to labor in Germany cannot hypnotize the workers into remaining inactive much longer.

All workers' organizations in Finland have gotten together for a united front action on behalf of the political prisoners, victims of the White Terror of 1918.

Getting Ready for Recognition

A dozen militant street carmen have been shot down in Mexico City by the Yaqui Indian troops of President Obregon. Thus does the Obregon regime in Mexico qualify for recognition by the United States and other capitalist governments.

More than a score of striking street carmen were also wounded in the struggle that resulted when federal troops sought to operate the cars. It is reported that 50 prisoners have also been taken.

President Obregon has long been upheld as the darling of the liberals and the "Socialists". William Randolph Hearst has struggled long, thru his publications, for Obregon's recognition at Washington. Now the Mexico City correspondent of the New York Times tells us that, "The action of the (Obregon) government in protecting the tramways in giving service meets with the warm approval of merchants." We also hear repeated the kept press report, so familiar in this country, that, "The government is preparing to deport several foreign agitators."

It is encouraging to note, however, that workers in other industries are joining in a general strike in aid of the street carmen. The Communist movement is not very strong in Mexico. But the workers of Mexico will be compelled to rally in self-defense around the standards of the Mexican Communist Party as Obregon continues to display those attributes that will surely win him recognition from the U. S. plunderbund.

Dr. Percy Stickney Grant points with great pride to his "success" at the Church of the Ascension—the realty income has leaped from $18,000 to $65,000. No doubt that is one of the reasons why even the ultra-orthodox Bishop William T. Manning, can find no real fault with him. So he stays.

Mr. Lewis and Nova Scotia

All indications are that Mr. John L. Lewis, the mine owners' president of the United Mine Workers' Union, is piling up an avalanche of trouble for himself. And avalanches have an awful way of doing business once they got started.

Alex Howatt, in Kansas, waged a lone fight against the Lewis machine. The power of the Lewis-controlled "international executive board" broke the Kansas organization on the side of reaction. But Kansas still stands with Howatt and militancy.

Add to the Kansas developments, that will not be settled until they are settled right, the growing militancy in the Western Pennsylvania and the Nova Scotia coal fields, not to mention anti-Lewis waves in many other sections of the country, notably in his own state of Illinois, and we have the possibilities of a powerful "left wing" in the miners' union.

Lewis is using affiliation with the Red International of Labor Unions as a mere pretense for his attack on the Nova Scotia miners. He is much more worried over the fact that his man Silby Barrett, has been displaced by Alex Stewart, a rebel, as International Board Member.

After repudiation by the membership in a referendum vote, Barrett rushed off to the miners' international headquarters at Indianapolis, Ind., and threw himself into Lewis' arms for protection. He was assured that the Lewis machine would continue to recognize him as board member. He returned to Nova Scotia where the coal miners refused to admit him to their district board. He then started an anti-Bolshevik tour of the district, attacking the militants, and seeking to disrupt the organization.

Thus Lewis again reveals himself, thru the actions of his henchmen, as a wrecker of the miners' union. He would certainly like to have Nova Scotia join with Western Pennsylvania, Kansas and other districts in an effort to launch a dual movement. That would give him a clear field to deliver the rest of the organization into the hands of the mine owners.

But there will be no dual movement in the miners' union. The test came at the recent meeting of the Fayette County, Pa., coal miners. Instead of launching a suicidal policy of dualism, the Pennsylvania coal miners appeal to the membership of the miners' union, "to join us in a fight thruout 'the international to right the grievances of the various districts and change the cowardly policy of the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America."

The struggle of the "left wing" within the Miners' Union for the transforming of America's greatest labor union into a fighting unit of the organized working class is on. It goes on to victory.

The "Socialist" program for settlement of the Ruhr problem has collapsed. It urged that the whole matter be referred to the League of Nations. We are now told that Hjalmar Branting, "Socialist" premier of Sweden, a member of the council of "The League", took the matter up at a private meeting of the council, and the council "duly noted his suggestions". It did not even discuss them, but decided it could not intervene. Thus crumbles another pious "Socialist" hope for relief from capitalism and its "Black International".

The work of Christ is not done on earth and up to Paris and the day of judgment for the work of Christ is not done on earth and up to Paris and the day of judgment

Murders in the Ruhr

There are indications that the French soldiery is failing to use proper discrimination in shooting up the Ruhr. Innocent bystanders are the victims of these craven murderers doing the bidding of French imperialism, as well as those for whom bullets are actually intended.

Thus, when a French corporal, at Duesseldorf, slaughters a little girl, and wounds a second, it is reported that he slipped and his rifle was accidentally discharged.

Similarly, at Mayence, when two coke trains collided, the French mercenaries turned their guns on German railwaymen, killed nine, and wounding more. It is explained that the French mistakenly thought that the Germans planned the wreck, hence the shooting.

No excuses, or apologies, however, were offered at Essen, where the Communists held a great gathering at the Municipal Hall in protest against this whole insane and criminal affair. Following the meeting the Communists marched peacefully thru Essen's main streets singing "The International." They were first attacked by the German security police, a relic from the days of the "Socialist" Noske. These German police were reinforced by French machine gun squads, and the Communists and their sympathizers were given a German-French capitalist shower bath of lead.

Capitalism might make more progress in the Ruhr if it could segregate the Communists from the rest of the German workers and exterminate them. But the struggle of Communism, in Germany, as in Russia, is so bound up with the interests of the broad masses of the workers and peasants that they cannot be separated. When the French and German imperialists murder Communists in the Ruhr, they are not accomplishing the death of Communism, but rather hurrying the suicide of Western European capitalism.

Governor Smith and Mrs. Peters

Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, claims he does not head a "class government". Mrs. Mary O. Peters took him at his word and journeyed from Haverhill, Mass., to Albany, N. Y., to demand the prosecution of Walter S. Ward, son of the multi-millionaire bread trust profiteer.

"THE WORKER" has published articles and editorials showing the "class" nature of the justice that turns the rich man's son free, and scoffs at this working class mother. Copies of "THE WORKER", containing this material, were sent to Governor Smith with a demand for action. We have just received a reply signed by Owen L. Potter, executive legal assistant to Governor Smith, as follows:

Executive Chamber, Albany, New York, Jan. 29, 1923.

Mr. J. Louis Engdahl, Editor, The Worker,
Room 405, 799 Broadway, New York City.

Dear Sir:—Governor Smith has received your letter of Jan. 27th, together with copy of THE WORKER, and he has read what you have to say about the Larkin matter and, with much interest, the suggestions you make in the Ward case. At the present time, the Governor has the matter under consideration. Very truly yours, Owen L. Potter.

That sounds like the usual stereotyped letter of the politician in office. It is what we expected to get, because we believe Governor Smith is no different from other republicans and democrats. So we are not disappointed.

But we ask the workers to remember that Ward, the millionaire's son, is the confessed murderer of Clarence Peters, of a working class family, and Governor Smith does not act.

The workers might also begin writing Governor Smith, asking why he has not released the other Communist prisoners, just as he released Jim Larkin, and as he promised to do.

Before we get thru with Governor Smith, we are going to make him admit that he is the chief executive of a "class" government, the government of the capitalist class of New York State.

The Foreign News

Foreign news as it appears in the press these days is much concerned with developments in Soviet Russia. The New York World staff correspondent measures the success of the Soviet Regime by the depth of the mud in the provincial towns, far from "comfortable Mosgow," while The Times advertises "An Exposition of the Russian Communist Party, Its Principles and Aspirations."

But for the most part the bought press contents itself with translations of anti-Soviet propaganda appearing in European "Socialist" sheets, with the Vorwaerts, of Berlin, as the chief favorite.

Thus the New York Times retells the oft-times rehashed story of the Georgian Soviet Republic upheld by the bayonets of 30,000 Red Soldiers. Why not 300,000? The same Wall Street organ calls The Frankfurter (Germany) Zeitung to its aid to discover Communist losses in the recent elections in Russia, altho the figures quoted give the answer to the lie.

It is quite a concession, therefore, to admit that the Communist dailies in Russia are gaining in circulation, in spite of the subscription price charged.

Perhaps the choicest bit of "Socialist" attack, however, to be found in the Berlin Vorwaerts is the effort directed against the Council of People's Commissars for ordering that the study of the materialistic interpretation of history, the class struggle, capitalism and the proletarian revolution be made obligatory in all the Russian institutions of higher education.

The Vorwaerts, the official mouthpiece of Kautsky, Scheidemann, Ebert and Levi, compare this to "the days of the czar when the study of the introduction to theology was compulsory".

These mentally bankrupt "Socialists" cannot see the difference between the Soviet Republic enlightening the workers on the struggle for their own emancipation, and the late czar's efforts to dope the brains of the workers and peasants with religion. No wonder French imperialism is having an easy time of it in the Ruhr, and the Bavarian Hitlers plot for a new Monarchist Throne in Berlin.

Communists in Turkey and Greece War on Criminal Enterprises of Nationalism and Imperialism

BY D. A. VALAKOS

In the "Voice of the Worker" (Greek Weekly of New York City.)

From Comrade Orhan's report on the Communist movement in Turkey at the Fourth Congress of the Communist International, we gather a few very interesting data concerning the movement in that country. Due to its political separation in two parts, the one under the Kemalist rule and the other the Sultan's, or rather, under the British rule, the activities of the Communist Party of Turkey were necessarily split, until recently, in two.

We shall take up the former, as it is of more interest to us. Here, the formation of a Communist Party dates back to the days when Kemalism appeared in Anatolia, which afterwards incorporated itself and became to me known as the Grand Turkish National Assembly. At the outset, the Party had to fight against both the foreign imperialism and the local bourgeoisie. Considering that the fight against foreign imperialism, the greater enemy, was of a more world-wide importance, and, on the other hand, abiding by the decisions of the Second Congress of the Communist International, the Communist Party of Turkey took the stand of supporting the Government, in so long as it was fighting against foreign domination, at the same time exacting from the Kemalists democratic reforms in favor of the workers and peasants, and endeavoring to organize the latter as a class party.

The Kemalist Government, in great need of help from Soviet Russia in the fight against English imperialism, encouraged by all means this Communist movement. At the early stage of the Russo-Turkish negotiations, the Kemalists solemnly informed the Soviet authorities that a strong Communist party exists already in Turkey, and went as far as to announce that Soviets of Turkish peasants are established and functioning in several parts of the country. And, in order further to deceive Soviet Russia, the Kemalist Government organized a distinctive army corps, the so-called Green Army, which Kemal Pasha was boastingly representing as "Red" or "Bolshevist" Army, while in fact it was entirely composed of bourgeois elements. When the first envoy of the Russian Soviets came to Angora, he then found a ready-made "Governmental Communist Party" formed out of the remnants of the Green Army, of government officials and intellectuals.

Kemal played his cards successfully. But this farce could not go on forever. The real Communists of Turkey did not for a moment cease to expose to the workers and peasants of Turkey the insincerity and bad faith of Kemal and his followers. And the mask was soon cast off. After the Kemalist triumph at Sakkaria River over the Greeks—satellites of British imperialism—the Pasha feeling himself safe from further foreign attacks showed his true colors. He started wholesale persecutions against the "dangerous" Communists. More than 200 comrades were put to jail and suffered the most brutal treatment in the hands of ferocious "Zaptiehs" ((Turkish gendarmes) who tortured the Communists with razors and sharp nails. In many places the Communists put up a heroic resistance. Our brave Comrades Soubhi and Ethem were slain in cold blood. Similar persecutions took place in the districts around Constantinople.

On the other hand, the conclusion of the Franco-Turkish Treaty, following the expedition to Angora of Franklin Bouillon, the official declarations of the Kemalist Governors, thru its London envoys, that they shall do the best to cleanse their country from the "Bolshevist plague," and, what is more important, the conduct of the Kemalists at the Lausanne Conference, where they not only defied the recommendations of the Soviets and forfeited their pledge toward Russia, but also they are doing their best to come to any kind of compromise with British imperialism, thus betraying the "National Compact" and the true interests of the people of Turkey, in exchange for privileges and profits for their class—the Turkish capitalists and landlords—all these have proved beyond any doubt the real character of the Kemalist movement, and served in opening the eyes of the Turkish masses—a fact which in time will undermine the apparent strength of Kemalism.

We now see that Communism finds no favor nor is tolerated by any bourgeois regime of the world. Our comrades of Turkey have done their best to support the policy of their government. Persecutions are the result. Our Greek comrades resisted the imperialistic policy of the Greek government. They were no less persecuted, for the same is true for every country. With or against any bourgeois government, they are despised. But not withstanding the savage onslaught of Kemalism, the Communists of Turkey will continue their bold fight against bourgeois nationalism, until they see it crushed.

This, however, has no bearing whatever regarding the stand of the Greek Communists toward the policies of the bourgeois government of Greece. We do not in the least regret the stand that we have taken in the past, when we condemned unreservedly the so-called "War for the emancipation of the unredeemed Greeks of Asia Minor," because we were and are convinced that this war confucked by both the Venizelists and Royalists of Greek, was in its true light, a criminal enterprise on behalf of imperialistic interests, and destructive to the interests of the working class. And such is even the character of the present war, with the new bosses of the Greek people, the "revolutionary" bourgeoisie, are now busy in staging.

Washington, Lincoln and Hero Worship

By H. M. WICKS

At this time of year "hero worship" is rampant in these United States. The month of February contains the natal days of our two outstanding national heroes—Washington and Lincoln.

Panegyrics, penned by virtuosos in the detestable business of perverting history, adorn the pages of all newspapers in the country. That history which has been assiduously perverted by the time servers in university chairs, who pollute the minds of children by teaching them the great man theory, is further distorted by the factory crew of penny-a-liners on the capitalist press.

Students of ethnology can readily [illegible] by savages and barbarians of their dead ancestors by observing the tendency to throw a veil of mythology about the individuals so recently active upon the stage of history. Each biographer adds additional stories of grandeur, until finally some zealot arises to inform the gaping yokels that the subject of his adulation is responsible for everything that exists—without his having appeared there would have been no world.

Plan Protest in Fight for Foreign-Born

An international protest meeting to protest against the infamous bills now pending in Congress to enslave the foreign born workers will be held Wednesday, Feb. 28th, at 8 p. m., at the Central Opera House, 67th St. and 3rd Ave.

This is to be a real international meeting, having secured speakers in eight languages.

The slogan of this meeting will be "By protecting the rights of the foreign born workers you are protecting the interests of the American working class".

This meeting is to be the initial step in the direction of forming a broad national movement embracing not only the foreign speaking elements, but as many of the American labor unions as possible.

The entire campaign is to be utilized as a means of counter-acting the open shop drive of the employers, and to point out the necessity of independent working class political action, as one of the means to combat the capitalist class and its government.

The following speakers will address the meeting: English, J. L. Engdahl, H. M. Wicks and Scott Nearing; German, Ludwig Lore; Yiddish, A. Bittleman and M. J. Olgin; Russian, A. Chramoff; Ukrainian, M. Nastasiefsky; French, S. A. Moreau; Spanish, Wm. Massarone, and E. Bellanca, in Italian.

This meeting will be held under the auspices of the provisional committee of the Workers Party branches of local Greater New York.

Cancel the Debts!

While American Imperialism Strives to Carry Out Policy of "Make Europe Pay!" Workers in the United States Must Join Labor Thruout World for Repudiation of All Debts to Capitalism.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

Against the demand of American imperialism of "Make Europe Pay!" the workers of the United States must raise the counter-slogan, "Cancel the Debts!"

Taking its orders from those higher up, the house of representatives in the national congress, by the decisive vote of 291 to 44, passed the amended Debt Funding Act that is accepted by the Bonar Law government in Great Britain.

It was like the declaration of war in 1917. The alleged statesmen voted as they were directed. There was no discussion worthy the name. The debates, summed up, amounted to this: Capitalism in Europe must be saved; this Debt Funding Act will save it; therefore we must vote for it. Or, in the words of Rep. Garrett, democrat, "The settlement of this debt will stabilize the world. Happiness, peace and prosperity will be promoted."

Rep. Meyer London, Socialist, joined in the general stampede by declaiming, "I am in such thoro sympathy with the great majority of the members in the house on this matter, that I am beginning to doubt whether I am right."

Only Moore, London is right from the "Socialist" standpoint that world [illegible] for the League of Nations, via Black Capitalist International, on every important international issue, of which the Ruhr invasion is the latest.

The debt funding act is a temporary makeshift in the world struggle between the imperialism of Great Britain and the United States. Rep. Burton, upholding the act and explaining concessions made, declared that, "It is entirely impossible for England to pay a higher amount on the way of rates than those provided here."

Great Britain is to pay 3 per cent for the first ten years, and then 3½ per cent until final payment 62 years hence, when she will have paid $11,105,965,000 to settle her present debt of $4,600,000,000.

At the same time the workers of the United States will be producing wealth to pay from 3½ to 4¼ per cent interest on the various Liberty and Victory Loans floated during the war to provide England and the other Paris allies with funds. Thus Great Britain, doing the best she can, is a bad debtor by from ½ to 1¼ per cent. This is made up by American labor to the wealthy parasites who are absorbing these tax-free securities.

Thus the United States, the dominant imperialist nation of the world today, submits Great Britain to the same test that France imposes on Germany—pay to the utmost. Moreover, the statesmen at Washington assure us that all of the nation's other debtors will be treated the same way. The debtors of Uncle Sam will be pressed to the limit. The question for the workers of America to decide is, how will they be benefitted?

Most of the world's gold supply is already in the country. Obviously Great Britain and the other debtors will not be able to pay the ten billions of dollars in gold. The alternative for England as for Germany, would be to send the products of her own sweated and underpaid labor to this country. This would add to the already large American overproduction and throw new millions of American workers into idleness and despair.

One imperialist argument offered in favor of making Europe pay, is that it will curb the imperialist and militarist aspirations of Europe. Quoting Mr. Burton again, "If we were able to cancel these debts, Europe, in a ferment, might use a very considerable share of that which would otherwise be used in the payment of the debts in military equipment which would carry a constant threat to the world".

How naive Mr. Burton must be.

First Hundred Thousand Gone; The Second Is Moving!

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary, Workers Party

The first hundred thousand of the million party programs which the National Office of the Workers Party has set out to distribute in order to inform the American workers about the principles of Communism has been shipped to the party organization.

The figures covering the program distribution made a big jump thru the splendid support given the campaign by the Chicago and Detroit organizations. Chicago ordered 40,000 programs and Detroit has taken 25,000.

These two party organizations have set the pace for all other large cities. There are at least 20 cities in the country which should distribute from 25,000 to 50,000. New York City, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Toledo, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, all have party organizations which can distribute at least 25,000 programs. If Chicago distributes 40,000, New York should distribute 100,000. If Detroit takes 25,000 there is no reason why Cleveland should not take the same.

Every city central committee should make the organization of the distribution a special order of business. Every branch should take up the question.

Do not let your unit of the party lag behind, comrades! Take the matter up at your meeting. Find out what has been done and what can be done.

MAKE IT A MILLION PROGRAMS!

4 More N. Y. Politicals Pardoned

Gov. Al Smith pardoned four more political prisoners in the state of New York, on Tuesday, Feb. 13. Those pardoned were Paul Manko, Ignatz Misher, Anna Lelaman and Minnie Kalnin. In pardoning the four prisoners Gov. Smith declared:

"These people were convicted under the criminal anarchy statute and are serving various sentences from two to five years. All of them, except Minnie Kalnin, would be released under pardon during this year. The evidence upon which they were convicted is much the same as that urged upon the trial of James Larkin, already pardoned. Their offense consisted of spreading literature concerning the Communist party.

"The cases of Ben Gitlow and Harry Winitsky are now pending before the U. S. Supreme Court for a constitutional decision affecting the criminal anarchy law of New York and 35 other states.

The declaration of Gov. Smith that the prisoners were not criminals raises an important question. If they were not criminals why were they in prison? If they were not criminals it is a plain confession of governmental persecution and definitely establishes the fact that people were and are being jailed in the United States for their political opinions.

Communists long ago deliberately charged the government with political persecution, but it was emphatically denied in all quarters. But today the action of the Governors of New York and Illinois is an admission at least from some capitalist sources that our charges are supported.

With the odious expose of methods employed to "frame up" radicals by various stool pigeon agencies and the Department of Justice, under the notorious Burns, and the evidence of recurring sanity among certain prominent executives, it is an opportune time for labor to start a drive against all "criminal syndicalist" and "criminal anarchy" acts, passed for the forcible suppression of opinion in this country.

Dress Strike Splits Ranks of Employers

BY H. M. WICKS

At the end of the first week of the garment strike in the childrens' dress and house dress industry in New York, the lines of the strikers are solid, while the ranks of the employers have been shattered and are rapidly developing toward a complete route.

The jobbers in the waist and dress industry signed up with the strikers last Tuesday, practically granting every demand asked.

The fight is still continuing between the strikers affiliated with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the contractors' association, which so far stubbornly refused to settle.

The officials of the Association of Dress Manufacturers, which is one of the employers' associations, have refused to yield to the union, but many members of this group have expressed willingness to accede to

Now Up to Washington!

(By Staff Writer to "THE WORKER")

CHICAGO.—A few more pages of the odious record of William J. Burns and the whole crew of private detective agencies in America were written, Monday, when Frank P. Walsh, in charge of the defense of the Communists arrested at Bridgeman, Mich., last summer, took depositions of one Albert Bailin, alias Balanow, long known in radical circles as a labor spy.

Balanow's graphic narrative reveals a long story of criminality resorted to by the private detective agencies of the country, in connivance with various police departments and the Federal Department of Justice, for the purpose of blackmailing the large industrial capitalists out of huge funds in order to continue the nefarious business of labor spy and agent provocateur.

For the first time there came to light the real source of some of the so-called terrorism on the part of the "reds" that filled the pages of the newspapers after the [illegible] Bailin stated that he was directed his "red raids" of 1919-20. Bailin relates how one T. J. Cooney, head of the "radical department" of the Thiel Detective Agency, secured a stamp bearing the name of Alfred Wagenknecht, at that time secretary of the Communist Labor Party and used it to sign threatening letters to public officials engaged in the business of baiting reds. The tracing of this letter to the headquarters of the Thiel Detective Agency by postal authorities led to the arrest of Bailin.

Bailin was never tried because he threatened to expose the practice of postal authorities of turning over private mail to private detective agencies. It was this case and the publicity attending it that first brought Bailin to the notice of the Communist movement as a spy. At that time depositions were taken from him by labor attorneys in Chicago. But this is the first time his statements have become public property, and they reveal a widespread organized conspiracy that penetrates every labor organization in the United States.

Stool Pigeons Launch Organization

If there are no organizations in existence that will issue rabid propaganda related to scare the employers of labor into contributing a slush fund to the maintenance of the thugs, gunmen and other criminal elements that make up the private detective agencies, the ingeneous exporch climbers, pickpockets and barroom bouncers at the heads of such agencies instruct their "operatives"—which is the euphon-

Congress Must Act!

Burns is the real "Bomb Plotter."

This dime-novel detective is guilty of all the crimes charged in recent years against radical labor.

No other interpretation can be put on the startling facts now coming to light in the Chicago hearings in the Michigan case.

Congress has whitewashed Daughtery, Burns' pal.

It cannot whitewash Burns. His crimes are too black.

Congress must order an immediate investigation of all Burns' plots, of all the activities of the Burns and Thiel Detective Agencies against organized labor.

Congress must do this, or confess itself also guilty of the crimes revealed against its hired man, William J. Burns.

Scott Nearing and the Workers Party

By JAMES P. CANNON
Chairman, Workers Party

Not long ago Scott Nearing took a trip thru the Middle West to see what was going on in the labor movement. Then he studied the membership statistics of the Socialist Party and the Workers Party. He put the figures and the facts together and announced his conclusions in a lecture at the Rand School, the temple of Socialism as, explained away by Algernon Lee.

First, he said: "The Socialist Party has had its day . . . . Since 1912 membership has steadily declined . . . . Thru the Middle, West recently I found the Socialist Party almost extinct."

His second conclusion was: "The Workers Party has fallen heir to the present radical political situation in the United States."

Thru the oversight of The Call's editor the lecture was printed in the Sunday magazine section on Feb. 4th. This has created a panic in the "Socialist" ranks, and some lively speculation in wider circles. Scott Nearing is just about the last piece of marketable merchandise in the depleted stocks of the Socialist Party; and if he leaves, the red flag of the auctioneer is very apt to wave where the red flag of revolution had no chance. James Oneal, with the manner of a man laboring under a heavy burden, gravely discusses the matter in last Sunday's Call. Under the somewhat optimistic title of "The Future of the Socialist Party", he drops his familiar role of the impartial historian for that of the disinterested accountant, and tries to "figure" Scott Nearing out of his conclusions.

Oneal's figures are just about as reliable as his history; to say which, it seems to me, should be a sufficient answer to him.

Scott Nearing is a significant figure. In a movement which, as yet, is too much given to loose thinking and careless, exaggerated statement, he stands out conspicuously as a tireless student, a painstaking searcher after facts, a master of simple, homely exposition. But he is much more than that. We have not forgotten the rebel professor who got himself kicked out of the bourgeois universities, the courageous fighter against the imperialist war who ran for Congress in the war years as a revolutionist. This, in my opinion, is the real Scott Nearing. This is the man who fired the im-

Discuss Whether the Workers Party Has Fallen Heir to Radical Political Situation in United States

gination of the radical workers and took a firm hold on their affection.

It is not the Socialist Party alone that has been stirred by this lecture. Many interpretations are being put upon it by that large body of radicals who stand hesitant between the old movement and the new. The rumor is already abroad that he has joined the Workers Party. This, unfortunately, is not the case. He is not yet ready, it seems, to go the full length. He is on the way to Communism but has not yet arrived. He admits that our party is alive and going forward while the Socialist Party "has had its day" and "is almost extinct." He sees that we have the field and says we have "fallen heir to the situation." Nevertheless he still has questions and criticisms. He says we have the chance, but he is not sure that we are going to make good with it.

Tens of thousands of radical workers in America are in that position today. More than half of the former members of the Socialist Party stand outside of any political organization. The collapse of the I. W. W. as a revolutionary factor has left many good proletarian fighters without a center to call their own. The trade unions are honey-combed with virile militants who are looking for a lead.

This is the living material out of which we must build our party. We must overcome their doubt and hesitation and pessimism, answer their questions, prove our party to them by its deeds, and bring them into its ranks. Because Scott Nearing represents, in a way, the frame of mind of these workers, because of his great prestige amongst them, we are obliged to answer his questions seriously and carefully.

He says of the Workers Party:

"It is built to represent the American worker! So far the radical movement has represented the European worker in the United States. The opportunities for a radical political party are as great as, or greater than, ever before. The important problem before the Workers Party is to get radical ideas before the workers. Its second and more serious problem is to establish proper relations with Moscow. Moscow is strong; the Workers Party is weak; Moscow can dominate without any trouble."

So, it appears, he is most concerned about the "Moscow" problem, and he vaguely associates it with the familiar question of the role of the foreign-born workers in the American movement. Oneal grasps at this straw and says, with the profound air of a man announcing a great new discovery, "The movement that does not have its origin in the native workers, that does not have for its leadership native American workers who understand the psychology of the American working class or the economic history back of that class, certainly can never "fall heir" to the movement in the United States." Then he says the Workers Party cannot meet this qualification because it "accepts dictation from Moscow."

Well, we have had some discussion on this point in our own ranks; and "Moscow" played a part in the final settlement of it. I am not sure that we approached the problem from the same viewpoint. In our party discussions on this question we who fought for the idea of an "American" party had in mind a party capable of adapting itself to the conditions prevailing in America and shaping its tactics to fit the present stage of the class struggle here; being alive to the "Americanism of the native workers," taking root in the native soil, like, to a certain extent, parties are making itself on the European continent. We were not concerned with the question of the original basis of birth-place. We did not ask: "Where were you born?" but "Are you prepared to think and act in terms of the concrete class struggle in America?" In the very nature of things a movement founded only upon the initiative and principal leaders among the native workers; but not a single foreign-born worker who is ready to fight realistically should be excluded.

To take any other position is to run away from reality, to ignore the facts of American industry and the American labor movement as they are, to build a party of foreign workers; a big factor in American industry; they play a very important part in the American labor movement; and a party that is striving to fit itself to American conditions as they really are, and not merely to be "American" in the narrow, nationalistic sense, will aim to bring every intelligent fighter amongst them into its ranks.

The fraternal union of native and foreign-born workers in our party; realistic tactics adapted to the concrete situation in America; leadership of the movement, as a rule, in the hands of the native workers—that is the sound point of view finally adopted in our party. And who said the final word in favor of it? The "Moscow Dictators!"

The American movement was thoroly discussed at the Fourth Congress of the Communist International. All sides were heard. Abundant material was presented. Comrades experienced in all phases of the class struggle stated their opinions. The result was a decision which is embodied in the "Theses" adopted by the Executive Committee of the Communist International to the American movement. It is printed in full in this issue of the Daily Worker, so those who fear the influence of Moscow on the American party should read it all. On the question just dealt with here it says:

"The immigrants, including communists, who have emigrated to America from Europe, play an important part in the American labor movement. But it must not be for the movement forgotten that the most important task is to arouse the American-born workers out of their lethargy. The Party must systematically and willingly assist American-born workers, wherever the opportunity offers, to play a leading part in the movement."

Scott Nearing says we must "establish proper relations with Moscow." That is precisely what we have done. We have established proper relations with Moscow; and that has been the salvation of our movement. But our idea of proper relations does not coincide with his. An International Federation of autonomous National parties, for which he spoke in his lecture, will not suffice in this period of intensified class struggle on a world-wide scale. An International that is not centralized cannot act; and action is what counts in revolutionary times. Federalism was one of the basic weaknesses of the Second International—the International which collapsed when the first gun was fired in the imperialist world war, with most of its various national "autonomous units" rushing to the defense of their respective capitalist "Fatherlands."

No, we flatly reject the idea of a decentralized International because it is fundamentally unsound in theory and has worked out most disastrously in practice. We think in terms of an International class struggle. That struggle can be successfully waged only if the proletarian vanguard in all countries is firmly united into one centralized Communist World Party.

It is true that the Workers Party has been a "foreign-born party" in the Communist International; but that is for other reasons than fear of "Moscow Dictation." Our attitude is determined not only by theory and observation on the international field. We have had independent experience with the Communist International and we have learned to trust its leadership. We have gone to it with many tangled problems, and it has never yet failed to find a solution. The instance cited above is only one of many where the International has intervened to set our party straight in its tactics.

We who have fought for a realistic party have found our best friend in "Moscow." On the trade union question, in the struggle for the proper appreciation of election campaigns as a means of propaganda and agitation, in the fight against the dogma of illegalism as a principle—in all these controversies which have been shaking our movement to its foundations the Communist International has thrown the weight of its authority on the side of common sense.

On the basis of our study and our experience we have established proper relations with Moscow. We aspire to make of the Workers Party a genuine communist party in the true sense of the word. That is, a party which faithfully and unfalteringly defends the interests of the working class at every turn of the road; a party that is at once flexible and rigid—realistic enough to bend to circumstances and to the requirements of the given situation, yet ever firm in principle, never losing sight of the final aim of revolution; a party good enough to claim the right to be and integral section of the Communist International and strong enough—having as roots deep in the labor movement—to defend that right in the face of all persecution.

We have not yet made such a party in America, but we are on the way to it. We have contended against great difficulties. Government persecution shattered the party in its first year, driving it underground and forcing it for a long time into an illegal existence. It has been torn by internal dissension and factional controversy. It has suffered deeply from a number of splits. In its inexperience it was unable to avoid some tactical mistakes which set it back for a time. But the American communist movement has survived it all. It is fighting its way back into the open. It has overcome the worst of the internal dissension and splits, and is today more firmly united than ever before; it is correcting the past tactical mistakes and will make fewer of them in the future.

Homogenous political parties are not built in a day. The heavier the task the party sets for itself, the longer and more painful is the process by which it proves its methods and its human material in the forge of experience. It takes years to make a Communist party because it usually takes the most arduous and dangerous duties. It is the party of never-ceasing struggle; the only try revolutionary party. The hand of the whole bourgeois world is against it from the hour of its birth. A Communist party always fights against the heaviest odds. A Communist party always goes "against the current." In the struggle itself, by its victories and defeats, by faltering half-measures and costly mistakes, thru strife and persecution, it must find for itself the right road.

The four years that have passed since we organized the left wing in the Socialist Party have been trying ones, indeed. The factional controversies, the splits, the persecutions, the mistakes, have been enough to discourage all but the stoutest hearts. But we can look back now in the light of our experience and the experience of other communist parties, and see that these manifestations were not unhealthy. They seem to happen in every country. They are merely the pangs which inevitably accompany what Zinoviev has aptly called "The Birth of the Communist Party".

When we consider what we had to contend against during the past four years, we have every reason to be encouraged with our accomplishments. We can safely say now that the most dangerous formative period is behind us. Our original nucleus is still intact. The heavy blows of persecution have not been able to break us up. The best fighters in the left wing of the labor movement—the "militant trade unionists"—are moving toward us. We are about to have a serious rival in the field of revolutionary activity. We have broken with the Socialist Party opportunists and overcome the "leftists" in our own ranks which paralyzed our own movement for a time, and will sigh destroy it. The task before us is clear and we know how to perform it. We are about to have a serious rival in the field of revolutionary activity. We have broken with the Socialist Party opportunists and overcome the "leftists" in our own ranks which paralyzed our own movement for a time, and will sigh destroy it. Dress Strike Splits Ranks of Employers the demands of the strikers. Unless the officials of the association come to terms within a short time the organization will be wrecked, as the individual members cannot long hold out against the solidarity of the strikers.

Many Return to Work

Under the agreements already signed up by the contractors and manufacturers, granting the union demands for week work, double time for overtime, the right of business agents to visit the premises where union members are employed and all the other thirty or more demands. There have been a total of almost four thousand strikers returned to work under the new union agreements signed

The Association of Dress Manufacturers, the contractors' organization, in its desperation, has issued an ultimatum to the effect that unless all the former employes return to work by Friday morning their places will be filled by scabs. This ridiculous assertion caused much merriment at various assemblages of strikers, as it is recognized as a last desperate effort of the discredited of fcials of the contractors' organization to save their faces. Unless the officers of the association can defeat the strike there is nothing for them to do but quit and abandon the organization. This fact most of the contractors are beginning to recognize

Strikers Determined to Win

Although under leadership that is far from desirable from the view point of efficiency in handling the strike and that is more interested in its own political future in the organization than they are in winning the struggle the rank and file of the membership has displayed a solidarity that is admirable.

Fortunately for the reactionary leadership of the organization it has been placed in a position where it must act with the strikers, otherwise it may face a crisis at its special convention to be held at Baltimore beginning Thursday. The leaders must support the determination of the strikers and the militant sentiment of the membership has been such that they dare not attempt to compromise with the employers as they have done so many times in the past.

Leaders Leave for Convention

In the thick of the fight the leaders of the union left for Baltimore to attend the special convention called to elect a successor to the reactionary Gompers tool, Ben Schlesinger, who retired under a terrific volley of denunciation from the rank and file of the membership, especially in New York.

Acting President Nimfo, former vice president Morris Sigman, and a number of other vice presidents who have been active in the strike have hastened away in order to keep their political pots boiling.

The reactionary and vicious Jewish Daily Forward is playing its own filthy game of endeavoring to get a President that will favor its rotten labor-faking demands to keep alive the stinking Socialist Party with its gang of hangers-on and political charlatans.

Rumors are rife that Schlesinger is in the offing waiting for the "Forward" henchmen to manipulate the convention so that he can be "requested" to resume his old job.

Rank and File Continue Fight

In spite of the vicious desertion of the "gallant leaders" who place their own political future in the organization above the interests of the membership, the rank and file will continue the fight until they have achieved victory thru the defeat of the employers association who forced the strike upon them.

Altho many militants are engaged in the fight and will not desert to their politics against the machine at Baltimore, with the result that the militant element will not have the representation it should have, they are confident that the trickery of the leaders who play into the hands of Schlesinger played, will result in exposing them for what they really are to the membership and pave the way for their overwhelming repudiation at the first opportunity to express their sentiment.

The rank and file, thru this desertion of their alleged leaders, will come to learn that they can conduct a strike to a successful conclusion without these poseurs, and that in the future they can conduct all the affairs of their organization by electing to office people who will represent them instead of being the supine lackeys of Abraham Kahan, servant of the bourgeoisie and chief pen prostitute on the Jewish Daily Forward.

The poison virus instilled into the ranks of the membership of the union by the yellow Socialist Party outfit must be eliminated and in action, such as the present strike, such officials always expose themselves. At the same time the membership realizes that it is the solidarity and determination of the rank and file and not the hesitancy of reactionary leaders that wins the fight.

Minnesota Labor Federation Supports Campaign to Protect the Foreign-Born Workers

The Minnesota Federation of Labor has declared its support of the campaign initiated by the Second National Convention of the Workers Party in appointing R. D. Cramer, editor of the Minneapolis Labor Review, as its representative on the Provisional National Committee.

The organizations which have agreed to co-operate in the organization of the provisional National Committee are the Farmer-Labor Party, the Trade Union Educational League, the Chicago Federation of Labor, the Workers Party, the Minnesota Federation of Labor. The Nebraska Federation of Labor and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers have also been invited to send representatives.

A proposal to have the Provisional National Committee meet in Chicago, Feb. 24th, is now pending before the various organizations. At this meeting a manifesto to the workers setting forth the program of action against foreign-born workers will be drafted. The committee will also address a general invitation to the labor movement to support the campaign and to send representatives into the National Committee.

Boss's Fine Put to Good Use

Luigi Antonini, secretary of Local 89, I. L. G. W. U., has sent a letter to the ALBA NUOVO, Italian organ of the Workers Party, containing $25. The money is the fine paid by a boss for violating the agreement with the workers. The workers of the shop decided to have the money turned over to the fund for the relief of the victims of the Fascisti reaction in Italy, thru the ALBA NUOVO, Room 405, 799 Broadway, N. Y. C.

Law Bludgeon Against Labor

Assemblyman Hornblower, of Sacramento, California, is attempting to introduce a bill in the California legislature for the repeal of the Criminal Syndicalist Laws of that state.

"The Criminal Syndicalist Bill," said Hornblower, "has simply been used as a bludgeon in the hands of labor, to be applied to the more radical organizations first and the more conservative unions later, if they should incur the displeasure of the large employing interests."

Foster Gives Impetus to T.U.E.L. Work in Boston

By WILLIAM SIMONS

BOSTON, Mass.—The work of the Trade Union Educational League received new impetus here when William Z. Foster, national secretary of the League, delivered a lecture here a regular meeting of the members and sympathisers.

His critical analysis of the ills that afflict the American labor movement and his pointing the way out of the slough of despair into which hundreds of thousands of former trade unionists have sunk during the past few years evoked great enthusiasm from the audience.

Accompanying Foster to Boston was Joseph Manley, Eastern Organizer for the Trade Union Educational League, who also addressed the meeting, pointing out the possibilities of the work in Boston and vicinity.

Here the work of organizing the nuclei in the unions is going on and the activity of the League members is resulting in a strengthening of the entire labor movement. Special attention is being devoted to the textile industry and the boot and shoe industry in this vicinity and all indications point to the fact that the Boston League, will definitely make its presence felt in the labor movement of the country within the next few weeks.

Meeting of Branch Officials

All branch organizers and secretaries of the Workers Party, Local New York, will meet on Saturday evening, Feb. 17, at 7:30, at 208 East 12th St. Important business must be transacted and it is imperative that all organizers and secretaries attend.

Reveal Burns as the Real Bomb Plotter ious name given stool pigeons—to build a new organization that will answer the purpose.

Such an organization was created under the direction of Cooney of the Thiel agency and was known as the "Knights of the Red Star." Then some pen prostitute on a capitalist newspaper was hired to pillage all the revolutionary manifestos obtainable, add some inane inflammatory rubbish about bombs and murder and label it a manifesto of the new organization. This was then taken to the gullible employer of labor, various Chamber of Commerce and other organizations for the purpose of obtaining funds with which to destroy this new "dangerous organization."

In the case of the Knights of the Red Star, created by Thiel stool pigeons, its existence was used for the purpose of inducing J. Ogden Armour and other labor packers to put up money for an anti-red campaign.

Burns Operatives Teach Bombing

Bailin further declared that during a copper strike a Thiel operative made bombs and gave to agents to be exploded in the Guggenheim mines in order to blame the strikers.

An amusing instance of the ignorance of these vicious degenerates was revealed when Bailin related how he had met Raymond and Allan Burns, sons of William J. Burns, and Allan Meyers, head of the Burns Agency's radical department, and Meyers told him he would supply explosives and tell him how to make bombs. Meyers further suggested that Bailin should cultivate men prominent in the radical labor movement and induce them to throw these bombs in order that the Burns agency would have an opportunity to arrest these men as bomb throwers. In this connection the names of C. E. Ruthenberg, now secretary of the Workers Party, and at that time secretary of the Communist Party, and Edward Nockels, of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and others were mentioned.

Not only do these leeches and blackmailers prey upon the employers of labor by creating "red" scares, but they are so dishonest that they sell the information they receive while employed by one corporation to another.

Burns On Defensive

The mass of information being secured by Walsh in his investigations into the ramifications of the Department of Justice and the chain of private detective agencies thruout the country has resulted in placing William J. Burns and his notorious agency on the defensive and exposing the so-called operatives as an aggregation of the most vile and detestable reptiles that ever crawled upon the face of the earth.

Not only do these unspeakable crooks terrorize, blackmail and bribe others to gain their ends, but they even steal from each other. Bailin relates how he sold out certain secrets of the Thiel agency to Allan O. Meyers of the Burns Agency. At the time this transaction was made Bailin showed Meyers a letter written by Cooney of the Thiel Agency charging Burns men with a series of crimes. Before he left the room the Burns man had picked his pocket and stolen the letter. Incurable crooks, they pick the pockets of their boon companions as a pastime.

It is this offal of the dregs of human society that the government proposes to use in the prosecution of the Communists arrested at Bridgman.

Walsh has accomplished a real service so far for the American labor movement for exposing the practices of the professional stool pigeons, whether employed by private detective agencies, or the United States Department of Justice and the various loath squads of the country. They are all alike and so infamous that decent people would shrink from contact with them.

Of course, the claim by some of them that they had a hand in writing any of the manifestos of the bonafide Communist Parties is an absurdity that refutes itself. Except among those counter-revolutionists and operationaries who resort to the tactics of agents provocateur themselves in order to maintain their own treacherous yellow organizations as enemies of the working class. Such organizations as the Socialist Party and its various organs of the type of the Jewish Daily Forward, the Milwaukee Leader and the New York Call, prate about the revolutionary movement being organized by spies in a desperate effort to alienate the workers from the revolutionary standard, so that the yellow socialists can serve the capitalist class in its last extremity after it has discarded its Burns stool pigeons.

Fight Attack on Foreign-Born!

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO—The resolutions in full adopted by the Chicago Federation of Labor in enlisting for the United Front of the native-born with the foreign-born workers in the United States were as follows:

"Whereas, The Farmer-Labor Party, at its Cook County (Chicago) convention, Jan. 14, pointed out several menacing efforts being made by anti-labor forces to put thru legislation directed against foreign-born workers: registering, photographing, finger-printing, passport regulations, etc., all of which has as its object to subject the foreign-born workers to the 'open shop plan and prevent them from taking part in strikes, and which has another object of trying to create a division between the native and foreign-born worker, which will weaken organized labor, and

"Whereas, Many other organizations are waking up to the dangers which seriously threaten labor from these proposed legislative measures, and other discriminations practiced against foreign-born workers, all of whom should, if at all possible, be brought together to unitedly fight against this anti-labor movement, therefore be it

"Resolved, That the Chicago Federation of Labor approves of the action of the Farmer-Labor Party and authorizes the executive board of the Chicago Federation of Labor to name a representative to cooperate with the Farmer-Labor Party and all other organizations working to the same end to prevent the consummation of the nefarious schemes of the open shop employers and their legislative agents."

The attack on the foreign-born workers is now before congress in the Davis, the Colt and other bills, "Bill" Burns, the detective, and other anti-radical and labor-baiting members of the Harding administration are now touring the country working up sentiment in favor of this craristic legislation.

Every organization of labor in the land should adopt resolutions similar to the above passed by the Chicago Federation of Labor. Send them to the congressmen and senators of your state, demanding that they vote against this legislation.

Appeal to Spanish Workers

The Spanish section of the Workers Party has issued an appeal to the Sepharadik (Spanish-Jewish) workers in the kimono, skirts, and children dresses industry, asking them not to scab on the 30,000 members of the industry who are now on strike in New York City. The appeal sets forth clearly the conditions now existing in the open shops, and calls upon them to join their brothers and sisters in the fight for the betterment of their working and living conditions. For the purpose of acquainting the Sepharadik workers with the situation the Spanish section of the Workers Party has called a mass meeting at 81-83 Forsyth St. on Feb. 17, 2:30 P. M. The speakers will be Comrades Cambi, Sadi Moreau, and S. Nehama as chairman.

Officials Try To Split Penn Miners' Union

By H. M. WICKS
(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, PA.—So desperate is the officialdom of the United Mine Workers of America to split the progressive block in this district that no tactic is too vile for them to apply.

Since it became apparent that the rank and file, under intelligent and militant leadership, could not be browbeaten into splitting the organization, the creatures of the Lewis machine, John O'Leary and William Feeney, have waged a bitter terroristic struggle against the membership in the vain hope of forcing them to leave the ranks of the United Mine Workers and start an "outlaw" union. This is also the wish of the Steel Corporation.

Undoubtedly there is a conspiracy on foot between the traitorous officials of the miners' union and the Steel interests to establish an outlaw union in the Fayette field.

Such a consummation will eliminate a threatening element that the Lewis machine now has to contend with and also destroy unionism in this bulwark of the U. S. Steel Trust. Neither the corporation hirelings nor the labor fakirs will scruple at any alliance in order to crush their mutual enemy—militant labor.

Latest Act of Infamy

After the strikers in the coke fields had been forced by the officialdom to abandon the strike they had waged so heroically there was nothing left for them to do but apply for their old jobs. This they did and were all rejected. After becoming thoroughly convinced that there was no possibility of returning to work they drew up reports on each case and resolutions were adopted and forwarded to both the "International" and District offices with demands for continuation of relief.

Jan. 30, a committee from the Coke fields of Fayette county sought relief at Terre Haute, Ind., was denied assistance and in addition to that one David Jones, Indiana District Board member, preferred charges against the delegation for daring to seek relief. Jones, henchman of the machine, notified John L. Lewis at Springfield of his action. Lewis then called a special meeting of the International Executive Board for February 1. Jones boasted that the committee was afraid to appear, but it appeared nevertheless, much to the chagrin of the petty despots assembled.

The committee, led by Joe Geisel, of Footedale, Pa., openly charged Feeney and O'Leary before the Board with the betrayal of the miners in the coke fields. Feeney, in replying to Geisel told a bare faced lie to the effect that he was paying full relief, altho the week before he had cut it down two-thirds.

When it was apparent that the Board was not inclined to act on the case for the obvious reason that they wanted to force a split in their own ranks, Geisel accused them all of treachery and betrayal of the rank and file of the organization.

Lewis finally ordered the committee to stop seeking relief, to return home at once and go to work and to PAY YOUR DUES INTO THE ORGANIZATION. This in spite of the fact that they cannot get back to work and obtain money with which to pay dues.

The men returned and the district is seething with hatred for the infamous Lewis machine. Every effort will be made by the militant leaders to prevent a split from the International, as that would play directly into the hands of the labor-fakirs and the steel corporation.

All genuine militants are determined to remain within the organization for the purpose of consolidating their forces and directing the widespread discontent among the miners into constructive channels—that at the same time will mean destruction of the loathsome Lewis machine.

Important Story Coming!

At press time we received a telegram from our representative in Pittsburgh, Pa., that an important article was in preparation on the most recent developments in the Fayette County Coke Fields. Watch for it in next week's issue of THE WORKER.

In Again, Out Again, At It Again

Alexander Howat of Kansas Released on Parole, This Time from Coal Miners of Western Pennsylvania and West Kentucky Again Dealing out Mischief within the United Mine Workers of America. Outlook for Progress Bright.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

Latest reports from Kansas are that Alexander Howat is again at liberty. He has once more walked out of the jail at Columbus, Kansas. This time he won his freedom thru commutation of his sentence by Gov. Davis, who is opposed to ex-Gov. Allen's industrial court law.

Howat had 44 more days to serve of a six months' sentence imposed for calling a strike at the Mackie Mine in Cherokee County in violation of the industrial court law. He had been previously released on Jan. 20, with five former associate officials of the Kansas District of the United Mine Workers' Union.

The significant thing about Howat's continued persecution under hypocritical capitalist law enforcement, buttressed by the attacks of the Lewis officialdom of the miners' union, is that it has not succeeded in breaking the spirit of this dauntless rebel. It has not driven him into the ranks of dual unionism and despair. To be sure the kept press, thru the Kansas City Post locally, and the Associated Press nationally, has co-operated with President Lewis, of the miners' union, in an attempt to discredit Howat, and to blacken him in the eyes of the union miners.

When Howat was released in January, Lewis was in New York meeting with the mine owners. The kept press was at his call. It was then that the report was spread that Howat and his associates contemplated joining the Farrington forces in Illinois to organize a dual union to secede from the United Mine Workers of America. Farrington was in New York and immediately denied the charge. No opportunity was given Howat by the slimy capitalistic press to state his views and the impression remained that Howat had been isolated completely.

We cannot be too emphatic in declaring that Howat brands this Lewis-kept press propaganda as "a willful and malicious falsehood." Howat says of this report, "I desire that absolutely no credence be given it, or similar stories likely to be published in the kept press in the future."

Judge D. H. Woolley, who dealt out capitalist justice to Howat, recently declared that he didn't like the tone of Howat's speeches following his recent release. Neither does President Lewis, the Judas of the miners' union, look with favor upon Howat's stand, to work within the union.

The strength of the militants in the miners' union is crystallizing under the joint attack of Lewis and his aids among the mine owners, the capitalist law-makers and judges, and the prostitute press. Under this pressure it will develop into a compact and spirited fighting force that will crush reactionary officials within and open shop bosses without. Howat has been in again. He is out again. He is at it again. Miners! Stand with him!

Watch the Job Hunters

The nationalization issue is coming to a boil in the United Mine Workers of America. John Brady, president, Dist. 2, an anthracite field, has resigned as chairman of the National Research Committee that recently submitted its report on the nationalization of the coal mines.

Brophy's resignation follows that of Christ J. Golden, of Shamokin, Pa., president, Dist. 9, also an anthracite field. There remains on the committee only William Mitch, of Terre Haute, Ind., secretary-treasurer, Dist. 2.

The committee originated as a Lewis' administration measure. The report of the committee was, therefore, to have been an administration report to the 1924 convention. But President Lewis turned against the report as being the product of New York "reds." The only alternative, therefore, for Brophy and Golden, was to follow suit, or tender resignation and carrying the fight to the membership of the union. This makes nationalization an anti-Lewis administration issue, and as such it will be weighed down with all the anti-Lewis politicians in the union, who care nothing for nationalization except as a stepping stone to greater power.

The fight for nationalization then becomes a struggle also against politicians both in and out of office.

It is rather significant that the cause of Brophy and Golden has been immediately espoused by Frank Farrington, president, Dist. 12, which includes the 80,000 organized Illinois coal miners. The Brophy-Golden-Mitch report has thus far been barred by President Lewis from the columns of the miners' union official publication, "The Mine Workers' Journal." Farrington has it published in the official organ of Dist. 12, "The Illinois Miner." Farrington has always been a good administration man in the miners' union. The single exception is his present fight against John L. Lewis. To fight Lewis he stood by Howat. To fight Lewis he now stands by Brophy and Golden. But if Farrington gets Lewis' job it is certain he will no longer be for a definite program for the nationalization of coal.

Nationalization must be made a rank and file issue in the miners' union. It must not be permitted to become the football of job hunters. To win the miners' union membership for nationalization in spite of the job hunters is the task of the organized militants in the miners' union.

The Stand of Nova Scotia

It is encouraging to note the quick and decisive stand taken by the Nova Scotia coal miners on the attempt of President John L. Lewis, of the "International," to discredit them in the eyes of the great membership of the United Mine Workers of America.

There is no taint of dualism in them, as Lewis had hoped. The Nova Scotia miners have taken their stand with the Red International of Labor Unions, and they are willing to let it rest there, without carrying out formal affiliation, on condition that the question come before the 1924 international convention of the U. M. W. of A. Not even Lewis can prevent that.

It will be interesting to see, however, if the Lewis' autocracy dares proceed further against the Nova Scotia miners, if Lewis will attempt to find some other excuse for proceeding against these militants.

Affiliation with the Red International will be only one of many progressive subjects to be brought before the next coal miners' convention. We understand that a program for the militants within this union is now in preparation. It will no doubt be issued very soon. That will launch the "left wing" struggle in the U. M. W. of A. on a national scale. Western Pennsylvania, Kansas and Nova Scotia have been alone, too long, in shouldering the militant struggle in the miners' union. Let all the militants, in all the districts, fall into line, NOW!

Cancel Debts! Labor Stand; Pay! Morgan's

if he believes his own words. But we are sure that he does not believe them. He knows, that weakening and strangling of British navalism and imperialism, thru debt payments, will mean the strengthening of United States' navalism and imperialism.

He says as much when he declares with great rejoicing that, "The whole world is now open to us and to our trade and to our enterprise".

It is difficult to say just where embattled American imperialism will turn with the vast products of the huge American industrial machine, re-inforced with the lease—second thru war loans—that it also has on the workers' efforts of Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy and the smaller European countries.

The capitalist world offers no new markets. Every country registers huge armies of unemployed. No nation can dispose of its own products. Soviet Russia alone offers the only possible market. And the United States' government turns its back on the Workers' and Peasants' government, which is gradually, thru great efforts, rehabilitating her own industry, so that this market will also soon disappear. Russia's fields, under intensive and machine agriculture, will soon become again the bread basket for starving Europe, more than she ever was before the war. Russian industry, reconstructed, will find a ready outlet for its products among the Near Eastern nations now dropping into its fold, and among the hundreds of millions of India, China and other Far Eastern and backward countries.

When the "farm bloc", the so-called "progressives" and "Socialist" Meyer London cast their ballots in congress for the Harding republican administration's debt funding act, they placed a lost hope in the ability of American imperialism, not only to save European capitalism by making it its slave, but even to save itself at home by keeping labor on the land and in industry at work and contented.

Labor's attitude on the world debt problem was settled when the Russian Soviet Regime repudiated the debts of the czar. That attitude was recently advanced when the Turkish Angora government, at Lausanne, refused to recognize the obligations of the late Sultan's government.

European capitalism has a ked forgiveness of its debts by American capitalism, and been relieved of its capitalist nation will repudiate its debts outright. Only a European Federation of Soviet Republics will constitute impassible debts to American capitalism, creating the basis for a new deal in world economics.

More than four years after the ending of the war, national debts everywhere are today piling higher and higher. Current statistics for 65 countries and colonies reveal that only a half dozen show actual reductions in their debts during the past year. These include such insignificant countries as Finland and Jugo-Slavia. This conditions shows no sign of improvement. The past year has seen the catastrophic fall of the German mark, and the currencies of other countries have tumbled only in lesser proportions.

Relief will only come with the complete crumbling of capitalism. It becomes the duty, therefore, of America's workers to encourage enslaved labor in Great Britain, France, Italy and other nations toward this goal. Let labor in the United States say to Europe's oppressed workers, "We don't want a cent of the blood money American capitalism is trying to wring from your agony. Seize power in your own lands and we will do all within our strength to loosen the grip of American imperialism upon your throats. We will do this until we have won all power for ourselves".

Thus, "Cancel the Debts!" is the only real workers' slogan that can and should be raised in congress. It will not be raised until Communists sit in that congress. Workers of America! Start sending Communists to Washington!

Queens Has Labor Lyceum

The Queens County Labor Lyceum Association, which owns the beautiful structure at the corner of Forest and Putnam Aves., Ridgewood, has finally secured its dance license which was held up for some time by the authorities, causing many organizations to cancel their agreements to take rooms in the building. The Lyceum is now open for bookings, and it is suitable for dances, parties, weddings and social gatherings. Ridgewood, which did not have a Labor Hall for a long time, may well be proud of its Lyceum. The hall is open for inspection by all.

Frisco Bosses Urge "Lynch Law" for Labor

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 13.—Lynch law for labor, that is the solution to industrial strife now advocated by the employing class, according to the Journal, official organ of the San Francisco Building Trades Council.

"Workers on the docks, in the mines, concerned about justice the Mooney case is known and California demands," the San Francisco Journal, official organ of the Chamber of Commerce, declared this week. It recently stated officially that, "The failure of the authorities to hang the McNamaras and Mooney has made this a favored tendency among all the scamps in the country, and has done inestimable harm to the progress of the state." The occasion for this effusion of fascism was the introduction of a bill in the legislature to abolish capital punishment in California.

"The Journal is enthusiastically in favor of 'law', for labor, but it is 'lynch law' wherever bosses' interests are involved. If a striker is arrested for violating one of the orders of the county sheriff, the Journal has been agitating for their incarceration, at the same time condoning the action of a notorious mob of the sheriff of Morris, Ill., for their action in ridding Williamson County of a bunch of hired thugs who had murdered their fellow workmen and certainly that section of the 'citizens committee' of Harrison, Ark., for lynching a rail striker and deporting to mob rule of several Arkansas cities as a 'patriotic act of outraged and long suffering citizens.'"

The Mooney defense committee recently said concerning the statement of the Journal, "We thoroly agree with the Journal that California is a dreaded underworld for all the scamps in the country, but we believe that most of the scamps, particularly those who do their grafting, stealing and injuring under cover of legal technicalities, will be found among the ranks of the open-shoppers."

"It is certain that the action of the authorities in holding Mooney and Billings, in prison for six years despite positive knowledge of their innocence has done much to flood the state with professional strike-breakers, gun-men and other crooks, who feel secure to follow their calling, under the protection of the authorities, in a state notorious for its persecution of members of organized labor."

N. Y. Laundry Strike Brings 15,000 Out

By MAX SHACHTMAN

Fifteen Thousand Laundry Workers went out on strike in New York City, Feb. 10, at the call of the United Laundry Workers.

The workers demand recognition of the union, closed shop, better working conditions, reduction of hours from 66 to 44, an increase of wages of 15 per cent over the miserable $15 for men and $8 for girls, and the abolition of the vicious system of contracts between the employer and the individual worker.

The Employers' Association refused to arbitrate the matter even when the State Labor Board intervened. Instead, they were held by the court for attempt to kill. In Harlem, two men were blackjacked by gangsters, two of whom were held for assault in the 104th St. Station.

Undaunted by these assaults, the strikers are going ahead with their strike and are appealing to all housewives to support them by patronizing only union laundries. Already, 18 laundries have settled with the union.

A significant incident of the strike is the refusal of H. H. Waldman, owner of the Famous Laundry, and a prominent member of the Socialist Party, to settle with the union. He employs 25 men, all of whom are out. With characteristic miserliness he has informed the Settlement Committee that he will settle only on condition that the demands be moderated, and that if the strike is eventually lost, then the contract with the union is to be voided! This, the committee refused to consider.

The union will continue the strike against the slave-drivers, whether members of capitalist parties or of "Socialist" parties. And the New York Call, which has been filling its columns with discussion on whether business is compatible with Socialism, will undoubtedly remark on the case of Mr. Waldman, who does not seem to mix his business with his "Socialism" very much.

Lumber Barons Insist

Some Ball, This Liberator Ball, at Tammany Hall

Even the opposition concedes, according to the latest reports, that the Liberator Ball, to be held March 2, in Tammany Hall, will be the most brilliant event of this or any other season.

The number of notables who will appear there is astounding. Heading the grand march will be a telegram from Mike Gold from California; a cablegram from Max Eastman from China; and a radiogram from Claude McKay from Moscow. Following will be Hugo Gellert and his luxuriant moustache; Art Young with his luxuriant stomach; and Bill Gropper with his luxuriant burlesqueries. Then, Joe Freeman, with his editorial burdens sloughed off. The rest of the parade will contain the humble rank and file.

There will be longshoremen and Dadaists; Freudians and Communists; Cubists and "Socialists"; poets, artists, tailors, editors, borers from within, from without and general borers. Proletculturists, vulgarians, highbrows, low-brows, intellectuals—in fact, every and any person who is in the least interesting and merry.

The price of tickets will be one dollar more than an added half of a dollar at the door. If you would spend an unforgettable evening (and early morning) you wont fail to get a ticket for yourself—and for her.

"Liberator" Wants Help

"The Liberator" wants help from comrades who will volunteer to do clerical work, addressing and stuffing envelopes. No experience required. Report any day to Chairman, Liberator Costume Ball Committee, Room 405, 799 Broadway, New York City.

Herrin Supports Labor Defense Council

By MORITZ J. LOEB

Perhaps the events in Herrin, Ill., have been an education in the class struggle for those who actually participated in the defence of unionism in the famous Herrin struggle, as well as it has been an education along the same lines to all Americans on both sides of the conflict.

Perhaps, and this is more likely the case, the Herrin miners have long understood the class struggle and that is the reason for their stirring stand, which has served as an inspiration to the entire labor movement and, in truth, the Chicago Tribune states, "A Portend" to the enemies of labor.

At any rate, the Herrin miners understand who ARE the enemies of labor. They understood that when they defended unionism last summer and they understand it now, when they support unionism, progressive unionism thru their support of the victims of the Michigan "Red Raids."

From Local No. 655 of the United Mine Workers has come a donation of $52 to the Labor Defense Council. Someone has said in support of the revolutionary instinct of American workers, "They may not be students of Marx, but let them become aware of an enemy and they'll fight him to the last ditch."

The Herrin miners knew Labor's enemies in Herrin. They know Labor's enemies in Michigan. They know that the attack on the 22 unionists in the Michigan raids was a bitter attack on American labor.

The Workers' Party because it realized the importance of the Michigan trial, not only to the Workers' Party but also to the entire labor movement has called upon its membership to support to the utmost the defense in that trial. It has been said: "We must rely to a great extent on the members of the Workers' Party to supply the money." So a One Day's Pay Assessment has been levied on every member of the Workers' Party.

This is a serious business. The Workers Party is the revolutionary expression of the American working class. When it calls for support from its members it means that support is urgent. The Labor Defense Council is in the business of defending the twenty-two men on trial in Michigan. When it calls for financial support it is because financial support is needed to win the Michigan fight.

The miners in Herrin, Ill., know what has won their court fight for them. It was the financial support of the labor movement, particularly the support of their fellow workers, the members of the U. M. W. A. They knew that money won their court fight. They know that the fight in Michigan cannot be won without money. The miners in Herrin, Ill., haven't very much money. They had just finished a five-months' strike. They have had to undergo starvation from which they are not yet recovered. BUT THEY KNEW WHAT THE MICHIGAN CASE MEANS AND WHAT IT WILL TAKE TO WIN IT. AND THEY HAD THE GUTS TO MEET THE NEED AS THEY SAW IT. THEY HAVE AN ORGANIZATION OF ACTION.

The Day's Pay Campaign calls the Workers Party members to ACTION. Up until January 31, nineteen branches have responded. From January 31 to February 7, the following 25 branches have made their response: Thirteen branches in New York City, reported to New York D. O.; Christopher, Ill., English; Neffs, Ohio, South Slavic; Raymond, Wash., Finnish, San Francisco, Calif.; South Slavic, Roseland, Chicago, Lithuanian; Belleville, Ill., English; Frankfort, Ill., Lithuanian; Kenosha, Wis., So. Slavic, Buckner, Ill., So. Slavic, St. Louis, Mo., Lithuanian; Beaver, Pa., So. Slavic, Astoria, Oregon, Finnish.

Is there a Workers Party member that will permit his branch to remain off the Honor Roll? Is there a member of the party who will not pay his assessment? Is there a branch or a member who cannot see the enemy in Michigan or who will not give battle to him? Must the Workers Party allow the Herrin miners to take the lead in the Michigan battle? We know your answer. But have you made it yet?

HAVE YOU BOUGHT YOUR HONOR CARD? BUY IT! THAT IS THE ONLY WAY YOU CAN MAKE YOUR ANSWER. LET THE LABOR DEFENSE CUNCIL KNOW BY WHAT ACTION YOU MAKE YOUR ANSWER.

BUY YOUR HONOR CARD, BUY IT NOW!

Plan Program for Work in Needle Trades

By JOSEPH MANLEY

At a special meeting of the National Committee of the Needle Trades Section of the Trade Union Educational League held recently, at which William Z. Foster was present, an elaborate program was approved of, which will inaugurate a countrywide campaign, covering all the needle trade centers, for the cause of amalgamation of the various needle trades unions.

A plan of amalgamation was adopted which, we will publish shortly. The National Committee selected one of their number, Ida Rothstein, a well known member of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, to visit the following cities.

Philadelphia, Boston, Rochester, Buffalo, Cleveland, Chicago, Indianapolis, Louisville, Cincinnati, Pittsburg and Buffalo; spending from five days to a week in each city, and organizing Trade Union Educational League groups for the purpose of carrying on the campaign for amalgamation.

A needle trades amalgamation bulletin for the industry, published in several languages and with a national circulation, was also approved of.

The plan of amalgamation will be spread broadcast thruout the entire industry, and Organizer Rothstein will make it a special point to see that the various groups and organizations will be represented at the conference provided for by this meeting of the National Committee. This conference will be held in the near future, and a call will soon be sent out giving the exact date and location.

The purpose of the conference will be to elect a permanent National Committee, and establish the campaign for amalgamation on a firm foundation.

Metal Trades Section Meeting

The next meeting of the Metal Trades Section of the T. U. E. L. will be held Saturday, Feb. 17th, 3 p. m. at the Hungarian Workers' Home, 350 East 81st St., near 1st Avenue, New York City.

Every militant in the metal industry must make it his business to attend this meeting, so that the genial workers may again become the most militant of the American labor movement.

February Birthday Celebrations for Lincoln and Washington Reveal the Myths of Hero Worship

[illegible] and everywhere in the world. Never have there been wider variations in the standards of living than there are today. Never have there been such [illegible] thousands of them, live the material conditions that produce such outstanding figures are not at hand.

It is not the so-called "great men" that make history, but historical conditions, but the appearance of such men is indicative of changes that have already taken place in material life. Individuals in the past have certainly personified a certain historical tendency. But the tendency was prior to and responsible for the individual; the individual was never the creator of the historical tendency.

Heroic figures appear at times of great upheaval, such as during the transition of power from the hands of one ruling class into that of another. Before they appear, however, there has already developed within the confines of the old society the elements of a new society. The very fact that they do appear and voice demands for the destruction of the old system, is evidence that the negative force that will eventually destroy the system has become clear to thinkers of clear vision, once no idea can ever arise unless it is rooted in material life.

Bourgeois historians would have us believe that were it not for the appearance of the emperor Augustus the Roman Empire would never have existed; that Napoleon Bonaparte was responsible for the wars that bear his name; that George Washington liberated the thirteen colonies from Britain, and that without Abraham Lincoln, the emancipation proclamation would never have been written.

The Marxist declares that Augustus simply personified the fact that Rome could no longer exist as a republic and that a centralized government that came to be known as the Empire was the one way to overcome the forces of destruction generated in the futile effort of the Republic to maintain itself. Napoleon was the product of the French Revolution, and Washington and Lincoln, each in his own way, personified historical tendencies that were working themselves out in the material life of their times.

To the modern revolutionist, who views history as a series of class struggles, these outstanding figures of the past are not great men, whose appearance is accidental or the result of the will of a Supreme Being, but the embodiment of definite class tendencies. These figures appear only at certain times, in response to definite demands imposed by changes that have taken place in the method of wealth production. In every age the union will be confronted, as pointed out correctly by the report, with the necessity of developing independent political action of the workers, a Labor Party. The next step in securing the fruits of nationalization of mines would be of necessity the establishment of a workers' government. The political character of the whole problem of the working class is nowhere more clearly illustrated than with the railroad workers in Germany. The railroads there are nationalized, yet the railroad workers are among the most revolutionary workers in Germany. Their right to strike was taken away from them. They have been reduced from slaves of private corporations to slaves of a capitalist state.

The report of the Nationalization Research Committee realizes this danger and makes a number of provisions to secure industrial democracy in the management of the nationalized mines. But these provisions will turn out to be just a number of meaningless ornaments. The real power will be the president who appoints the members of the Federal Commission and the secretary of the mines. The real power will be the courts that will interpret every letter of the nationalization law. Under the convenient disguise of representatives of the consumers, heads of big corporations and corporation fools will see to it in the Commission and in the Mining Council that no example will be set for the rest of the workers in the land in regards to standard of wages and general working conditions of the miners, which will result in wholesale struggles of the mass of workers against their private employers.

But, we repeat, the struggle for nationalization will be opposed by every progressive and radical. In this struggle it will be possible to prove beyond a doubt how the high officials of the U. M. W. of A. use their office to thwart all efforts of progress of the membership of the union. It will be possible to prove to the rank and file of the organization that Lewis and his stool pigeons are after all merely champions of the cause of the mine owners against the workers.

And, last but not least, the inevitable necessity of independent political action of the working class, and the necessity for the establishment of a workers' government will be proven to the masses of workers thru the experience derived from the struggle for nationalization as well as in the administration of nationalized mines.

Bazaar Great Melting Pot, Plans Show

Gaining in momentum every day, the Second Annual International Bazaar, to be held at the Lyceum, 86th St. and 3rd Ave., Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Feb. 21, 22, 23 and 24, for the benefit and relief of class war prisoners, promises to exceed all expectations for attendance, variety of interests, and colorful features.

The Bazaar will be the great melting pot of the year, blending into a gala harmonious unit the costumes, things, rotten with the established order, that something must be done, and that the workers themselves are the ones to do it. Any good friend of capitalism can see in this the danger that lies ahead of the established order. The workers are prompted to action because they see and feel the wrong of the existing status. The proposed action is by no means radical. It is the uncertain movement of one not quite sure of his ground. But it is a step forward. This step once made the workers are bound to learn by their experience. The first step will merely be the opening of a gateway thru which the masses of workers will march, hesitatingly at first, but consciously and self-confident eventually, until this march rises into an irresistible stream of a conquering proletariat building a new order.

The officials of the workers' organizations do not dare to oppose open and outright the progressive tendencies. Such opposition would deprive them of their position, and, incidentally, also of their chance to serve what they love, to serve capitalism. So they agree with platonic declarations in favor of such sentiments. But that does not in the least prevent them from using all the power at their disposal to hinder and stand in the way of a practical realization of these tendencies. Thus it appears only natural that Mr. Lewis and his henchmen, Mr. Searles, the editor of the U. M. W. Journal, should attack the report.

Even the most careful perusal of the plan cannot disclose any revolutionary tendency that would justify the attack of Lewis. It is not the plan that they oppose, but the general tendencies. On the other hand it is not the plan that strikes us as particularly worthy of support, but the tendencies.

Nationalization would be a step forward. It cannot solve any economic problem the workers are confronted with. But it can serve as an excellent school that will show the workers the real road to freedom and emancipation.

Nationalization of Mines

By MAX BEDACHT

The 1921 convention of the United Mine Workers of America instructed a special committee to study the question of nationalization of the mines. This committee has now made a tentative report under the caption "How to Run coal".

The outstanding feature connected with the publication of the report is the attitude of President Lewis of the U. M. W. of A. It is the same old story. The sentiment for progressivism. They know that altho these tendencies have not as yet any revolutionary goal, they are, nevertheless, symptoms of a development moving toward such a goal. They are symptomatic of the presence of a subconscious feeling among the masses that something is rotten with the established

But these officials view with alarm the growing sentiment for progressivism. They know that altho these tendencies have not as yet any revolutionary goal, they are, nevertheless, symptoms of a development moving toward such a goal. They are symptomatic of the presence of a subconscious feeling among the masses that something is rotten with the established order, that something must be done, and that the workers themselves are the ones to do it. Any good friend of capitalism can see in this the danger that lies ahead of the established order. The workers are prompted to action because they see and feel the wrong of the existing status. Worked 17 Years in U. S. A.; Has Nothing

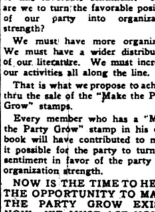
DETROIT.—Deportation of Leonard Marcellino, an Italian worker who has become dependent after 17 years of labor in this country, is protested by Detroit workers who call upon the federal Department of Labor to cancel the order. If carried out the order will separate Marcellino from his wife and four minor children who were born in this country. The Polish section of the Workers' Party is especially active in aiding him.



The National Office of the party has been in touch with the party organization thru special representatives in most parts of the country during the last month.

The reports that these representatives have brought back to the headquarters are all of the same character: Everywhere the workers are in a mood for a fight against the exploiters and oppressors of labor; everywhere the sentiment in relation to the Workers Party among the rank and file of the labor movement is sympathetic. The reports conclude with the message that the party faces a great opportunity to organize the militant workers of this country and to double and triple its strength during the next year.

One of these reports is from Max Lerner, Field Organizer for the party, who spent a month and a half in New England, visiting some forty party organizations. He brought back an enthusiastic report of the possibilities of building a powerful party organization in that district.

How is the party to take advantage of this favorable sentiment? How are we to turn the favorable position of our party into organization strength?

We must have more organizers. We must have a wider distribution of our literature. We must increase our activities all along the line.

That is what we propose to achieve thru the sale of the "Make the Party Grow" stamps.

Every member who has a "Make the Party Grow" stamp in his dues book will have contributed to make it possible for the party to turn the sentiment in favor of the party into organization strength.

NOW IS THE TIME TO HELP. THE OPPORTUNITY TO MAKE THE PARTY GROW EXISTS NOW. WE MUST ACT NOW.

The National Office asks that each member do this one thing at once: to help make this work possible:

GO TO YOUR NEXT BRANCH MEETING AND BUY A "MAKE THE PARTY GROW" STAMP.

The Gifts of Rockefeller

By JEANETTE GERSHANICK

Capitalism demands a different type of mind from that of the past. It needs no philosophic speculators. It must have a staff of workers who can harness the forces of nature and who can reduce the cost of production to a minimum. Capitalism must have scientists as the "sine qua non" of its existence, and accordingly it will encourage learning for the advantages it may receive.

In the individual industrial establishment, such encouragement is quite obvious. The hiring of a trained scientist in a factory in order to reduce the cost of operation is generally recognized as a legitimate act on the part of a producer. Such fostering and aiding of the sciences does not carry with it, however, the insidious effects as the interlocking of the intellectual life of the nation by methods which are less evident, and therefore, more dangerous, as for instance the subsidizing of institutions of learning. The isolated case is not as significant as capitalism's interference with education designed to perpetuate its regime.

It is this sinister meaning which attaches to the gifts recently made and constantly being made to our higher branches of learning. Every donation to a university is another trowel of mortar added to the present structure and the workings of the human mind. Let them continue with this work. And as we hope to transfer the fund of scientific knowledge in other fields to the hands of the workers for their utilization, so let us also use this new mine of valuable information to which Teachers' College is adding for the purpose of making this the Children's Land as Russia did.

John Edwards, one of the delegates from the Young Workers League to the Third Congress of the Communist International, will report to the Convention on the decisions reached by the Young Communists and the Communist International.

The agenda calls for a review of the work of the League since its organization, and from the reports of the Executive Committee it is said that great headway has been made and that in the future much more can be expected from the youngsters.

Besides reports of the International, there will be reports on the trade union, school, defense, relief, organizational, financial, foreign language branches, social, educational, and other activities of the League. More than 20 fraternal organizations have been invited.

British Seek Halt in War's March to Ruin

The British Communist Party is conducting an energetic campaign against the new imperialistic war that threatens to overwhelm all Europe. Under the slogan of "Stop the March to Ruin!" it is pointed out to labor that it is being betrayed into new wholesale slaughters. The party demands an international conference of workers, the withdrawal of British troops from the continent, scrapping of the Treaty of Versailles, and the creation of an European United States of Workers' Governments. The manifesto reads in part as follows:

Stop the March to Ruin!
Workers of Britain! You Are Being Betrayed Once Again!

The German imperialists, backed by their lackeys of the Second International believe that, with the British troops in Cologne (surrounded as they are on all sides by French and Belgians) sooner or later "incidents" will occur, and the situation we now see developing will force Britain to take action against France. Thus, a new world war will start with Britain and Germany as allies.

The leaders of the Independent Labor Party tell you that the British troops in Cologne are a guarantee of peace. They tell you it is a check against French imperialism. Workers! it's a foolish lie. It is the old lie of the jingoes that "the best way to keep the Peace is to prepare for war."

French troops in the Rhineland, are not a guarantee of peace, but a provocation for further war. British troops in Cologne carry the same danger with them. It is madness to say that a display of military force can help towards the Peace of Europe.

We have a year's experience of a legal party, the L. P. P. This, it brief experience, indicates that even in present day America, the existence of a legal party is possible. The periodicals you publish are in the main Communist. The things published by your illegal forces are little more revolutionary than those published by the legal press, and yet the publications of the legal press circulate freely.

The present legal party is not by far satisfactory to us. The numerical proportion of the membership of the illegal Party to that of the L. P. P. is as one to two. This is not sufficient. We must establish a wider legal movement in which the proportion of the Communists as compared to the rest of the organized workers' masses must be as one to fifty or as one to a hundred. In this connection the only serious prevailing of the establishment of a labor party in America has enormous political importance. The basis of our activity must be the Left Wing of the Trade Union Movement. All attention and energy must be devoted to our activity among the masses of the Left Wing in the Trade Union movement. If we succeed in building a large Labor Party—at first only with a moderate political program—it will be an event of historical importance, not only for the American Labor movement, but for the Labor movement of the whole world. It will be the business of the Communists to get a strong footing in this Labor Party; to build Communist nuclei in all Labor Party organizations, and to influence the Party.

The Fourth Congress and the new Executive of the Comunist International are of the opinion that the American communists must commence a new chapter in their work. Illegality for the sake of illegality must cease. The main, efforts must be devoted to work on the legal field. This is what the Comunist International now categorically demands.

The relations between an illegal Party and a legal Party in America cannot be the same as those existing in Russia, for instance, after the first revolution, or now in Finland or Poland. The Communist Parties in those countries have existed for many years. The leaders of those parties have led the working class to revolution. The masses of the workers have seen these parties and their leaders on the battlefield, and have learnt to regard them as reliable leaders. When these parties were forced into a state of illegality, they can claim that the legal movement, as a whole, subordinates itself to them and that they are its leaders.

The situation in America is altogether different. The Communist Party there is still young and has not yet had the opportunity of leading the masses of the workers into decisive battles. Its leaders, hitherto, have not been able to come before the working classes, and win the confidence of the masses. When, under such conditions, the small illegal party claims that all other forms of the movement must subordinate itself to it, and must be led by the illegal organization, it can only lead to great difficulties and thru tactlessness may hinder the development of a broad legal labor movement. In any case, the illegal party must subordinate itself to the broad legal mass movement, must regard itself as a subordinate organization to the broad legal mass movement.

We do not believe that the moment the illegal Communist Party must be demobilized. In view of our experience of the period of the "democratic" martial law, we must by all means have in reserve an illegal apparatus, but the relations between the illegal Party and the legal mass movement must be established on the basis outlined above. Perhaps it will be possible within a year almost totally to abolish the apparatus of the illegal party, but to do this now would be premature.

The Executive does not propose that you immediately carry out such a complete reorganization. We think rather that we can for the time being be satisfied if the illegal Central Committee and the Central Committee of the legal Party unite, and that this enlarged Executive Committee take over the leadership of the movement. The rest will follow.

The immigrants, including Communists, who have migrated to America from Europe, play an important part in the American Labor movement. But it must not be for the moment forgotten that the most important task is to arouse the American born workers out of their lethargy. The Party must systematically and willingly assist American born workers, wherever the opportunity offers, to play a leading part in the movement. The Communist immigrants have brought many virtues with them to America, self-sacrifice, revolutionary courage, etc. At the same time, however, their greatest weakness lies in the fact that they desire to apply the experience they have acquired in the various countries of Europe, mechanically to American conditions.

In summarising our position, we say:

1. The main efforts must be devoted to work on legal field.

2. All energy must be directed toward building up a Labor Party.

3. The greatest attention must be paid to the Left Wing in the Labor movement.

4. The illegal Party shall continue to exist only as an auxiliary organization.

5. The merging of the Central Committees of the illegal and the legal parties must be brought about as soon as possible.

These are the instructions given you by the Executive. All this, however, can be carried out only on the condition that the factional struggle, the struggle between the various groups, be brought to an end. We have now to carry out a most important political measure. The party will be able to carry out this task only when it is properly disciplined, and when it marches along the path indicated, like one man. The tasks that now confront the American Party are so important that we frankly declare: He, who refuses to adopt these tactics, let him leave the Party!

The Communist International demands discipline. On this basis of its experience the Communist International assures the American Communists that, if they raise no difficulty with regard to the policy indicated above, the Communist Party of America, with the help of the Communist International, will in a short time achieve great success. The situation is so serious and the injury caused by factional struggle so great that the Executive Committee has resolved to take the most energetic measures against all those who will hamper the carrying out of the above decisions. Unity and discipline, on the basis of the decisions of the Communist International, arrived at after mature thought — this is what the Executive Committee demands from all American comrades without exception.

With Communist Greetings,

Executive Committee of the Communist International.

Statement of the Executive Committee of the Communist International on the American Question Is Published Here

(From "The Communist," Official Organ Communist Party of America)

TO THE COMMUNIST PARTY OF AMERICA, FROM THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL:

For two years already the Executive Committee of the Communist International has been dealing with the American Communist party. On this question we have heard a number of your delegations and complete delegations from your Party. A number of special sessions were devoted by the Executive to your affairs, and have been repeatedly dealt with by the Enlarged Executive.

We succeeded in sending a special representative to America who has now submitted his report to us. Finally, at the Fourth Congress the American question was once again, dealt with by a large commission and the whole of the Congress.

Now the witness in America are the birth-pangs of a Communist Party. This birth is taking place amidst internal struggles and conflicts.

Is a LEGAL Communist Party in America possible now or not? This is the question which has to be decided. The Executive is of the opinion, unless all signs are misleading, that a legal Party in America is now possible. The Communist Party existing in America now was born during the period of the war, the period when in all the belligerent countries martial law prevailed, which in America, assumed the most stringent forms. During this period a legal Communist Party was certainly not possible in America, and under the conditions then prevailing the Party had to work illegally. The psychology that prevailed in the Comunist Party during the period of martial law cannot remain. It is true, that so-called American "democracy" is not a paradise for the working class. And yet even this notorious "democracy" is in a position in which it can and must do what the most reactionary government, that of imperialist France, for example, is obliged to do.

The British troops must be brought home. This is our first task. We must then help the French workers to fight their reactionary Government for the withdrawal of the French troops. The Communist Party is not interested in helping British, French, or German imperialism. Its one concern is the revolutionary struggle of the workers of all lands against the imperialists.

The Communist Party therefore calls on the workers of Britain to fight against British Imperialism and British capitalism.

Thru your Trade Unions, Trades Councils, and local Labor Parties, demand:

An International Conference of Workers

The Communist Party demands that the British Labor movement shall take the lead in calling an immediate conference of all labor organizations of the world to devise the means and declare an end to the aggression of the imperialists who are conspiring against the social peace.

Scrap the Versailles Treaty!

The Communist Party of Great Britain demands the immediate scrapping of the Versailles Treaty, which has brought misery and ruin upon the masses of Europe.

A United States of Workers' Government!

The Communist Party of Great Britain calls for a United States of Europe composed of the Governments of the toilers—the Workers and Peasants of Europe.

Withdraw All British Troops!

The Communist Party of Great Britain demands the immediate withdrawal of all British troops from the occupied territories.

For the Executive Committee of the Communist Party of Great Britain, Thomas Bell, Political Sec.

Labor Banks Raise Facts Vs. Fiction

FACTS VS. FICTION

BY H. M. WICKS

Mr. Warren S. Stone, head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, received his training in the banking business from a Dr. Walter F. McCaleb, an individual who has had years of experience in the banking business, extending from small banks to the establishing of one of the twelve federal reserve banks for the United States government. Mr. McCaleb was the organizational genius behind the original bank established by the Engineers' officials at Cleveland and he shares all the illusions of Grand Chief Stone.

Since Mr. Stone assures us that running a bank is as easy as running a peanut store and declares that the inevitable tendency of wealth is to create wealth and since he further adds that in ten years' time, thru the control of its own banks, labor can control the financial policy of the United States, we believe his astonishing proposals should be subjected to closer scrutiny at the bar of working-class economics.

It is plain to be seen that wealth and money are synonyms in the sense that Mr. Stone uses the term. Instead of defining the two, historically and functionally, he simply repeats the hackneyed phrases of the brainless copy writers who prepare advertising copy for the banks. Truly such reasoning is that of the peanut peddlar and not that of the trained economist as we shall see ere we proceed very far with our analysis.

Mr. Stone can take all the wealth, whether in the form of money, raw materials, machinery or anything else possessing exchange value and concentrate it in one place, under any conditions, and observe carefully the process by which "wealth creates wealth." He would soon discover that there is no magic power in wealth of any description that will enable it to create more wealth. Instead of increasing it would soon deteriorate and disappear, owing to the elements in nature. Mr. Stone and his chief financial adviser, Dr. McCaleb, may emphatically deny that they mean wealth of itself can increase in value. They will contend that it must be placed in banks and be used.

Very well, let us start from that assumption and imagine that the bankers of the world take their wealth and proceed to buy and sell and trade and dicker in every conceivable way, just as they do in every-day life while labor remains idle. Are these "expert bankers" so naive, so utterly devoid of human intelligence, as to believe that such a procedure would increase the value of money one mill?

To intelligently analyze any phase of wealth production under capitalism we must start from the Marxian formula that there is only one factor in human society that can create wealth in any form, that can impart value to anything, and that is human labor.

The interest that accrues from money deposited in a bank is not obtained from any productive powers on the part of money, but because that money has been used to exploit working people thru the purchase of their labor-power. And the interest on money is only realizable thru the appropriation of the products of surplus labor. Interest is created because workers labor beyond the time necessary to earn their living and get nothing in return for that surplus labor time.

All workers are now being taught the blessings of those capitalistic virtues, industry thrift and perseverance. "Everyone should save money," shout the boosters for labor banks. Thus the so-called leaders of labor repeat the identical slogans of the bankers. One of the prominent New York City labor leaders, speaking in favor of cooperative labor banks, made the assertion that labor has been standing on the side lines too long, watching the parade go by and that we should go on the band wagon by engaging in our own banking. He then pictured the amount of interest being paid by the Brotherhood bank at Cleveland, which seemed to appeal to his listeners.

A simple knowledge of the simplest rudiments of economics would be sufficient to reduce such arguments to absurdity. If all workers saved money and expected to draw interest upon it the result would be the complete negation of the banking business, for there would be no one to purchase the surplus wealth, hence no interest. The fiction of capitalist banking ideology is that all people should put money in the banks. The fact is that such a proposal, if complied with, would lead to the utter ruin of the banking business.

Adam and Christ Myths Like Santa Claus and Uncle Sam

Editor's Note—We asked Bishop William Montgomery Brown, author of the booklets, "Communism and Christianism," to give us his views about the Manning-Grant discussion now going on in the Protestant Episcopal Church. The slogan advanced by Bishop Brown's book is, "Banish Gods from the Skies, and Capitalists from the Earth." He says that he treats the myths of Adam and Christ as he does those about Santa Claus and Uncle Sam. He writes:

BY BISHOP WILLIAM MONTGOMERY BROWN,
Author of "Communism and Christianism"

The interesting case of the Bishop of the Diocese of New York, William T. Manning, against the Rector of the Church of the Ascension, New York City, the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, on account of heretical teaching, illustrates the wisdom of the proverb which advises people who live in glass houses not to throw stones.

If measured by the Bible and Church standards of orthodoxy, the Bishop falls short (technically, if not actually) as much as the Rector.

Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all.—James, 2:10.

Let me confine this comparison of, according to the representations of the Bible, literally interpreted, than the Rev. Dr. Grant, but surely he does not believe all of either; and, this being the case, the two equally great doctors are equally great heretics.

the two doctrines which constitute the bases of orthodox Christianism: (1) the doctrine of the two Adams, and (2) the doctrine of the two future lives.

Perhaps the Rt. Rev. Dr. Manning believes more of these two doctrines, the Rev. Dr. Grant, but surely he does not believe all of either; and, this being the case, the two equally great doctors are equally great heretics.

Does Dr. Manning believe that the Christian God was the father of the first Adam in accordance with the representations of the Bible?

So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him: male and female created he them.—Genesis, 1:27.

And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul.—Genesis 2:7.

If Dr. Manning does not believe these two verses in their literal sense why does he throw a stone at Dr. Grant for not believing that God was the father of the second Adam in accordance with the representations of the Bible?

But while he thought on these things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife: for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost.—Matthew, 1:20.

Then said Mary unto the angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a man? And the angel answering said unto her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God.—Luke, 1:34-35.

Or does Dr. Manning prefer that the first Adam was brought into the world by his fall, if so why does he cast another sneer at Dr. Grant for not believing the second Adam was raised to life to the world by his resurrection?

Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For, as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.—I Cor. 15:20-21-22.

We are passing from the age of traditionalism with its myths into the age of scientism with its facts. There are no men of science and, indeed, few educated people who believe that the first of these Adams ever lived in the realm of realities.

Drs. Manning and Grant are, then, on the same footing as heretics on account of their disbelief in this Adam; if not, the false teacher is Dr. Manning, not Dr. Grant; and, if so, he is such nevertheless, for how could the second Adam be the Christ who by his death and resurrection restored to humanity the immortality which the fall of a first Adam who never existed?

Besides the creation of the first Adam and the birth of the second, in accordance with the representations of the Bible, are alike biological impossibilities.

Moreover the heaven above the earth is not a heaven and a hell in the earth, or below it, in accordance with the representations of the Bible, are astronomical impossibilities.

Dr. Manning does not believe the representations concerning this firmament, heaven and hell any more than Dr. Grant. It is well, therefore, that he dropped his stone, and it will be well if he does not take it up again. The throwing of it would do himself more harm than Dr. Grant.

For myself I believe in both the Adams, for the people and by the people.

They (the first Adam, the second Adam, Santa Claus, Uncle Sam and all the rest) have ceased to be prosaic realities and become poetic fictions. As such they are so many parts of the great dramas of nature in general and of humanity in particular.

Speaking only of the earth, she is the virgin who, being fructified by her heavenly father, the sun, is the mother of all living creatures, every one of which feeds at her breast and is a brother or sister of all the rest.

The second Adam, the Christ, is the symbol of the working class which is ever being crucified to redeem the owning class from the hell of want and toil to the heaven of plenty and leisure.

Some wonder that I do not renounce these myths concerning the Adams, but why should I not treat them as I do the myths about Santa Claus and Uncle Sam.

My body is an inheritance. It has 107 useless organs; twelve of which have come to me from my fish ancestors. What a fool I would be if I should try to cut them out.

My soul is also an inheritance from civilized barbarism, savage and even animal ancestors, and it is full of hurtful, prosaic superstitions, but fortunately I have the power of converting them into helpful, poetic and dramatic symbols.

Thus I have done with my inheritance of the Christian interpretation of redemptive religion—the greatest of all myths, and it means ten, yea a hundred times more to me now in these days of my heterodoxy than it ever did in the days of my orthodoxy.

Among the rumors there is one to the effect that Dr. Manning is to prepare and deliver a special course of apologetic lectures in which he will undertake to state and discredit the heresies to which Dr. Grant has given expression. Unless he trifles with the field of modern science in these lectures, they will be of little interest to the faithful; but, if he enters it, he will be more likely to increase the number of heretics, than to convert Dr. Grant.

The daily press hints that this Bishop in dropping this case against Dr. Grant may have been influenced to some extent by financial considerations. If there is any truth in this, a comrade who has written to me about it, certainly hits the nail on the head in this paragraph of his letter.

"It is openly stated that Bishop Manning will do nothing more in the case, all of which reminds one of Marx's profound observation that 'the English Established Church will more readily pardon an attack on eight of its thirty-nine articles than on one thirty-ninth of its income.'"

This betrayal of the workers is best told by Wm. Z. Foster, in "THE REVOLUTIONARY CRISIS IN GERMANY, ENGLAND, ITALY and FRANCE."

The Percy Bigwig Grant says that the Communists are going to overthrow the Government except Russian consuls. Americans are not going to overthrow Russian economics as well, and then their country will be 100 per cent on the right road.

Republican Unity for 1924

If we are to believe the political soothsayers, there is to be unity in the Republican Party for the 1924 elections and Warren Gamaliel Harding, president of these United States, is to be candidate for re-election "on his record."

This has been made definitely certain by the complete surrender, as it is claimed, of Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, to the Republican reactionaries. It is contended he will not muddy the waters of Republican solidarity by seeking the presidential nomination himself. This is easily understood. Since his revolt, with Roosevelt, in 1912, Johnson has steadily developed his efforts more and more as the stool pigeon of Republican conservatism. He is now a faithful lapdog of capitalism.

It is a rather delicious bit of political irony, therefore, that he should jockey his former "progressive" associates, LaFollette-Brookhart et al, into the corner where they now find themselves. La Follette's "People's Legislative Service" had blatantly made public a letter from Johnson denouncing the present method of nominating Republican candidates for the presidency. Johnson had endorsed the La Follette method that delegates to presidential nominating conventions be chosen by direct primary vote.

Thus the La Follette group took unto its bosom the California senator, who dodged voting on the question of Newberryism in Michigan, who lauded Sleuth "Bill" Burns before a congressional committee seeking to white-wash Daugherty, and who helps keep Mooney and others in prison in California. And the next day Johnson, like the millionaire "progressive" Couzens, from Michigan, found a haven beneath the protecting whiskers of the senate's reactionary Republican leader, Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts. Practically the entire program of the People's Legislative Service, sponsored by the La Follette group, is built on a few reforms in the election laws. Thus Johnson, on behalf of reaction, punctures La Follette's "progressive" bubble.

Not satisfied with this humiliation of La Follette and Co., the Senate republicans select two new leaders, a conservative and a "progressive," to help solidify their forces. The conservative is Wadsworth, of New York, the "progressive," Lenroot, of Wisconsin, who, like Johnson, was considered radical a decade ago, but who is now a bulwark of reaction, elected by the same voters who keep La Follette in office. It was Lenroot who denounced Brookhart as worse than the Russian Bolsheviks.

Thus the Cleveland Labor Conference for Progressive Political Action, that decided to stand with La Follette, finds itself dragged in the mud along with the motley crew led by the senior senator from Wisconsin. This cannot help but give new impetus to the demand in the ranks of labor for a class party of the workers and farmers. Unity in the Republican party for 1924 means a solidification of capitalism's political power against labor. It means that labor must solidify its political strength, and it can only do this thru an independent class Labor Party.

While the Communist coal miners of the Ruhr keep on singing "The International," there is no rest for either French or German capitalism. And latest reports indicate the song grows in power.

100 Per Cent Americans

It was to be expected that some trade unionists, during the war, misled by the propaganda of the kept press, minds poisoned with the insidious drugs of jingoism, and in fear of the flag-waving boas, should confess to 100 per cent Americanism.

But when the exploiters launch and carry forward an open shop campaign in the name of the flag, when "Americanism" slaughters union miners at Herrin, Ill., and hangs a union railroad strike official to a bridge at Harrison, Ark., and drives hundreds of his fellows into the hills, for protection, and children into the forests, for protection, in the dead of winter, it is difficult to understand how a trade unionist, especially a trade union official, can confess to being proud of "strictly 100 per cent pure Americanism."

That such sentiment, however, still lurks in the ranks of organized labor, a festering sore within, is shown by a letter received by Miss Nerma Berman, Secretary, National Defense Committee, from Ed. McMenamnie, secretary, Local Union No. 1, Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International, that meets at Waverly Hall, 168 Waverly Ave., Brooklyn, as follows:

Brooklyn, N. Y., February 5, 1923.

Nerman Berman, Secretary,
National Defense Committee.

MADAM:—Your two letters of Feb. 1, 1923, and contents, i. e., tickets, are herewith returned. And may further add that the above named union is and always will be strictly 100 per cent pure American. Also that the undersigned was in France as a volunteer in the Army U. S. Engineers, while the skunks you are trying to raise money for was making $10 to $15 per day and dodging the draft. In other words there are no suckers in this union.

ED. McMENANNIE, Secretary, Local Union No. 1,
Bricklayers', Masons' and Plasterers' International.

We doubt whether the National Defense Committee letter ever came before this local of the Bricklayers' Union. McMenamnie's words sound too much like those of that type of labor official-dom that conveniently forgets these matters at union meetings, and then disposes of them later according to its own inclinations.

We want to point out, however, to the members of this Bricklayers' Union that the National Defense Committee is fighting the cases of workers imprisoned long after the war ended, for offering the first resistance to that open shop drive that has crushed many a labor organization during the past two years.

Mr. McMenahnie will win the applause of Sleuth Burns and all his labor-crushing crew. His boss should be proud of him. His brains, as well as his muscles, are at the service of those who exploit him. And for that, all we can do is pity him.

Premier Mussolini is evidently trying to direct popular attention away from the falling lire by directing new raids and arrests against the Communists. Bordiga is reported arrested on his return from the Fourth Congress of the Communist International, and Communist Party funds have been seized following publication of the Comintern's manifesto calling for world-wide action of the workers against fascism. There have also been wholesale arrests of party officials.

Edison may be some inventor, with the assistance of a large number of exploited assistants. And he may be able to ask a lot of questions. But when he claims that Harding ought to be re-elected and that the French are paying the Germans only a "friendly visit" in the Ruhr, he displays a rather amazing ignorance of politics from the human standpoint. Our advice to Edison—stick to your laboratory.

No God But Rockefeller

The Colorado house of representatives doesn't want any interference from God in its law-making. Chaplain J. R. Kader knows this now. Official censure smothered his efforts to have the Deity guide the law-makers to the end that "greed might be overcome, and justice done among men." Rep. Cook, a former minister, in the debate on the censure, declared he didn't think the Almighty should be annoyed. Part of Kader's supplication that drew fire follows:

"Our courts are corrupt; God has been expelled from our churches; our pulpits are filled with easayists; our boys and girls are going to the dogs; our laboring men are going to work with empty pails, while our farmers starve and the middlemen wax fat on exhorbitant prices; . . . our banks are bursting with money."

Colorado elected one of those alleged "progressives," Sweet, governor, at the last elections, and evidently Kader, thought God had a chance in the czardom of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Co., a Standard Oil Trust property.

But when the God of Gold, who robs the workers of the mills, the mines and the fields, spat upon Kader's prayer in the state legislature and threw it out, Colorado merely repeated again what it reiterates so often, that it recognizes NO GOD BUT ROCKEFELLER.

No new Gods will rise in Colorado until the God of Labor develops a mailed fist able to crush the God of Gold and establish the rule of the many. Then no prayers will be needed in the state legislature, for labor will have become its own saviour.

Burns Likes the Ku Klux Klan

William J. Burns, chief snooper and radical head-hunter of the Harding administration, is out touring the country to work up sentiment against Communists in preparatory to the approaching trial in Michigan. One of the recently staged appearances was before representatives of 30 "patriotic" societies gathered at the Army and Navy Club in New York City.

In his attack on all dissenting opinion, Burns came out for the first time in favor of the Ku Klux Klan as an instrument for the enforcement of his brand of "law and order."

"The Ku Klux Klan should be fighting the 'reds' instead of attacking Catholics, Jews and Negroes," advised Burns, thus pressing these nightshirt horsemen to his bosom.

Mr. Burns, and back of him Mr. Daugherty and Mr. Harding, do not care how many crimes the Ku Klux Klan commit, as long as these crimes are perpetrated upon radicals, especially upon Communists.

We have long pointed this out, but we are grateful to Mr. Burns for helping make this matter clear to those who are still blind to the dangers of officially inspired fascism. We have not yet got a Fascisti government in power in the United States. But the Ku Klux Klan, the American Legion and Mr. Burns' 30 Allied "Patriotic" Societies are the unofficial Fascisti of the Harding administration, ready, according to Colonel Alvin Owsley, commander of the American Legion, "to take things into their own hands."

Workers! Remember that when, in the future, the Ku Klux Klan attacks a strike leader or political spokesman of labor, that attack is inspired by Burns. That attack has the consent of the Harding administration. Do not forget!

Kollontay Goes to Norway

All American Communists, in common with those of the rest of the world, will extend their comradely greetings to Comrade Alexandra Kollontay in taking up her new duties as Russian Soviet Minister to Norway. She will thus continue her work in Christiania, the Communist stronghold in the Scandinavian countries.

Comrade Kollontay was an exile from the Russia of the czar, living for the most part in Berlin, Germany. She was a prominent figure and an active co-worker with Clara Zetkin in the congresses of the Second (Socialist) International before the war, and will be remembered in this country for her many brilliant speeches made during a tour of the United States almost coincidentit with that of Karl Liebknecht.

Comrade Kollontay speaks many languages fluently. She has written several books and taken an active part in the internal struggles of the Russian Communist Party, also holding the post of Minister of Public Welfare in the Soviet Regime. Her extreme attitude at times, as spokesman especially of the Workers' Opposition within the Russian Communist Party, brought her into conflict with the accepted Communist position. The kept press, with great gusto, announced several months ago that she had been expelled from the Communist Party, even as it has tried on numerous occasions to create the impression that Zetkin has withdrawn from the Communist movement. But in this, as in nearly everything else pertaining to Soviet Russia and the Communist International, the kept press has been proved wrong.

Comrade Kollontay will find a fruitful field for her great energy and recognized ability in her new position at the Norwegian capital. She will be able to keep a close contact with Soviet Russia, as well as maintain a nearer approach to events transpiring in the capitalist world. We wish her well.

The Hungry Cry for Bread

While great quantities of wheat rot in the open in the grain fields of the west, the poor starve in the cities, especially the children of the poor.

The condition confronting the farmers we know. Their spokesmen in the United States Congress have rapacious grain speculators on the boards of trade refusing to buy. That keeps the price up for stocks on hand, and makes the farmer ready to accept lower prices for new stocks whenever needed. The farmer knows his problem, altho he may be blind as to the remedy.

But there is no "Hunger Bloc" in the United States Congress. The hungry have no spokesman in Washington. But the hungry have spoken in Chicago in the price war between the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. and the Piggly Wiggly Stores, as a result of which the latter, for a very short time, gave away a 16-ounce loaf of bread with every purchase. The hungry have made it known they are in our midst. According to press reports, "Hundreds of schoolboys, newsboys and 'kids' of every description stormed the 98 Piggly-Wiggly stores" in Chicago. Out of well-nigh penniless homes they came, these hungry children, knowing that with every purchase of a few cents they would get a loaf of bread FREE! How many of them must have divided their meagre purchases, coming again and again, to get two, three, four or more loaves of bread FREE! The Piggly-Wiggly stores gave away 150,000 loaves in one day and then the pressure became too great, regular customers couldn't get near the stores.

Manager C. S. Wyatt closed the doors of his stores to the hungry hordes by the simple expedient of ruling that no free loaves be given away except with 50-cent purchases. Fifty-cent pieces are not numerous in the homes of the hungry. So the one day of free bread has become anything of memory. The starving will crawl back into their retreats and hunger some more.

The price war between these two big systems of chain stores will result in time in the one being swallowed by the other.

Rockefeller settled this problem in the oil business long ago. Schwab and Gary settled it in the steel business. They have wiped out competition and prices are fixed as high as the traffic will bear.

In the East some Piggly-Wiggly stores have been going into bankruptcy. That is the favorite way of smashing a competitor.

In the end the dominant capitalist group will demand its compensation for the bread it may have given away in its price wars. Thru higher and ever higher prices it will force louder and louder the cry of hunger. Not until the workers on the land, with the workers in the city, unite against the profiteers in bread, and the profiteers in all the other necessities of life, and crush them and the social system for which they stand, will the cry for bread be stilled, because it will then be satisfied for the first time in human history. The bread price war in Chicago is a dying wail of the capitalist social order.

Chief Justice William Howard Taft has issued his proposed canons of judicial ethics. But we don't find any rule laid down whereby a poor man can get the same deal before a capitalist court as a rich man. Taft always did overlook fundamentals.

30,000 Needle Workers Strike

The frequently recurring struggles of the New York Needle Workers are developing a more and more significant character. The present strike of 30,000 dress and waist makers against the intolerable piece-work system marks a new stage in the efforts of these workers to win their own emancipation.

The needle industry is the home of the sweatshop. It is against this sweatshop tyranny, with its antiquated industrial methods, with petty contractors farming out work, that has called forth the bitter resentment and heroic battles of the organized needle workers. Here, first and three organized needle workers in the forefront of the labor movement, bravely facing the employers supported by their armies of thugs and strike-breakers.

A vast majority of the 30,000 engaged in this latest strike in the needle industry are girls and women. It is because of their fine spirit of solidarity, and as a result of their boundless enthusiasm, that this struggle is becoming successfully carried forward. We predict that the splendid militancy and the conscious aspirations of this vast army of strikers will win for them an epochal victory, establishing a milestone far on the road to the last victory over all losses.

Struggles like the present have, without doubt, had the effect of schooling the workers and developing their class consciousness. But the workers now on strike in the needle industry can only develop a portion of their power.

When all the needle trades' international unions are amalgamated into one industrial union of the entire needle industry, then and only then can such isolated and costly struggles as the present be avoided.

Needle workers! Push forward your standards to victory in the present struggle. Develop that solidarity before which the ranks of the helpless bosses crumble. A strike victory to-day means an amalgamation victory tomorrow.

State Senator Clayton R. Lusk is the champion "anti-red" baiter in New York State. He reported on progress he had made, while speaking at a Lincoln Day meeting, stating that, "Notwithstanding the tragic example of Russia, the country (U. S. A.) is drifting toward Socialism." Lusk means that the Russian example is tragic for his capitalist friends, but the workers of the United States must feel it is a good example for them to follow, since they are going in that direction, too. Poor Lusk and his Lusklets. He will soon be doing more useful work than making speeches.

American Ambassador Child, to Italy, recently gave a dinner at Rome to Premier Mussolini and his Fascisti. No doubt Mr. Child gave the Mussolini outfit some pointers on "lynch law" in America, especially as it is used against the workers.

No doubt Bishop James Oneal and Dr. Scott Nearing will develop into the star performers in a new heresy-hunting episode in the "Socialist" Church. In the words of "Vic" Berger, "Believe with me, or get out of my church."

The political quicksands of the Ruhr are pulling the French imperialists in deeper and deeper. We predict that before they hit the bottom they will be out of sight.

Day by day, the number of copies distributed, of the Communist program adopted by the Second National Convention of the Workers Party, grows greater and greater.

NEW CONFERENCE FOR AGGRESSIVE ACTION

NEW YORK.—A furore was created in political circles by the eccentric conference in session at the Madison Square Garden this week. It is believed that the groundwork will be laid there for a hundred percent American labor party, that will put a presidential candidate in the field in 1924. The ultimate aim of the conference is the unity of all hundred percent organizations into an aggressive political unit.

Only 1845 delegates have reported so far. The Bolcoms were cordially requested to inform all Socialist Party locals, American Legion posts, hundred-percent-American labor unions and the Ku Klux Klan branches who are not represented at the gathering, to send immediately delegates with proper credentials to the Madison Square Garden, Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show.

NOW IT CAN BE TOLD

The chief cause of the break at Lausanne was Lord Curzon's inactfulness. He took delight in bawling out the Turks at every opportunity. On one occasion Lenot was answering the Lord's charges of Turkish persecution of minorities:

"What moral right had Curzon to accuse Turkey? All the world knows how England oppresses the peoples of Egypt, Ireland and India!"

Thereupon the noble Lord arose exultingly: "Shameful Lenot ought to be ashamed so to falsify history. The examples he brought up are not accusations of minorities. They are questions of majorities!"

Lenot never forgot this. W. C. N.

NOTICE

The Barnet Darkey Agency has asked the Bolcoms to assist them in finding a desperate radical by the name of Abe Lincolnsky alias Lincoln believed to be a Russian Jew wanted on a charge of criminal anarchy for advocating the overthrow of our government. Liberal remuneration offered for his capture.

A LA OWSLEY

First Jobless Buddy (reading from the dirty Times he has picked up):—Then the National Commander fairly shouted to the Gotham Chamber of Commerce: "The American Legion is marching proudly under cover behind the army into the A. F. L. Pomeare. I am with you! Down with the Bonushevicks!"

Second Hungry Buddy: "Oh, that's Owsley!"

GOOD WORK, COUE

Doctor Coue remained but a few weeks in this country, but one can note remarkable phenomena. There were no reports of the fall of the Soviet Government in the Times last week. The Call printed no attacks on the Friends of Soviet Russia lately. There were no new plots for the overthrow of the government discovered by Burns this week. Lenin hasn't died a single time in any of the capitalist papers the past fortnight. We have also learned from authoritative sources that thru Coue's teachings a man who has been dumb for years picked up a hub and spoke. A blind carpenter reached out for his plane and saw. A deaf railroadman went out with his dog and herd. A noseless fisherman caught a herring and smelt. A diplomat past master in verdy deposited on a pile of hair and felt.

Yet unquestionably the Frenchman's greatest feat was making a socialist congressman, whom we've considered mute for several years, speak.

Indeed, these are miraculous days!.... Bolcomsly, Irv.

Unemployment Is Subject of First Communist Speech in British Parliament

EDITOR'S NOTE.—J. T. Walton-Newbold, the first Communist member of the British Parliament, in his first-speech in the House of Commons, discussed the question of unemployment, there being an army of several million jobless in Great Britain at the present time, an army that is not being demobilized. Newbold spoke in part as follows:

I represent in this House an area in which there are 13,000 men at the bureau. I represent an area which has been devastated by unemployment on a scale without parallel in its history. I am here as the representative of the working men and working women in my constituency, and of nobody else, for the purpose of bringing the grievances of the subject to the foot of the Throne, or whatever you like to call it. We are not satisfied with the attitude the Government are taking, nor is the party to which I belong cannot, be almost grateful for the way the unemployed are being dealt with, because my party does not believe you will ever enable us to carry our point constitutionally and legally. We do not take the same point of view exactly as the Hon. Member for Aberavon (Mr. J. Ramsay Macdonald) or the Right Hon. Member of Derby (Mr. J. H. Thomas). We have not got the same patience or the same confidence in it. We believe that when the time comes we shall have to deal with your class as the Hon. Member who once sat for Hunting-don (Oliver Cromwell) dealt with your predecessors. There have been precedents in this country for revolution. There is no country in the world where there are as many precedents for civil war as this country, and, if you wish to challenge us again, then I shall be compelled to take up the challenge, and I say, with all the gravity I possibly can, that we do not desire to take up that challenge if we can help it. We hope, just as much as our colleagues in the Labor Party, to be able to establish this system constitutionally and legally, but we do not think that you have given us much evidence during the course of the last week that you are going to deal with it in the spirit in which we might have expected that the gentlemen of England, the gentlemen of Scotland, and the gentlemen of Wales would have dealt with the poor men and women of this country.

I was very pleased to hear His Most Gracious Majesty the King. It is the first time I have had the pleasure of being in the Public Court of Parliament. It is also the first time that an elected representative of Communism and the International has had the chance of standing at the foot of the Throne. It is not the last—not the last by a long chalk! I was glad to hear the King was interested in unemployment, I was glad to know that his Ministers are interested in unemployment; but they cannot get bread, any more than they had seen a little less money upon that tomfool show of theirs—

(Hon. Members: "Order, order!")

Mr. Deputy-Speaker (Mr. James Hope): If the Hon. Gentleman is referring to that ceremonial at the opening of Parliament, his observations are not quite in order.

Mr. Newbold: If they do not like the last—not the last by a long chalk! I was glad to hear the King was interested in unemployment, I was glad to know that his Ministers are interested in unemployment; but they cannot get bread any more than they had seen a little less money upon that tomfool show of theirs—

(Hon. Members: "Order, order!")

Mr. Deputy-Speaker (Mr. James Hope): If the Hon. Gentleman is referring to that ceremonial at the opening of Parliament, his observations are not quite in order.

Mr. Newbold: If they do not like it, Mr. Deputy-Speaker, I withdraw it, but I need not, however, change my opinion as a Communist. That spectacle is a challenge. It is the challenge of Marie Antoinette: "If they cannot get bread, why do they not eat cakes? If they cannot wear shawls, why cannot they wear diamonds and pearls? If they cannot get ordinary broadcloth, why cannot they dress themselves in ermine?" Why cannot they dress themselves in purple and fine linen? These Christian gentlemen! They that do these things are in King's houses.

Workers Party Asks All Labor to Join in Demand for Unmasking of Private Detective Agencies

Foster First to Face Trial in Michigan

BULLETIN

CHICAGO.—The Michigan trial has been postponed to March 12. The report that Foster is the first to go to trial is confirmed. The demand for a bill of particulars has been granted.

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—The national office of the Labor Defense Council here announces that William Z. Foster, secretary, Trade Union Educational League, and editor of its official organ, "The Labor Herald", will be the first of the victims of the Michigan Raid to be put on trial. It heads this announcement on reports received from Michigan.

The trial of Foster is scheduled to start at St. Joseph, Michigan, Monday, March 5, postponed from Feb. 26, before Circuit Judge Charles E. White. Frank P. Walsh, the famous labor defender, will be the chief counsel for the defense. He will be assisted by Humphrey S. Gray, a prominent Benton Harbor, Mich., attorney. Counsel for the prosecution will include Charles W. Gore, Prosecuting Attorney for Berrien County; Assistant Attorney General O. L. Smith, of Michigan, and Max Berger, until recently an agent for the department of justice in Chicago, who has now been announced as associate counsel for the State.

Foster is perhaps the best known progressive trade unionist in the United States and has an international reputation for his constructive trade union program and for his established success as a labor organizer. It was largely thru Foster that the stockyard workers in Chicago and elsewhere were organized and under Foster's brilliant leadership the packing house workers built up a most powerful organiza-

Congress Must Unmask Detective Agencies or Stand Guilty of Their Vile Crimes

"THE WORKER" does not attempt to pass on the validity of all the charges made by Albert Bailin, alias Balanow, in the hearings held at Chicago incidental to the Michigan Communist Trial. But there is no question that Bailin has revealed such a rotten mess that every intelligent worker will ask, "What next? What will those in power do? What has congress to say?"

Bailin's charges show definitely the diabolical relations between private detective agencies and the government, federal and state. Burns is a high official of Daugherty's department of justice, while heading the Burns' Agency. Maclay Hoyne, hunter of radicals, was state's attorney of Cook County (Chicago) while acting as treasurer of the Thiel Detective Agency. These combinations deliberately held up big business interests for huge funds to finance attacks on the organized labor movement.

The national congress, and the legislatures of states affected should immediately inaugurate thoro investigations of the inside workings of all detective agencies. THEY MUST DO THIS OR CONFESS THEMSELVES EQUALLY GUILTY OF THE CRIMES COMMITTED BY THE BURNS AND THE THIEL AND ALL THEIR STINKING CREW. We make this demand on behalf of all the victims of the United States. To show the basis for this demand we publish a report on the Chicago hearings as prepared by the Labor Defense Council, the national organization that is putting up the fight for the victims of the Michigan raids. This report is as follows:

(SPECIAL TO "THE WORKER")

CHICAGO.—Albert Bailin, alias Balanow, former undercover man for the William J. Burns International Detective Agency, the Thiel Detective Agency, the Department of Justice and the Chicago Police Department, declared in the course of a startling exposure of detective-manufactured crime that Allen O. Myers, chief of the Radical Departm ent of the Burns Detective Agency, actually offered to instruct 1im in the art of bomb-making and suggested that he throw the bomb so that the Burns agency could arrest radicals and send them to jail or to the gallows.

This direct charge was made by Bailin during the taking of depositions by Frank P. Walsh, chief counsel in the Michigan Communist cases. O. L. Smith, Assistant Attorney General for Michigan, Max F. Berger, former agent of the Department of Justice and now on the pay-roll of the Michigan Attorney General.

Bailin's testimony has sent the detectives rushing into print to deny these charges, but they only succeed in contradicting each other. The Herald Examiner of Chicago in a leading editorial calls on the detective agencies to answer the damning charges made by Bailin. They have been paid with public money it declares. They have taken thousands out of the pocket of the people of Cook County thru the State's Attorney's office and the public is entitled to know how the money was spent.

Balanow was first hired by Flannagan of the Thiel Detective Agency in 1917 to join the Cigar Makers' Union and indulge in a window breaking campaign and incite the strikers to violence. He later learned that Charles Windfield, Business Agent of the Cigar Makers' Union was another Thiel Operative. He

"The Worker" Like Food for Hungry Coal Miners

Comrade Fred H. Merrick, District Organizer for Western Pennsylvania, writes: "The bundles of 'The Worker' came and were greedily seized by the hungry coal miners and read carefully, from first to last column. If they had been food, these starving men could not have shown more desire to get them. They smiled approvingly at the Russian symbol on the paper".

Red Lights Herald 10th Red Congress

By ANNA LOUISE STRONG
Staff Correspondent, Federated Press and "The Worker"

MOSCOW.—The 10th All-Russian congress of soviets, meeting in the sixth year of the Russian republic, marks a return to normalcy. The congress meeting only once a year now, instead of every few months. The political upheaval which made frequent meetings necessary no longer exists.

In the second place, the first act of congress, on its opening evening, was to approve, cheerfully and unanimously, every act of the government during the past year. There was no row about it. Everyone agreed that great progress has been shown and then they got down to business. The lookers who had come in expectation of some of the old revolutionary thrill went home at reasonable hours, declaring the sessions extremely dull.

The great auditorium of the Grand Opera of Moscow was set aside for the sessions. Mounted guards surrounded it. A year ago the streets of Moscow were dark, but now the front of the theater flamed with red electric letters over the whiteness of the snowy square. Tenth Session of the All-Russian Soviets. On the other side of the square a changing sign in white advertised the government's new internal loan.

It must not for a moment be imagined that the return to normalcy is a return to the common state of a capitalist country. On the surface, life goes on much as in other countries, except that the vast majority of industrial enterprises are in the hands of the state. One million workers are employed in state industries, whereas all the private industries taken together employ about 80,000 workers, and of these about half are in co-operative establishments or semi-state trusts.

In trade about 30 per cent of the operations are private, 70 per cent by state or co-operative organs. Foreign trade is completely in the hands of the state, as is banking. All the land is state property, but about 95 per cent of it is at the disposal of the peasantry.

The Russian situation is essentially different from that in any other nation. The political power is firmly placed in the hands of the working class. There is no pretense that equality exists, either before the courts or in making contracts with the government or in paying house rents. A worker will pay one-tenth of the rent paid by a capitalist in the same house for the same kind of room; a worker will be let off in court for a misdemeanor while a bourgeois (whose superior education should have taught him better) will be punished; a cooperative will get much better terms in the way of concessions that are granted to private individuals.

This is not democracy, and does not pretend to be. But this is the first time a society has begun its own destiny. That is the new thing in Russia, that is why this year, in spite of its surface capitalism, is more truly revolutionary than even the glowing moments of overturn and seizure of power.

For this is the first year of peaceful and uninterrupted construction on a new foundation.

Will Congress Act?

STATEMENT BY THE WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA:

The exposure of the methods of the Burns and Thiel Detective Agencies as made in the testimony of their former stool-pigeon Bailin is a challenge to the Congress of the United States.

When labor organizations have been accused of violation of law Congress has been quick to act and appoint investigating committees in answer to the hue and cry which the newspapers, controlled by the employing class, have raised.

Now there are facts to prove that the private detective agencies, supposedly helping to enforce "law and order," have actually urged acts of violence so that they might be charged against the labor movement. They have manufactured menacing letters in order to be able to blackmail those they serve into loosening their purse strings.

The accusations against the Burns and Thiel Detective Agencies brought out in the examination of Bailin by Frank P. Walsh, former chairman of the Industrial Relations Committee and Joint Chairman of the War Labor Board, do not stand alone. The Interchurch World Movement in its report on the great steel strike of 1919 presented a mass of evidence proving similar acts by these private detective agencies.

The head of the Burns Detective Agency is now head of a department of the government. In that capacity he has used federal operatives and federal money to interfere in the prosecution of state cases, thus adding another indictment to the charges against him as head of the Burns agency made by Bailin.

The Workers Party of America demands, in the name of that section of the labor movement which it represents, that Congress appoint a special investigating committee to uncover the crookedness, blackmail and provocation of violence by the private detective agencies. There is ample evidence to prove that other private detective agencies have followed the same methods with which Bailin has charged the Burns and Thiel Detective Agencies.

The Workers Party asks of labor organizations of this country to pass resolutions supporting this demand for an investigation of the methods of the private detective agencies.

Will Congress act? Or will it demonstrate again that it is the servant of the employing class, which in its frenzy to destroy the labor movement inspires such methods as those charged against the Burns and Thiel agencies.

What Kind of a Party?

By J. P. CANNON

What kind of a party,—that is the question. We are turning a new page in the history of the American movement and it is important that we agree amongst ourselves now as to what we wish to write upon it. Two fortunate circumstances have conspired together to give us this opportunity; the one being the favorable political development in America, and the

Foreign-Born Are Victims of N. Y. Lawyers

Revelations in congress that lawyers in New York City are growing rich preying on helpless foreigners coming to this country, gave added impetus to the international protest meeting planned for next Wednesday, Feb. 28, 8 p. m., at the Central Opera House, 67th St. and 3rd Ave.

Rep. Albert Johnson stated that New York lawyers with offices in a building he referred to as "A Den of 40 Thieves" are growing rich selling promises of congressional influence to aid in the violation of immigration laws.

Meanwhile new laws aiming at more stringent restriction which will require higher priced law breakers are being advocated in the same Congress.

The whole fight of the bosses against the foreign-born will be exposed at the mass meeting Wednesday night. There will be speakers from several nationalities as announced at the bottom of this page.

Jury Frees Philadelphia Communist in 15 Minutes

(Special to THE WORKER)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. After 15 minutes deliberations the jury in the case of John Dreher brought in a verdict of "Not Guilty". Comrade Dreher was arrested April 29, 1921, in Philadelphia along with 35 other comrades for distributing a communist leaflet, "The May Day of Revolution". The police, who had been notified in advance of the distribution, organized themselves to the size of 10,000 brave and fearless cops, and then they proceeded with unparalled daring to round up the 35 men. John Dreher was the first one to be tried in the case and the verdict of "Not Guilty" will undoubtedly have a decisive influence on the cases of the other 34 communists.

Thousands of dollars have been spent by the U. S. treasury in trying to locate the crown jewels of the late czar of Russia. The hunt ended fruitlessly in a Brooklyn graveyard. Perhaps the treasury department is thus trying to make up for the losses sustained by American business thru the state department's refusal to recognize commercial relations with Soviet Russia. Such is team work under the Harding administration.

Program Distribution Reaches 150,000

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Secretary, Workers Party.

More workers of this country have received first hand information about the Workers Party's position during the last four weeks than since the party was organized a little more than a year ago. Through the distribution of the party program in, which is set forth a clear statement of its principles 150,000 persons have gained a clearer insight as to the methods and aims of the party.

The total number of programs distributed went up with a jump thru an order for 15,000 received from Boston, Mass. Cleveland promises an order for another 15,000 which together with the daily order for from five hundred to a thousand or two will send the total up to close to 200,000 by the end of the week.

This figure is, however, not what it should be. There are now 20,000 dues paying members in the Workers Party and with an assignment of only 100 programs to each member the total distribution should reach ten times that figure. The National Office has set the goal at ONE MILLION COPIES.

The program is printed in attractive form. It is headed "The United States Today" and illustrated by four cartoons appropriate to the text. No better peace of Communist propaganda could be in the hands of the workers of this country than this program.

NO MEMBER OF THE PARTY WILL HAVE DONE HIS FULL DUTY UNLESS HE HAS DISTRIBUTED AT LEAST ONE HUNDRED PROGRAMS.

The programs sell at $5 per 1000 and 100 lots cost 50c. Every member should contribute that much to the branch fund for programs and a collective order should be sent to the National Office for enough programs to give every member 100 to distribute.

A political party grows thru work. It must take part in the struggle of the workers and it must spread a knowledge of its principles. Thru the program distribution every member of the Workers Party has the opportunity to do effective work to spread the knowledge of Communist principles.

Eager to Hear About Russia Today

The demand from party organizations for dates for the lecture tour of J. P. Cannon, Chairman of the Workers Party, indicates a great interest in the conditions in Russia today. Altho only the Eastern section of the country has been circularized by the National Office of the Workers Party, requests for dates are now coming daily from other districts.

Cannon was in Russia for over six months. He had an opportunity to study Russian conditions during the period of application of the new economic policy. He will tell from personal experience how completely the Communist determines the economic policies in Russia and the steps which are being taken to build up a Communist system of production.

The first six weeks of Cannon's tour will take him thru the New England states, New York, Eastern Pennsylvania and Maryland. Circularization of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and Indiana has just begun and meetings will be arranged in these states next. Following this arrangements will be made for meetings in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska.

Before the tour is finished Cannon will cover the Western and Pacific Coast states. The whole tour will take over four months and Cannon will speak at over 100 meetings at which tens of thousands of workers will hear the facts about Russian conditions today.

While the lecture which is being given most importance is "Russia Today", Cannon will also speak on "The Fourth Congress of the Communist International". This lecture, however, will only be given at a second meeting when two dates are asked for by the same city.

Cannon Shows Communists Turning New Page in History of the Movement in the United States

ther the intervention of the Communist International which has prodded the party forward to take full advantage of this favorable development.

We are fighting our way, as a party, back into the open. After long argument and a push from Moscow, we are undertaking to establish and maintain an "Open Communist Party." What kind of a party do we want it to be—large or small, broad or narrow? The next future of the party depends, to a large extent, upon the answer we give to this question.

It faces us at every turn. Every time we discuss a question of policy it has to be considered. New contacts, we are making with radical trade unionists compel us to think about it. It was brought to the front again by the recent declaration of Scott Nearing, in which he bowed a very friendly attitude toward us. Some party members, myself among them, have frankly welcomed the prospect of such additions to our ranks, on the condition, of course, that they agree to our general statement of principles. Others, with equal frankness, express fears about admitting those who may not be 100 percent "Kosher" into the party, which, according to their view, already has too many "centrists." They think the party suffers now for lack of purity; we say its main weakness is that it is not big enough and not broad enough.

Which point of view is correct? The answer depends upon another question, the one asked at the beginning of this article,—What kind of party? If you have the small party idea; if you think the "million masses"—to borrow a phrase from DeLeon—can be led by a clever clique, you will very naturally fear the influx of new elements. On the other hand, if you see things as we see them, you will prop the door wide open and, if necessary, kick out the window. We try to look at the American situation as it really is, and to shape our tactics accordingly. We see the best organized and most powerful capitalist class on earth; we see a highly developed labor movement and a strongly entrenched bureaucracy at the top of it, and we say: Only a big party can cope with this situation. The greatest danger, from which we must flee as from a pestilence, is the tendency toward sectarianism, the tendency to let the party degenerate into a small, self-satisfied, exclusive circle of narrow partisans without influence on events about it and without receiving any control from them.

Scott Nearing and the large group whom he, to a certain extent, typifies and symbolizes—former Socialists, former I. W. Ws and trade union radicals—are very close to us. We can assimilate the bulk of them if we really make the effort. They have no set prejudices against us; no opposition in principle. They are separated from the party mainly by doubt, hesitation and pessimism. And they lack confidence in the party. All these difficulties can be overcome by systematic work and a friendly, sympathetic attitude on our part.

For us it is a life and death proposition to draw in these new elements; to start a definite movement toward the party within the next year. The party has big tasks before it and it must grow bigger to meet them. We must get more members into the party. We must get them quickly. Our failure to do so, with external conditions so favorable, will prove there is something wrong with us.

The membership of the Trade Union Educational League is much broader than that of our party. It embraces many elements who are far from understanding the fine points of Marxian theory. Yet it works. It is causing campers more concern than any small group of pure disciples ever did. The reasons for its success are clear enough. One reason, and not a small one either, is that it set out at the start to be a broad movement, a sweeping movement, drawing in everyone who wants to fight the labor fakers and the bosses. Another reason is that it has its feet on the solid ground of reality. The revolutionary implications of its propaganda and activity are clear, and unmistakeable; but it does not deal exclusively or mainly in the ultimate. It is taking hold of the workers in the trade unions because it has something ready and do concerning the concrete problems which press hard against them in their daily lives. Incidentally, and for these reasons, the Trade Union Educational League is a revolutionary factor of great importance. The man in the shop will listen to a little talk about the final revolution from a man who works and fights beside him in a practical way; the propagandist who hurls an abstract proclamation at him from somewhere "above the battle" gets no attention.

Everyone in our party recognizes the great importance of the Trade Union Educational League. It is undoubtedly true that with many this recognition is as yet theoretical and platonic; it does not result in any serious consequences. It is sufficient now to note this. I intend to speak about it more fully in another article. We are dealing here with theories of the party; and nothing will be gained united on the question of the Trade Union Educational League—in theory—we can proceed from a common point.

The question is: What shall be the future relation between the party and the League, and what can we learn from the experience of the League? Up to the present time we have taken it as a matter of course that the League should organize the militant left wing of the trade unions into a broad organization while the party should aim only to be a small nucleus within it, supporting it in every way and trying to exert an influence on its general policy. This theory has been pretty generally accepted and has worked out fairly well so far.

Now, since we are "starting a new chapter in our work" we ought to ask ourselves whether this theory is the best one possible, or whether this relation between the party and the trade union left wing is necessarily permanent. Undoubtedly it was the only thing possible at the start, in view of the weakness of the party and the strength of the left wing. But I am of the opinion that we can and should now take a leaf from Foster's book. I think we should set to work with a tendency purpose of making the party as broad as the militant left wing in the trade unions and identical with it. The party should not be always a small nucleus within the left wing but it should aim to become, in time, the left wing itself.

Is there anything startling in this proposal? There shouldn't be. In almost every other country the situation which I have set up as a goal to strive toward has already been reached. The Communist Party being the only revolutionary party, has quite naturally become the undisputed leader of the revolutionary left wing in the world labor movement. Everywhere, except America. Here the party was so small, so obscure, so unequal to its task, that the leadership of the left wing passed over to a non-partisan body. We must admit that this non-partisan body has done a very good job so far, with our help. But he who is satisfied for the party to be a helper in a big enterprise doesn't think always the same. And he forgets its historic mission, which is, to be the leader of the majority of the working class thru the revolution. We are far from that now. Long before we reach that point we must prove that we are able, as a party, to lead the revolutionary minority in the trade unions. The party can fill this more modest role only on one condition: that the party grows much bigger, broader, and more realistic and practical in its work.

During the six months I was in Moscow I studied the tactics of the International on this point with special interest because I already had the opinion that our party was much smaller and narrower than it needed to be and that the fault lay, partly, with our own conceptions. That opinion was strengthened and confirmed by what I learned there. The expression "mass party", which the great leaders never tire of hammering into the young Communist parties, means what the words say. The communist party must not only aim to be the leader of a mass movement; it must itself be a mass movement.

It is a great mistake to think that all the parties in the Comintern are already thoroly Communist in their activity as well as in their programs. I had a pretty good chance to see them as they really are—the actions of one or more of them were being constantly considered by the Executive Comittee—and I came to the conclusion that there are few which are "purer" in the doctrinary sense than our own. There is no group on our whole party that ever went so far to the right as the center of the French party which represented at that time a majority of the members; or the ruling faction of the Norwegian Party. Yet the International did not start a "centrist" hunt. They tolerated the exclusion only of those individuals who were clearly anti-communist—bourgeois agents in our ranks. They dealt very patiently and carefully with those who, while far from being thoroughly communists, showed the will to move in the right direction. The International tried in every way to hold on to those who, as Zinoviev said, "want to be communists."

The meaning and the purpose of this strategy became very clear to me. The leaders of the Comintern start out with the idea that we must get large masses of workers into our party and still larger masses to follow its leadership. That is the main idea behind all of their manoeuvres and they never lose sight of it. We must have the masses or they reasun otherwise we are bound to lose, no matter how good our intentions. We must break ever larger numbers from the influence of the reformists and the bourgeoisie and get them under our influence. And we must swell the membership of the party to make it a "mass party." That is the sine qua non, the condition without which the victory of the proletariat is impossible.

Germany is a smaller country than the United States and the struggle for power there will certainly be no harder than here. Yet the German Communist Party, with its 250,000 members, is not yet large enough or influential enough for the task. Zinoviev suggested to the German comrades the slogan of "A million members for the party!" Those who have the small party idea in America might very profitably reflect on this.

Zinoviev stated often, in support of the small party theory, that the Bolsheviks of Russia had but ten thousand members "at the time of the Revolution." This is true—if you mean the Kerensky revolution, which put the bourgeoisie in the saddle. But during that same speech where he suggested the slogan to the German party, Zinoviev pointed out that the Bolshevik party had a quarter of a million members at the time it led the struggle for power in October. Of course, he made it clear that the influence of the party is not measured exactly by its size. The fundamental requirement is the support of a majority of the working class. The German Party may accomplish this with less than a million members, but it will be more apt to accomplish it with them.

It is claimed that there is danger in a conscious effort to broaden the party's search for large numbers of new members quickly, and an adaptation of the party's tactics to facilitate this end. These questions are asked: "If we run after members will not centrists, even opportunists, find their way into the party? Is there not danger that our doctrine will be diluted and the party lose its firm communist character?"

To the first question we must frankly answer, Yes. As the party broadens itself it will undoubtedly attract some elements who cannot be assimilated and whom we will eventually have to discard. But we will easily cope with that danger if we have confidence in ourselves. A healthy body does not avoid disease germs; it throws them off. Besides, that danger is only incidental; it is one of many that we cannot possibly avoid if we are going to be a serious party playing a serious part in the class struggle. The real danger before the American movement at the present time is that we may allow it to remain small and doctrinaire—a little clique of personal friends and partisans, running no risks because it is afraid of them.

The second danger, that our own doctrine will be diluted, we need not fear at all. Communist principles and tactics, as taught by the great leaders, are made of the stuff of life; they live and thrive on contact with reality. They have no meaning except as they are put to constant use and to every test. Communist principles are living things. They have no significance standing alone. They are made to mix with the mass labor movement and from that mixture fruitful issue come. If you believe in the principles and tactics of communism, put them to work! Give them a real chance to show how strong they are. The result will be, not to weaken and dilute the party, but to build and strengthen it and clarify its purpose and multiply our own faith and confidence a thousand times. The movement to broaden the party, in its membership and its activities, is not a departure from communist principles and tactics. On the contrary, it is based on the desire to really begin to apply them in America.

Broaden the party! That is our slogan. It represents in a word the will of those who are dissatisfied with the present but who are filled with confidence for the future. We believe that our party, after four years of experience and with the help of the International, is finding the right road. That road leads to a bigger and broader party, working and fighting successfully in the heat of the daily struggle, and extending its influence over an ever-widening circle of conscious workers. This is not merely a pious aspiration on our part. The conditions for the making of the kind of a party we want are already at hand. The conditions are at hand for the making of such a party within a comparatively short time. We cannot fail unless we ourselves fail to understand what it is we have to do

Tactical Education of Workers Making Rapid Strides in the Mining Industry

THE FAYETTE COUNTY CALENDAR OF SHAME!

45,000 Coke Field miners called on strike and invited to join the United Mine Workers of America on April 1, 1922.

August 28th. Coal companies of District 5 signed contracts and omitted Fayette County and even mines of companies near Pittsburgh which signed up.

Pittsburgh Miners' Relief Conference circulated resolutions among the coke field locals demanding help from the International in September.

Oct. 9th. Wave of protest so strong that International compelled to lay assessment of $2 per member per month for relief of strikers.

Jan. 18, 1923. International Board suddenly called off the Fayette County strike over the vigorous protest of the men.

Jan. 27, 1923. Representatives of the coke field locals voted to apply for their jobs under protest.

Jan. 29, 1923, members of all coke field locals applied for their jobs under protest and so reported to the United Mine Workers of America, being invariably refused employment.

Feb. 8, 1923. The little, spasmodic relief which was being doled out at the W. Pa. Connellsville headquarters was officially annulled entirely leaving about 25,000 people entirely stranded in the middle of winter.

Feb. 12, 1923. Mass convention at New Salem unanimously expressed confidence in Progressive Miners' Group and requested them to continue the leadership of the fight to compel the International to recall the strike and renew relief.

DEMANDS!

Immediate distribution of the balance of the $2,000,000 assessment raised of which but $615,000 has been distributed in Fayette County.

Replacing the $2 a month assessment to give relief to stranded miners locked out thru the treachery of the Lewis machine and recalling the coke field strike.

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—In no part of the labor movement of America is the tactical education of the workers making such rapid strides as in the mining industry.

This is largely due to the fact that the oppressive conditions among the miners forced them first among all the workers to organize into a great industrial union.

The association of men of all nationalities, languages, religions and crafts in local union meetings has developed a spirit of solidarity and progressivism without parallel in other trades.

However, the education of most of the miners has been a matter of many years. In Fayette County, Pa., where no union existed before April 1, the miners have had to learn in a few months what it took 30 years for other workers to learn. This rapid development has not only been of value to the miners involved but is a great object lesson for the workers in other crafts who can easily learn by observation and avoid mistakes that would otherwise be made.

Machine Tricks Employed

Realizing that the miners of Fayette were not acquainted with the tricks of the union machine as were the old members of the United Mine Workers of America the Lewis gang has been using methods in the last few weeks that are educational in their value to all workers.

Each move of the machine has required the application of counter strategy by the progressive elements. The best part of this education was that the Progressive Group from District Five who have advised the miners of the Coke Region were compelled to carry out their campaigns in the open before hundreds of miners where for hours and days they would publicly advise and state their reasons and debate the problems back and forth with the miners involved. Many times the coke field miners were suspicious of the advice of the Progressives but little by little they are being won over to the philosophy of the "United Front."

"Progressives" Not Disrupters

The trump card the machine has always used in various forms is the moss covered one that the Progressives are disrupters.

When the Progressives condemned the Cleveland Agreement and Attractie Agreements as a betrayal the machine called them disrupters. This charge was disproved by Progressives leading rebel miners back to work under protest while the rank and file wanted to remain on outlaw strikes.

When the Progressives condemned the desertion of the Fayette miners and demanded systematic relief for them they were denounced as disrupters. The charge was disproven by the fact that the Progressives took such an interest in Fayette County and raised so much for relief for them that the machine was compelled in the middle of October to place an assessment for two months for the coke field.

When the Progressives condemned the calling-off of the strike on January 18th the machine howled bloody murder and charged that a big dual movement was being launched. They even planted their agents to help it along. This charge was disproven when the Progressives accomplished the impossible and called a militant angry coke field miners to apply for their jobs under protest thus preventing an outlaw movement. They immediately raised the slogan of "Recall the Coke Field Strike and Put the Miners Back On Relief."

The Crucial Moment

The most serious moment proved to be not at the prospect of an outlaw strike as the Progressives had thought but after the movement had passed that danger point.

When the union had called off the strike and incidentally all relief and thousands of families were stranded in their snow covered tents because the policy to get work for strikers now locked out, faced the terrible fate of actual starvation. There was nothing to do but to organize a general relief committee and do so they could to get help. This was an unpleasant situation where the Progressives had to show what kind of stuff they were made of. They came forward with a proposition to organize a committee composed jointly of Coke Field Miners, Progressives and the Pittsburgh Fuel and Pittsburg Miners' Relief Conference. This was unanimously agreed on at New Salem, Jan. 27th. Of course millions of dollars did not immediately roll in. Then the stool pigeons of the machine saw their chance. They began their whispered campaign of secret slander. "Don't you know that J. A. Hamilton of the Miners Relief Conference is related to the notorious Alexander Hamilton, the trusted agent of the Pittsburgh operators!" This and numerous other lies circulated freely about the Progressives, and even John L. Lewis himself told a relief committee in Indianapolis that the Progressives would get them into the penitentiary These rumors circulated for the purpose of disrupting the relief movement began to have some effect.

Progressives Faced Charges Openly

Again the Progressives proved equal to the occasion. A conference was called at New Salem, Feb. 11th. The strenuous sessions of this conference which lasted two whole days were a model for all industrial unionists to follow. Here was a practical test of the "United Front." Progressives in control of a great movement, but some of the rank and file beginning to doubt the wisdom of following their leadership. The radicals could have played hypocrites and denied that they were fighting the Lewis machine to the death. Or they could have used mechanical control and, with the majority of the miners behind them split the rebel field into two warring factions. THEY DID NEITHER.

First they boldly challenged their enemies, critics and friends, to take up the names of each of the Progressives, one by one and recite every personal story and rumor that had been circulated. This required many tedious hours but proved the wise policy. Some very ugly stories, that few knew about, were dragged into the open. Every person that had a suspicion was compelled to air it and hear the reply. The result was that after a day and a half of rehashing and rehashing the rebel field into two warring factions. Vanderveer and the convention by a rising unanimous vote declared their unqualified confidence of the entire committee of 24 representing all factions involved in the struggle, except the machine.

Next the Progressives took the floor and stated they were radicals who were fighting for a change of administration and aggressive policies in the United Mine Workers of America and they were not going to abandon these policies. They pointed out to the coke field, however, why this should help the coke field.

THE PROGRESSIVES WENT SO FAR IN THEIR ADVOCACY OF THE UNITED FRONT AS TO PLEDGE THEMSELVES THAT IF THEY COULD COMPEL THE INTERNATIONAL TO RECALL THE STRIKE AND SEND SUFFICIENT ORGANIZERS AND PROPER RELIEF INTO THE COKE FIELD THEY WOULD IMMEDIATELY WITHDRAW FROM THE LEADERSHIP OF THE STRIKE AND WORK IN THE RANKS AND HELP TO MAKE THE STRIKE A SUCCESS.

The coke field miners could hardly believe their ears when they heard these statements and they were applauded and cheered. This was the crowning achievement of the two days' sessions and hundreds of happy miners went away clear in their own minds that they at last knew what the "United Front" really meant that they knew what real UNIONISM was.

The Progressives now await the next move of the machine confident that the arsenal of the United Front contains all the ammunition needed to destroy the evils of the treachery of the Lewis machine.

Boston Plans Concert

(Special to "The Worker")

BOSTON, MASS.—The Workers Party of Boston has an international concert here, March 3, at 8 o'clock, in the Dudley Street Opera House, 113-119 Dudley St., Roxbury. One of the numerous features of the concert will be a unique Anti-Fascisti song to be sung by our Italian Comrades, and every one knows that Italians CAN SING! There is not a worker living in Boston who should find himself, on March 3, outside of the Dudley St. Opera House.

In Memoriam

Frank J. Indof, Progressive Miners Candidate in the last election for board member in Sub-District No. 5, of District No. 5, U. M. W. of A., died in Mercy Hospital, Pittsburgh, Feb. 15, after 12 hours of terrible suffering.

Indof was martyr to the greed of the coal profiteers. He was working where the company failed to provide the proper protection from a bad roof. Slate fell and broke his back, three ribs and one leg and crushed his chest. Altho he was a magnificent specimen of physical manhood, the doctors immediately said there was no chance for him to recover. He was conscious during the whole time, and his last thoughts were for the success of the Progressive Movement among the miners.

Indof was a tower of strength among his Slovenian Comrades. He had a winning personality and even the reactionaries whom he fought mercilessly were on pleasant social relations with him.

When the Mad House Burns

Fire has swept an insane asylum at Ward's Island, New York City. The charred remains of 15 unidentified dead fill a morgue. The total list of hopelessly insane whose lives were snuffed out totals 27.

The kept press is horrified, as we are. City and state are on the job with six investigations, as they should be. But nothing will come of it. This is only "another fire".

It is confessed that other mad houses, state institutions of every kind, school houses, manufacturing establishments, in New York, as elsewhere, are mere firetraps, death nests ready to take life easily when flames break. It would cost money to wipe out these firetraps, and capitalism doesn't believe in spending money where it is not compelled to do so. Life is too cheap.

The silly, prostitute press wrote up sympathy for these maniac dead. Thus it helps to shield from the madmen in power in this insane capitalist world. Poincare, Bonar Law, Mussolini, Cuno, Hughes are no less maniacs than the inmates of the Manhattan State Hospital. The only difference is they are on the outside, ravaging the world with their madness. Today the Poles and Lithuanians slaughter each other; there are fires of war creeping over the Ruhr, the fire of war creeping nearer and nearer the mad house in the Near East. These are but preliminaries to the next great holocaust that the capitalist madmen are bringing upon the world, when the Ward's Island disaster will be easily forgotten in the midst of new millions of dead and maimed.

Firetraps will exist even as wars will continue as long as capitalism lasts. Weep not for the dead, but protect the living by smashing this maniac social system called capitalism, that maintains a firetrap for the whole world, ready and willing to sacrifice all in its mad flames.

The "Make the Party Grow" stamp will be a badge of honor which every member should be able to show on his or her dues card.

To show why the Party is asking every member to contribute 50c we take the following:

Today in the tier of states extending from North Dakota to Texas, the territory in which the most grain of the United States is produced, there is wide-spread unrest. The farmers in these states have supported the Non-Partisan League, but have found that it is not an instrument thru which they can gain relief. Mortgages are piling up high, income is lower than ever for the working farmers of these states.

The Workers Party at present has only a few scattering organizations in these states. The opportunity to build up a nucleus of farmers who will support the party program exists in these states now.

The party is planning to take advantage of this situation. It proposes to begin organization work in this tier of states. It proposes, as soon as there is an organization to support it, to issue a farm paper in these states.

This is one aspect of the work which the "Make the Party Grow" stamp will make possible. The stamp in a membership book is a badge of honor because it means that the owner of the book has helped to do this work.

The time is past when the party can depend upon chance circumstances to increase its strength. The Workers Party will grow because of carefully planned and aggressively carried out campaigns among workers.

WE WILL MAKE THE PARTY GROW!

TEN WORKERS SHOULD READ THIS COPY OF THE WORKER; KEEP IT IN CIRCULATION

THE WORKER will appreciate copies of the following issues: 212, 218, 219, 232, 242, 247, 253.

Foster First to Face Michigan Court as Trial Starts on March 12th

tion. It was largely thru Foster's efforts that the American Federation of Labor was induced to form a national committee for organizing the steel workers and when this national committee was formed, Foster was made its national secretary and treasurer.

In the brilliant campaign waged to organize the steel workers Foster was the predominating figure. It was he who undertook the major burden of the organization work and it was on him that the heaviest attacks were made by the steel trusts. Surrounded by enemies and assisted only by comparatively few trusted lieutenants, Foster lead one of the most import ant strikes ever conducted in America and in spite of the unsurmountable obstacles came within an ace of defeating that strongest organization of American capital—the Steel Trust. Ever since that time the Steel Trust, the banking trust, the packing trust and in fact all of the chief enemies of labor have sworn to "get" Foster and put him where he can no longer be of service to the labor movement.

For the last 18 months Foster has been national secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, an organization which has as one of its primary purposes the organization of all craft unions into single industrial unions of the respective industries. As secretary of the Trade Union Educational League and as editor of the "Labor Herald", its official organ, Foster has been considered by many as the leader of progressive labor movement in America.

It is no doubt because of his outstanding position in the labor movement and because of the enmity born against him by the steel trust, the packing trust and others, that Foster is chosen by the prosecution to be the first victim in the Michigan case.

From authentic sources comes the statement that individuals connected with the steel trust and with the Morgan banking houses are sending money into Michigan to support the prosecution against Foster. As has always been the case and as it now becomes evident that the Ballin exposure, the enemies of labor are always willing to spend large sums of money to send outstanding labor leaders to jail.

The Labor Defense Council, 166 W. Washington St., Chicago, Ill., the organization formed to defend Foster and his associates depends upon the labor movement for financial support. To enable it to carry on a successful defense, trade unions and individual workers are urged to support this campaign generously. Funds should be addressed to the Labor Defense Council and sent to the above address.

Workers! Join in Demand that Congress Turn Limelight on All Private Detective Agencies testified that Cooney, head of the Thiel Detective Bureau, organized a fake radical organization called "The Knights of the Red Star", wrote its constitution and issued propaganda which he had printed and distributed. Cooney faked a membership list of the "Knights" which was used to shake down bankers for funds.

"You know there is no such organization and I know it," declared Cooney, "but we will get rich investigating it and you will get your pay raised."

The Red Raids in 1920 were pulled off with the connivance of stool pigeons and agents provocateur, declared Bailin. The plan was to call the members together at a certain time and then have them roped in by the detectives. During a raid on an I. W. W. Hall in Chicago Bailin was arrested and taken to the State's Attorney's office and there questioned by Cooney and Flanagan and asked to turn State's evidence and take his jail sentence and that he would be well paid for it. He refused. State's Attorney Hoyne, who according to Bailin, was also a stockholder in the Thiel Detective Agency, gave him a recommendation with which he obtained a job in the military intelligent department at Camp Grant.

He was afterwards employed by the Burns Agency. It was about this time that Myers offered to instruct him how to make a bomb and urged him to throw it.

He admitted working for both the Thiel and the Burns Detective Agencies at the same time. He told Raymond Burns that he was working for the Thiel concern. "Go ahead," said Burns, "and get what you can on Flanagan. Turn in your Thiel reports here. We want to take the Thiel plants away from him."

He told how the Burns and Thiel agencies haggled over the victims of the Wall Street explosion and framed up weird tales in order to connect with the money which the explosion shook out of the bankers and big business men.

He told how Myers and the Burns' Agency offered him a commission to go to Russia and poison Lenin and Trotsky; Myers agreed to supply the poison and the necessary funds, and showed him a receipt for $6,000 ex-pense money sent to another agent in Russia.

He declared that the detective agencies wanted to "get" Edward Lindsay, Secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and William Z. Foster. The detectives urged Bailin to incite Fitzpatrick, Nockels, Foster, Ferguson and Ruthenberg to acts of violence.

He declared that "Jake" Spolansky, the leader of the Michigan red raids and head of the Chicago branch of the radical section of the Department of Justice, received $25 a day from the Thiel Agency for handing over government reports. This, Spolansky denies; but Bailin challenges him to make good his denial.

Bailin declared, that Flanagan, on the day before or the day after the Wall Street explosion instructed him to go to the Stagg Hotel in Milwaukee, register under the name of A. B. Rosenberg and there write a report alleging he had met a representative of the Third International named "Lechovetsky"—and state in his report that this "Lechovetsky" had informed him that "thirty Russian leaders had recently held two meetings and planned bomb explosions, assassinations and armed revolts."

Flanagan also supplied him with 300 Russian rubles. He was to mark them so that he could identify them as received from the mythical "Lechovetsky", who was supposed to spend $25,000 here fomenting rebellions and assassinating individuals. Bailin was instructed to send a copy of his report to Chief Garrity of the Chicago Police. In it he told of meeting "Lechovetsky" in the house of a man named Silbert in Milwaukee where the Wall St. bomb was discussed. On his return to Chicago, he said Flanagan sent him with another copy of the report to Assistant State's Attorney Henry A. Burger. It was up to Burger to get a Citizens' Committee together that would raise money to punish the alleged plotters.

State's Attorney Hoyne, who was at the same time Treasurer of the Thiel Agency, was trying to get an appropriation of $40,000 to investigate the "reds". He expected of course, that a fair share of this would find its way into the Thiel treasury.

Bailin also told how radicals arrested during the 1920 raids were permitted to escape by the Thiel Agency, "in order to help States Attorney Maclay Hoyne spend a $40,000 appropriation tracking them down."

He charged that five Thiel operatives constituted the propaganda committee of the I. W. W. reinforced by two Burns' men.

He testified that both the Thiel and Burns' agencies instructed him to join the I. W. W., the Young People's Socialist League, the Communist Labor Party, the U. C. and other radical organizations, incite the members to riot, distribute fake red propaganda and place in their hands rubber stamps and other supplies with which they could forge credentials in these organizations.

Flanagan of the Thiel Agency gave him a list of names to send to the Chicago Chief of Police. This was an alleged list of the membership of the United Communist Party and was supposed to have come from "Lechovetsky". The list of names was also to be sent to Isaac Ferguson with offices at 166 W. Washington St., so that his offices could be raided and the names found used against him.

Bailin was sent to track William Z. Foster in October, 1920. "I was told that the steel trust would give anything to have Foster put away. The plan was to lure Foster to a restaurant in Bloom St., New York, near the shop of the blacksmith who shod the horse that hauled the dynamite wagon in the Wall St. explosion, but Foster would not take the bait."

As Bailin unfolded the most amazing story of crime and frame-ups on the part of the Burns Detective Agency, now allied with the Department of Justice, and the Thiel Detective Agency, of which State Attorney Maclay Hoyne was treasurer, William J. Burns in Washington and his sons in New York and Chicago were frantically trying to discredit Bailin in order to save themselves from the wrath of public opinion.

Their explanations cogsisted in denying Frank P. Walsh of raising a smoke screen to cloud the issues involved in the Michigan trial which will open March 5, and charging Bailin with being a radical spy while another scion of the infamous family of stool pigeons stated that Bailin was tried and found guilty of treason by a Communist Court Martial.

Bailin defied Burns, Myers, Spolansky, et al, and said that he had further information that would reveal the true characters of the alleged protectors of society.

He further stated that Allen O. Myers who figured so prominently in St. Joseph as a lecturer on radical activities after the Bridgman raids directed him to go to the office of the Thiel Agency in New York and write a letter to the New York Postmaster couched in illiterate verbage threatening to blow up the Woolworth Building unless all political prisoners were freed. He was afterwards told to go to the I. W. W. headquarters and write a similar letter. The purpose was to show the similarity between the misspelling of the two letters. He was arrested for sending threatening letters thru the mails. It was after this arrest that he severed connections with the Burns Agency.

Bailin testified that Burns informed him prior to the last national election that in the event of Harding being elected, he would be made head of the Investigation Department of the Department of Justice and if Cox was elected, Allen O. Myers would get the job. He was sure to come out on top whoever won.

Bailin also swore that Charles Scully of the New York office of the Department of Justice is also in the employ of the Burns Agency. This amazing story is not the end. As this is being written Bailin is still on the witness stand.

The connection between the Department of Justice and the Detective Agencies, particularly the Burn's International Agency, between the private agencies, and the State officials and the plots manufactured by these detective agencies to scare the moneyed crowd into financing "Red Campaigns" was revealed in detail by Balanow. All efforts to shake this testimony were without avail. He was telling the truth and the denials of the stool pigeons only added emphasis to his story.

The labor movement is aroused over these revelations. The Labor spy has for long been a canker in the heart of the American labor movement. The plot of the detective agencies have sent many good union men to jail or sent them to their death at the hands of some detective-employed gunman. The Labor Defense Council, in its efforts to save the Communists who are scheduled to stand trial in Michigan for alleged violations of the Michigan Criminal Syndicalism act, from jail, has rendered a service to the entire labor movement of America in tearing the lid off this cesspool and bringing it to the attention of the American people.

Burns and Daugherty and those responsible for them must retire into obscurity and those who planned red raids and threw bombs, broke up labor unions and framed union men, must be punished. The Michigan cases have now taken on a new character. The individuals now on trial are overshadowed by the larger issues involved.

Frank P. Walsh, the noted labor attorney, is now putting the enemies of organized labor on the gridiron. The Labor Defense Council is financing the campaign. Money is needed. The bankers, the packers and the crooked detective agencies are trying to snatch the labor movement.

Let us hurl the defiance of labor into their teeth. Let the workers supply the funds to defend William Z. Foster, I. E. Ruthenberg and the twenty other workers who may spend the next five or ten years in prison unless the unions of war for their defense are forthcoming now. Send your contribution at once to the Labor Defense Council, 166 W. Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

Ohio Citadel of Open Shop War on Labor

By H. E. KEAS

(Special to "The Worker")

CLEVELAND, OHIO. — This state is the center of the "open shop" war being waged by the employers' associations thruout the country.

Fifty thousand Ohio workers were last year involved in struggles in which the "open shop" was the vital issue. Some of these struggles are still going on. These strikes and lockouts affected the following crafts: "Job printing trades in every large city in the state, the milk drivers and paternmakers in Cleveland, the electrical workers in Toledo, building trades in Toledo, building trades in Youngstown and Elyria, moulders in Alliance and Massillon, street railway workers in Dayton, Erie Railroad shop workers in Marion, engineemen in Nelsonville and brick plants. Attempts earlier in the year were made to force the open shop, with partial success, in various crafts in Zanesville, Portsmouth and Springfield."

There occurred, on Jan. 2 a spontaneous walkout of the workers employed in the cord-tire department of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., at Akron, comprising about 1,000 men who were forced into action by a threatened wage cut of 12½ per cent. Akron is one of the chief strongholds of the "open shop" employers, there being little or no organization among the approximately 60,000 rubber workers now employed in the industry.

But the citadel of the "open shop" is Cleveland, largest city in the state with a population of 800,000, of whom 300,000 are either working in or are in some way connected with the iron industry.

And it in the metal trades that the American Plan Association has most deeply imbedded its grip upon the lives of the workers, for in the thousands of plants and shops, large scale or smaller, the metal trades unions have little or no organization. These unions still adhere to the old craft fallacy of individual union autonomy, separate agreements (if possible to obtain at all), separate action by individual unions, or at the most a federation or alliance of crafts which is utterly unable to bring effective pressure to bear against one of the most highly organized combines in American industry. But the workers in the metal industry will learn what effective organization means. The lesson is being hammered into them. Regardless of the obstructions placed in their way by short-sighted or dishonest leaders, the amalgamation movement is having an ever increasing influence over the rank and file in this industry. And once the lesson is fully learned, the American Plan Association employers will have the meanest battle of their greedy lives before them—and eventual defeat.

Of course our dear American Plan employers do not "snatch bread from the mouths of workers!" They just hand them a nice, neat little wage cut of 12½ percent like the Akron rubber workers got, as result of which ONE-FOURTH OF THE SCHOOL CHILDREN OF OHIO ARE SUFFERING FROM MALNUTRITION RESULTING IN A DANGEROUSLY INCREASING PHYSICAL DISABILITY AMONG THEM. (Figures based upon reports of federal health service) IN CERTAIN PARTS OF THE CITY OF CLEVELAND, 142 OUT OF EVERY 1000 BABIES DIE BEFORE THEY ARE ONE YEAR OLD. (Statement of Dr. Hoag, Chief of Cleveland City Child Hygiene Bureau.) "American Plan," Bah! The aroused workers of this country will one day shove the insults of the "open shop" employers down their dirty throats!

(Note: This is the first of a series of articles on Ohio industrial conditions and the status of its workers, which Comrade Keas will send in to THE WORKER from time to time.)

Package Service to Russia

A package service to Soviet Russia has been started by the Friends of Soviet Russia, 201 West 13th Street, New York City, which will enable individuals and organizations to send food and clothing to the Workers' Republic. Wake Up Congress!

Copies of this issue of "The Worker," showing the alliance between organized government and the private detective agencies in their common war on the aspiring workers of the United States, are being mailed to the president, to every member of his cabinet, and to all the members of the national congress at Washington, to governors of all the states, and to those members of state legislatures whose names we are able to secure. All organizations of labor should support this campaign by demanding of congress and the various state legislatures a thoro investigation of all private detective agencies. Help wake up congress! Help smash the murderous rule of the Burns, the Thiels and their armies of detectives, spies and agents provocateurs!

Help crush these enemies of labor!

Bazaar for Defense Like Big Festival

Swinging into its last three days, the SECOND INTERNATIONAL BAZAAR, for the relief and defense of class war prisoners, at the LYCEUM, 86th Street and 3rd Ave. Feb. 22, 23 and 24, is assuming the proportions of a gigantic "Cosmopolitan festival."

Representative groups sing and dance in native, costumes, yielding true old world pictures even as they reveal the greater harmony and solidarity of workers massed in defense of class war victims.

For Thursday afternoon, there is planned a troup of Hungarian Folk-Dancers of established skill. Jeanne Lewenthal will sing Italian, Russian and Yiddish folk songs. Characteristic and classic dances will conclude the program.

The Ukrainian Chorus will take the rostrum on Friday evening in a list of folk songs, such as are rarely heard. Dramatic dance by Nell and Sadi Amter will be given and the Russian Balalaika Orchestra will continue the program. This will be followed by piano selections by Irving R. Koreuman, the Russian pianist.

On Saturday, the gala festivities will be wound up with a glorious Costume Ball in which all will participate. The feature of the evening however is the Finnish Band, scheduled to render several numbers of native compositions.

There are several other surprise features in store for the patrons of Lyceum which are of tremendous interest. All are designed to intrigue the patrons and furnish an engaging background for the Bazaar.

It should be remembered, that the booths will contribute much of color and enjoyment to the four-day fete.

These will be presided over by charming young ladies recruited from various nations and dressed in old world garb.

The variety of articles being sold at the booths is endless. Through the generosity of friends of the movement a great number of desirable bargains will be ready for sale. Shopping in such an atmosphere and for such a cause will certainly be a delight.

With final preparations speeding up, and the interest of so many patrons centered on the forthcoming fete, the Bazaar should prove one of the most successful events of its kind in the history of the movement.

Russian Art Captures Brooklyn Institute After Four Years

By JEANETTE GERSHANICK

About four years ago, a lecture on Russian literature was given in the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences. The lecturer was enthusiastic about the intrinsic possibilities of the Russian people. He showed how the Russian Soul, as he put it, reinforced with external circumstances brought the first working class revolution in Russia. He ended up with hoping that the next country to follow would be Ireland and soon the United States. He was hissed and denounced from the audience. The ladies left in disgust. When he finished the course of lectures, he was not invited to come again as the members of the Institute would not tolerate such anti-American sentiments.

It was the representatives of the good old Long Island families which maintain this institution who put the ban on the above-mentioned lecture and on Scott Nearing and others who had been invited in the past.

But how times change! The Brooklyn Museum of this Institute is now housing the Russian Art Exhibit. The halls and exhibition rooms echo the spirit of Russia. How they clash with the galleries of the past. The very colors, the themes, the methods of presentation are defiances hurled at the staid collections representing an older order. The Russian peasant, the artisan, their pastimes, awaken all to the realization that over the seas is a life which is strange to us but beautiful.

Ladies in their limousines and with their lorgnettes drive up to see what all this excitement is about. Their daughters from the finishing schools are "interested". They are thrilled. Are their ancestors turning in their graves because their bourgeois museum is being desecrated?

Will art help to bring this nation nearer to Russia? Perhaps! But we are not for the sympathy of these Long Island families. We are more interested in the large numbers of workers who are invading this museum Saturdays and Sundays. The attendants are astounded! They have not seen the like in many a year.

Those who could not see the Moscow Art Theatre should not lose this opportunity of seeing the work of Russia's revolutionary artists. The exhibit continues until March 5.

Last Week of "Moscow Art Theater"

During their eighth and last week, starting Feb. 26, the Moscow Art Theater" will be seen at Jolsen's Theater, in a double bill consisting of Turgenieff's "The Lady from the Provinces" and three acts from Dostoievsky's "The Brothers Karamazoff".

Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra" may be produced by the Theater Guild next season.

Smash These Shackles!

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

Efforts are being made to hang new shackles on the limbs of labor thru the adoption of governmental measures for the regulation of trade unions. Every such measure must be energetically fought by the organized forces of the workers, wherever they appear, whether in the national Congress at Washington, in state legislatures or municipal councils.

The most active champion of this form of industrial slavery is Samuel Untermyer, millionaire New York lawyer, and stockholder in Schwab's Bethlehem Steel Corporation and other great profit-taking concerns.

Great interest has been aroused by the hearings at Albany, upon hundreds of labor delegates present from all sections of the state. The press has devoted considerable space to this question, while Morris Hillquit, the "Socialist", and Untermyer, debated the matter before an interested audience under the auspices of the New York United Hebrew Trades.

In opening the debate Mr. Hillquit stated that "I do not consider Mr. Untermyer a reactionary or an enemy of labor."

Perhaps this declaration may soothe Mr. Hillquit somewhat in regard to his own shortcomings in the labor movement. For the labor lawyer type of reactionary is the worst type. He is the enemy most to be pitied. He is the foe that must be fought most bitterly.

Mr. Untermyer's regulation proposals would have the capitalist state function as arbitrator, even to the point of insisting members be citizens. He wants it to control union apprentices, initiation fees and dues, rules governing expulsion of members and other matters that would make the trade union merely the industrial vassal of the boss. The world then be no need for "company unions." All unions would be practically "bosses' unions."

Mr. Untermyer is a capitalist social reformer. He wants a "good capitalism" wearing the mantle of purity. He does his part by handing his wife a gift of several million dollars worth of steel stock, and then hauling the officials of a bakers' union, on New York's East Side, into court, because they have opened a bakery and cut prices to put a scab bakery out of business or make it come to terms.

It is of this hypocrite that Hillquit says, "I know he is sincere." Perhaps he is, but it is the damnable sincerity that fires and betrays, that stabs in the dark. It is the alluring sincerity that is harder to fight than the Cossacks of the mine owners, the injunctions of the railroad barons or the machine fist of the steel trust. It is the same savory sincerity of a LaFollette or an "Al" Smith that keeps the oppressed workers and farmers attached to the political parties of Wall Street.

Hillquit is not important here as a member of the Socialist Party. His attack on Untermyer's diabolical legislation is not even the assault of a Second International "Socialist." It is constituted of the whinings of the Tammany Hall politicians in official position in Gompers-controlled labor in New York city and state. And as such Mr. Hillquit is a danger to labor even as Mr. Untermyer.

Speaking for the New York State Federation of Labor, at the Albany hearings, it was Hillquit the politician for reactionary trade unionism, who attacked Untermyer's plan. Mr. Hillquit did not slough off this distinction in his debate with Mr. Untermyer even under "Socialist" auspices, since the United Hebrew Trades is considered at least "Socialist" controlled.

It, therefore, remains for the Communists, as usual, to direct labor in an intelligent assault upon such legislation as Untermyer proposes.

The question is not one of "justice" between the bosses and those who work for them. So it doesn't matter, Mr. Hillquit, that there are "some judges of broad human sympathies," who "realize the nature of the direct struggle of the workers with the capitalist state, owned and controlled by the capitalist industrialist system for which Mr. Untermyer stands, and which is the real enemy of the workers, never compromising."

Mr. Hillquit outrages and drags it in the mud every principle of Socialism, even as he did at the Cleveland Political Conference. Instead of helping to rally the forces of labor in the class war against the black hosts of capitalism, he dissipates their strength in "friendly discussion" over their most vital problems.

The German betrayal all over again. Instead of pressing forward and reaping the full fruits of the German revolution, the German traitors haggled over an eight hour day. So Hillquit absolutely fails to press forward to an exposure of the full meaning of this law, which would mean a complete unmasking of his friend, Mr. Untermyer.

Mr. LaFollette has been the champion of "regulation" of industry in Wisconsin for scores of years. The big capitalists of Wisconsin like "regulation" so much that they have adopted it as their own. It doesn't hurt them to regulate themselves.

How well "governmental regulation" plays into the hands of the bosses was seen in the decisions of the Railroad Labor Board that brought on the rail shopmen's strike last summer. The railroaders have learned their mistake and now demand the abolition of this misnamed "Labor Board."

No doubt Mr. Hillquit even as Mr. LaFollette, whom his party supported in the last election, still has his eye of capturing the capitalist state at the ballot box. So he does not now attack Mr. Untermyer's proposals as class legislation, for the capitalist class and against the working class. Yet that is the only labor attack worth while.

It is not an accident that the New York Times, kept organ of capitalism should be in agreement with Mr. Untermyer, when it says that, "Both labor and capital need regulation when they express their own interests to the prejudice of others."

The New York Times knows that the capitalist state will be friendly to its "regulation" of capital, that it will be hostile in its "regulation" of its class enemy, the working class. It likes this double-edged sword that cuts only one way.

To be sure there are even capitalists who oppose Untermyer's "regulation", because they resent even this small intrusion of the state into their private affairs. The state must ever be the obedient servant of capital etc. to be called into action only when needed, otherwise to remain in respectable retirement. Thus the "dis-hard" railroad owners, in the last railroad strike, opposed even the smallest intrusion of the state in the railroad strike, except when it was needed to wield the policemen's club. And in no struggle between capital and labor did Washington show itself more servile to the industrial power vested in the bosses.

Labor must take a definite hostile stand to Untermyer and all his kind, which includes Gompers and Hillquit in the final analysis. Untermyer's reform methods must be feared and fought more strenuously than the raw, outspoken oppression of Rockefeller, Schwab, Gary and their ilk. While Mr. Hillquit says Untermyer is not an enemy of labor, he is only confessing himself a decoy of this brand of capitalist reformism.

Labor must take its stand against its bosses and against the capitalist state as its class enemies. It must not submit to the least regulation by them. It develops its own powers thru its own organizations until it has the strength to establish its own workers government until all class distinctions can be wiped away and civilization proceed to the inauguration of complete Communism.

When Can We Believe Spies?

It is but seldom that a revolutionist can quote the opinions of capitalist editorial writers except as a condemnation of them. But here is a case in point—this true of the New York World, one of the most rabid anti-Bolshevik sheets in America.

For in the issue of Feb. 15, the World carries a deserved denunciation of the unspeakable William J. Burns and at the same time raises an interesting question: When can we believe the word of a spy?

After denouncing the holding of political offenders in prison for exercising the much-vaunted right of free speech, the World observes that New York has definitely repudiated this anti-Bolshevik hysteria. In reference to Burns the writer declares:

"Considering the testimony of Albert Bailin at Chicago, this is an especially fortunate time to retire from the business. According to Bailin he was employed by the Burns Detective Agency as an agent provocateur and was personally intrusted with the faking of bomb plots and the forging of threats. If he is telling the truth, the discredit cast upon Burns and the whole cult of conspiracy hunters is obvious; if he is not telling the truth, which is equally possible, the discredit is hardly less. This is the kind of man whose word was good enough with the Burns agency to convict others. When it comes to convicting Mr. Burns, however, Bailin is dismissed as a rattlesnake, a double-crosser and a chronic maker of affidavits."

It is clear to even the capitalist editor of the World that, "As the head of the secret service he (Burns) has more to gain than anybody else if the country continues frightened."

The logical inference that Burns would endeavor to keep alive the fear of violent destruction of the plutocracy as a mere matter of business does not at all impose upon the credulity of an intelligent person. Knowing the very low degree of intelligence possessed by Burns one must indeed be gullible to believe otherwise.

As to the truthfulness of Bailin, there is not any doubt that he is an accomplished liar. That is one of the first qualifications of a detective, and his long experience as a trusted employe of various private detective agencies and the Department of Justice is ample evidence that he is a prevaricator extraordinary.

To the extent that he furnishes leads to information that can be verified from other sources against Burns and his plug-uglies and morons, to that extent is his information of service to Frank P. Walsh and his associates who are to defend the Communists in Michigan. When dealing with spies and ex-spies the revolutionist knows at the outset that he is dealing with the scum of the earth, while Bishop Manning of the New York diocese holds that Jesus was the son of God and possessed all the attributes of God.

It is customary, when entering into a discussion to first prove the existence of the thing under discussion. It seems to us that the more logical procedure would have been to first establish the existence of God and then proceed from that point. That is fundamental and must first be established before intelligent people can get excited over such a verbal battle as that between the Reverend Grant and Manning.

The existence of any thing so all-powerful as a ruler of the universe is the subject of much investigation, and right here is where the preachers are eliminated. Modern science has definitely proved that the universe exists, not as the result of conscious purposive forces, but purely as a matter of evolution. We know beyond the shadow of any doubt that the universe never had a creator and that the alleged authority upon which the preachers base their unproved assertions is nothing but a mediocre compilation of obscene filth thrown together by sundry gangs of drunken ecclesiastics at the Council of Nicea, further elaborated at a drunken brawl, known as the Council of Constantinople during the Fourth century.

Years ago the holy men used to indulge in great theological debates regarding the number of angels that could dance upon the point of a needle. Not being able to produce any angels one priest's word was as good as another's; one took sides as a matter of faith, not as the result of conviction.

The Rev. Grant-Bishop Manning controversy belongs to the same low degree of mental development that characterized the combatants over the needle question.

Theological discussions have been raging since man first created his Gods in his own image. An incidental discussion to the one now being waged in the Episcopal church took place in Babylon two thousand two hundred and thirty years ago under the rule of King Khammurabi. The basis of religion was the worship of Marduk, son of the God, Ea. Orthodox religion held that Marduk possessed all the attributes of his God and father, Ea, while Manning held that Marduk was in reality a man, altho the son of Ea. The outcome of the controversy is not known.

Marx characterized religion as "the opium of the people." In the case of Rev. Grant and Bishop Manning, it seems that they got an overdose of their own dope, have gone wild and are running amuck. Their brawl is taken up by the hop heads on the capitalist press and a helluva rumpus is raised that is on a par with two chinamen in Pell Street arguing over whether a pink elephant or a white one walked the tight-rope the night before.

According to the New York Times the latest preacher to enter the Rev. Grant-Bishop Manning case is the Rev. Howard Murray Dumbell. Still there are those who do not believe in Divine Providence! We resist the temptation for further comment.

Call for May Day!

A May Day Conference is called for March 1st, at the Labor Temple, 243 E. 84th St., at 8 p.m., New York.

The call for this conference to form a United Front on May First was sent to all labor and political organizations of New York City. It read as follows:

"The First of May is International Labor Day and is observed by the workers all over the world as an expression of solidarity of the working class.

"This year, as in the past, the Workers Party seeks your co-operation for a monster parade and demonstration in Madison Square Garden. With over 800,000 organized workers in the city, at the very least 200,000 should participate in such a parade and then fill the Garden to its utmost capacity.

"A conference to formulate plans for carrying out this project has been called for March First at the Labor Temple, 243 E. 84th St. You are requested to send two delegates.

"Let us all, irrespective of our political or industrial belief, unite upon this day, and by our united strength show that from now on we mean to take the offensive against the Capitalist class.

"Hail, Labor International Holiday

"Long Live the United Working Class.

"Yours for an impressive and magnificent demonstration, Executive Committee of the Workers Party.

B. Lifshitz, Ex. Sec."

30,000 Waist and Dress Makers Vote on Strike Settlement

As we go to press a referendum of the 30,000 waist and dress makers, who have been on strike for three weeks against the employers' associations' efforts to establish scab conditions in the industry, is being taken.

A tentative agreement to settle the strike was reached Tuesday by a committee representing the Joint Board of Waist and Dress Makers, and a committee representing the Association of Dress Manufacturers.

The agreement signed by the union officials did not include the week-work system, which was the principal point involved. The despised piece work system will continue if the tentative agreement is ratified, in spite of the fact that the International is on record in favor of week-work thruout the industry.

The forty-hour week, double time for overtime, no Saturday or Sunday work, prices increased eight per cent and other small demands are incorporated.

It's Coming! Liberator Ball! Tammany Hall!

Here it is again. THE LIBERATOR COSTUME BALL! Once a year we invite our friends to a grand party—inspiring, hilarious, original. This year the party will be held at Tammany Hall, Friday, March 2nd.

On this night all nights all comrades will discard their working clothes, set aside all cares and worries, forget problems and disputes, step into a costume, any kind of a costume, just as long as it has color and will add to the beauty of the dance, and come to make merry with their comrades, with their friends.

The Liberator Costume Ball has been a red letter event every year for writers, artists, actors, celebrities in every field of endeavor. It was just happy joyous folk! The people you know, the people you have always wanted to meet and talk to, the leaders of the radical world, the speakers whose voice has thrilled you, the writer whose articles and stories you always like to read, the artist whose drawings never failed to make a hit, the poet whose verse you love, will be there to entertain you, and dance with you and talk with you.

At midnight there will be a grand carnival parade and a prize will be awarded for the most original and one of the most beautiful costume. The prize will also be awarded to the most beautiful girl. The Liberator artists will be the judges. Only those in costume will take part in the grand parade.

Come in costume! It need not be an expensive, gorgeous affair. No, just a simple blouse with a pair of bloomers, a colorful peasant costume representing the peasant dress of some nation. There will be comrades from all corners of the earth. They will come in costume. You will come in costume, too. Can you imagine anything more beautiful, anything more inspiring than this grand parade of joyous comrades, an endless flow of bright colors, gay laughing faces, confetti, baloons, colorful streamers? You will be one of us, Comrade. You will join in the carnival parade!

Get the date fixed in your mind, MARCH 2ND, FRIDAY NIGHT, TAMMANY HALL! But your tickets now! Come up to the office of the LIBERATOR now before you forget it—Room 405, 799 Broadway, and get your tickets. Price of tickets $1.00—at the box office, night of the ball $1.50. By MAX SHACHTMAN

There was a time when the natives of the South Seas lived in unsophisticated happiness, their culture at about the upper barbaric stage, enjoying their lovely climate, calm lagoons, chanting their plaintive melodies and tranquilly eating the boiled heads of their contemporaries. They were a magnificent people, beautifully developed in physique, as all travelers attested.

But their discovery and the inevitable expansion of industrial countries has brought an ever increasing change. Syphilis and beach combers, pearl traders and priests, military governors and whores, leprosy and authors are now their burden. The variegated sky-pilots, declaring that the Almighty disliked naked bodies (in spite of the Adamian precedent) opened the way for New Jersey cotton manufacturers and made the natives don dungarees and shirts. I suppose that in a generation or two, the South Seas will have produced, or imported, their own Billy Sunday, Irving Berlin, Kit Klux Klan, Dadaism, Kandinsky compositions, Harold Bell Wright, Adolph Zukor, Reno. Others Anthologies, Harlem flats and all the other concomitants of our noble civilization, which will entitle them to a place amongst us! The Apotheosis of the Polynesian!

All this is apropos of Frederick O'Brien's latest book, "Atolls of the Sun," (Century). With a rather sentimental felicity he describes his Odyssey over these sunbaked and surf-cooled atolls. His fine characterization, and the Conradian incidents he relates, give a typical touch of Irish loquacity. He wallows, figuratively, in glorious sunsets, torpid lagoons, splendid bodies and flowered parens. But even so, he speaks of "the rise of imperial hypocrisy upon which has decayed the Polynesian." (Out there: it's good while it lasts; but it won't last long. Where are our own Iroquois, Pawnee, Sioux and the rest of Cooper's noble savages?)

So, if you like Jack London, Conrad, Cooper and Stevenson; if, in your nonage, you devoured Dana; if you were caught in the flood which carried Melville from out of his undeserved obscurity; if you like the sea and its resultable isles and long for vicarious joys—there is every reason for liking Mr. O'Brien's book. I did.

Who Elected Who in Last Ballot Battle

A. B. Gilbert, editor of "The National Leader," official organ of the National Nonpartisan League, has a complaint to register against our editorial, "Not Enough Credit for All," in the Feb. 10th issue of "The Worker." In filing his complaint he proves our argument, that there wasn't enough credit in the last elections to go around.

The Nonpartisan League editor deprives the Farmer-Labor Party of all claim to U. S. Senator-Elect Hendrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, and even contends that the Minnesota farmers and industrial workers may go back to the old parties at the next election. So far as Victor Berger is concerned, his name was in the Nonpartisan League list that we saw, and our eyesight is still good. Gilbert writes as follows:

"Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 15, 1923.

"Editor, THE WORKER:—The editorial in your issue of Feb. 10, entitled 'Not Enough Credit for All,' is hardly fair to the organizations named. 'I can easily see where confusion can arise on these matters for those who are not in close touch with our field of work.

"Here in Minnesota, for instance, there is no organized distinct Farmer Labor party as such. What happened was that the Nonpartisan League and the Working People's League decided to use third party tactics in the election of 1922. The two organizations maintained their identity and the duly chosen delegates of the League members will decide in 1924 whether they will use third party or some other tactics.

"I think that if you will look over the Leader page again with that thought in mind you will note that we were careful to not take credit for victories outside of League territory, and even in territory where we could claim considerable credit. We did not say that Victor Berger's election was due to the Nonpartisan League.

"On the other hand, it is entirely proper for us to claim Henrik Shipstead, because it was the Nonpartisan League which brought him into political prominence and put him across in the November election. . . .

"In the matter of tactics you will note that in Great Britain labor has a labor party, but Lord Bankroll and Lady Astor get about all the country vote. In this plan of organizing the League A. C. Townley was the first man in any country to devise a practical means of disassociating a rural population from special privilege. This is possible by having the farmers organized in a group by themselves and make an alliance with labor. No other method of organizing will work here or anywhere else and I would suggest the importance of sympathy in labor circles for the important progress which we have made in the past and for possibilities of the future. The farmers do not beg labor for leadership and the leadership will be rejected if it is offered. What the League farmers are willing to undertake is political co-operation with labor, providing, of course, that labor does not make the co-operation too difficult.

"Very truly yours,

"THE NATIONAL LEADER,

"A. B. Gilbert, Editor."

We will now call upon Robert M. Buck, editor of "The New Majority," of Chicago, official organ of the Farmer-Labor Party for a few remarks.

H. M. Wicks, well known Marxist and party lecturer, will lecture for the Williamsburgh Forum, Sunday, Feb. 25, at 11 a.m. at 76 Throop Ave., Brooklyn. His subject will be: "The Revolutionary Situation in Europe." Admission free. Auspices: Williamsburgh English Branch.

Central Executive Committee of U. S. Communist Party Replies to Executive Committee of Communist International

(From The Communist, Official Organ, Communist Party of America)

TO THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL FROM THE CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE AMERICAN COMMUNIST PARTY

1. The Central Executive Committee herewith, with the statement that the C. I. has sent to the American Party for its guidance in transforming the Party into an open party, "The C.E.C. has decided unanimously to carry out without reservation the instructions embodied in the Statement. In fact, as the C.I. has already been informed, some time before the arrival of the statement, the C.E.C. decided in favor of converting the Party into an open party. The political development of the past five months, together with the experience acquired in the activities of the LEGAL POLITICAL PARTY, have convinced the C.E.C. that the open existence of the Party is possible. The C.E.C. is pleased, therefore, that its decision has been confirmed by the instruction of the C.I.

2. We believe that the C.I. has again demonstrated its understanding of the American situation and its ability to give concrete directions for the activities of the American Party. In the past year there have been three manifestations of this clear perception of the needs of the American movement: (a) The formation of the L.P.P.; (b) The unity effected at the last convention; and later—(c) the open party.

3. The representative of the C.I. did work that proved to be not only good but of tremendous value for the future of the Party. The unity achieved has been real, for the three factions have changed during the following months and disappeared as factions. The Theses of the Convention have destroyed the dogma that the C. P. of A. can exist only as an underground party.

4. We must inform the C.I. that since the Convention, the entire Party and especially the C.E.C. of the Party has worked in fullest harmony, without any factionalism, during these months there has been no factional voting in the C.E.C. For that reason, we cannot agree with some statements made by the American delegates at the Fourth Congress, who were not aware of the changed situation in the party. This disagreement applies to all the delegates. We must state that these statements were not the opinions of the C.E.C., but were a reflection of a factional spirit of factions that no longer exist. The majority at the Convention is today a convinced supporter not only of the Labor Party but also of the open party. The Convention minority is today the protagonist in the campaign for the protection of the foreign-born workers.

The former opposition comrades are most active party workers in the L.P.P. and are doing excellent pioneer work toward an open party.

5. We wish to inform the C.I. of the important reasons that have impelled the C.E.C. to work in the direction of an open party consistently and with energy. We state openly that the reasons are not organizational reasons. Dualism between the Party and the L.P.P. has been inconvenient, but it has been historically necessary for a long time. It also is not of significance to us that some centrists have refused to join the underground party. Political reasons have determined our stand. (1) The class struggle within the bourgeoisie, in which the petty bourgeoisie and the farmers are conducting an ever sharper struggle against the big bourgeoisie. The two sections of the bourgeoisie are in bitter conflict over the treatment to be accorded to the labor movement. The cleft makes it impossible to persecute the Communists with united force and with a solid bourgeois public opinion behind it, as has been done in the past. (2) The growing solidarity of the working class. The signs of this solidarity are: (a) the tremendous labor struggles; (b) the idea of a general strike in the minds of the workers; (c) the rapid development of the Amalgamation movement; (d) the growing Labor Party movement; (e) greater militancy of the Communists in the Labor Unions; (f) greater sympathy for the Communists and the L.P.P. in the labor movement, as, for example, in the defense and the L.P. Conference; (g) the common persecution of both Communists and militant workers; (h) the L.P.P. functioning more and more as a Communist Party.

The economic foundation of the political situation rests upon: (a) the offensive of the capitalists; (b) the crisis among the farmers.

Politically, the resistance of the working masses and the rebellion among the farmers were manifested in the following important events:

1. The formation of the agricultural block in Congress.

2. The Daugherty injunction giving political aspects to the strike of a million workers.

3. The November 7th elections.

4. The formation of the La Follette group.

5. The Labor Party conference in Cleveland.

6. The Railroad Workers Amalgamation Conference in Chicago.

7. The raid on the Communists in Michigan and the reaction thereto. During the war, retaliation on the state power took place to a degree unknown in American History, but this fact came into the consciousness of the workers only thru the Daugherty injunction.

All of these facts and events were in the process of formation before the Party convention, but crystalized themselves definitely after the Convention. Hence, just as we believe that in 1919 it was absolutely necessary for the Party to become an underground organization, we believe that today the time is ripe for the open party.

6. We trust that we will be able to carry out the reorganization of the Party without a crisis. It is possible that a few sectarian elements will leave the Party. But we are convinced that no organized faction will fight against the policy of the C.E.C. and the C.I., and that we will be able to lead the Party into the open without a split. For that reason, the C.E.C. decided unanimously that within a short time we shall hold a Convention of the Party and place the question before it. The C.E.C. will go to that convention with a clear and definite resolution for the open party and will demand for the C.E.C. a mandate from the convention to declare the L.P.P. the open party, and at the same time for the safety of this Party, to transform the underground Party into an underground apparatus. Up to the convention, by means of systematic education of the membership, we wish to convince them of the necessity of this policy.

7. The C.E.C. will carry out the decisions of the C.I. not only out of discipline but because of full conviction of their correctness. All of our policies since the Party convention have been in the direction of open work. We wish to mention only a few facts: (a) Defense campaign, (b) the Fur campaign, (c) Protection of foreign-born workers campaign; (d) Amalgamation campaign; (e) Communist program for the L.P.P., (f) fraternal affiliation of the L.P.P. to the C.I.; (g) the C. R. has been made the industrial department of the Party; C.Q.R. discussions has been declared Party discipline; (h) organizational form of C.P. made to correspond to that of L.P.P. by creating the same units in the Party as in the L.P.P., and eliminating all other units; (i) elimination of dualism between the two parties by combining the directing committees of the Party; (j) the C.E.C. took the question of the reorganization of the Party and of the open party to the Party Council and discussed it there on its merits, and obtained a nearly unanimous decision in support.

All of these steps were taken by the C.E.C. before the decision of the C.I. reached us and were based on the political development of the country.

8. We believe it our duty to inform the C.I. that if opposition to the policies of the C.E.C. and the C.I. has arisen in the past and should arise in the future, it is not due only to the foreign-born elements in the Party. We believe that it is necessary for us at this point to touch upon the question of the foreign-born in the Party. We agree with the C.I. that the foreign-born elements are good elements and ready to make great sacrifices. We believe that not only this fact gives them great importance, but rather the fact that the overwhelming majority of the workers in the basic industries in America are foreign-born workers. The foreign-born workers are the unskilled elements in all sections of the country. They are the most oppressed and most exploited workers. These most exploited elements of Europe, the "scum" workers, the most backward portions of the organized workers also are foreign-born. For instance, the majority of the 500,000 Bituminous Miners. Workers in the overwhelming majority of the unions of the needle trades, which comprise about 400,000 workers, are foreign-born.

11. It is of great importance to the Party to get into its ranks not only the mass of the American workers, but also the mass of the foreign-born workers as well. This is imperative so as to give no opportunity for another revolutionary party to be formed outside our ranks and consisting chiefly of the foreign-born. We wish to state that the foreign-born workers are just as good fighters as American workers. We need only quote William Z. Foster, an authority on the American labor movement, who says: "When the historic struggle with the steel trust came, the foreign workers covered themselves with undying glory. They displayed the very highest type of labor union qualities."

9. Despite the importance of the foreign-born for our Party, we are firmly convinced that the leadership of the movement in America must be in the hands of the American comrades. We are convinced of this for the reason that (a) only a C. P. dominated by American elements will bring about the amalgamation of a movement composed of American and foreign-born elements; (b) only American leaders can eliminate the prejudices of the American-born workers; (c) only American leadership can make the C. P. a mass movement and factor in the political life of the country, and can fight on equal terms against the conservative leaders of the bourgeoisie and of the trade unions, by their command of the language and by a knowledge of the conditions in the country.

For that reason, the C.E.C. is making the greatest efforts to draw into the Party the best elements in the left wing of the trade union movement.

We wish to point out that at the present time our Party is no longer dominated by the foreign-born language federations, but the federations are an integral part of the Party and are supporting it in every way. The composition of the C.E.C. is not determined by the demands of the federations for control; and we hope that, in the future, the language federations will serve eventually as propaganda sections for the Party as a whole.

We are also combatting a European psychology that persists to a degree in our foreign-born comrades, which makes them look to Europe and their native countries for inspiration. We are drawing them deeply into the trade union work and interesting them for binding the foreign-born workers closely to the Party.

10. The organization of the L.P.P. gave the Party an opportunity to do open work as never before. The publication of the movement in America during the past few months and the imparting of a more and more Communist character to the L.P.P. have widened the field of activity and increased Communist influence in this country. We are convinced that the inauguration of an open C.P., with its obvious simplification and steps, will broaden and extend Communist activities many-fold and make the open party a powerful factor in the labor movement and political life of the United States and the revolutionary proletarian movement of the world.

Central Executive Committee of the C. P. of A., J. MILLER, Secretary.

Paul Manko Comes Back from Prison His Spirit Unbroken

By MAX SCHACHTMAN

Paul Manko, convicted under the Criminal Anarchy Law of New York, in June 1921, has just been released by mandate from Governor Smith. He was arrested because he was alleged to have given a shopmate a circular of the Communist Party. He was sentenced to from 2½ to 9 years. After the first 12 months, the beastly treatment which he was accorded by the prison authorities was such that it was necessary to transfer him to the prison insane asylum. His condition also caused his removal to the tuberculosis hospital for a period of five months.

In spite of all this suffering, or because of it, the spirit of this brave young Russian was unbroken. When the news came that he was to be pardoned by the Governor, he wrote to his wife, saying, that if the pardon was conditional he would refuse to accept it! Such revolutionary integrity would be enough to convince capitalism's henchmen that they cannot break the movement of the workers towards freedom, if those henchmen had but one idea of brain-matter.

Comrade Manko has just visited the office of the National Defense Committee, which was instrumental in his release, and there is little doubt that he will soon find his place in the continued struggle of the workers. And the Workers Party's ranks are always open for such brave fighters as Paul Manko.

Party Shows Progress at Washington, D. C., Baltimore, Philadelphia

"Encouraging news of party activities comes from District 3, which embraces Eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, and the District of Columbia. The report is in part as follows:

Washington

In this citadel of reaction, where few dwell who have an idea organizing this side of the tenth century, we have succeeded in discovering fifty Communists and enlisting them in the Workers Party, and the membership is increasing fast.

A large number of Party programs have been distributed. Two meetings for Cannon have been applied for. The Jewish branch has collected thousands of dollars for the "Freiheit" and we are active in defense council work.

A good headquarters has been established at 1303 Seventh Street N. W., and we have a library with good literature supply.

Baltimore, Md.

Application is in for a Cannon meeting and we are endeavoring to organize a branch of the Trade Union Educational League and increase activity among English-speaking workers.

Philadelphia

The open forum is well under way. The second lecture is to be delivered by H. M. Wicks on Sunday, Feb. 25. The subject of his lecture for that date is "Prospects of the World Revolution."

A provisional committee for the protection of the Foreign Born Workers has been organized and the response of other organizations has been very good.

Preparations are completed for the Annual Concert and Ball of the local which will be held on March 2, at Eagle Temple.

The Day's Pay!

The Day's Pay is reaching its height. Branches of all federations and from all over the country have been sending in their reports along with substantial collections. Following is the list of branches whose reports have been received during the week ending Feb. 15. Because of the short time between the announcement of the Day's Pay Drive and the actual beginning, many of the branches were unable to get under way and were therefore unable to complete their drive by Feb. 15, the day originally set for the conclusion of the drive. The collection period has therefore been extended and all branches are urged to complete collecting the assessment at once and to have their report in the hands of the Labor Defense Council no later than March 1st.—

RUSSIA'S CHILDREN ARE CALLING

Their parents have given all that the First Workers' Republic shall live. WHAT HAVE YOU GIVEN?

The Soviet Government is able to supply sufficient buildings to house the needy children. But it is not yet able to equip and take care of these homes.

It costs $5 per child to equip and $2 a month per child to care for it. This includes food, clothing, vocational training and medical attention.

The Soviet authorities feed 380,000
The Russian Trade Unions 162,000
The Red Army 35,200
The Peasant Communes 59,000

HOW MANY WILL THE AMERICAN WORKERS CARE FOR?

Get your organization to pledge itself to equip, support and name a home. Send for plan.

Russia asks NO CHARITY. We ask that you GIVE NO CHARITY. We ask that you help Russia in her heroic effort to give her children the very best the country has to give.

Atty. Gen. Daugherty had ordered the release of Harry Bridges, "King of the San Francisco longshoremen," from the federal prison at McNeil's Island in Puget Sound. But political prisoners will remain in clothes at the Leavenworth U. S. Bastile and other penitentiaries.

Prisoners of the Class War

We pick up a copy of the latest issue of the "Upholsterers' Journal," official organ of the Upholsterers' International Union. Surely the Upholsterers are not in the heat of the class struggle, and their official journal is no doubt considered a dull affair.

But we change our mind as we read the first editorial. It is a plea for the prisoners of the class war, and the Upholsterers' Union has its own prisoners, Edwin E. Graves and Roy F. Hull, "still imprisoned in the penitentiary at Joliet, Ill., for an alleged conspiracy against the master class."

The editor continuing says, "The Wholesale Furniture Manufacturers' Association, of Chicago, which is responsible for the incarceration of Graves and Hull, is still pressing the iron heel deep into the vitals of our martyrs and they are gloating over the pain and misery they have caused the families of our two brothers."

This struggle of the upholsterers with their bosses has resulted in pushing them into a closer solidarity with all workers. They do not, as a result, appeal for their own prisoners alone, but as follows:

"Graves and Hull are still in jail.
"Mooney and Billings are still in jail.
"Sacco and Vanzetti are still in jail."

"Others just as true to our cause are buried alive in dungeons made of stone and steel and caged like the beasts."

The membership of the Upholsterers' Union feels why other workers are going to jail. They will unite with all labor in the struggle to secure their common liberation.

The "biggest gun" of our militarists fires only 22 miles. But they still have hopes of exceeding the efforts of Germany's "Big Bertha" during the war, with its record of 75 miles. Who said disarmament? Yes, for Germany, perhaps, but not for the U. S. A.

Republican "Free Discussion"

The National Republican Club, of New York City, like other capitalist institutions, believes in "free discussion." So it holds Saturday luncheons to settle the problems of the world. It invites speakers to come before its members and talk. That is what similar clubs are doing all over the country.

"Russia?" was the subject of discussion at the last gathering. All sides were to be heard. To be sure no Communists were invited. But Capt. Paxton Hibben, Executive Secretary of the American Committee for the Relief of Russian Children, had been requested to make a few remarks.

Hibben is a Russian. He is as much American as anyone can be in this conglomerate nation. He is a cousin of Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University, a powerful pillar upholding things as they are. Hibben is a graduate of Princeton and a lawyer. He was secretary of the American embassy at Petrograd, 1905-1906. He is a lot of other things respectable. But some members of the National Republican Club objected to his speaking and he was ruled off the list of participants in the "free discussion."

One of the star performers was Capt. W. B. Estes, former American spy in Russia, who leads the race with Burns and Daugherty in attacks on Communists. His hate for the Soviet Regime keeps the deposed czarists on their mettle lest they hate less than he.

Capt. Hibben says, "What the Republican Club really wanted to hear about Russia was the silly, unfounded nonsense that they heard from Capt. W. B. Estes." And that is all President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes want to hear.

Capt. Hibben is to be congratulated for being refused participation in this "free discussion." It is a waste of time talking to those who will listen to the lies of a spy, rather than to the truths uttered by one who is struggling to help save the lives of millions of hungry and naked Russian children. Their brains are petrified in the capitalist mould.

We are sure that the Captain Hibben who is denied an audience with Republican capitalists will be welcome more than ever to the growing masses of working-class militants. We thank the National Republican Club for showing, if that were needed, his worth to us.

French and Belgian francs were detlining on Thursday, Feb. 15, while the German mark decided to climb a little. Must be the German mark was getting a better hold to pull Belgian-French currency still lower. Watch the toboggan!

The Cossacks in West Virginia

All over the nation the Cossacks (State Constabulary) are being lauded by the bosses as a law enforcement organization of estimable qualities. Where no Cossacks exist, it is urged that they be organized and financed by the state governments. Where they do exist, it is urged that their numbers and power be increased. It is declared that they are a great protection for the farmers in the rural districts.

In combatting the bosses it is hoped that the forces of labor will make good use of the facts just brought to light regarding the West Virginia Cossacks.

It has been shown that the greater part of the $450,000 appropriation for 1921 was spent in two coal counties, Logan and Mingo, where the miners are unorganized. The other 32 counties cousness, "The New Republic," says. "It remaing to be seen unionized, have put in no call for the Cossacks. They didn't need them.

During the year ending June 30, 1922, the West Virginia Cossacks made 4,804 arrests, practically all of them in Logan and Mingo counties, the scene of the West Virginia mine war, where capitalism invoked all possible brutalities against the struggling workers. Among those thousands of workers arrested, there was Roy Rector, who has filed an affidavit, with hundreds of other miners, demanding that the state legislature abolish the Cossack System. Rector tells of the crimes of the Cossacks. He says that following the arrests, the Cossacks returned to the tent colony, June 2, at Lick Creek, and—

"cut the tents, destroyed the grub, poured kerosine oil in a churn of milk, broke up dishes and rocking chairs, so my wife and three-year-old baby had to go without anything to eat from breakfast until some time that night, and then she had to go to Williamson to the United Mine Workers' office to get money to buy something, and I was in Welch Jail at that time; and on the twenty-second day of the month they brought me back to Williamson and released me with no charges against me."

These Cossacks originated in Pennsylvania. Governor Pinchot is now in favor of reactivating that state. He says he is going to purify these human jackals. And that munthpiece of bourgeois right-

"Gompers works in close unity with Lewis of the miners' union. The current issue of his weekly press service carries a headline, "Miners Quit 'Red' Crowd," referring to the action of the Nova Scotia coal miners, already reported in these columns. Gompers would have the workers believe that the Nova Scotia miners have repudiated the Red International of Labor Unions, whereas they merely voted for affiliation and decided to carry the fight for complete affiliation of the United Mine Workers of America to the 1924 international convention. When Gompers sees "Red" he never does get his facts straight.

Just when the $500,000 Schoellkopf jewel mystery is being cleared, Mrs. Oneelma De Bonsdorff, of New Orleans, starts suit for half a million damages against Asa G. Candler, Atlanta, Ga., Coca Cola king. Can't some of our millionaires place a bigger price than $500,000 on their troubles?

400,000,000 Francs for Poland

That France has absolutely no intention of retreating in her imperialist ventures thruout Europe is again shown by her loan of 400,000,000 francs to Poland, her most obedient vassal on Soviet Russia's western frontier. This loan is made at a time when French capitalism is unable to pay even the interest on her debts to the United States and other war allies, when she faces huge deficits in her budgets, when her currency is continually depreciating, and tremendous sums must be raised for the military occupation of the Ruhr.

It was Poland, taking her orders from Paris, that proved most stubborn at the Moscow disarmament conference between Soviet Russia and the Baltic states. The Polish military machine on the east, as well as the French military machine on the west of Germany, must be kept in good working order, even if the Polish and French workers become industrial serfs and the peasants are robbed of the products of their fields in the process.

Those 400,000,000 francs constitute another burden added to the heavy load of debt that is sending the French government into bankruptcy and French capitalism into chaos. French imperialism rushes to its doom.

Doctors proclaim that a Paterson, N. J., boy is going to see thru a pig's eye grafted in place of one of his own. We don't believe that capitalist justice, even if she were not blind-folded, and if she had a couple of pig's eyes in place of her own, could see anything but the piggish rights of the present capitalist social order. Let the doctors try and make her do it. We'll gladly watch the experiment.

The General Strike Grows

The greatest and most significant development in the Ruhr situation is the strike of the French Communist miners. The "Socialist" and government forces at first sought to belittle this effort, but are now compelled to recognize its strength.

While the French miners, ostensibly struggling to improve their own conditions, are displaying this solidarity with their German comrades, the German "Socialists" with the government forces are combatting similar struggles on the part of the German Communist miners in the Ruhr.

To the "Socialists" the stability of their own national capitalistms is more important than international labor action.

The French Communists have issued an appeal to the miners, dockers and railroad workers of France, England and Belgium to join in movements against their respective governments. Only in this way can the workers of these countries prove to the German workers that they are against all European capitalism.

What the French Communists contemplate is the general strike against capitalism that the "Socialists" of the Second (London) International, and of the Amsterdam Trade Union International have always talked about in theory, but have always betrayed in action.

The German Socialist-Capitalist bloc calls such a Communist strike a "French plot." The French Socialist-Capitalist alliance denounces it as a "German plot." In the meantime, however, the workers will learn that there is but one plot, the capitalist plot against labor, that must be crushed thru the general strike and all consequent united action of all workers, of all nations, against their common oppressors. The recent developments in the Ruhr tend in that direction.

Thus do the workers rally to the call of the Communist International and accept its guidance in the struggle with world imperialism.

Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, as a sort of diversion, is taking fliers in economics at the Church of the Ascension in New York City. He declares that in the small towns no one cares much about the theology of the ministers, except perhaps a few old-ladies, and that what mattered "is the economic opinion of the ministers and what they say and what they do when there are disputes between the employers' associations and the working people." We would like to ask Dr. Grant, "Why limit the application of this universal truth to the small towns?" It applies equally well to the big churches on Fifth Avenue, New York. Come clean, Dr. Grant, come clean!

No Help for England

After several days of ignorant discussion the senate at Washington followed the house of representatives in overwhelmingly approving the proposed act for funding the British debt. The senate spokesmen for the international bankers made much ado about American generosity to England, leaving the impression that the passage of this act again places European capitalism squarely upon its feet as a going concern.

The debt funding act cancels $1,660,000,000 of interest during the next 62 years. There has been no report to the effect that Morgan, or any other Wall Street banker, has pledged himself to forgive interest on British debts owing to him. No doubt that $1,660,000,000 will go a long way towards stabilizing British debts to the American banking clique. This point was not even raised by the "progressive" senators. In fact, these "progressives" were divided even among themselves. Brookhart, of Iowa, and Capper, of Kansas, voting for the bill, with Borah, Norris and La Follette against. Thus even the hitherto intact "farm bloc" split. A billion and a half dollars during the next 62 years will not help British capitalism very much, if at all. Great Britain, under pressure of her millions of unemployed, is today paying out $110,000,000 monthly in doles to her jobless. These millions are out of work, and British capitalism is crumbling because British markets in Europe have been destroyed, and France's invasion of the Ruhr is helping wreck them still more. British capitalism with the British working class is being slowly starved to death.

The Bonar-Law government in England (the other day stifled all attempts on the part of the members of the house of commons to ask questions about the debt funding procedure. The chancellor of the exchequer said no questions would be answered until the American congress had acted. Let the Communist members of the British parliament raise a cry for a workers' government and the repudiation of all debts to American capitalism. To that appeal the workers of the United States must raise their own slogan of a workers' government to "Cancel the Debts!"

Invention here discovered that electric wand can dispel clouds. But it will take a powerful electric wand to dispel the clouds of gloom that hover over the industrial districts caused by French imperialism in the Ruhr.

Borah and the War Debts

William E. Borah, Senator from Idaho, went aboard the band wagon with the rest of the republicans and democrats on the question of the British war debts. He now wants it understood that the debt settlement with England shows Uncle Sam is not "the lady of the War," and that "no longer should it be said that we have driven a hard bargain."

This is the same Borah who recently demanded the cancellation of the war debts with the provision that Europe's militarist nations disarm. That was a good demand. Soviet Russia could stand by that. That is practically what the Soviet spokesmen demanded at Genoa, the Hague and Lausanne.

Borah, like all "progressives," adopts an advance idea as a platform from which to make a noise. But he deserts that platform whenever occasion warrants or demands. He has now deserted his demand for debt cancellation and the disarmament of Europe. He now argues that the United States is not a war Shylock because it demanded no new territory at the peace settlement. He explains that Great Britain and France got 2,486,000 square miles, rich with oil and minerals and other natural resources. If the United States received no territory she became the banker of the world, holding the greater part of the world's gold supply. She has her industrial machine intact, grabbing for new world markets. There are no U. S. colonies or mandates in the Near East, but the Standard Oil octopus is busy there, as in Europe, and elsewhere, supported by Washington's dollar diplomacy, in winning new markets and new sources of supply.

Borah should know, as he no doubt does, that American capitalists do not worry about holding title deeds to the lands of the earth, if they can make all nations their industrial and financial vassals. If title deeds are needed, at any time, new wars are readily declared.

This Borah incident again clearly reveals the fallacy of the position adopted by the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action. Borah is as "progressive" and militant as any old party politician in congress. But he will not hold to a working-class position, let alone a class position, even tho he may temporarily fall into one.

The workers will learn the lesson that they must raise their own slogans and carry on their own fights thru their own organizations, political and industrial. Borah is helping them learn that lesson.

Don't Pity the "Poor Railroads"

Workers on the railroads! Consider these figures for just a few moments. The owners of 18 large railroad systems pocketed more than half a billion dollars in profits during 1922. The exact figure is $507,675,273. That is after all taxes and other incidentals had been paid. That is $90,000,000 more than in 1921. Thus they increased their already huge profits of 1921, of $417,519,692, by almost another $100,000,000, even during the year that you struggled thru the greatest strike in America's railroad history, a strike that is said to have cost the railroads a quarter of a million dollars. Only one of these 16 roads has settled with your union as a result of this strike. Here are the figures:

Net railway income:

Railroad—	1922	1921
Santa Fe system	$39,938,083	$54,451,068
Baltimore & Ohio	23,735,006	21,853,547
Chi. & Northwestern	17,036,305	6,651,137
C. B. & Q.	25,152,173	29,145,007
C. M. & St. Paul	13,284,245	5,117,329
Rock Island	13,934,471	15,198,454
Erie	425,506	1,944,223
Great Northern	17,276,598	12,866,411
Illinois Central	25,121,128	24,396,770
Louisville & Nashville	17,637,714	3,874,426
Missouri Pacific	8,247,035	9,884,376
N. Y. C. System	92,877,088	91,089,927
N. Y. N. H. & H.	12,074,160	740,034
Northern Pacific	19,450,513	10,843,826
Pennsylvania system	80,182,706	40,951,096
Southern system	24,496,919	16,124,125
So. Pacific system	45,121,038	35,982,914
Union Pacific system	31,684,585	36,404,922
Total	$507,675,273	$417,519,692

That is what the railroad owners win thru standing together industrially, and thru owning the government, in city, state and nation, politically. This showing of the bosses should be sufficient to drive every railroad worker into the fight for "Amalgamation and the Labor Party", for the unity of labor in the fight against its rich, powerful and arrogant exploiters.

Don't pity the "poor railroads". Think about yourselves. And then act for yourselves.

The Federal Coal Commission is going to investigate whether "civic rights" have ever been violated during coal strikes. The commissioners should go on a hunt for "Nowhere," the place where "civic rights" have been upheld. All advice from outsiders should be sent to former Vice-President Marshall, and remember he doesn't want any "oratory or vituperation," which, translated, means attacks on the mine owners.

Precedents have been found for increasing the allowance of the Duke of York, second son of the British king, from $46,800 to $117,000 in view of his contemplated marriage. J. T. Walton-Newbold, the Communist member of the British parliament, pointed out that this was being done while millions of jobless were hungry. British royalty evidently believes in spending the money while they've got their hands on it.

Theatrical if not commercial negotiations may be opened between the United States and Soviet Russia. At least the dramatic critic of Hearst's New York American suggests that, "If Moscow implores us to send a play in return for those that Moscow sent us, we might send 'Icebound,'" a Harris production at the Harris Theater, New York. Hearst had better ask Secretary of State Hughes first.

Another Communist, Hagemeister, former Bavarian deputy, has died "under suspicious circumstances," in the Fortress Prison, Niederschönenfeld, the victim of the reactionary Bavarian government. And a "Socialist" president rules in Berlin. This is the same prison that holds the brilliant author of "Mass Menschen," the Communist, Ernest Toller, also the author of two other sociological plays.

Sir Ronald Storrs, governor of Jerusalem, has arrived in this country to secure Americans interested in Zionism that Bolshevism is not rife in Palestine. But then, Storrs is here no doubt to gather funds from rich Zionists, and they are not likely to place their funds on a forlorn capitalist hope. So draw your own conclusions.

Perhaps, if they hunt long enough, they will also find the crown jewels of the late Russian czar in the Egyptian tomb of Tut-ankh-Amen. We charge the United States treasury department absolutely nothing for this tip. The Egyptian cemetery is a least yielding up more riches than the Brooklyn graveyard.

BURNS' ORIGIN TRACED TO TUT'S TOMB

(By radio to the BOLCOMS)

LUXOR, Egypt, March 2.—Enormous excitement prevailing among the archeologists today when a typical Irish brick was unearthed from old man Tut's burial grounds. On the bit of antiquity disentombed were picturesquely inscribed delicate Egyptian hieroglyphics which Egyptologists at once started to decipher.

At first it was believed to be Wilson's 14 points. After careful scrutiny, however, the investigators declared that it was a gravestone inscribed by the Pharaoh's soothsayer.

They furnished the representatives of the BOLCOMS with the following translation:

"Here lie the bodies of the Pharaoh's three favorite pets: a donkey, a serpent and a jelly fish. They were beloved by King Tutankhamen for their thirst for human blood and thousands of rebellious slaves were executed to feed them. They have died from overeating, but their souls will live on forever and three thousand years hence they will transmigrate into a body of a ghoul. This ghoul by name of William J. Burns, will dwell in a far unknown land ruled by the Yellow Devil. He will have the intelligence of the donkey, the kindness of the serpent and the backbone of the jelly fish. He too, will feed on the blood of rebellious slaves and be too will."

MARCH SECOND

(To the tune "Tomorrow")

March Second, March Second,
How happy we will be
March Second, March Second,
At the Liberator revelry.
Lordy me, what a great delight,
When we'll see that electric light
Of a dignified Marxian shaking the "shimmy" with a flapper.
And the rest of his comrades watching the great event.
I know, March Second, a sweet little rebel
Will hold, enfold me as of yore
I just can't wait for the time to pass,
When I put on my fashionable evening dress,
And send me way to that Liberator Ball
MARCH SECOND !!!...

PERSONALS!

Comrade Engdahl, the editor of that part of the BOLCOMS which is known as the Worker, headlined his editorial on the front page of last week's issue with "Cancel the Debts."

I tried it, Louis, but my creditors object.

J. P. Cannon, chairman of the Workers Party, who recently returned from Soviet Russia, relates that Comrade Lenin expressed considerable astonishment that the BOLCOMS haven't caused a revolution in this country yet.

We were flattered to hear that Comrade Freeman, the talented typefather of the Liberator, liked our "Fourth Act To The World We Live In." It may interest him to know that the regisseur of the Moscow Art Theater decided to stage it as a special matinee on the first of April.

Max Lerner, who's on a lecture tour in New England, wires us that the BOLCOMS are progressing immensely out there. You can't even buy a herring without having it wrapped in a copy of the BOLCOMS.

The editorial staff and the board of management of the BOLCOMS grasp this opportunity to extend comradely greetings to the editors of the Nowy Mir and wish their organ "dolgoletie".

A PARABLE

(Dedicated to Dr. S. N.)

In post mythologic days there dwelled in a castle on the banks of the river Revolt, a semi-goddess by the name Esapé, the widow of Utopia. Upon her the Godess of Liberty bestowed the sacred mission of awakening the sleeping monster, Masses, by bathing him in the magic waters of the river Revolt.

In due time she became enamoured of Progress and soon begot him three sons: Chauvinist, Revolutionist and a third one whom we will unalegorically call Scott.

As years went on the river Revolt deviated from its course and wend its way far from the dwelling of Esspe.

The semi-godess grew more feeble, shunned her historic mission and left the monster at the mercy of her son, Chauvinist.

Chauvinist fearing the awakening of Masses kept him away from the river of Revolt and bathed him in the muddy lake of Reform. Revolutionist tried to interfere but was chased out of the castle by his brothers.

Progress then died. Esspee drowned in the lake of Reform. Chauvinist married Despair, Revolutionist is gradually dragging the monster to the stream of Revolt.

The only one undecided was Scott. He later realized his error in remaining with Chauvinist. He left him and is now on his way to his brother Revolutionist. The he's not there yet, nonetheless Scott is NEARING . . . .

Howat Goes to Pennsylvania

(By Telegraph Specially to "THE WORKER")

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Alexander Howat, former president of the Kansas coal miners, just released from the jails of his home state after serving several sentences growing out of his fight for the organized coal miners, will address a mass meeting of the Progressive Coal Miners of Western Pennsylvania, to be held at the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St., this city, Sunday, March 4, at 1 p. m. Howat will also address other miners' meetings in Western Pennsylvania as soon as the numerous requests for dates received have been arranged into a tour of the district.

Organize! Cry of Red Labor International

By ELLA REEVE BLOOR

Fraternal Delegate from Minneapolis, Minn., Trades Assembly to Second World Congress of the Red International of Labor Unions

When one glances at the mass of theses and discussions in all languages the delegates to the Second Congress of the Red International of Labor Unions had to digest, the task of getting down to hard facts as to the actual progress of the Revolutionary World Labor Movement would seem almost impossible. There were, however, big outstanding features, which will inspire us all to greater zeal, and confidence in our work.

First: Organization. From all countries, especially from England and Russia, came the urge to ORGANIZE THE MASS OF UNORGANIZED WORKERS. Not as a "tactic", but as a fundamental necessity. Contempt was manifest for all ultra-revolutionists who spent their days in talking instead of working.

Especially in America the inaction of so-called militants seemed remarkable to them. With a mass of exploited men, women, and little children threatened continually with unemployment, and low wages, the number of organized is incredibly small.

The workers of all other countries found it very hard to understand this. The lesson was "read to us" over and over, "Go home and work for a stronger Union Membership help everywhere to organize the unorganized". And we know what might have been done if such an ideal had been carried out in the Mesaba Iron Range, for instance, thousands of Iron Miners disorganized by the quarrels of their leaders, all fine, militant workers, now entirely without any union organization. The same condition exists among the lumber workers everywhere.

It seemed to us from America, that if we took home with us any lasting lessons from the experiences of the union men and women, it should be this, "Use every effort to build up the Union membership."

Second: Efficiency in our Unions. From Germany we heard of the strong movement for Shop Control

"Not Yet!" Frantic Cry Against Seating Workers Party Delegates in N. Y. Labor Party Conference

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

Against the demand of the Workers Party for admission to the Second Conference of the American Labor Party, of New York, those in control, evidently feeling themselves on the defensive, raised the hypocritical cry of, "Not yet!"

Thus the demand of the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action, to "Keep them out!" had been tempered to "Keep them out a little longer!"

New York's Conference, held Saturday and Sunday, at the new building of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, at 3 East 16th Street, was in the control of the Socialist Party. It had plenty of delegates on hand from its own branches, out of all proportion to its membership. It had others from the Workmen's Circle and from those trade unions controlled by a Socialist officialdom.

The first secretary of the American Labor Party (New York) was Julius Gerber, long identified with the Socialist Party, and its present secretary is Marie MacDonald, with similar affiliations. Thus, being firmly established on the "inside," it is easy for the Socialists to maintain an iron grip on the organization.

Under these circumstances it was [illegible] that at times the opposition [illegible] to greater zeal, and efficiency of [illegible] work.

[illegible] vent of the entire delegation. This vote came from delegates of trade unions, Workmen's Circles and even a few of the Socialist Party delegates who are anxious and sincere in their desire to build up a real united front of the independent political forces of the workers, not merely a "Socialist front.",

The Farmer-Labor Party delegation was small and inconsequential, following blindly the Socialist lead. What James Oneal, for the Socialists, said in his speeches, Abraham Lefkowitz, of the Farmer-Labor Party, was sure to repeat and second in his. This was most apparent in the joint attacks on the Workers Party, and in the demand for "democracy" in Soviet Russia in the treatment of counter-revolutionaries. The only other prominent Farmer-Laborite, Jerome De Hunt, entered but little into the discussions and business of the conference's sessions.

Those delegates from trade unions who were not affiliated with the Socialist Party, and whose sympathies were not with the Workers Party, were so few and inarticulate that they played practically no part except as in the case of Delegate Lincoln Jose of the Carpenters, to profess allegiance to "100 per cent Americanism" and antipathy to anything Russian. Such a delegate usually found a seconder in someone who has been in the Socialist Party "for 23 years".

Yet there is no denial that the so-called American Labor Party, recognizing affiliation with the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action, is drawing into it all elements in favor of independent political action in New York City, and that it is spreading out to build a similar organization thruout New York State. Such an organization cannot long exclude the Workers Party.

The first show of strength in the Conference was in the election of a chairman, Delegate Joseph Kucher, of the Amalgamated Metal Workers, receiving 52 votes as opposed to the 175 cast for Algernon Lee. The seating of the Workers Party delegates came up very shortly under the report of the credentials commitee on the credentials offered on behalf of Alexander Bittleman, J. Louis Engdahl, Ludwig Lore and H. M. Wicks. The motion to give the Workers Party delegation 30 minutes in which to state their case was squelched. It was decided to limit the discussion to two speeches from each side, of ten minutes each, from those seated. The case of the Workers Party was therefore presented by its sympathizers in the conference.

While all this was being settled Morris Hillquit and Victor L. Berger came in and were properly applauded. They had come to make speeches, but the delegates were too much interested in the Workers Party question to listen to them, and they left as this discussion got under way.

Delegate Kucher started off for the Workers Party declaring, "I came here to get together all of labor's forces declaring for independent political action of the workers. I came here to oppose sectarian action. We find forces in this convention seeking to create barriers between different elements in the labor movement. We must unite all our forces, otherwise we cannot call ourselves a Labor Party!"

Delegate Kucher then quoted from the report of the secretary, Marie MacDonald, that had been printed and distributed among the delegates,

Plan to Make This May Day Memorable

The Workers Party has issued a call for a United Front May Day Celebration. There is two months' time to prepare for this celebration, and it should be made the most memorable May Day in the history of the American working class. Every labor organization, economic, political or fraternal will be circularized in all the principal cities of the country in order that from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Canadian line to the Gulf the workers will on that day give an exhibition of solidarity that will equal the great demonstrations of the workers of the rest of the world on that date.

The slogans to be emphasized by the Workers Party are: "FOR THE AMALGAMATION OF LABOR PARTY AND A WORKERS' GOVERNMENT.

Party branches will ask local labor unions to send delegates for the purpose of organizing a May Day United Front Conference Committee that preparations can be made to enlist all organized workers in the demonstrations.

Investigate!

The present session of congress nears its close. No move is made to inaugurate the investigation of private detective agencies demanded by workers' organizations.

Frank P. Walsh, counsel for the victims of the Michigan raids, on the eve of the trial of William Z. Foster, at St. Joseph, declares of these spies and provocateurs of the Burns, the Thiel and other detective agencies, that:

"They infest the most conservative labor organizations. In industrial struggles they are the loudest champions of violence. When they are unsuccessful in urging others to violence they do not hesitate to commit the criminal acts themselves. The agencies which employ them boldly advertise the fact by circularizing employers. Alleged reports of spies and provocateurs are used to inspire fear in the minds of timid industrial managers."

This and much more. Yet congress allows these criminals to run at large, while men and women of the working class are being sent to prison, put on trial or hounded thru the land for their opinions. The sleekest, most—pot-bellied member of congress confesses himself no better than the most degraded tool of the Burns or Thiel agencies. Congress's failure to act admits they are of the same stripe.

"International" Machine in Despair; Lewis Gangsters Drive Merrick from Hall and Threaten His Life on Train

(BY TELEGRAPH TO "THE WORKER")

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Fred H. Merrick, Chairman of the Publicity Committee of the Coke Region General Relief Conference, was driven from a hall rented by the committee at Smithton, Pa., and assaulted by a group of "administration" organizers of the United Mine Workers of America. Later on board a Baltimore and Ohio railroad train his life was threatened.

The expected has happened. The United Front on the Coal Miners' battle-line has won. The President John L. Lewis-International "Machine" is desperate. Alarmed at the rapid spread of the progressive movement nationally in the U. M. W. of A. and the report that the discontent in the various districts is to be harnessed on a big scale and directed into intelligent action with a definite program which will discredit and unhorse the "gang"—the last weapon of intellectual bankrupts has been unsheathed. BRUTE FORCE IS NOW TO BE USED IN THE PITTSBURGH DISTRICT TO THE LIMIT.

Pittsburgh, where, since the Homestead strike armed thugs have created an atmosphere of fear and connivance among the wage earners, is to be the scene of riot and bloodshed which will frighten the timid workers and discredit the Progressive Movement.

Exposure Put Spy Agencies on Toboggan

By GEORGE MAURER
(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—What effect the testimony of Albert Bailin, given in his deposition in the Michigan criminal syndicalism trial, will have on the trial itself which is to begin in St. Joseph, March 12, cannot be foreseen. There can be no doubt, however, what beneficial effects this testimony will have on the labor movement.

For if there has been one arch labor baiter in America, that man is William J. Burns. And if there is one thing that Bailin's testimony has accomplished it is the ruining among those who have been in the habit of employing detective agencies to disrupt the labor movement, of Burns' reputation and the reputation and prestige of the Burns' agency thru which Burns has for so long been perpetrating outrages on the American labor movement. Along with the Burns Agency has gone the reputation of all of the notorious labor-disrupting" detective agencies.

Bailin's charges that the Burns Detective Agency and Burns himself have framed up "red plots" for the purpose of influencing employers' associations to pay for detective investigation, that the Burns Agency and other detective agencies are responsible for practically all violence charged to labor during strikes, that detective agencies are responsible for the bomb "plants", have been spread in practically every daily newspaper in the country. In spite of the expected denials by Burns and his associates these charges are now too well founded to be discarded as fabrications.

The labor movement has long known that detective agencies are among its worst enemies. The world now knows it it never knew before that the private detective business consists of arranging frame-ups for the purpose of extracting money from the employers and for "putting away" active spirits in the labor movement.

It cannot be proved that manufacturers associations and the like have knowingly invited criminal activities to destroy the labor movement. They have always been suspected of such activities, but those who are now simple enough to consign the whole detective agencies to fight their labor struggles will bear an equal responsibility with Burns and Co. for future crimes committed.

It is safe to say that the Bailin exposure has caused a panic among the owners of detective agencies. For every time they escape the just punishment which their crimes demand they are sure to meet with an almost total curtailment of the golden harvest they have been reaping. If the Bailin expose accomplishes nothing else it will at any rate put a crimp in the profits of the labor baiters from which they will never recover.

No one in the labor movement will mourn for the money losses incurred by the employers associations in paying for fake investigations or for breaking up radical organizations which never existed. No one will weep over property of employers destroyed by detectives in the pay of the employers themselves. But none who have the labor movement at heart will regret seeing the labor-baiting detective agencies driven out of business.

In Bailin's testimony was brought out that the activities of these private detectives were directed not only against the A. F. of L. and their organizations, but also against every kind of labor body. The Burns and other agencies it has been shown, have in their possession forged union cards of practically every trade union in existence. With these cards they have been sending their operatives into union meetings and into contact with union workers. No trade union, radical or conservative has been free from the attacks of these provocators. No trade unionist but welcomes this exposure as a means of ridding trade unionism of one of its worst enemies.

In England in the period after the war one of the worst labor baiters was Sir Basil Thompson then head of Scotland Yard, who held a similar position to that which Burns holds here as chief of the Department of Justice Bureau of Investigation. Thompson's activities were during that period particularly directed against the British labor movement and the growth of labor movement of Great Britain lead by the London Daily Herald conducted a determined campaign to rid England of Thompson. This was unsuccessful but for how that Thompson was forced to resign and the entire ring of British labor baiters was given a deadly blow which has never recovered.

As the Michigan case develops it becomes more and more evident that the struggle now being waged by the Labor Defense Council has taken a political aspect. The defense of 2 trade unionists in Michigan is a part of the struggle of the whole of the American Civil rights is only one other part

Trade Union Delegates File Protest Against Exclusion of Workers Party Delegates

Thirty-nine delegates are officially on record in the minutes of the Second Conference of the American Labor Party, of New York, as officially protesting against the exclusion of the Workers Party delegates.

The protest was presented from the floor of the convention by Delegate Joseph Kucher, of the Amalgamated Metal Workers. Delegate James O'neil, of the Socialist Party, immediately moved with a demand that the protest go into the minutes, when he surely knew that that was Delegate Kucher's intention. The protest declares that:

"We, the undersigned, trade union delegates to the American Labor Party Conference, held in New York City, Feb. 24-25, protest against the exclusion of the Workers Party delegates as an attempt to divide the forces of the workers on the political field, and as an act to sabotage the formation of a real, united Labor Party of all organizations that believe in independent political action of the workers."

Delegate Oneal had previously carried out a rather clever coup against the delegates wishing to voice their disapproval against the action of the Socialist Party delegation at the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action in December.

When he offered the resolution on this subject, while reporting for the resolutions' committee, a motion was immediately made to table it, discussion was shut off, and the resolution rejected. But immediately Delegate Oneal, under cover of replying to a statement that had been circulated among the delegates on behalf of the excluded Workers Party delegations, launched into another attack on the Workers Party, winding up with something incoherent about the "Burns Detective Agency".

The resolution that was tabled read as follows:

S. P. and the Cleveland Conference

We condemn most emphatically the conduct of the Socialist Party at the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action in having the Socialist workers and working farmers. The Socialist delegates under the leadership of Morris Hillquit fought against the organization of an independent working class political party—a Labor Party. They helped to exclude from the conference the delegates of the Workers Party and other delegates from the local unions because they feared their being favorable to the formation of a labor party. They voted against the recognition of the only workers' government in the world today—the Soviet Republic of Russia. They voted to limit the movement for the release of class war prisoners to those convicted during the war, thus ignoring Tom Mooney and the scores of I. W. W. and Communist workers convicted under the anti-syndicalist laws in the various states.

The statement of the excluded Workers Party delegation was as follows:

"The decision of the Convention of the American Labor Party of the City of New York in excluding the delegates of the Workers Party of New York City practically stated by a group in the Convention which is seeking to use the new movement of the workers and working farmers for independent political action, in order to advance its own political interferences at the sacrifice of the interests of the whole working class.

"These leaders well knew that the delegates of the Workers Party would energetically support the movement for the organization of a national independent political party of the workers and farmers and would strive to commit this Labor Party unreservedly to the protection of working class interests against the onslaught of the employers.

"We warn the workers against these same Socialist leaders, who by their action at the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action, strengthened the reactionaries, thereby helping to maintain the policy of "rewarding the friends of labor and punishing its enemies,"—that is, working through the primaries of the old parties of the employers. This makes advancement to public office easier for these leaders than their place in Labor Party ranks and farmers' councils where they engage in a clear-cut fight in behalf-of the exploited and oppressed workers and farmers. This clearly shows that these leaders are want political office and not a political party of the workers.

"The action of the Socialist leaders, who aided and shielded the expulsion of the Workers Party, shows how low that organization has fallen and how willing it is to prostitute itself in order to gain favor.

"The Workers Party stands for the upbuilding of a strong political party of the workers and the working farmers—a virile Labor Party. The organization of a Labor Party has the endorsement of a large proportion of the rank and file of the trade unionists and farm organizations the country over. The betrayal of this convention and the movement for a Labor Party will not stop the nation wide demand for an independent party of the workers and working farmers.

"Daugherty injunctions, strike-breaking Railroad Labor Boards, troops on strikes and the exploitation of the farmers are driving the city and rural workers to organize for independent political action despite the betrayal by reactionary bureaucrats. A Labor Party will be organized and the Workers Party as an integral part of the labor movement, will take its place in it."

Two hundred copies of the Workers Party pamphlet, "For a Labor Party", were distributed among the delegates, with a copy of the program adopted by the Second National Convention of the Workers Party enclosed. It was noticed that the delegates were anxious to receive this literature and take it home with them.

Amalgamated Clothing Workers League Active; Meeting this Saturday

A special meeting of all militants of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers will be held Saturday, March 3rd, Tasmo Hall, 85 E. 4th St. at 1 p.m.

At the first session of the new provisional committee a plan was adopted to reorganize the present machinery of the existing leagues so as to enable the militants to more efficiently take up the various problems of their trades. The proposition as formulated by the committee is in the main as follows:

1. The League units to be reorganized according to the present trade divisions as constituted in the various trade boards.

2. In accordance with this there shall be the following branches of the League in the N. Y. City: Cap makers; B. Pants makers, C. Coat makers; D. Shirt makers, E. Children's Wear.

3. The League units as above constituted to form an executive composed of men's clothing and children's wear.

Special provision will be made for representation of the foreign language locals.

Every militant of the various language and local units will come to this meeting in order to establish proper connection with his trade Secretary. Only, this specific matter of organization will be taken up at this meeting, it will meet promptly at 1 p.m. and adjourn 3 p.m. Avoid all other appointments if you are anxious to participate in the work of the League. This organization work is the preliminary to a big campaign for amalgamation

Demand Release of Prisoners!

Senator William E. Borah has postponed his intended trip to Europe so that he may be present at the meeting for the release of political prisoners, to be held March 11, 2 p.m., in the Lexington Opera House under the auspices of the World War Veterans.

The chief speaker at this meeting, which is free to the public, will be Senator Borah, who will urge the release of all political prisoners now being held in Federal or State prisons.

Hundreds of distinguished men and women, prominent in all walks of public life, have been invited to sit on the platform. The Federal Council of Churches has endorsed this meeting and is co-operating and which took pride in the fact that the first conference, last July, at which the American Labor Party had been organized, was a representative gathering. The report stated that, "These various types of organizations represented every phase of the modern labor movement and the conference demonstrated that it could rise above the sectarian divisions and unite in behalf of a common program for the workers." No mention was made of the fact that the Workers Party had been excluded from this July conference, even as in this one.

Workers Party Still Denied Admission to Labor Party in N.Y.

Delegate Kucher then continued, declaring, "You must unite all forces, including the Workers Party. You all know that the Workers Party fights for the workers and that it speaks for them. If we have any differences of opinion, we must thresh them out here among ourselves. Only as a united movement can we go forward as a vanguard of labor."

Delegate Oneal and Delegate Lefkowitz after him, spoke against the Workers Party in the same vein.

"The time will come when the Workers Party will be admitted here", said Oneal. "But that time has not arrived yet".

The Oneal-Lefkowitz assault was to the effect that the Workers Party was too radical, that its admission to the Labor Party coalition would frighten away the timid elements. This drift away from radicalism was shown in the admission of the Single Tax Party delegates and placing one of its members on the Executive committee, after the Workers Party delegates had been denied admission.

Delegate Oneal's trump card against the Workers Party again was: "You take your orders from Moscow and you will always remain sectarian as long as you take your orders from Moscow."

Delegate Benjamin Lipschitz, of the Amalgamated Metal Workers, also spoke for admission of the Workers Party delegates, pointing out that service the party had given the working class since it was established.

"If you are sincere in building for a Labor Party you must admit the Workers Party", he said. "You cannot exclude one wing of the American labor movement."

When the question came to a vote 58 delegates voted for seating the Workers Party delegates with 152 voting to table the motion against.

The conference showed is inconsistencies by demanding the recognition of Soviet Russia, not the three Workers' Republic and then condemning the Soviet Government for failure to release all political prisoners. Delegates Kucher, Kelly and Lipschitz sought effectively against Oneal's anti-Soviet resolution that had been carefully propagandized in the last two Sunday issues of "The Call".

The usual Socialist resolutions were adopted scoring the Arkansas outrages, pledging support to the victims of the Michigan case, and for the repeal of the New York Lusk Laws, demanding public ownership of the nation's coal supply, protesting against French occupation of the Ruhr and congratulating the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union on the outcome of the recent strike. The resolution on the Labor Party elements, demanding an all-inclusive "Labor Party" was countered by a statement calling for a state convention to be held in May or June.

A substitute was also offered for the left resolution for the protection of the Jacob-Ilson workers.

Delegate Morris Rosen, of the carpenters' union, made an effort to increase the number of trade union members on the executive committee. This was also failed. The new executive consists of 10 members from trade unions, ten from political parties, meaning the Socialist Farmer-Labor and Single Tax Parties, two from Workmen's Circles, two from Co-operatives, and one from the Poale Zion. Those chosen were as follow:

Oisip Wolinsky of the Fancy Leather Goods Workers, Charles Hoos of the Carpenters Union, Fleischele of the Printing Pressmen, Local 23; Phdip Umstader, president of Pressmen's Union 51; Ferry of the Railway Clerks, Fred Paulitsch of the Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers; Salvatore Ninfo, fist vice president, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union; Sam Cohen of the executive of the International Fur Workers' Union; Pete Monat, manager of the Vest Makers; Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and Joseph D. Cannon of the Paper Box Makers, representing the labor union group; Ben Howe, Abraham Lefkowitz and Jerome Gade Hunt of the Farmer-Labor party; George Lloyd of the Single Tax party and Samuel E. Beardsley, James Oneal, Morris Hillquit, Frank R. Crosswaithe, Morris Berman and Edward F. Cassidy, representing the political parties; Henry Fruchter and Meyer Gillis of the Workmen's Circle, and Jacob Panken of the Forward Association, representing the fraternal organizations. A. I. Shiplacoff of the Brownsville Labor Lyceum, representing co-operatives, and I. Zaar, representing the Poale Zion.

New York Printers Take Stand for Amalgamation

New York workers in the printing industries are issuing a publication called the "Industrialist" recently on a persistent agitation for amalgamation of all the unions in the printing industry. The paper is issued monthly and has a wide circulation throughout the U. S. and Canada.

In addition to the publication of the paper they hold regular meetings on the 4th floor of the World Building Park Row, New York.

Their next meeting will be held on Sunday, March 11 at which time H. M. Wicks will speak on the "Program for Amalgamation of the Printing Trades Unions." Comrade Wicks is an active member of the printing industry and was recently in Washington where he conferred with the officers of the International Committee for Amalgamation and will have information of interest to all workers in the industry.

At the March 11 meeting the members will also arrange to place every candidate for election to union office on record for or against amalgamation. The printers are determined that their officials must represent the membership in the rank and file and will brook no evasion of this important question on the part of those striving for office in the various unions. To get the support of the amalgamationists the candidates must be pledged to work toward their goal.

Boudin Speaks in Brownsville

Louis Boudin will speak on "Socialism and the War, 1914-1923", this Sunday, March 4, 8 p. m., at the Workers Hall, 1844 Pitkin Ave., in Brownsville.

Murders, Assaults, Rapes, Record of U. S. Troops on the Rhine

BERLIN.—Twenty-five murders, assaults and rapes are officially attributed to the now departed American troops of occupation in the Rhineland out of a total of 300 such crimes committed by the soldiers of France, Belgium, Great Britain and the United States.

The list was compiled from official records by the German department of the interior and submitted to the reichstag in response to an inquiry by a member of the body.

The 15 murders, 9 rapes and the assaults to rob credited to the American forces constitute one-twelfth of the total, which is out of proportion to the small number of Americans relative to the forces of the allies stationed in the Rhine valley. Publication of the report has affected the regret felt here over President Harding's withdrawal of Gen. Allen's command.

The offenses are given in detail with the action taken by the military superiors of the offenders. In most cases no record of any action was available. In a number of cases sentence of the courtmartial was subsequently reduced.

The double murder by Lieut. John Beggs of an innkeeper and of a woman whose only offense was that she covered the murderer's body with a cloth, was punished by a sentence of 20 years, later reduced to six years. The innkeeper, Heinrich Kaes of Sooberg, Wiesbaden, left a widow and one son. Mrs. Gross, the other victim, is survived by a husband and four minor children. The American authorities declined to grant compensation to the families. Egg had frequently stated that he would avenge the death in action of two of his brothers in the western front by taking two German lives before he left the country. He used dumdum bullets for the shootings.

A ten year sentence for rape and two other offenses was reduced to two years in the case of an American soldier who entered a widow's home in Hornhausen near Flammersfeld and tore the widow's daughter out of the bed where the two women were sleeping. The mother fled to neighbors while the daughter was raped.

The conviction is recorded of an American soldier who criminally assaulted an 11 year old girl near Bendorf. The sentence could not be learned.

No record is available of the action, if any, taken in the case of five American soldiers of whom four criminally assaulted a Niederissen girl while the fifth stood off rescuers with a revolver.

The complete list is given in Reichstag publication No. 3448, issued Dec. 16, 1922.

The Oil Can! The Oil Can Forever!

By JOSEPH FREEMAN
Editor, The Liberator

Finis! Another conference thrown into the garbage-can of history. The hollow egg-shell of Lausanne repose modestly among the broken bottles of Washington, Genoa, and the Hague. Very modestly indeed, for it did not expect much of itself; only fools could believe that the sonorous verbiage of diplomacy can solve the deep-seated conflicts between capitalism; and the pageboys of international finance who gathered at Lausanne are no fools.

Lord Curzon has packed up his Washburn Child has pocketed for some Oxonian supernumbery. Richard future conference his fake-humanitarian eloquence, to carefully cultivated in the columns of the Saturday Evening Post. Ismet Pasha, alone of all the delegates, except those of Soviet Russia, has told the truth: the capitalistic nations of the world do not want peace. He might have added, as did his Russian allies, that what they do want is oil.

The ostensible negotiations in Lausanne were about the Straits, the Turkish frontiers, and the so-called capitulations a beautiful word for rich concessions that the pitiful Ottoman Empire had granted to Allied capitalists. On all of these points save the last Turkey gave in. She agreed to the demilitarization of the Straits, allowing the allies to keep warships at her door, she gave up an important fortress at Gallipoli, she left undetermined the exact boundaries of her frontier. But she refused to accept economic slavery" by subscribing to "just contracts and concessions made by former regimes, especially during allied occupation"—in other words under ruthless pressure. And since Turkey refused to budge on the most important question before the Lausanne conference, the circus was over. For among those vast contracts and concessions were not only Mosul and Smyrna—the "open door" Britain, but, over and above all—Mosul.

Magic word! The eyes of good Christians are supposed to be reverently fixed upon Rome, of good Mohammedans upon Mecca, and of good Communists on—well, the proper place is not certain—but certain that the eyes of good capitalists are passionately riveted upon the oil wells of Mosul and among the most devout of these oil-worshippers in the Near East is our own dearly-beloved Standard Oil Company. And there are some facts for you to paste in your hat—not the one which you wear only on Sundays, but the one which you wear every day.

The first fact is the central fact of modern capitalist development. It is ousting coal as the king of fuels, especially in transportation. Oil-burning ships can sail as much faster as coal-burning ships; they reduce expenses and therefore increase profits. Oil is used exclusively in aerial transportation, its rival in land —gasolene—is used to run automobiles and motor-trucks. If there were enough of it, manufacturers would use it to run their plants more cheaply, ditto for railways; ditto for agricultural machinery. The capitalist group which will control the oil supply of the world will control the world.

Before the war the United States had almost a monopoly of the world oil supply. Its consumption has reached so high a level that it has been forced to import oil. If the United States continues its present consumption of its internal supply it will be exhausted in a comparatively short time. A worse fate threatens France and Great Britain. Experts have calculated that their present supply will be exhausted in two years.

The United States is safer. It still reigns supreme, producing sixty-six percent of all the oil in the world and controlling three-fourths of the world output. But the Standard Oil Company is making a desperate fight for the remaining oil wells on the globe, because these are situated at the center of world traffic, and who ever controls them controls the transportation of the world. Here is the international equation: Oil fields situated at the center of the world's traffic = control of transportation = sea power = world power. And world power is what the capitalist class of America, like the capitalist class of all countries, is after.

In the race for world power the United States is at present a little behind. One of the strategic oil centers of the world is Mexico. It is situated on both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and supplies oil to ships bound for South America, Australia, and the Polynesian islands. AND MOST OF THE OIL SUPPLY IN MEXICO IS CONTROLLED BY GREAT BRITAIN which also holds the ace-hand in Persia, the Dutch East Indies, Roumania, Mesopotamia, and Mosul. And the last two involve Turkey.

Toward these crucial quarters of the globe the Standard Oil Company has been stretching its vast claws. Its emissary, a certain Mr. Ambry, who was recently reported to be prowling about in Angora was not there to improve his literary style that he acquired in the employ of Secretary of Oil Hughes' sent his celebrated protest to the Allies after their conference at San Remo.

By the treaty drawn up at San Remo Great Britain promised to sell France twenty-five percent of the oil which British capital would suck out of Mesopotamia and twenty-five percent of the Persian oil supply. In return France agreed to allow the British to lay pipes from Mesopotamia and Persia to the French wells along the Mediterranean.

This was obviously a "combination in restraint of trade." Standard Oil of New Jersey got its government at Washington to send a protest containing seventy-one points—going Wilson seven better. Secretary Hughes demanded an "open door" for American oil concessionaires. Another fine phrase, though not original. Stripped of its rhetoric Hughes' proposal was for the United States, Great Britain and France to form an international oil trust for exploiting Mesopotamia and Persia to the end and to divide the swag as follows: Great Britain 50 percent, France 25 percent the United States 25 percent. The rest of the capitalists could do their work on water and lick the blooming boots of 'im that's got it.

Then came with ridiculous rapidity the conferences of Washington, Genoa and the Hague. The diplomats brushed up their silk hats, and their stock emotions for peace, democracy, disarmament and the general fact of business, as usual, went on behind the scenes. The Royal Dutch Shell Company, attracted by the grace of God of all British oil wells talked business with the Standard Oil companies, while French and Belgian plutocrats talked of forming a trust against these two.

The conferences resulted in nothing. Mr. Wells visited America, Gregory Tchitcherin's photograph appeared in the capitalist press next to Rudolph Valentino, but the oil problem was not settled. Meantime the new Turkey, under the leadership of Mustapha Kemal, swept the Greeks out of Turkish territory, and had the audacity to march into their own capital. British capital thundered, Britain was able to declare war on France, following the pre-war policy of Germany, sought to strengthen Turkey against Great Britain.

Then came Mosul! And there was Soviet Russia, the ally of Turkey and herself interested in oil for the reconstruction of an industry owned by workers. Another conference, Lausanne! The Standard Oil Company sent Richard Washburn Child, later Joseph C. Grew and Admiral Bristol. There was the usual Fourth of July oratory about humanity by Rockefeller's envoy, but his concrete proposals were

An open door policy namely the privilege of the Standard Oil Company to share the oil supply in the Near East.

2. The freedom of the Straits, namely, the privilege of the allies to control the most strategic naval point for the protection of their oil wells in Roumania and Mesopotamia.

On these points Turkey was forced to yield. But when it came to turning herself into a colony of the Allies by allowing them to control her economic and judicial life and to handing over her richest resources, she balked. As we go to press there are reports of Turkish troops massing in the region of Ismid and the Dardanelles. The oil situation stands where it stood before. The struggle goes on, and it is doubtful whether capitalist diplomacy will check it by conference.

committees. From other countries, the story of the building of the great union co-operatives. From Russia, came the story of the actual practice of the unions in running the business of Soviet Russia.

In fact the New Economic Policy depends almost entirely upon the efficiency and intelligence of the unions. If the Government enters into a contract with a group of individuals, which they call an "Industrial Trust" the shop committee of each shop or mine, restaurant, or big store must successfully watch the carrying out of the collective agreement.

If any part of the contract is broken, they have the power to call a strike at once. In one shop I visited a large Capitaker's Co-operative Factory, run by the government and the Capitaker's Union, the comrade who escorted me thru the shop, pointed out a slight young woman who was conferring with the shop committee. "She is real boss of our shop" he said. This Shop Committee has in every factory an office, like an office of a Board of Directors in a large corporation.

Third: Efficiency This is perhaps a part of the second-lesson. "A Workers' Government is a real fraternalism that must be felt to be really appreciated. When the two young Irish delegates escaped from prison where they had been thrown with 300 other unionists by the Kemalists Lossow, the President of the Congress read a declaration about the persecution of these delegates and the Congress welcomed them with great cheers. One of them addressed the Congress in his own Irish language. It was translated by Another.

There were many Italian delegates who had suffered much from the outrages of the Fascisti. One had been threatened with death on every return. The leader of the strike of the Longshoremen of China, one of the brightest young delegates. He intended to return to China to take the weapons of the powers there. Another was Tavara Hertz Sturm represented the working women of Germany, and Bride, of Ireland, came with Monte Burtis, of England. In our Chicago delegation we had Rose Worrs, of the Ladies' Garment Workers minority Bill Knudson, Jack Johnstone and Anne Swabeck of the T. U. E. L. Ella Reeve Bloor of the Municapolis Central Trades Council, Anna Louise Strong of the Detroit Labor Unity Council, Detroit Central Labor Union, George Hardy, of the Industrial Workers of the World nobertary, Kaehler of the New York Independent Unions.

By next year we feel sure many more Central Labor Bodies will send Fraternal delegates.

Let us sum up the gain of this great conference for the delegates, or rather the lessons learned to be translated into all our future work we would say then:

1st Work harder to organize the unorganized.

2nd. Strive harder than ever for Industrial Amalgamation of all crafts in One Industry.

3rd. Work for Efficiency in our union business.

4th Fight harder against Dual Unionism.

5th Get the spirit of Internationalism and the high courage of International Solidarity.

With this organized spirit, efficiency and intelligence, we shall build the United Front against the International Offensive of Capitalism.

miners, and to investigate for himself the lies that have been circulated about the Fayette County, Pa., strikers.

The district machine, acting under orders from the "International", set out to "get" Merrick. Knowing that s/he only way to stop the stream of damning publicity pouring out of Pittsburgh was to kill or cripple Merrick before it was too late, a trap was decided upon.

Feb. 12th, William Feeny went to the Ohio Convention of District Six, at Columbus, and there made a vicious personal attack for 30 minutes upon the Coke Region General Relief Committee, stating many falsehoods and attacking Merrick by name. Feeny said, they had enough organizers in District Five to take care of people such as he.

Feb. 19th, at Brownsville, International Board Member O'Leary boasted that there were 30 "organizers" in the district, and said they would stop the campaign of agitation that was going on.

It was well known that these "organizers" have been pouring into this district for a long time, some of them coming from as far West as Washington and Wyoming, and that many of them are ex-pugilists.

The plan in general was to appeal to the courage of the militants, anger them thru a systematic campaign of lies and slander, lure them to a mass meeting which they would secretly "organize", taunt the "Progressives" with cowardice, start an argument, develop it into a riot, kill and injure a number of people and charge it up to the Progressive Movement and frighten those who were timid.

Trap, Laid at Smithton

When a sub-committee of the Coke Region Relief Committee visited certain locals in the vicinity of Smithton, it was pleasantly suggested that it would be a good thing to hold a mass meeting at the German Hall, Smithton. The visitors suspected nothing and hired the hall which turned out later to be entirely under the control of the District "machine". The "gang" was notified to turn out in force. The coke field miners innocently invited Merrick to come and speak.

"Gang" Takes Possession

When the "Progressives" arrived at the meeting they found District Organizer "Tommy" Robertson in the chair, guarded by District Organizer "Jim" Malone, and the prize-slugger of the district and ex-pugilist, Board Member Mike Egan. At one side of the platform sat a 300 pound representative of "law and order," "Dunk" Larkin, the constable of Smithton. Larkin is driver boss at the Waverly mine and a pet of the "machine". During the last election he campaigned unscrupulously against the "Progressives".

The "gang" hid dangerous weapons around the platform under the watchful eye of the constable and where they could quickly get them.

Merrick was the logical chairman of the meeting, as the chairman of the publicity committee of the Coke Region General Relief Conference, which had arranged the meeting and paid the rent for the hall. However, when he saw the lay of the ground he decided not to interfere in any way but let the meeting proceed. The body of the audience were about equally divided. Merrick's followers didn't suit the "gang". Altho a number of non-unionists were in the audience this did not bother them. Suddenly "Tommy" Robertson rose and said: "This meeting is for miners and as "Brother" Merrick is not a miner I will ask him to leave the hall."

When Merrick stated that he held the receipt for the rent of the Hall, that the meeting was under the auspices of the Relief Conference and that he was a member of the American Federation of Labor, the whole "gang" made a rush for him. His organizers seized him and, assaulting and pushing, aided by their followers and guarded by Constable Larkin, shoved Merrick out of the hall. While this was going on the two factions met in the center of the hall and a riot would have occured except for the coolness of the Progressives who had been warned to avoid any bloodshed.

Merrick immediately retired from the premises. While standing in the road some distance from the building, Egan rushed up to him without provocation and using a vile epithet struck Merrick a full square blow in the face. He then ran back into the building and, seizing a club with a 20-penny pit nail thru one end or it, which he had hidden on the platform, rushed out to see whom he could slay. But no one was seriously injured and the scheme of the "gang" fell flat.

Threaten Merrick's Life

Aboard a Baltimore and Ohio train returning to Pittsburgh the "gang" attempted to assault Merrick and were only prevented thru the interference of the train crew. The torrent of personal abuse, profanity and vile epithets with which the "gang" tried to bait Merrick into a physical assault would tax the most patient. Finally Robertson offered Merrick $40 in bills to leave the train and fight him. Egan went up and down the aisles of the train loudly telling the passengers that Merrick was a Bolshevik and had made a speech at Smithton that day denouncing the government and the flag and trying to rouse mob violence against him. Finally the "gang" threatened his life when he left the train at Pittsburgh.

However, some business men on the train took the "gang" under their wing and warned them they were going too far. Under their advice they left the train at McKeesport after making numerous and violent threats.

What Is the Lesson?

Those not acquainted with the struggle in the United Mine Workers of America may ask what is the value of all this apparently useless struggle on such a plane. There is an important lesson in all this: To the intellectual thebrist of the class struggle this daily struggle of the plain workers is entirely too vulgar. Little do they know that the present daily struggle of the broad masses is vulgar and one reason the thugs and gangs are able to yet handle the majority of the trades unions in this country is because they are nearer to the daily life of the brutalized and oppressed toilers. The result is the message of the Progressives is too often lost in the details so far as the masses are concerned.

No advice to the masses is of any value until we have won their confidence by personally participating in their day-to-day struggles and thru that participation become mentally a useful vanguard of the working class.

Progressives Winning

In closing let it be understood the Progressives are out to win. They will wage their campaign without fear or favor. They are neither fools nor cowards. They will not be tricked into foolish encounters with thugs and blacklegs. Neither will they desert their necessary fights thru fear.

Above everything else the miners must make their display fights one general International fight thruout the United Mine Workers of America and put a new spirit into that great organization. Dualism must be fought at every turn. Victory is around the corner.

Can't Fight Bosses and Leaders, too

After fourteen days' conflict, the strike of the waist and dress makers affiliated with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union came to an end with the strike leaders compromising with the employers and virtually forcing the rank and file to accept the terms.

Before the struggle developed into open hostility, efforts were made by the officialdom to thwart the demand for week-work. From the first day of the agitation for the strike the principal demand was week-work in place of the hated piece-work system that enables the employers to restore sweat-shop conditions by putting the workers against each other and by constantly speeding-up. This system destroys the possibility of solidarity among the workers in the industry and also demoralizes the union.

For many weeks there were unmistakeable signs of widespread discontent among the rank and file of the workers. The demand for the abolition of the piece-work system was growing in volume.

In response to this demand from the rank and file many of the officials pretended to be in favor of the week work system. Julius Hochman one of the leaders of the Joint Board of Waist and Dress Makers pretended to be a radical and issued circulars and cartoons depicting the piece work system as a ritual slavery.

At a meeting of the General Executive Board of the International the representatives of the employers appeared and served an ultimatum to the effect that they would not consider the proposition of the abolition of piece work and the introduction of the week work system. After that the officialdom all of a sudden became more impressed by the attitude of the Bosses than the wishes of the Members and launched its propaganda in favor of week work.

When the actual struggle came this same Hochman did everything in his power to settle on the Basis of the Piece work terms of the Bosses.

Militants Carry On Fight

When it was apparent that week work was to be sacrificed by the officialdom in the interest of the employers, the militants began a tremendous agitation for the week work system and called upon the workers in the industry to organize for a strike. Sentiment was in favor of immediate action as the members knew that a strike could easily win and make impossible the return of sweatshop conditions into the industry.

To the referendum taken last Wednesday night the workers voted to accept the defatist agreement entered into by their officials and employers. As they considered the struggle hopelessly lost as the result of the criminal leadership.

Altho not in favor of week work they realized the futility of fighting both their own officials and the employers at the same time.

At the meeting at Webster Hall Wednesday night Hochman made the reports for the bureaucracy and the members demanded open discussion. It was apparent that the meeting was opposed to the report. Thugs employed by the machine came to the rescue of the officials and disrupted the meeting. Time after the gangsters sprang upon the platform and threatened to "beat up" Lena Goodman the chairman.

The press of the fellows, the Forward and its English language abridged edition, the Call, are praising the heroism of the leaders of this victorious strike that have so gloriously added one more to their series of victories. Many more of such "victories" and there will be no union.

What They Think of Us

Workers and their families have been classed as cats and dogs by the Community fund, delegates to the Minneapolis Farmers Labor assembly declare, in explaining why the affiliated unions have been instructed to ignore the Community fund's appeal for donations this year.

The Community fund allotted $4000 to the Trades and Labor assembly to take care of destitute workers and their families during the winter but stipulated that not a cent was to go to a family where the head of the family was on strike. Further conditions of the allotment were that no relief fund was to be collected by the assembly during the year.

The allotment to the society that wants not for the welfare of stray dogs and cats were $3690, and there were no restrictions as to what class of dog or cat was to receive aid.

The Trades and Labor assembly refused to accept the $4000 and are raising their own relief fund, which will be known as the Labor Communist fund.

A Lame Duck Goes to Peru

By WILLIAM W. WEINSTONE

The appointment of "Lame Duck" Poindexter, as ambassador to Peru, will surprise no one. The capitalists have learned nothing from the last election. The Harding administration goes merrily on doing the bidding of Wall Street.

Reactionary corporation lackeys are appointed to the Supreme Court; the shipping interests are being zealously supported; Daugherty is still in office. What care the profiteers and their political henchmen that Poindexter was repudiated by the people for reelection to the U. S. Senate only three months ago, as unfit to represent them.

What matters it that he is a "Lame Duck". "Lame Ducks" can be vigorous supporters of Wall Street, especially in Latin America where the financiers need executive officials to keep the country in subjection to the American bankers and Industrial barons.

This open and contemptuous disregard of the wishes of the masses as expressed in the vote at the last election clearly shows the character of American democracy. American Democracy is first, last and all the time for the capitalists. When the vote serves the bosses, well and good, it is respected. If not, there is the Executive Department of the government to nullify the wishes of the masses.

Should a legislature under pressure of the workers enact a law which might possibly hurt the profits of the capitalists there is the President with his veto, or the Supreme Court to undo the mischief. The whole system of American government as originally framed by the property owning Fathers of the Constitution and carefully preserved and augmented by the ruling classes since, has been made admirable to defeat the will of the people at all times, and keep intact the property rights and privileges.

The fantastic tangled system of checks and balances is nothing but an ingenious device to keep the government beyond the reach of public discontent. An instrument to serve as a counterweight to any positive action of the masses determined to private interests.

Only when the workers and farmers must change this form of government to one responsive to their will. The formation of a party of the Farmers and labor is the first step in that direction.

There was never a more favorable time than the present to extend the influence of Communism in the United States. This can best be accomplished by the building of a strong, virile party of Communism. The great strikes in three vital industries last year were only forerunners of ever greater struggles in the very near future. There is much important work to be done in order to prepare the American working class to intelligently meet the problems of industrial conflict in the near future.

As each industrial conflict tends more and more to become a political conflict, it is the imperative duty of all Communists to endeavor to build our Party as strong in numbers that we will be able to direct the militant sentiment of the working class into revolutionary channels.

To take advantage of every opportunity for Communist agitation we ask that every member spend fifty cents to "Make the Party Grow."

The "Make the Party Grow" Stamps are issued for the purpose of furnishing the finances necessary to enable us to carry the revolutionary message thruout the ranks of the entire working class of the United States.

Russia Warns Purchasers of Stolen Ships

By ANNA LOUISE STRONG
Staff Correspondent, Federated Press and "The Worker"

MOSCOW—Any private persons or foreign governments that buy the Moscow ships recently stolen from Vladivostok by Admiral Stark (leader of the refugee Whites do so on their own risk after the announcement by the All Russian central executive committee.

When the red army moved into Vladivostok Admiral Stark fled with his fleet to Japan, and put the boats up for auction. The Russian government issued an order to him to return, offering full amnesty to commanding staff and crews in case of voluntary submission.

Stark thought it better and more profitable to sell the boats and dispose of one ship, the Mansur, to the Japanese government for $13,000. He tried also to sell the transport Olindias.

The Russian government announces that it will not recognize any such sale and that it maintains the right to claim these boats wherever found hereafter. It demands of all governments whose ports they enter to take all means for detention of the criminals and the return of the boats, the staff and the crew to Russia.

The order may not prove immediately effective but as Russia is recognized by more and more governments the ships are likely to have a diminishing value which may discourage purchasers.

Vandervelde Hits Belgian Coal Strike

Emil Vandervelde, minister to the King of Belgians and notorious yellow Socialist, is still serving the master class of the world, according to a New York Times despatch from Brussels.

Belgian coal miners under Communist leadership, have declared a strike for higher wages and shorter hours. Vandervelde always anxious to serve the capitalist class, denounced the strike as an attempt to cripple the governments of Belgium and France because of the invasion of the Ruhr, and declares the strike a part of the Communist plot that resulted in strikes in France.

Vandervelde, notorious servants Vandervelde warned the workers against striking for a raise in wages on the grounds that the government would have to pay for it. If he had endeavored to understand Marxism instead of devising new methods of betraying the working class into the hands of imperialism he would not repeat the vulgar economics of the prostituted university chairs to the effect that workers are exploited as consumers.

In spite of the Vandervelde Eberts, Hendersons, Longuets and other flunkeys of capitalism the working class is turning to the Communist International and the Revolution.

Protest Sacco Frame-Up

WORCESTER, MASS.—A protest meeting against the frame-up of Sacco and Vanzetti was held in this city attended by several hundred workers, mostly Italians.

The meeting was arranged by the Workers Party and the speakers were William Simons, district organizer for the Party and A. Presti, editor of the Italian Communist paper, Alba Nuova, who was on a speaking and organization tour thru the New England States.

Special emphasis was laid on the propaganda to protect the foreign born workers in America from the brutal assaults of the minions of capitalism.

Moscow Soviet to Workers of All Countries!

The Moscow Soviet newly elected by the Red Army soldiers, and hand and brain workers of Moscow, sends its greetings to the workers of all countries. In the year 1923 proletarian Moscow gathers, firm and unshaken, around its tried and trusted leader: The Russian Communist Party. After five years of experience the working class of Moscow is convinced that, whether in conflict or in organization, the shortest way to victory is the way of the Communist International and its Russian section. After suffering the torments of starvation, cold, war, blockade, and devastation, the workers of Moscow are beginning to feel the approach of better times, of an improvement of their material position. We hope to be able to obtain even greater cultural and economic success during the next few years. The working masses of the countries of Europe and America, on the other hand, are exposed to the constant attacks of the ruling bourgeoisie. All the rights and liberties already won by the proletariat are threatened with annihilation. The terror of international fascism forces not only the Communist parties into illegality, but places even the broadest masses outside of the law. The proletariat is confronted with the untold misery of possible wars unless the bourgeoisie is made to feel the mighty arm of the proletariat at its throat. The cause of the proletariat can only be saved by the united front of the proletariat, by determined armed struggles against capital and by complete renunciation of open and concealed opportunism. The Moscow Soviet appeals to you, in the name of the hundreds of thousands of working voters, to tread this path, the sole path to salvation and victory, the path of international proletarian revolution.

Henry Ford Is "Worst Boss"

Editor, "Worst Boss Stories":

When a Slave asks for a job in one of Ford's plants you receive a load of paper and told to fill it out. When you read it over you begin to wonder whether or not you are already dead and Santa Peter wants to know whether or not to admit you to Hell.

You have to answer a pack of questions that read something like this:

Where have you worked for the last ten years?

Why?

Did you ever visit Switzerland?

Are you married?

If so why?

If not why?

Where is Kaffaraffe?

and a host of others.

After wading thru these questions the slave of by answers them satisfactorily, is hired.

Then he goes thru a pair of shoulders Lim out in eight hours a day! More than eight starts a day! An hour short and you're left a stable sense of contentment.

So it seems to me that Henry Ford Boss of the World is Henry Ford.

Hits 'Top Boss" at Mine

Editor, "Worst Boss Stories":—The worst boss I ever saw is a top hat at the mine where I am working at the present time. He goes to the hoisting engineers and tells him to hold the 12 o'clock whistle two minutes late every day and blows it two or three minutes earlier at 12.30 each day. The same thing occurs at 4.30 each day. He takes the place of one or two top men. There isn't a factor in him. If they are blocked on the incline at the shaft and there is a bunch of men there, the eager will let eight men go up and they will tell him not to send up anything as long as they are blocked. He will put a carfull of props on the cage to block the bottom completely so the men have to freeze for an hour at the shaft and a half at a time unless they want to climb up the airshaft which is wet, muddy and full of black damp. I would like to see a boss I never saw. I'm worst thing about my boss is a fellow by the name of Thomas Jenkins, who is employed at Coal Run No. 2 in W. Springfield, Pa.

American Negroes Present the Race Problem to the Fourth Congress of Communist International members and attend its sittings, the other as member who was elected in the first meeting permanent Chairman of the Commission.

The original draft of the Thesis (presented by the Chairman to the Congress) was returned, upon a motion by Comrade Radek, for "clarification and amplification", his criticism being that the document was "too Marxian in its phraseology". This pleased the American members of the Commission and the member from British South Africa, who were no ardelers for the "Marxian phrase" and who wanted particularly to make it a simple statement that any man reading a newspaper could read and understand. A small subcommittee, elected by the Negro Commission produced the Thesis in its final form, the full text of which, purported to be taken from the Minutes, follows:

Chairman: I call upon Comrade Sasha to report on the decisions of the Committee on the Negro Question.

Africa Next Imperialist Prize

Sasha (America): Comrades, the thesis on the Negro Question which was returned for clarification and amplification I shall now read to you and trust that it will be unanimously adopted by the Congress.

1. During and after the war there developed among the colonial and semi-colonial peoples a movement of revolt, which is still making successful progress against the power of world capital. The penetration and intensive colonization of regions inhabited by black races is becoming the last great problem on the solution of which the further development of capitalism itself depends.

French capitalism clearly recognizes that the power of French post-war imperialism will be able to maintain itself only thru the creation of a French African Empire, linked up by a Trans-Sahara Railway. America's financial magnates (who are exploiting 12,000,000 Negroes at home) are now entering on a peaceful penetration of Africa.

How Britain for her part dreads the menace to her position in Africa is shown by the extreme measures taken to crush the Rand Strike.

Just as in the Pacific the danger of another world war has become acute owing to the competition of the imperialist powers there, so Africa looms ominously as the object of their rival ambitions.

Negro Workers Aroused

Moreover, the war, the Russian Revolution and the great movements of revolt against Imperialism on the part of the Asiatic and Mussulman nationalities have roused the consciousness of millions of the Negro race whom capitalism has oppressed and degraded beyond all others for hundreds of years, not only in Africa, but perhaps even more in America.

American Negro Has Important Role

2. The history of the Negro in America, his work for, as important role in the liberation struggle of the entire African race. Three hundred years ago the American Negro was torn from his native African soil, brought in slave ships under the most cruel and indescribable conditions and sold into slavery.

For two hundred and fifty years he toiled a chattel slave under the lash of the American overseer. His labor cleared the forest, built the roads, raised the cotton, laid the railroad tracks and supported the Southern aristocracy. His reward was poverty, illiteracy, degradation and misery. The Negro was an all-round slave. He rebelled. His history is rich in rebellion, insurrection, underground methods of securing liberty; but his struggles were barbarously crushed. He was tortured into submission and the bourgeois press and religion justified his slavery.

When chattel slavery became an obstacle to the full and free development of America on the basis of capitalism, then chattel slavery crashed with wage slavery, chattel slavery had to go.

The Civil War, which was not a war to free the Negro, but a war to maintain the industrial supremacy of the North, left the Negro the choice of peonage in the South or wage slavery in the North.

Equality to Kill and Be Killed

The sweat, blood and tears of the "freed" Negroes helped to build American capitalism, and when, having become a world power, America was inevitably dragged into the war, the American Negro was declared the equal of the white man to kill and be killed for "democracy".

Four hundred thousand colored men were drafted into the American army and segregated into "Jim Crow" regiments. Fresh from the terrific sacrifices of war the tortured Negro soldier was met with race persecutions, lynchings, murders, disfranchisement, discrimination and segregation. He fought back, but for asserting his manhood he paid dearly.

Persecution of the Negro became more widespread and intense than before the war, until he had "learned to keep his place". The post-war industrialization of the Negro in the North and the spirit of protest engendered by post-war persecutions and brutalities (a spirit which the suppressed flames into action when a Tulsa or other inhuman outrage cries aloud for protest) places the American Negro, especially of the North, in the vanguard of the African struggle against oppression.

Communists Hail New Negro Spirit

3. It is with intense pride that the Communist International sees the exploited Negro workers resist the attacks of the exploiters, for, the enemy of his race and the enemy of the white workers is one and the same, Capitalism and Imperialism. The International struggle of the Negro race is a struggle against Capitalism and Imperialism.

It is on the basis of this struggle that the world Negro movement must be organized: in America, as the center of Negro culture and the organization of the Negro people; in Africa, the reservoir of human labor for the further development of Capitalism; in Central America and the West Indies, Colombia, Nicaragua, and other "Independent" Republics, where American Imperialism dominates, as Porto Rico, Haiti, Santo Domingo and other islands washed by the waters of the Caribbean Sea. The Negro question, one of our basic class problems, has aroused the protests of the conscious Negro and the revolutionary white proletarian everywhere; in South Africa and the Congo, where the growing industrialization of the Negro population has resulted in various forms of up-risings; in East Africa, where the recent penetration of world capital is stirring the native populations into an active opposition to Imperialism.

Struggle Against Imperialism World-Wide

4. It is the task of the Communist International to point out to the Negro people that they are not the only people suffering from the oppression of Capitalism and Imperialism; that the workers and peasants of Europe and Asia and of the Americas are also the victims of Imperialism; that the struggle against Imperialism is not the struggle of any one people, but of all the peoples of the world; that in China and India, in Persia and Turkey, in Egypt and Morocco the oppressed colored colonial peoples are rising against the same evils that the Negroes are fising against — racial oppression and discrimination, and economic industrial exploitation; that these peoples are striving for the same ends that the Negroes are striving for — political, industrial and social liberation and equality."

Comintern Will Support Negro

The Communist International, which represents the revolutionary workers and peasants of the whole world in the struggle to break the power of Imperialism; the Communist International, which is not simply the organization of the enslaved white workers of Europe and America, but equally the organization of the oppressed colored peoples of the world, feels it its duty to encourage and support the international organizations of the Negro people in their struggle against the common enemy.

Special Duty of Communists

5. The Negro problem has become a vital question of the world revolution; and the Third International which has already recognized what "valuable allies" are tendered by the Proletarian Revolution in the colored Asiatic peoples in semi-capitalist countries, likewise regards the co-operation of our oppressed black comrades as essential to the Proletarian Revolution and the destruction of capitalist power. The Fourth Congress accordingly declares it to be a special duty of Communists to apply the "Thesis on Colonial Questions" to the Negro problem.

6. (1) The Fourth Congress recognizes the necessity of supporting every form of Negro movement which tends to undermine or weaken Capitalism or Imperialism or to impede its further penetration.

2) The Communist International will fight for race equality of the Negro with the White people, for equal wages and political and social rights.

3) The Communist International will exert every effort to compel trade unions to admit Negro workers to membership or, where the nominal right exists, to agitate for a special campaign to draw them into the unions; failing in this, it will organize the Negroes into unions of their own and especially apply the United Front tactic to compel admission.

4) The Communist International will take immediate steps to hold a general Negro Conference or Congress in Moscow.

United Front of All Labor

Comrades, I want to add a word on the Negro Question. On the clause dealing with the Negro and the trade unions. In the American Federation of Labor no Negro is nominally admitted to membership in most unions, but there is absolutely no effort made save in extremely few cases to draw the Negro into the unions.

In the United States we can bring pressure to bear upon the American Federation of Labor to support the Negro workers. There we must enter into a definite campaign to accomplish this thing. Campaigns should be carried on in every country concerned, clearly, definitely, faithfully, and if we fail it will be our duty to organize the Negroes into separate unions, bring together the white and colored workers who are willing to form a united front and carry on anew a campaign to compel inclusion.

In the industrial field, where the black and white workers toil side by side, and suffer together thru the industrial oppression of capitalism — there chiefly can we hope to create that unity, that understanding, that binding tie, that will bring them thru common organization into the struggle.

The Congress is taking a wonderful first step in moving to hold a general Negro Conference or Congress in Moscow. But our chief work (as Sections) lies in getting the industrialized Negroes into the unions where they can fight together with the white workers for their equal emancipation. We must not allow this Thesis to become a dead letter, but must carry it into life, and make the Negro worker a vital part of the Communist International.

The Resolution was unanimously adopted.

Cridis is due America for introducing the question of a Negro Commission. I understand there was no opposition to the motion in the President's chair; it was offered, and the creation of the Commission was voted unanimously and immediately named.

The Negro Question is not one that was suddenly precipitated at the Fourth Congress. Jack Reed had reported on the American Negro at the Second Congress. Last year a comprehensive report had been received by the C. I. Executive. The question was being considered. Nor is the idea of calling a general Negro Conference or Congress in Moscow some time in the near future, an inspiration of the Communists in Asia, in Turkey, in Egypt it is the Communist International that inspires the revolutionary struggle of the oppressed colored peoples, and it is the logic of the struggle that dictated the tactic.

Besides presenting the above Thesis to the Congress for action, the Negro Commission made a report also to the Presidium, more private in its nature, as befitted action by the C. I. This report was detailed, containing the following recommendations for the organization of the Negro Conference, with a recommendations with a recommendations with a recommendations

Ruthenberg Nails Lie of Labor Fakirs

The following correspondence is made public, as very likely the lie "nailed" is being used elsewhere:—

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 13, 1923.

C. E. Ruthenberg,
Secretary, Workers Party,
New York City.

Dear Comrade Ruthenberg:— I wish you to answer the following question: At a meeting of my local union, in debating the question whether or not we were to support financially the Labor Defense Council, the special organizer of the I. L. G. W. U. made a statement that you "scabbed" at the Printz-Biederman Co. Cleveland, while the I. L. G. W. U. conducted a strike there. Please answer. Comradely yours, S. Cohen.

Ruthenberg's Answer

New York City, Feb. 14, 1923.

Dear Comrade Cohen:— The statement made by the special organizer of the International Ladies Garment Workers that I "scabbed" at the Printz-Biederman Co., Cleveland, during a strike conducted by the International Ladies Garment Workers is a plain lie.

This lie was put in circulation at the Cleveland Convention of the I. L. G. W. U. last year, by Schlesinger, after my speech there in support of the Left Wing to endeavor to break the effect of that speech.

The strike in question during which I am supposed to have worked at The Printz-Biederman Co., was in 1918. During the year 1918 I was in the Stark County Workhouse at Canton, Ohio, serving a sentence of one year for speeches in opposition to the conscription law. The reactionary I. L. G. W. U. machine which spread this rumor was certainly very careless in selecting the time during which I was supposed to have "scabbed". But it happened that the only strike at The Printz-Biederman Co. was during this period when I was in prison.

The facts about my connection with The Printz-Biederman Co. are the following: From September, 1914 until June, 1917, I was in the employ of that company holding the position as head of the Correspondence Department and later as head of the Maintenance and Supplies Department. In June, 1917, we were carrying on an active and aggressive campaign against the war and against conscription in Cleveland and I was given the choice by the management of the Printz-Biederman Co. of either stopping the speeches which I was making against war and conscription, speeches which were being made on the Public Square before audiences of from five to ten thousand people, or giving up my position. I refused to be coerced by the threat of loss of job and was fired.

During my ten years of activity in the revolutionary movement in Cleveland the I. L. G. W. U. organizations of that city have had no constant support. I have made numerous speeches at their meetings and during strikes. Even during the period when I was in the employ of The Printz-Biederman Co. as part of the executive department of that concern I made speeches at I. L. G. W. U. organization meetings at which efforts were being made to organize the employees of The Printz-Biederman Co. For making such a speech at an I. L. G. W. U. mass meeting in East Technical High School I was called on the carpet by the management of The Printz-Biederman Co.

Let me say in conclusion that officials of a union who spread such dastardly lies as the one repeated at your meeting are certainly hard driven to hold their jobs. Officials of this type, ready to resort to such methods are of the kind who are constantly betraying the labor movement and the sooner they are got rid of the better for the organized labor movement.

In the present instance this rumor is being spread because the Workers Party program of amalgamation in the needle trades is gaining great strength and these reactionary officials see their jobs slipping away from them. The program of our party for amalgamation and more militant unionism will win in spite of all that these betrayers of labor can do thru lies such as that which you bring to my attention.

Fraternally yours,
Executive Secretary, Workers Party.

Prepare for May Day! Build the United Front for Labor's International Holiday!

MANIFESTO OF THE WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA

On May First the workers of the world will again celebrate Labor's International Holiday. Tens of millions of workers will unite in great mass meetings and huge demonstrations in a spirit of unity of the workers in the struggle against exploitation and oppression.

Since May Day last year Labor in the United States has passed thru a period of tremendous struggle. For months, more than a million workers were out on the strike lines enduring hardships and suffering in order to prevent the employers from destroying their unions and reducing their standard of living.

In the struggles of the textile workers, the miners and the railway shopmen, Labor learned that it can tackle of the strongly organized employers and win better conditions only if its organizations are solidly united.

The Railway Shopmen fighting alone, while nine other railway unions served the bosses, showed the railway men the need of amalgamating their unions into one industrial union of railway employees. The weakness and disorganization of many textile unions on strike showed the need of the textile workers forming one great industrial union of the textile industry. The miners in their fight needed the help of the railway men and the fact that coal was hauled by union railwaymen while the miners were on strike showed the need of an alliance between the miners and the railwaymen.

AMALGAMATION OF THE CRAFT UNIONS INTO POWERFUL INDUSTRIAL UNIONS WILL MIGHTILY STRENGTHEN LABOR IN ITS STRUGGLE AGAINST THE EMPLOYERS.

During the great strikes of last year Labor found that the strongest weapon in the hands of the employers and its greatest enemy was the government. It found that in every strike it is powerful arm of the government reached out to break the power of labor in the fight against lower wages and open shop. The Government used the Railway Labor Board, it used the courts, it used police and it used soldiers, all for the purpose of breaking the power of Labor. The Daugherty injunction, which still stands, is the most flagrant example to prove that the Government is an instrument of the employers to break labor.

Let every union in this case of political power against Labor is for Labor to enter the political struggle against the employers. Labor must fight its battles politically as well as upon the industrial field. While the bosses hold the Government, Labor cannot hope to make any great gains upon the industrial field.

A POLITICAL PARTY OF LABOR—A LABOR PARTY—UNITING BOTH INDUSTRIAL WORKERS AND WORKING FARMERS MUST BE THE ANSWER TO THE OPEN USE OF THE GOVERNMENT TO CRUSH LABOR.

With the power of Labor thus organized the way is open to establish in place of the present capitalist government, which openly uses its power to dictate to the workers in the interests of the bosses, a Workers' Government which will use the governmental power to dictate to the capitalists in the interest of the workers.

Let us build a united front of labor in the United States for the celebration of May Day this year.

Let every union every political organization of labor unite for great mass demonstrations of the strength and unity of Labor.

Let us shout:

AMALGAMATION, A LABOR PARTY AND A WORKERS' GOVERNMENT

Workers Party of America.
C. E. Ruthenberg,
Executive Secretary.

Buying up the Libraries

By JEANETTE GERSHANICK

It is becoming almost impossible to keep up with the gifts made by Rockefeller to various institutions. He has built churches, he owns his newspaper publicity, and is the greatest contributor to educational activity in this country. One wonders whether this will all lead for surely one cannot be the chief benefactor of a country without affecting its opinions and its very life.

A contribution of six million dollars has just been made to the New York Public Library to meet its very urgent demands. This library was erected by the City of New York, being given over the Astor, Lenox, and Tilden collections. While it has been known as a public library, it is not such in the full sense of the word, for it has always depended considerably upon private donations.

The deficit in recent years had become an acute one; it was operating the reference department, perhaps the most important in the library, under a heavy loss. Not only this but it was impossible to keep up with the growing needs of the public. Many books could not be bought and the necessary work of preserving the existing collections could not be done. In addition, the library was under staffed and in some departments, the cables of the attendants has far inferior to that of the public.

All this in America's richest city, the home of the arts and representative of America's culture. While millions were slipping into graft channels annually, the large public library next to the Congressional in Washington was left penurious and unable to carry on its work. Instead of being recognized as one of the greatest contributions to the future and supported from the public treasury, it has been forced to go a beggaring.

Gradually the library will have to drop the name "public" and be just another addition to the Rockefeller endowments. The Board of Trustees may have to show its appreciation and the form in which this will be done will be of great importance. We will be lost or forbidden books be increased so that untruthfulness to the present order will not be encouraged. With the radical librarians late to Lenin their hands and attempts to organize them as workers into a union. This attempt to do so failed a few years ago because of apathy among the workers. What will be the effect if the attempt is once more made and the employes recall who their chief benefactor is?

With the price of gasoline going up and the profits from the toil of the Rockefeller slaves continuing, it is safe to assume that there will soon be an announcement of another gift. Our schools, colleges and libraries are in constant need of money and the work of maintaining them is being left to private hands. This is and should be the most important activity of the local and national governments. Education should be a public matter and not left to the kindnesses of some millionaires who are robbing Peter and then paying Paul. Learning should not be dependent upon the profits from industrial exploitation.

When will the workers wake up to the evils in the present system which makes their economic masters also their intellectual and physical ones?

La Follette, Oil and the Presidency

By BEN GITLOW

There is a lot of talk in Washington that President Harding will be renominated by the Republican Party in 1924. However, if a large section of the Republican party represented by such men as Borah and LaFollette have their way someone else will be the party's choice. That is why in Washington at the present time a number of Republican politicians are energetically grooming themselves for the presidential nomination.

Prominent among these is Senator LaFollette. The Wisconsin Senator is an imposing figure. He is the liberal among liberals in Congress. He is the political leader of the American Middle Class. The farmers and small business men from practically all sections of the country enthusiastically follow him. For years he has been heralded as the bitter opponent of the vested interests and big capital. He has championed many of labor's fights and is today indorsed by Samuel Gompers and the American Federation of Labor. The state of Wisconsin, Victor Berger and the whole Socialist Party of the State support him. A more popular political figure than Senator La Follette cannot be found. If the Republican Party wants to nominate a man who will fill the bill as the people's choice then he is the man.

The Republican Party representing politically the big capitalist interests of the country among whom the most influential are the oil interests must however first be sure that whatever man it nominates that man will be acceptable to the big capitalists especially those of oil. The politicians who are striving to reach the White House besides building up their popularity among the so called common people who in droves can be expected to deposit their votes at the feet of some idol are in various ways trying to win the approval of Standard Oil and its echoes. Blessed is the senator who can go forth in search of greater honors if his arduous uphill grind has been well lubricated by the holy and exceedingly precious oil for easily the path to the White House is paved with petroleum.

La Follette has his eye on the White House. He would like to get the Republican nomination for president. That he is the logical choice is not enough. He must assure the Republican Party that he is also the logical choice. LaFollette, the terror of the vested interests, must prove to them that they have nothing to fear from him if he is to get into the graces of the oil interests and thus make possible the wining of the Republican nomination.

That LaFollette has his eye also on 26 Broadway, New York City, Headquarters of the Standard Oil Company. That is why LaFollette has conducted the investigation of the oil men in a manner to please them. The oil men have met LaFollette the terrible Turk time tested servitor monopoly buster, etc., and like him.

Oh! Yes! They expect LaFollette to denounce them in his report, but as William Hard expresses it he was urbane and benign in his personal demeanor towards them. The oil men are perfectly willing to have LaFollette indulge in a few cuss words against them.

That costs them nothing and does no harm. This may perhaps only further increase the popularity of LaFollette. The oil men however are satisfied and pleased. LaFollette has proven to them that he is not to be feared but instead can be trusted as a friend.

LaFollette is paving his way to the White House with gold. He is their dupes, especially the poor farmers and workers, who support him will wonder how it was they were betrayed.

For a Genuine Labor Party

At the Second Conference of the American Labor Party, its organization created last summer, but as yet confined to New York City, the Socialist Party elements were in absolute control, with remnants of the Farmer Labor Party playing second fiddle.

Realizing that the rank and file of labor, no matter where it is found, is really desirous of the creation of a mass party of labor in the United States, the Workers Party sent delegates with credentials.

The actions of James Oneal, of the Call, menial for the Hillquit-Cahan machine, and Abraham Lefkowitz, of the Farmer-Labor Party, in regard to these Workers Party delegates is a disgrace to Labor. Their vacuous diatribes against the Communist movement of the world proved that they will not hesitate at anything in order to endeavor to set themselves up as self-appointed leaders of the workers on the political field.

So cowardly were they that they even refused the delegates of the Workers Party an opportunity to state their case before the conference, in spite of the fact that most of the delegates seated were members of the Socialist Party.

Not only did they refuse to hear the duly accredited delegates of the Workers Party, but they restricted debate to two spokesmen for and against seating, and limited each speaker to ten minutes. Fortunately a number of Communists from trade unions were there, and as the fakirs could find no valid excuse to refuse to seat them, the delegates had a chance to hear a twenty minute defense of the position of the Workers Party.

Oneal attacked the Workers Party with the time worn harrangue to the effect that the Communists had split the labor movement of the world. He neglected to mention that we merely isolated the Scheidemann-Berger-Hillquit Socialists of the world so they could not again betray A.L.P. the working class as they did during the last imperialist butchery. He also forgot the efforts that have been made by Communists for the united front of all the workers against the exploiters of the world, how those efforts were sabotaged by the Vandervelides, Hendersons and Longuets of Europe, because they knew their deluded followers would discard them as leaders of labor the moments they became traitors to the working class in action. For the same reason Oneal fights the Communists in America. He knows he is not a match for them. He knows that he dare not appear upon a public platform and debate the issues of the day with them. Only last summer I dared him to debate the merits of Communism and like the miserable poltroon that he is he refused to debate, knowing full well that the record of such a debate would damn him and the Socialist Party as deserving of nothing but the loathing and execreation of intelligent workers.

The old charge that the Communists split the Socialist Party was again hurled against us. Oneal did not have the decency to admit that he himself, was the individual who prosecuted the case against the Socialist Party of the State of Michigan, after the national executive committee of the Socialist Party had counted the ballots for the National Executive Committee election and declared that they had been overwhelmingly defeated for reelection. They expelled Michigan because the membership had the intelligence to defeat Victor L. Berger, the Socialist editor of the Milwaukee Leader, as National Executive Committeeman.

Furthermore various federations were suspended because they, too, voted against the reactionary executive committee of the Party. These disorganizers against the rank and file of their own Party, wrecked the Party rather than surrender their own jobs. That is the history of the Socialist Party split in a nutshell and no amount of verbiage can efface the record of treason to the membership of that Party.

Oneal's tirade was supposed to be a reply to Delegate Joseph Kucher, of the Amalgamated Ladies Workers. Delegate Benjamin Lifshitz, also a metal worker, replied to Oneal.

Then Abraham Lefkowitz, the ornament of the Farmer-Labor Party, came forward with a tirade against Communists in America. He showed his brand by asserting that agents of William J. Burns had written part of the program of the Workers Party. Since he was the last speaker there was no opportunity for further interpellation. No fabrication was too vicious for him to hurl at the Communists in order to prevent their admittance to the conference.

The whole set-up left it showed that there were 58 in favor of admittance of the Workers Party delegates and 150 opposed.

In spite of the vicious assaults of these wretches, the Workers Party will continue its fight for the creation of a genuine Labor Party.

The Utmost in Infamy

James Oneal, editorial writer of The ... w York Call, has become the official popularizer of the diatribes em... ing from the camp of the Socialist Revolutionists. Having established ... enviable record as a perverter of American history and as a virtuoso in mendacity, he now rifles the pages of counter-revolutionary counter-Soviet Russia, adds a touch of his own individuality and publishes it in The Call.

During the trials of the Social Revolutionaries in Russia we thought their apologists in this country, like Oneal and the Call, had plumbed the last possible depths of perfidy in their assaults upon Soviet Russia. But just as there are immensities in the universe into which even the most powerful telescope can penetrate, so are there immensities of depravity that the human mind cannot measure.

In the Feb. 18, magazine section of the Sunday Call, Oneal repeats and amplifies the role of Assistant Prosecutor which the Social Revolutionaries in their defense when the Soviet government proved to the world these traitors were actually in the pay of Allied Imperialism. The excuse for Oneal's latest effusion is the publication of a book from the press of Russia now in Berlin alleged to be a refutation of the findings of the Moscow court. The head of the Berlin Committee is Victor Tchernoff, former minister of agriculture in the Kerensky government, as a member of the executive of the Social Revolutionary Party who demanded intervention in Soviet Russia on the part of the Allies in the early days of 1918. Tchernoff is the sole Socialist Revolutionary of the revolutionary proletariat, when hopes still burned in the hearts of the Allied Imperialists that they could crush the workers' government of Russia.

Tchernoff is now living in Berlin and receiving money from Allied and German capitalists for the purpose of carrying on counter revolutionary propaganda against Soviet Russia. This is the creature that furnishes Oneal with his "historian", with his ammunition to hurl against the Communist movement.

It is not sufficient that the Soviet government spared the lives of these traitors to the cause of Allied Imperialism after they had been convicted of murder and terrorism out of their own mouths, and after overwhelming proof of their taking money from the French military mission had been presented. These unspeakable traitors to the working class murdered Volodarsky and Uritsky and endeavored to create mutiny in the ranks of the Soviet army in order to open the way for an armed invasion of Russia by the Allied forces. Did Oneal protest against the murder of these two leaders of the revolutionary proletariat of Russia? Did he denounce the act of terrorism against Lenin, when the hand of the French imperialism, thru the medium of the Social Revolutionaries, reached out to strike him down? Not by a damn sight!

Oneal calls the Social Revolutionaries, now in prison for their crimes against the working class, "socialists." Yes, they are socialists of the identical type of himself and his cohorts, Hillquit, Schlesinger, Cahan and Berger. And the defense of the Social Revolutionaries exposes the leaders of the Socialist Party of America as participants in the gross attack of this country in case it should seize power as did the workers of Russia.

Already the Socialist party leadership has stigmatized itself as a Scheidemann aggregation by using police against its enemies in Chicago in 1919. Oneal confesses to love in democracy, yet when the reactionary machine of the Socialist party was defeated in a democratic Party election in 1919, he was a member of the executive committee that expelled and suspended sixty thousand members for daring to vote against the Scheidemann. Another ornament of that party, Seymour Stedman, played the part of a stool pigeon and agent provocateur while trying to steal the House of the Masses from the Communists in Detroit.

As to the Social Revolutionaries, the working class will draw its own conclusions and will decide for itself whether it will believe Victor Tchernoff, tool of French imperialism, Kerensky-wavelide, minister of the King of the Belgians, assassin of the working class in the World War, and today a scullion of capitalism; Mr and Mrs. Philip Snowden, vilifiers of the Russian Revolution; and even the lowest, most stupid ignorant of that type, James Oneal, or the words of the leaders of the triumphant proletariat who thru five years of travail and immeasurable heroism have blazed the way for the hosts of labor thruout the world in their weary struggle toward a better society.

Pass 200,000 Mark in Program Distribution

Over fifty thousand programs distributed the past week! And this just in the ordinary routine work of organization, there having been no special occasion for such distribution. We are now on the hundred thousand of a million we have determined to distribute.

Altho passing the two hundred thousand mark was beyond our estimate of last week, still it is not sufficient considering the resources of our party. Each member should be determined to personally distribute not less than one hundred copies of this program.

Not only does the distribution of this program familiarize thousands upon thousands of workers with our Party and its activity, but the Program itself is a revolution as an educational document, by its clear application of Communist principles to conditions in the United States today. This is a program that stands upon its merits and cannot be successfully attacked by either reactionary labor fakirs or yellow Socialists or pseudo-Marxist sectarians.

In our trade unions and in every other place where workers assemble we must distribute this program. It is not sufficient to take part in the every day struggles of the workers alone. We must familiarize them with the program of communism.

The program sells at $5 per thousand; 50 cents per hundred. Every member can easily contribute 50 cents to the branch fund and thereby enable the branches to obtain large lots for distribution.

Let us all go to work in order to reach THE ONE MILLION goal in the next few days.

With the Young Workers

Martin Abern, a delegate for the Young Workers' League of America to the Young Communist International is being toured thru the East. Many young workers are being reached by his enthusiastic message. He has been having successful meetings thru the districts of Ohio and Pennsylvania.

In the coking coal regions the young workers were very enthusiastic and an increased interest and activity can be expected there in the future. In Danstown, Pa. the Young Workers' League has been drawing in the English speaking youth. The capitalist seeing their influence over the young workers, tried to arrange all sorts of affairs on the same dates as the League in order to counteract the League's growing influence.

The Monessen comrades were out in full force to greet the delegate from the International. The meeting in Philadelphia was a decided success and out of it has been born an English branch of the League. In Reading the comrades of the Workers Party are working hard and a league will arise very shortly.

Coming into New York Martin Abern was welcomed by several hundred members of the League. After a report on the problems confronting the Young Workers' League the comrades resolved not to stop in their gallant efforts to build up the biggest league in the country.

Comrade Abern will proceed with his meetings thru Massachusetts and then start westward, finishing the Eastern trip at Chicago on March 25th. From there he will go to the Middle West cities.

The remaining immediate dates are as follows: March 2, 3, Providence, R. I. Mar. 4-5, Boston Mass. Mar. 6, Lawrence Mass. Mar. 7, Lawrence Mass., Mar. 8, Lynn, Mass., Mar. 10, Maynard, Mass., Mar. 11, Gardner, Mass., Mar. 12-13, Worcester, Mass., Mar. 14-15, Rochester, N. Y., Mar. 20, 21, Buffalo, N. Y., Mar. 22-23, Erie, Pa., Mar. 25, Chicago, Ill. Upon comrade Abern's arrival in Chicago he will be immediately toured to Minneapolis, Duluth, St. Paul, Superior and several Michigan cities.

Interesting Y. W. L. Convention

Seventy delegates from 15 branches of the Young Workers League, with four delegates from the Canadian New York Workers Party, one from District No. 2, W. P. and eight fraternal delegates from other young workers organizations constituted the Third Local Convention of the Young Workers League of New York.

The Convention was extremely serious and intensely hardworking. It was pointed out that not only was a United Front of the Young Workers desirable but that it was absolutely necessary. With 18,000 child workers in New York City it is the duty of all young workers organizations to make a unified fight against this evil and to bring it forcibly before the adult workers. The incoming executive committee was instructed to call a conference of all young workers organizations for the purpose of organizing the fight against Child Labor.

"Charley" Schwab, of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, is over in England telling the boobs who will believe that America's capitalists profited very little by the recent war. No doubt "Charley" is trying to cheer them up for the next blood-letting.

In Memory of E. C. Gregor

The Civil Liberties Union performs a very useful purpose in trying to revive labor fights when they are dead, or trying to energize them when they lag. That is what it is trying to do now in the lynching of E. C. Gregor, at Harrison, Ark., in showing that the proposed investigation of the Arkansas legislature has been side-tracked by officials of the Missouri and North Arkansas Railroad.

These will probably be the last words said in memory of Gregor, just "another labor martyr." The power to secure action rests with the organized workers of Arkansas, and they have not budged.

We remember now that Gompers uttered a feeble protest at Washington. The railroad brotherhoods, mostly affected, promised funds, and thru their official publications told about this attack on their Arkansas members in great detail. The reporter for a capitalist newspaper got his picture on the first page of "Labor," the official publication, at Washington, of the 16 standard railroad organizations. He was complimented on his courage in bringing out the facts of the lynching of Gregor, and exposing the terror against the railroad strikers. And there the matter slumbers.

Governor McRae, of Arkansas, refuses protection to the strikers who wish to return to their homes. He knows that it was not a mob that murdered Gregor, but a well-organized band of assassins headed by railroad officials, whose names are known.

It may be well for all workers to remember that the trade union officials who do not lift a finger for Gregor and his fellow victims, are the same reactionaries who oppose amalgamation and every other progressive measure advocated for labor's advancement. They are the best agents the bosses have on the inside of the trade unions. The most effective tribute that the great masses of the workers can pay to the memory of Gregor, now fading into forgetfulness, is to get rid of these lieutenants of the capitalist class.

The Socialist Party national executive committee has decided to send Eugene V. Debs to the World Socialist Congress in Hamburg, May 21. We hope Debs goes, and keeps on going until he reaches Moscow, where all American Socialist delegates to Europe has yet gone, not even unofficially.

The Heir to Radicalism

We have lately had a sort of three-cornered discussion between Scott Nearing, James Oneal and J. P. Cannon as to whether the Workers Party, in Nearing's words, had "fallen heir to the radical political situation in the United States."

But, after all, it was only a discussion. It remained for the Second Conference of the American Labor Party, of New York, to completely reveal again the complete abdication by the Socialist Party of any really radical working-class position.

In its own hand-picked conference, jammed with delegates from the many paper Socialist branches in New York City, the Workers Party, nevertheless, managed to muster support running from 25 to 40 per cent of the entire delegation.

The Socialist Party spokesmen flaunted this wavering and fluctuating control in the face of the really working-class elements in the conference, its seating such non-descript elements as the Single Tax Party, while barring the Workers Party delegates.

Take a look at the results of some of the ballots. Kucher, for chairman, received 52 votes, against Lee's 175; on the question of admitting the Workers Party delegates, the ballot was 58 in favor and 152 against. This Socialist control even refused the challenged Workers Party delegation the right to the floor for a statement and was rebuked by the ballots of 70 delegates, retaining only 135, a loss of 40 under the 175 cast for Lee but an hour before. The vote for the Socialist effort to condemn Soviet Russia for its treatment of counter-revolutionaries fell below 100.

Lefkowitz and Oneal made much of the charge that if the Workers Party was admitted, large numbers of the trade union delegates would walk out, refusing to remain in such a "red conference." As a matter of fact, if a roll call had been taken, it would no doubt have shown that a majority of the trade union delegates were sympathetic to the Workers Party.

It will thus be seen that the Socialist Party has lost all claim to any kind of radicalism, let alone working class radicalism, in its chasing of Single Tax rainbows. The definite class elements in the Labor Party conference were those sympathetic to the Workers Party. There can be no real Labor Party in New York or anywhere else, without recognizing affiliation of the Workers Party, the heir to American working-class radicalism.

At the Labor Party Conference last July there were 28 delegates sympathetic to the Workers Party. In this second conference there were 58 delegates for a real Labor Party—a real united political front. The Workers Party, even on the outside, is winning the Labor Party for the working class.

Gov. "Al" Smith of New York said the greatest thing he ever did they could all be presidents of the United States if they wanted to. Those boys cannot have had much of a chance at it, for none of them ever got a look past Smith's coat-tails. Governor Smith has now come out with a plan which would no doubt make him president if it could be put over. The plan publishes the Tammany Hall politician's remorse in all its nakedness.

An Opportunity to Celebrate

Militants in the labor movement have good cause to go to Tammany Hall, in 14th St., this Friday night and celebrate. That is the time when all Communists, their friends and sympathizers will raise jubilant cheer the fact that the Workers Party has taken over "The Liberator," one of the best known of the vanguard publications of the American working class for the past decade.

Communism is rallying the best of the intellectual forces throughout the entire world. This is not only true of novelists, playwrights, artists and poets, but also of historians, educators, noted spokesmen for all the sciences, in fact, Communism is giving a new interpretation to all science, art and literature.

Under Communist influence, "The Liberator" will become the expression in the United States of this phase of the developing world social revolution. It will become a publication more and more sought after. You will have to read it whether you agree with the Communists or not, just to keep in touch with what is going on in the world.

This spirit of the New Day will permeate the celebration and jubilee of "The Liberator Costume Ball" this Friday night. It is the spirit that is conquering everywhere. It is the spirit that wins.

With this celebration the annual festival of "The Liberator" takes on a new significance. It will be your misfortune and your loss if you do not attend.

Secretary of Labor Davis is trying to discover some scheme by which he can deprive Isadora Duncan of her American citizenship. Davis doesn't like the things Miss Duncan says about the U. S. A., but since Miss Duncan is an American citizen by birth, with antecedents in this country ante-dating those of the Pittsburgh banker "Secretary of Labor," he will no doubt have a hard job on his hands.

To the British Labor Party

British imperialism has sentenced 172 spokesmen of the oppressed in India to the gallows. They were picked from 228 placed on trial. This legalized murder is being perpetrated by British rule in the name of "law and order" and of "good government."

One would think that the British Labor Party, the backbone and ribs of the Second (Socialist) International, that has been so vehement in its demands for "democracy" in Soviet Russia, would be on the job in this instance. But the British laborites, with 143 members in Parliament, are as inactive on behalf of their oppressed comrades in India, as they were and still are in supporting the militants in Ireland.

Thus we find M. N. Roy, for the Communist Party of India, addressing an open letter to the Executive Committee of the British Labor Party, declaring:

"If you fail to act in this tragic moment, you will go down to history with the blood of the Indian peasantry upon your head, and you will stand charged with the betrayal of those principles of 'freedom and democracy' has you claim to advocate. At the same time, we appeal directly to the British proletariat to repudiate your leadership in case you fail to act, thus condoning this legal murder by infuriated imperialism".

It may be depended on that Thomas, Henderson and Clynes will keep the British Labor Party in line for that English "100 per cent patriotism" that permits real rebels to go to the gallows without lifting a finger in their defense. With these there must also be listed the American Hillquits, Bergers and Oneals.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., announces the purchase of rare French tapestries for the magnificent sum of $1,100,000 and the Standard Oil Co. of N. J. announces an advance of 1½ cents a gallon in the wholesale price of gasoline for New York and the New England states. It is fine to have someone else pay for our luxuries. John D. has taught his son how to do it.

The Farmer-Labor Party Quits

The national committee of the Farmer-Labor Party has voted to withdraw from the Conference for Progressive Political Action. We feel that this is a tragic mistake. Such action may even be the death knell of this organization that has served some purpose in breaking the grip of Gompers' nonpartisanism upon the masses of the workers.

No doubt the Farmer-Labor Party's national committee harbors a fond hope that it may yet rally the forces of the workers on the land and in industry for independent political action under its own standards. But this is a lost hope. There must be a united front of America's workers politically, and the basis for that United Front is laid in the activities of the Stone-Johnston Political Conference, reactionary as its actions may be. Organizations that champion isolation are doomed to sectarianism and sterility, demoralization and decay.

The Farmer-Labor Party laid claim to the governor of Oklahoma and the United States' senator from Minnesota, as a result of the recent elections. As a matter of fact, the democrats claim Governor Walton, of Oklahoma, and the Nonpartisan Leaguers, as pointed out in these columns last week, say Senator Shipstead is theirs. This sort of labor competition is suicidal. Only definite results can be secured thru common action of all workers united in a class Labor Party.

Gompers will greet with joy the action of the Farmer-Laborites. Johnston will receive the news with pleasure. It is hoped that the promised convention of the Farmer-Labor Party will overturn the French government. Communism is feared by the capitalists of all countries. The only paper still published at Essen is Socialist.

Ordered suppressed a month ago by the German Cuno government, the Communist daily at Essen, Germany, has now been stopped by the Poincare-French government. Communism is feared by the capitalists of all countries. The only paper still published at Essen is Socialist.

Premier Cuno of Germany says he can hold out to July. That's like the man who fell off the top of a ten-story building. On passing the fifth story he yelled, "All right so far." Wait until the Cuno outfit hits the bottom.

THE TRIALS OF A COLUMNIST
Writing a column was fun for Ed Sullivan, Broadway wit, when he felt like it. But now, with WORRY, Ed finds it difficult to write about anything, because he has to write it. Ed finally decided to take a vacation. The only reason he didn't is that he find it much harder to invent a bona-fide alibi for Commander Eastman than to write the Column itself . . .

The "Reds" Worry Sam

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

The Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly is being wrecked very decidedly these days by Organizer Sam Scott, American Federation of Labor, who the fifteen months has been detailed on this job by the "grand old man" of the labor movement.

Organizer Scott is undertaking the reconstruction—as one might think from his title. It is beneath the dignity of the Gompers henchmen to splash dirty dirt on the unorganized workers and ask them to join up. The job is reserved for the rank and file; the "organizers" merely ride herd on the local bodies to see that no deal with unorthodox tendencies infects the movement.

It is for this reason that at a time like the present when the labor movement of the United States is almost flat on its back, slowly recovering from the deadly effects of the open shop offensive, Organizer Smith appeared before the executive board of the local assembly last Wednesday evening with a resolution accompanied by a demand for its adoption. The resolution as submitted denounced "boring from within" and pledged the assembly to do or say nothing to which the executive council of the A. F. of L. could take exception. Inasmuch as this would have resulted in the complete stagnation of the mental processes of all delegates to the assembly the executive board inserted amendments in certain places where the text was particularly objectionable and referred the same to the delegate body.

Organizer Smith, during the heated discussion that ensued, lasting until after eleven P. M., stated the position of officialdom quite frankly. To the executive board he had already said that having elected a considerable number of sympathetic congressmen and senators the executive council of the A. F. of L. now felt its position to be somewhat safer and could devote more time to purging the organization of the "reds." On the floor of the assembly he referred specifically to the Workers Party and communism as an organization and doctrine which were under the ban. To the pertinent question asked by Frank Miner "Is the socialist party exempted because it has made its peace with the Gompers machine?" Smith made no reply.

It is believed here that the resolution as adopted will not be satisfactory to the A. F. of L. machine and that further demands will be made upon the Minneapolis assembly which is one of the most progressive labor councils in the country, having long been looked upon by Gompers with a disapproving eye.

From Smith's utterances it is quite evident that the amalgamation movement is causing the bureaucrats a great deal of worry and that they sense the difference between this organized move of the radicals for industrial unionism and a labor party in the existing unions and other movements which have merely resulted in removing their opponents from posts of vantage.

The local labor paper, The Minneapolis Labor Review is one of the targets of the attack now being made by Smith and the few reactionary unions in this city. It is a well-edited, progressive paper, supporting the worker's against every attack on the part of the capitalists and always stresses the class nature of the struggle. It has given the amalgamation movement much publicity and has also taken up the cudgels for the defendants in the Michigan case. It carries the Federated Press service and this constitutes the list of its crimes against the Labor movement as viewed by the Gompers group. The threat made by Smith to revoke the charter of the assembly has resulted so far in rallying the progressives around the Labor Review.

The Country Needs a Rest!

By JAY LOVESTONE

The country needs a rest! And the good, shepherd of the American people, Gamaliel the First, will give us a vacation. President Harding has announced to for nine months the Congressional windmills of Washington will be shut down. There will be no extra session of Congress and the new legislative body will not be convened until its "Constitutional" birthday, in December, arrives.

Harding is right. The country does need a rest. The Sixty-Seventh Congress has worked overtime for the American capitalists. It has cost the nation over $14,000,000,800 in tribute to the employing class. The railroad contractors have received an outright bonus of $6,000,000. The shipping magnates have been given a bonus of $50,000,000. Over $500,000,000 have been handed over as an outright gift to the railway capitalists. This is merely the bonus allotted to them by the Esch-Cummins law and does not include the millions spent by the Government in breaking the shopmen's strike for the employers. The reduction of the Bureau has saved the profiteering industrial barons at least $100,000,000 annually. The Excess Profits Tax has put into the pockets of the capitalists $450,000,000. Of course we are not attempting to tabulate the millions granted to the employers by Congress thru permitting outrageous tax evasions and frauds and the high protective tariff.

Why the Long Vacation?

But why is our good shepherd Gamaliel so anxious for a rest? Is it because he is tired? No. Harding has proved himself to be an untiring worker for the employing class. He is not tired. However, the President knows the country is tired. Samuel Gompers is convinced we need a vacation. The last election has given him a severe jolt and the army of political cripples that has besieged Washington, the horde of lame ducks, is a harrowing reminder to him that the country has been "done" for as much as it possibly could have been done for in the lifetime of one Congress. In this, Harding is undoubtedly right. The Sixty-Seventh Congress has proved itself to be the blackest Congress we have ever had. Its strikebreaking activities were not even camouflaged by the usual confusion of empty reform legislation.

Harding is now in a tight corner, politically speaking. He is faced with a repudiated, discredited body of legislators. To attempt to continue this group of political inebriates in harness would not get the reactionary Republican barrage very far. This is particularly true in view of an approaching Presidential election. And to convoke a hostile Congress—the Sixty-Eighth—would mean political suicide at this time!

What the interests of the powerful employers demand now is a rest for the country. The country must be given the "much-needed" opportunity to cool off. The people must be given a chance to forget their "radical" ism. So speak the reactionaries of all stripes. And Harding is their spokesman for this occasion. At the same time the capitalists must reform their lines for a new onslaught on the city and rural working masses. Harding must reorganize his machine to crush whatever opposition may manifest itself to his strikebreaking policies in the Sixty-Eighth Congress. This will require several months.

In the meanwhile the country will be without a Government. That is, we will be denied the luxury of having even a greatly unrepresentative Congress governing us. The capitalists will not take any chances in increasing the ire of the masses and fanning the flames of discontent into organized protest by overworking the lame ducks. Therefore, all Government power will virtually be lodged in the hands of Harding from March to December. He will be the Government during this period. He will rule the country without even the slightest danger of interference or question by ducks, lame or otherwise.

This is the boldest example of executive absolutism resorted to by any capitalist Government today. Bonar Law would not dare to prorogue the British Parliament and put it out of business for nine months. Not even the militarist Poincare could deprive imperialists of France of their Chamber of Deputies for so long a time. Yet America, boasts of being the greatest democracy on earth. Yes, America is the greatest employing class democracy on earth. The American capitalists are the most powerful capitalist dictatorship today. Harding's executive absolutism is only one of the numerous inherent features of the powerfully centralized tyranny of the employing class over the working class. Harding's arrogating to himself the powers of Government under the pretense of giving the country a rest and under the disguise of giving the people a chance to cool off is only a link in the long chain of evidence completely condemning the Government, American capitalist democracy, as the working man's worst dictatorship of the owning class over the working class.

Foreign-Born Workers to Be Imported, Registered and Distributed as Slaves

By C. S. WARE

Congressional leaders have announced that there will be no new immigration law passed by the present Congress. They have not stated that there will be no amendments to the contract labor clauses. Under the titles of "the want contract labor" bills introduced in this Congress the attack upon the foreign-born workers has assumed new and ever more vicious proportions. Through the hearings on the many suggested changes the answer from the employers associations has been consistently "We want contract labor".

All types of contract labor have been called for, under all sorts of safety devices even to contract agricultural workers, under bond as per bill H. R. 11750, which calls for the admission of "Aliens experienced in Agriculture upon filing with the American consul at the port of embarkation a statement of such experience and a sworn declaration of intention to either settle upon the public land of the United States and occupy and farm the same, or to purchase, or to cultivate, and improve other land available for such purpose, provided, that such alien shall deposit the sum of $200 for himself and each adult member of his family, and $50 for each minor child admitted hereunder. Said sum or sums to be repaid to such alien or his successors in interest upon satisfactory proof that said declaration has been complied with; otherwise said sum or sums to be applied to the cost of deporting such alien and his family for failure to comply with said declaration."

Under provisions such as this, labor free from the taint of political redness can be brought into the country, registered and placed. At the moment when it shows any sign of disturbing the peace of the capitalist profit system it can be deported at its own expense. Americanization in its most effective form! Import slave labor, register it with care, place it under state laws which keep it ignorant and divided.

The American industrial system is based on the exploitation of the immigrant from the time he is enticed from his home to the time he is discarded as part of the humane wreckage attendant upon the grinding out of profits.

Thirteen per cent of the white population of America is foreign born. According to Hauck and Sydenstricker 58 per cent of the industrial forces of America are foreign-born workers. From 60 to 70 per cent of the workers in the clothing, mining iron and steel, meat packing, and leather manufacturing industries are foreign born. Against this group, comprising the majority of the workers in the basic industries, the capitalist class is waging a vicious offensive.

Already there are laws written upon the statute books of many states which discriminate against foreign-born workers and serve to keep these workers in the most abject living and laboring conditions.

For example, in the State of Nebraska the foreign born have no right to hold meeting except for religious purposes. In many states the foreign-born worker, in case of accident, does not receive the same compensation as the American citizen in a similar case. In many states foreigners cannot be employed for public works. In many other states the foreign-born worker can only be employed if there are no American workers to be found. In the State of Idaho the foreign-born worker is not accepted for work in a factory unless he has his first citizenship papers. In Missouri the foreign born have no right to own property, or the ownership is limited either in terms of years or amount of property, or are without the right of succession.

The object of the capitalists in forcing worse working and living conditions upon the foreign born is to create a division in the working class. To effectuate they seek by agitating against the foreign-born workers to foster this division. They aim to promote a hatred of the foreign-born by the native-born by creating artificial dissensions along national lines. An especially significant instance of these tactics of the employing class are the "red raids" of 1920, followed by the deportations and intimidations carried out against the foreign-born as a preliminary to the open shop campaign, and onslaught upon the whole working class. In the great steel strike of 1919 and the recent national mine and textile strike it was the foreign-born workers who constituted the majority of those on strike, and bore the brunt of the capitalist attack upon the American working class.

In preparation for the struggles ahead the employing class is today preparing a new offensive against the foreign-born workers. This offensive is merely part of the organized campaign to intensify the oppression and exploitation of all the workers—native and foreign born. It is the task of all workers regardless of their place of birth to unite and present one front to the common enemy in the common struggle—The fight against the robbery of their labor, work by those who own—The fight against capitalist exploitation!

"Death or Freedom," Sacco

Class War Prisoner on Hunger Strike

By KARL PRETSHOLD, Written Specially for "The Worker"

DEDHAM, Mass.—In Dedham jail "Nick" Sacco paces his cell and waits for freedom—or for death. Three times every day since February 15th food has been brought to his cell and three times a day it has been taken away untouched. Nick is on a hunger strike. A strike for complete freedom—freedom obtained if necessary thru death.

For more than 34 months, nearly three years, Sacco has been in prison for a crime he did not commit and his hunger strike is his protest and bid for freedom. He has lost faith in the courts of America and the possibility of workers securing justice in them. Wearied beyond further endurance and driven to desperation at the delay in securing his freedom he resorted to the only weapon at hand, the hunger strike.

The jailers don't understand why he keeps it up so long. Other prisoners have refused food for two or three days at a time when they were not feeling well, but to continue for a week, ten days, twenty days, that is beyond them. Sacco doesn't try to explain to them, he refuses to eat and smiles his slow tolerant smile.

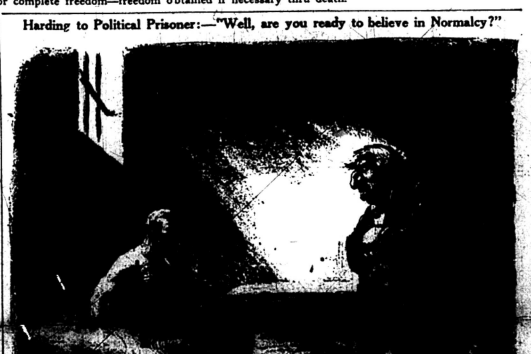
When he began the hunger strike on February 15th he told his friends, who advised against it, why he intended to protest.

"It is now 34 months that I am in prison for a crime I did not commit", he said.

"I refuse to permit my imprisonment to continue without voicing a protest. I refuse to eat till I am released. I think that is the only way. I will obtain my freedom if necessary thru death. I am innocent and I will be free.

"Workers in America cannot obtain justice in American courts. Look at Tom Mooney! He will spend the rest of his life in prison for all the courts of America care to do or can do. No one in America believes him guilty, yet he is in prison and will probably die there. For my part I would rather die protesting than continue in prison any longer."

Harding to Political Prisoner:—"Well, are you ready to believe in Normalcy?"



NEWS NOTE—Following the adjournment of Congress, President and Mrs. Harding left for Palm Beach, Fla., for an extended vacation. Consideration of the cases of political prisoners will be put off for a few months longer. This question must not be allowed to interfere with the President's golfing.

Unity of All Labor, Aim of International

By ARNE SWABECK

(Delegate of the Trade Union Educational League to the Second World Congress of the Red International of Labor Unions)

How the Amsterdam Trade Union International crowd collaborated with the capitalist offensive in launching a violent campaign of expulsions of militant unionists, and the locals supporting them, was illustrated by the report of the Executive Bureau of the Second Congress of the Red International Labor Unions.

It was substantiated by the delegates; with particular references to these dastardly schemes in their respective countries. "The enemy is on the left", was the battle cry adopted by this wrecking crew, who openly feared that the inevitable [illegible] and thus resolved rather to sacrifice the labor movement. While they had been extremely inactive in resisting the capitalist offensive, they became insolent, aggressive and energetic whenever the issue was to fight the revolutionary workers. Clearly it could be seen that these attacks were essentially nothing else but a reflex of the social battles between capital and labor.

The Amsterdam International being on the other side of the barricade is training its heavy guns at the labor movement. However this policy is a logical deduction of their position; for any other policy would make it difficult for them to save the capitalist system.

The Amsterdam attack upon the trade unions is not limited to national boundaries. At its last congress in Rome, held jointly with the secretariats of the international industrial federations, it adopted a resolution to the effect that revolutionary unions must have no place in these industrial federations. This resolution has since been rigidly carried out. During the last year the Russian Unions were either expelled or refused admittance to the international federations of their respective industries. The formal motive for the expulsions was that these unions are connected with the Red International of Labor Unions. The real reason, however, is that they have been actively participating in the upbuilding of a Workers Republic, that they are connected with the Soviet Government, that they are permeated with the spirit of Communism and constitute the basis o

Some Junk!

KANSAS CITY.—When Harrison George, political prisoner, had served his full term at Leavenworth federal penitentiary, he was given the regulation shoes, suit and overcoat as his "coming out clothes."

The material was next to worthless and he did not want to bunko a shivering Russian by donating the flimsy government prison overcoat for Russian relief so he put it up for auction at a radical bazaar.

The overcoat was knocked down for $12 as a souvenir and the sum sent to the Friends of Soviet Russia for relief work in Russia.

venue for William Z. Foster and 21 other labor men accused of criminal syndicalism is asked on the ground that opinion in Berrien county has been inflamed against the men and that Judge Charles E. White has been endorsed for re-election by some of the hostile groups. The motion will be argued March 7.

The Republican county convention denounced the defendants as Reds and at the same time endorsed White, who is to be trial judge. The local American legion adopted resolutions demanding a fair trial but also denouncing "conspirators" against American institutions.

In filing a bill of particulars against the defendants, as directed by the court, the prosecution has listed 192 pamphlets and documents seized at the place where the alleged communist convention was held. These are relied on as evidence that the Michigan criminal syndicalism law was violated. The usefulness of the bill to the defense is impaired by the assertion of the prosecution that it is incomplete.

O. L. Smith, assistant attorney general of Michigan, in charge of the prosecution, is repeating the lauiliar tales of "startling revelations" about attempts at wholesale slaughter and reigns of terror to be instituted by the communists as a result of the convention of Aug. 21, 1922. He has promised to reveal the revelations when Foster, the first of the defendants goes on trial March 12.

The air is still full of charges and evasive denials that secret money from outside the state is to pay the expense of the trials for Berrien county.

MARION, Ill.—"The defense will show in this case," said A. W. Kerr, chief counsel for the Illinois Mine Workers, in his opening address to the jury in the second of the Herrin trials here, "that the real murderers, the men with wicked, malicious hearts who came into Williamson county last June were those armed guards of Lester's who brought with them instruments of death and destruction.

"The miners' union was the pride of the county. It had raised men from the status of slaves working 14 to 15 hours a day at the rate of 23 cents a ton. W. J. Lester, the strip mine operator, said, 'We will mine coal with blood if necessary,' and he did. Lester and a small army to the operators' combination of Illinois.

"The Williamson county miners' local showed him every courtesy when he first came here. He was allowed to strip coal so that he might load the moment the cessation of work was at an end. But we will show that even when he was working his mine near Herrin under agreement with the union he was contracting in Chicago to bring down his private army with weapons of war."

Kerr insisted that while loading of coal was lawful, the methods employed by Lester was unlawful.

"Coal is not mined with high powered rifles, machine and riot guns." Kerr told the jury, "and Lester and C. R. McDowell, his ouelegged superintendent, knew that since invasion with such weapons was unlawful, these men came with the avowed purpose of offending, insulting and brow-beating the people of the community with a show of force. They hoped to make money out of the misery and deaths of the people of Williamson county and to break up the miners' union here. Lester boasted that he would make $7,500 a day out of the mine. The Herrin rioting had its origins not in the firing on a truck near Carbondale as the prosecution said, but in the greed of Lester."

Kerr cited acts of violence on the part of Lester's gunmen committed days before the rioting and told the jury that two groups are watching the case, those who hope to see the union broken and those who hope to see the end of the use of gunmen in industrial disputes.

If New York matches the record of Chicago and Boston in its reception of "Fighting Bill" Borah, U. S. senator of Idaho, Madison Square Garden, tho it is the largest gathering place in the city and holds 13,000 people, will not be large enough for the occasion. On March 18th he will speak in the Garden on the question of immediate recognition of Soviet Russia.

The meeting will be under the auspices of the National Labor Alliance for Trade Relations with and Recognition of Russia. William H. Johnston, President of the International Association of Machinists, who is on the national advisory committee of the Labor Alliance, will preside.

Communist International Urges Unity Against Persecution of U. S. Radicals

The Workers Party has received a cablegram from the Communist International as follows:

Sent today following cable to Industrial Workers of the World, Chicago. Give widest publicity.

Communist International greets brave members of your organization who are fighting against capitalism and government oppression on Pacific Coast.

The recent Portland and Sacramento convictions and wholesale arrests in San Pedro, Calif., do honor to the courageous I. W. W.

The appeal of the I. W. W. of that region for a united front of all workers is to be commended. The Communist International has called upon all militant workers everywhere to unite in the struggle against capitalism and oppression. There should be a united front of all class-conscious working-class organizations in America against all exploitation and oppression, and we note with pleasure the splendid efforts of the Workers Party towards this end.

Fraternal greetings to all revolutionary workers in American prisons.

Long live the unity and class solidarity of the American working class!

The Workers Party stands with the Communist International in its appeal to the workers of the United States to form a united front against persecution and oppression of the workers and against the whole capitalist system of exploitation. The Workers Party has upon numerous occasions shown its willingness to form a united front with all workers who are ready for the struggle against capitalism. It is now prepared to work with and fight with the members of the I. W. W. who, like the Communists, are oppressed and persecuted by the capitalist government.

The Workers Party is with the Communist International in its admiration for the valiant fighters against capitalism in the I. W. W. The Communist International expresses its admiration and solidarity with these workers in spite of the fact that officially the I. W. W. in its last Convention lined up against Communism and the Communist International, thus betraying the revolution.

The national Convention of the I. W. W. expelled those members who were for affiliation with the Red International of Labor Unions. This convention lined up with the yellow "Forward" in its attack on the Friends of Soviet Russia, which is fighting for the only Workers Republic in securing relief for the workers and peasants of Russia whom International Capitalism is trying to starve into submission.

The policy of "dual unionism," of drawing the militants out of the existing trade unions, is not the policy of the Communist International nor of the Workers Party, altho both are fighting for industrial unionism thru amalgamation of the trade unions.

The Communist International and the Workers Party is for the militant fighters in the ranks of the I. W. W. in spite of reactionary measures of the national convention of the I. W. W. The militant fighters who have been the backbone of the I. W. W. cannot be for these things because no revolutionist can support such betrayals.

Therefore, the Communist International expresses its sympathy and solidarity with the fighting members of the I. W. W. who are victims of the ruling class. The Workers Party shares their sympathy and as a fraternal organization of the Communist International is prepared to demonstrate its sympathy in action thru a united front with the persecuted members of the I. W. W.

SYDNEY, New South Wales.—The coal miners' federation is demanding that steps be taken to arrest the evil of irregular employment in the industry in Australia. A minimum 30-hour week is suggested.

The miners' manifesto says: "The fact cannot be disputed that the coal miners of Australia can produce in 30 hours a week all the coal the country would possibly use, provided they are allowed reasonably steady work."

Cannon Rouses Great Enthusiasm

(BY TELEGRAPH TO "THE WORKER")

BOSTON, MASS.—The first meeting of James P. Cannon's tour, at Lynn, was a big success. A good crowd heard with enthusiasm the inspiring story of the First Workers' Republic, which still stands firm as a rock after five years of struggle.

Cannon spoke for two hours and answered questions for another hour. The speech was packed with facts and enlivened with humorous and dramatic anecdotes. His thrilling account of the parade and demonstration of the whole working class population of Petrograd and the Red Army on the Fifth Anniversary of the Revolution stirred the audience to a deep feeling of solidarity with those daring ones who have fought so long and so bravely and who still have faith and courage to fight on. After the meeting a new Workers Party branch was organized.

A list of the meetings at which Cannon is scheduled to speak will be found on Page Five. Arrangements for his routing in Ohio, Michigan and Indiana are now being made.

All-Russian Educational Conference

By ELLA REEVE BLOOR
Delegate of Minneapolis, Minn., Trades and Labor Assembly, to the Second World Congress of the Red International of Labor Unions

Among the many conferences held in Moscow, while we were there none were more important than the Educational Conference of the Commissars of Education from All Russia. And one of the most honored delegates was our old friend, Santeri Nuortva, Commissar of Education of Soviet Karelia.

"If any misinformed comrades hold the idea that the appointment to Karelia was in the nature of an exile for Nuorteva, they should get rid of it at once. While he was in Moscow he was perhaps the busiest man there. His advice was sought continually by the Executive Committee of the Educational Department and his experience in foreign affairs was appreciated so much that he was again appointed as the head of the Anglo-American Foreign Department.

He did not seek this position, as his work of building schools and establishing a modern system of education for the people of Karelia seemed to him the most vital thing he could do. But he finally promised to return to Moscow after setting his affairs in order in Karelia. He came to see us often to talk over old times and the stirring new times. He is the same eager, keen and loyal comrade, very fond of life and music. One night I saw him at one of the beautiful operas with his friend Martin Anderson Nexo, and Kuusinen's young daughter (Kuusinen was Executive Secretary of the Communist International.)

He was beaming as usual and brought Nexo over to the box where we were to visit with us. Just after I had returned to the hotel, I met them in the hall with their arms full of bundles. They were laughing like boys.

"Please let us come in" and make some coffee for us, Mother," they cried. This was one of the many "coffee parties" we had together.

He had to go to Petrograd, and we thought he had returned to Karelia. During the great week of Celebrations of the Fifth Anniversary of the Revolution, we were standing one day in the front row of the huge grand stand erected for the review of the Red Army before the Winter Palace in Petrograd. When one beautifully trained regiment passed by, carrying a large red banner to be presented that morning to a great military school, the commanding general, who was about to make the presentation, looked very familiar to us. Suddenly some one called out "There's Nuortva!"—and like the usual impetuous Americans, we began to cheer and call, and some of us even rushed down to grab his hand. So, dear comrades, you can understand that the justification of our comrade is complete. But his honors have not changed him. He is as simple and loyal as ever.

After the Petrograd celebration, he returned to Karelia with his wife to prepare to move to Moscow, to again take charge of the Foreign Department. There he found the President of Soviet Karelia very ill, and things in such a shape that it was impossible for him to leave this struggling little "new" Republic.

He sent me an urgent message by a courier asking me to come to Karelia and see them all, as he could not return to Moscow. This I could not do, to my great regret, on account of the expense of railroad fare, but I know just how overworked he must be just now with all the re-construction problems so pressing in that northern country. But this is certain, that, above all and thru all, Nuorteva will be planning and working for the education of the children of Karelia and that his interest and hope is stronger than ever for the World Revolution, for more than most comrades, Nuorteva understands the true meaning of Internationalism, and his life is one continual expression of love and loyalty to that great cause.

Mussolini Jails Serrati

Maximo Serrati was jailed by the Mussolini-Savoyard dictatorship in Italy, on March 1st and released on March 3rd. Italian "justice," unlike American "democracy" does not release prisoners on bail, so there is great significance in the fact that Serrati spent but two days in prison, that all those arrested with him, with one exception, have also been freed.

The New York Times Correspondent hailed the arrest of Serrati as "striking proof of the decline of the Communists' power in Italy." "Five months ago Serrati seemed to hold the country in the hollow of his hand," said the organ of American Fascism. "He could call the workers out on strike and cripple the nation by lifting his finger. A Government daring to touch him then would have run the risk of almost certain revolution. Now he is arrested without one hand being raised in his defense."

It seems, however, that the New York Times spoke too soon. Only fear of consequences by the Mussolini government, could have won freedom for Serrati and his associates.

The thing that sticks in the crop of the Italian Fascisti Dictator is that the Communist International has launched an international attack on Fascism everywhere. Serrati came home to Italy after attending the Fourth Congress and securing affiliation of the majority Italian Socialist Party with the Comintern. The anti-Fascisti proclamation of the Communist International was issued in Italy, signed by the Italian delegation to Moscow, and published in the Avanti, now the Communist daily at Milan, of which Serrati is the editor.

The Fascisti were not spared in this proclamation. The Italian workers were urged to forget their internal differences and unite against the Mussolini outlaws. The workers were told that they were being reduced to the condition of Chinese coolies under Fascisti rule.

Italy's bourgeois order now turns in its tracks, like a bear at bay, and fights back under the high-sounding charge that the delegates to the Communist International had gone to Moscow "to solicit the financial help of a foreign State against the Italian nation."

It is very evident that Italian labor and capitalism are locking horns in a new and greater struggle. The Mussolini government is, no doubt, face to face with a live or die crisis. May we hope that the fate of Italian Fascisti rule will also seal the doom of Italian capitalism.

There's chaos in Wisconsin. Political families are splitting over the question of abolishing the state militia. Mrs. Belle Case LaFollette is for abolition. Her husband, U. S. Senator Robert Marion LaFollette, is against. Socialist Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, of Milwaukee, is with Mrs. LaFollette, while Socialist Congressman Victor L. Berger is with his political pal, the senator. Perhaps Mrs. LaFollette will jump to the pacifist Socialist Party and Berger into the republican party with LaFollette. Who knows? Strange things happen in Wisconsin!

The National Civic Federation has organized a committee to furnish American voters with "facts" about the nation's international relations. The only facts worth while constitute the truth about the conduct of the United States toward Soviet Russia. And the truth on this subject isn't in any member of the National Civic Federation, not even with "Sammy" Gompers on the committee. What we may expe . is another wave of anti-Soviet propaganda.

How the "progressives" have fallen. Former Gov. Joseph W. Folk, of Missouri, one of the "originals," when muckraking was part of the profession of politics, is leading the fight in the supreme court to declare minimum wage legislation unconstitutional. He denies even the small protection of capitalist law to helpless women and children workers in their struggle with the bosses.

Efforts are being made to increase the salary of congressmen from $7,500 to $10,000. And now that congress has adjourned, it is going to take a nine months' vacation. Ten thousand dollars for three months' work isn't bad. And still these congressmen will tell you that railroad workers and even the better paid railroad men who make less than that many hundred dollars working almost every day in the year, are overpaid.

Aldermanic candidates of the Workers Party, the Farmer Labor Party and the Socialist Party failed to weather the recent Chicago primaries, in which the two highest candidates in each ward enter the final elections in April. Looks as if Chicago's workers need a Labor Party to unite their forces.

The congressional "lame ducks" are waddlingly wending their way homewards from Washington these days. But there is another election next year and many of them will be again in their usual places, if the workers do not rally for independent political action in a Labor Party of their own, for the selection of their own representatives.

"Old Parties Applaud Meyer London" says headline in New York Call. The lone Socialist congressman certainly earned the applause from the source from which it came, and the end of this session of congress would not have been complete without it.

Hunger holds from 20 to 33 per cent of America's school children in its grip, says a Treasury committee on foods and nutrition of the national child health council. Better start a famine relief campaign for the boys and girls of the United States.

George Harvey, U. S. ambassador to London, at a banquet, asked God to bless the Prince of Wales. Gosh, yes, the American ambassador even promises to let God use his knee breeches while he is doing the job.

King Alfonso, of Spain, denies he will abdicate. He says he is not a deserter. No, but he will be a fugitive if the workers get after him, and chase him out of the country.

Imperialist France is showing itself more and more willing to open trade relations with Soviet Russia. Must be another confession that the Ruhr fiasco is working on France, internally.

Mexican Communists in War on Alcohol

By CARL BRANNIN
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

VERA CRUZ, Mexico.—The effects of alcohol are becoming better understood by the workers of this country, the pulque, mescal, tequila, aguardiente and other forms of booze are still consumed in large quantities by the proletariat—as well as by the comfortable classes.

A recent issue of El Pronte Unico, the daily organ of the Tenants Union (communist) of this city carried the following statement in large type:

Alcohol—Consumed in a stove produces heat.
Consumed in an engine produces power.
Consumed in the stomach produces disease and death.
Workers, surely you do not wish to compete with the stove and the machine.

It is reported that the railway workers of Monterey have been instrumental in blocking a move of the saloonkeepers to repeal the law closing such drinking places on Saturday nights and Sundays.

Rail Strike Shows Price Workers Pay

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER
Editor, The Labor Herald

The railroad shopmen's strike, begun on July 1st of last year, still drags its weary course. Approximately half of the shops in the country is still affected by the struggle. Prospects of anything like a real settlement grows less and less. Only the indomitable courage of the rank and file makes possible the continuation of the battle.

It is a bitter price indeed that the shopmen are paying for their faulty form of organization. Had they been properly organized, so that all the railroad crafts could have stood together, this great strike would never have happened.

But as it was, wit the unions divided against each other, solidarity depended upon the whims of reactionary labor officials like Grable, Fitzgerald, and others. Consequently united action was impossible in the crisis. These men double-crossed the rank and file and encouraged the companies to press on in their offensive against the shopmen.

The Great Northern Settlement

In the past month or so, several roads have "signed up", including the Great Northern. Efforts have been made, notably by the railroad paper Labor, to make it appear that these settlements are important victories. While the unfortunate fact is that they are very little short of complete surrender.

How little the shopmen had to say in drafting the Great Northern "agreement" is shown by the fact that it was negotiated by O. E. Schoonover and P. C. Bradley Chairmen of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen respectively.

Under the "agreement", the union men have no rights whatever. Their unions are not recognized, the presumption being that the company unions will be the ones to deal with the company for the men hereafter. The men are to be taken back just as the company needs them, supposedly in the order of their seniority, but in reality just as the bosses see fit.

A Light in the Darkness

The one hope for the railroad men and the one cheering prospect in the present welter of reaction, is the organization movement centering around the International Committee for Amalgamation in the Railroad Industry. This movement constantly grows in power and greater unity. Everywhere the rank and file are waking up to its true significance.

At the famous amalgamation conference in Chicago, Dec. 9th and 10th, 1922, the International Committee was instructed to write to the presidents of all the sixteen unions, inviting them to participate in a general amalgamation convention.

Only three have replied, Ryan, of the Carmen, Kline, of the Blacksmiths, and Fljordal, of the Maintenance of Way. The latter alone endorsed the proposition.

This lack of response has moved the International Committee to proceed to the next step in bringing about amalgamation. It is now taking a national referendum on the proposition among the 12,000 local unions of the sixteen Standard organizations.

This will serve to still further arouse the rank and file to the necessity for amalgamation and to crystallize into action the sentiment already existing among them for this vital measure.

Every militant in the railroad industry will do his utmost to make effective the work of the International Committee. Our unions must be remodeled, their reactionary leadership swept away, the workers given new hope and new ideals, and a general renovation in the labor movement brought about.

Kill State Cossack Legislation in Indiana

(Special to "The Worker")

INDIANAPOLIS Ind.—The vigorous protests of organized labor resulted in killing three bills introduced into the Indiana State Legislature in one week, calculated to impose a state constabulary ("The Cossacks") upon the workers. Since the mine strike of last summer the employers of the state have been demanding a state police force to be used against strikers; their model being, of course, the notorious aggregation of murderers known as the Pennsylvania State Police.

Danger of the passage of such a bill is postponed for a time, because the politicians in the legislature were afraid of arousing the antagonism of the voters at home.

The corporations have begun a widespread publicity campaign for a state constabulary, and labor is preparing a counter campaign.

Investigate!

Congressman Sinclair, of North Dakota, introduced a resolution in congress calling for an investigation of the Burns detective agency, and while the resolution was not passed, it served to bring to light many disgraceful facts about the Burns gang. But they didn't get all the facts and the resolution failed to pass. Now the Chicago Federation of Labor has taken the matter up, and has issued the following resolution, calling upon the workers to investigate the crimes of the Burns, the Flynns, and the other strikebreaking detective agencies which are preying upon the workers for a price—the price that they can force Big Business to pay.

Congress has adjourned, but state legislatures are still in session, especially in New York and Illinois, where the private armies of sleuths have been most active in attacking organized labor.

The New York Central Trades and Labor Council was among the many labor unions and central bodies to rush for demand for an investigation to congress during its closing hours. Its demand was as follows:

"WHEREAS, the public press had printed broadcast statements as the effect that William J. Burns, head of the Bureau of Investigation of the Federal Department of Justice, has been accused of misusing his public office in the interest of his own private detective agency, and

"WHEREAS, these charges would seem to have been proved by the testimony revealed in the exposure by witnesses examined by Frank P. Walsh, Counsel for working men prosecuted at the instance of Burns under a syndicalist law in the State of Michigan, and

"WHEREAS, it appears that Burns has been illegally using federal funds to prosecute this state case which he and his associates are accused of having framed in order to justify their charges of incendiary radical activities, and

"WHEREAS, this campaign of Burns against alleged "reds" is only part of his campaign undertaken at the instance of great employing interests against organized labor thruout the country, therefore be it

"RESOLVED, that the Executive Committee of the Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York and Vicinity, do hereby condemn these activities alleged on the part of Burns, and be it further

"RESOLVED, that we call upon the Congress of the United States to immediately appoint a committee to investigate the activities of Burns and his associates, and to have that investigation of such a sweeping character as to take in all detective agencies operating thruout the country, and be it further

"RESOLVED, that copies of this resolution be sent to the New York representatives in Congress."

In commenting on this resolution the editor wishes to point out that the bankers and employers who are subsidizing Burns and his tools in their dastardly work, will not cease in their efforts to send these workers to jail. It will, in fact, bring more money into the pockets of Burns et. al. It, therefore, behooves Labor to come out boldly not only with a mere statement of support such as also with the dollars and cents required to free these men.

Contributions should be sent to the Labor Defense Council, 166 W. Washington Street, Chicago, Ill., or Room 434—80 E. 11th St., New York.

Halt Gallows With Strike, Hope in India

The Communist Party of India is calling upon the workers of that country to unite in a general strike to save the lives of 172 peasants condemned to death by British imperialism. The appeal issued to the labor unions of India is as follows:

WORKING MEN AND WOMEN:—The world has been shocked to hear of that prostitution of justice which has condemned to death one hundred and seventy-two of the men arrested more than a year ago after the revolt of the exploited peasantry in the District of Gorukhpur was drowned in blood. These men are to be executed with the sanction of "law," ostensibly because of their participation in the riot at Chauri Chaura, in which 22 policemen were killed. 172 men, the majority of whom are poor cultivators, driven to revolt by the pressure of unbearable exploitation by the government as well as the Talukdars, are condemned to death in revenge for the lives of 22 policemen who fell in upholding "law and order." In other words, the crime of these men was that they dared to assert their right to live, and challenged the authority which orders them to toil and starve perpetually. At Chauri Chaura was the scene of a revolt not only against the government, but also against the established order of society, against the sacred right of property, of landlordism. Hence the hand of repression has come down there in its naked brutality, first as armed forces rising upon an unarmed mob, then in the wholesale arrest of all implicated, and lastly as this legal massacre. This cannot be denounced too strongly.

While 172 brave soldiers of freedom are standing at the foot of the gallows, the National Congress, which called upon the peasantry to act, remains silent, content with expressing pious horror at this "barbarous violence," which overshadows the "atrocious violation of Non-Violence" at Chauri Chaura. Those who have exhausted their vocabulary in condemning the Government have counted today pathetically hope that an appeal to the higher courts will save the lives of these men. Not a finger is raised, not a step is taken, to rescue these men from the jaws of death. They are left to the mercy of a merciless enemy.

The reason for this inactivity and indifference of the Congress is obvious. We do not desire to expose that reason here. What we want at this moment is to take some vigorous, effective steps to save these comrades of ours from the gallows or lifelong transportation, to which at best the sentence can be reduced by the High Court.

Workers of India, it depends on you to save these men. No idle resolutions, no expression of horror, no criticism of imperialist justice will be of any avail. These men stand at the door of death as a result of their courage in responding enthusiastically to the call of Non-Cooperation, and they can be saved only by effective Non-Cooperation, which no power on earth, not even the people but you, the producers of everything, the life-blood of Society can declare to enforce the demand for the release of your condemned comrades.

Workingmen and Workingwomen of India, Demand the release of the Chauri Chaura victims. UNDER THE THREAT OF A GENERAL STRIKE. Do not permit the upper-class leaders to sabotage this urgent action in defense of your class and in protest against the barbarity of Imperialist justice. Such an action on your part will have the sympathy of and will be supported by the revolutionary proletariat of the world.

Workingmen and Workingwomen of India: Declare a General Strike and save the noblest sons of freedom.

For the Communist Party of India,
(Signed) M. N. Roy.

Jap Workers Hear of Michigan Trial

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—The Japanese General Federation of Labor, Tokio, has come splendidly to the support of the Labor Defense Council. One of the most oppressed labor movements in the world, itself under terrific oppression from the Japanese Government for daring to defend the rights of the exploited Japanese workers is doing everything it can to defend the militant workers of free America. A letter received by the Labor Defense Council follows:

"Comrades:—Having read your appeal dealing with the 'Michigan Raid,' we, Japanese workers, voice our indignation against the American ruling class and its hirelings. As you say, 'An attack on the militants is an attack on the labor movement.' Your fight is our fight and our fight is your fight. We rally with your brave and bitter struggle for free speech, free press and freedom of assemblage. However, we regret, we are now not in a position to give you material support and to subscribe to your Labor Defense Fund because as you know not only are we very poor, but also are we preparing for a life and death fight against repressive legislation here.

"We stand in the same position as you. We ask you to rally to our campaign and promptly start a vigorous fight. Raise the strongest united front against the world-wide white terror.

"(Signed) K. Matsuoka, Sec'y."

The laws referred to in the above letter, are the: "Trade Union Bill calculated to smash all existing trade unions in Japan, the "Bill of Conciliation of Small Tenant Disputes" aimed at the violation and nullification of the rights of the poor peasants in favor of the large landlords, and the "Anti-Radical-Social-Movement Bill," a bill similar to the various American State Criminal Syndicalism Laws aimed particularly at the militants, with the additional clause prohibiting any international affiliation on the part of the Japanese workers.

French Imperialists Get Prostitutes for Soldiers

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
European Director, Federated Press

DORTMUND, Germany. — The chief of police here showed me one of the first orders issued to him after the French occupied the city. It concerned the measures to be taken for assuring the troops the proper number of houses of prostitution. "A certain number of these houses," it says in order, "which upon consultation between the local and the military authorities shall be more specifically designated, shall be reserved to the soldiers under the conditions enumerated below." Then follow a number of provisions of a hygienic nature.

The demands made in some cases upon the German authorities are outrageous. One of the labor women in the Duisburg city council showed me the infants, expectant mothers, patients and persons over 70 years of age a minimum of 22,000 liters (4840 gallons) of milk daily, but only 6,000 liters reached the city, and of this amount, the army of occupation requisitioned about 1,300 liters.

The Belgians demand 40,000 mattresses, 60,000 blankets and 100,000 bedspreads, to be furnished by May 1. The requisition means that each Belgian soldier and officer would have more than two mattresses, four bedspreads and three woolen blankets.

The infiltration of about 100,000 foreign troops into one of the most densely populated sections of Europe, with its 4,000,000 inhabitants, or as many as are scattered over the whole of Switzerland, is no small thing for this congested area.

At Mustheim, two French officers with their ladies boarded the crowded street car on which I happened to ride. Immediately the natives bristled. It's bad enough to have the troops here," they said with one accord, "but when in addition they bring their women with them to eat up what little food there is left in the district—why, that is too much."—The outlook in the Ruhr valley is gloomy.

Howat Takes His Stand with Militants in Miners' Union

(SPECIAL TO "THE WORKER")

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Alexander Howat, released finally from the Kansas jails for violation of the Kansas Industrial Court Law, spoke Sunday afternoon, March 4, at the Labor Lyceum here, before a large and enthusiastic mass convention of the Progressive Miners of District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America.

By this address Howat demonstrated that he stands in the forefront among the men who are destined to lead the American labor movement to its rightful position at the head, instead of at the rear, of the labor movements of the world's industrial countries.

Many a man for less grievances than Howat has against the International Union of the United Mine Workers, has deserted not only his organization, but the entire labor movement as well. Many under far less provocation have declared war upon their organization, and endeavored to destroy it by working for the building up of a dual movement. Many a man has been unable to see any grievances other than his own, and has attempted to secure individual redress regardless of the grievances of others. But not so Howat.

Howat in his speech placed himself squarely on record as opposed to actions such as these. While unsparing in his condemnation of John L. Lewis and the International officialdom, he displayed no bitterness, nor pleaded for factionalism to cease, and for all forces to unite to better the conditions of the miners and their families. Far from deserting the general Labor Movement, Howat called upon all workers to unite to bring about in the nation the conditions deserved by free men and women.

Much to the disappointment of the "gang", of which there were a dozen or so in the meeting, Howat came out decisively against dual unionism, in the statement that, "If I never get back into an organization until I start a dual union, I will stay on the outside".

The description of the Kansas affair quite naturally took up a large part of Howat's remarks, but not to the exclusion of other issues. Chief among these was the coke region betrayal. Speaking from firsthand information secured by a visit to the coke region during the preceding week, Howat stated that he had never seen a more determined spirit than among the coke region men. He criticized Lewis for allowing the signing of the infamous agreements with the Hillman Co. and others, by which part of their mines were placed under contract without requiring them to include their coke region holdings. He stated that the coke region operators, the same as any other operators, can be forced to recognize the union, pledged to the men of the coke region his full support in their efforts to establish unionism, and appealed for immediate and continued assistance from all organized miners for the region which it is admitted made possible such victory as was won in the 1922 strike. Howat called upon all Progressive Local Unions to pass resolutions urging the International to get back of the coke region with its full power and influence.

Howat's experience makes him particularly qualified to support the policy of independent political action by the working class, and he spoke unequivocally in favor of a party controlled by the workers, in industry and on the farms. He stated that if laws are to be respected they must be worthy of respect, and the only way to insure the passage of laws worthy of respect by the working class, is to have a strong party controlled by the workers.

In his scathing denunciation of the Kansas Industrial Court Law, which he declares is now a dead letter because of the refusal of the Kansas miners to obey it, Howat showed that he is not one of the cringing labor leaders who can be intimidated into permitting the rights of the workers to be trampled under foot by the employer who, unable to put across his schemes in a direct struggle with the workers, takes refuge behind an unfair law passed by any means, legitimate or otherwise.

Referring particularly to the question of anti-strike laws, Howat declared that the fundamental right to strike cannot be taken from the men by any law. Strikes, Howat declared, are undesirable, but if needed, then the workers should resort to them without hesitation.

Referring to the report that he had called 764 strikes in 30 months, Howat branded it as false, but declared that he would be willing to call that many strikes if necessary to insure the miners their right to strike.

Detroit Labor Orders Truth About Michigan Raids Told Workers

(Special to "The Worker")

DETROIT, Mich.—Organized labor here has taken a definite and decisive stand in support of the trade unionists shortly to go on trial in Michigan under the criminal syndicalism law. Upon the introduction of a resolution bearing on the case, a stirring debate was held at which it was pointed out that the Michigan criminal syndicalism law could easily be used against the trade union movement and that it was significant that in the Michigan State Law Code the law is placed under the heading—"strikes."

The resolution which was unanimously adopted follows:

WHEREAS, There are twenty odd members of the Trade Union movement under indictment and awaiting trial at Bridgeman, Mich., for the alleged violation of the "Criminal Syndicalist Law."

WHEREAS, The Criminal Syndicalist Law" is a remnant of the wartime legislation that is intended to prohibit the constitutional right of Americans to Free Speech and Assemblage, and

WHEREAS, The present arrests are an outgrowth of the farcical efforts of the Burns' Agency and other labor - wrecking organizations to shake down the employers of the country and frame those who would dare to champion the cause of Labor. Therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the Detroit Federation of Labor appoint a committee to fully acquaint the Detroit unions with the facts in this case and appeal for all possible assistance from the local labor movement in the name of the Detroit Federation of Labor and the Labor Defense Council, and be it further

RESOLVED, That all delegates to the Detroit Federation of Labor be requested to aid this committee in all ways and to the extent of their ability, and particularly when members of the Committee appear before the delegates' local union.

Militants in labor organizations throout the land might well secure the adoption of similar resolutions as William Z. Foster goes to trial in Michigan.

Non-Union Miners Strike

By Sidney Warren

(Federated Press Correspondent)

VANCOUVER, B. C.—The walkout of non-union miners following the Cumberland mine disaster, which cost 33 men their lives, has ended in failure. The men have returned to work. The disaster was due to defective ventilation and could easily have been remedied. Every miner in Cumberland knows this and has known it for years but being unorganized he was at the mercy of his employers.

Labor Banks Face Billions of Capitalism

Fifth Article

By H. M. WICKS

The main bank of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is located at Cleveland, O., and we are informed that it started with a capital stock of $1,000,000, and that after three years it now has assets of $15,547,000, which includes deposits, furniture and fixtures, etc. When we consider the fact that the banking power of the United States, according to the last report of the Comptroller of the currency (June 30, 1921) represented by combined paid-in capital, surplus and profits, deposits and circulation of all reporting banks, including national and state and the twelve federal reserve banks, is $48,219,900,000 we get a faint idea of the futility of attempting to beat the banking combine at its own game.

When we further consider the history of banking in the United States and realize the terrific momentum acquired by the banking system the puny efforts of Stone & Co. would appear ludicrous were it not for the tragedy that their experiments held in store for organized labor if it places its finance in the hands of these adventurers. The banking power of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, was $24,240,100,000. In the seven year period intervening up to 1921 there was an increase of $23,879,800,000, or 98.1 per cent.

This same Dr. Walter F. McCaleb, who has had a hand in a number of labor banks, including one for the Non-Partisan League in North Dakota, is now active in New York City organizing the Federation Trust Company, sponsored by the Central Trades and Labor Council, the New York State Federation of Labor and the New York Building Trades Council. Mr. McCaleb appeared before a meeting of workers the other day in New York and bombastically made the same insane assertion, attributed to Mr. Warren Stone, of the Engineers, to the effect that labor could control the financial system of the United States in 10 years thru these cooperative banks.

Since the banking power today is over 48 billions, and considering the fact that its increase in the seven-year period 1914—21 was almost 100 per cent, we can look forward seven years hence, if the banking system grows at the same ratio, and see the stupendous amount of close to 100 billion.

In the course of a few years this figure would mount so high that the human mind could no longer grasp its enormity by the ordinary practice of arithmetic. As the astronomers, in measuring the immense distances of the universe as we know it, had to abandon exact numbers and measure distance in terms of light-years, so we would eventually be compelled to measure the banking power of the United States were it possible to continue its present pace. Fortunately for mathematicians, at least, the system cannot persist long enough to develop the necessity for astronomical figures in dealing with finance.

In face of figures already existing the assertion of Stone and McCaleb to the effect that labor with its few millions can conquer the billions of Wall Street in ten years appears as some weird nightmare of a delirious mind. It does not require a profound knowledge of history and economics to know that such an eventuality is not within the realm of possibilities in ten years or ten thousand years. (Continued next week.)

Coal Miners' Relief Worker Is Arrested; Held 24 Hours, Freed

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Within a week to a day from the time that Fred H. Merrifield was arrested by the Mine Workers' officialdom's sluggers, J. A. Hamilton, Secretary of the Pittsburgh Miners' Relief Conference who was appointed the tragic sisuation of the stranded miners in Fayette County was arrested on a charge of "suspicious person" on Liberty Avenue and locked up for 24 hours.

Hamilton had been active in arranging the Howat meeting at the Labor Lyceum during the afternoon and had gone down street on his way home when, after having been followed for some time in a taxicab, he was placed under arrest.

As soon as an attorney began an investigation he was released and it was shown that the charges were so ridiculous that he was not arraigned for a formal hearing.

Workers in other parts of the country may expect such reports from Pittsburgh for some time but the relief and publicity work will go on without fear or favor.

Let the Miners Run the Mines!

Nationalize the Mines—Establish Workers Control and a Workers Government

The private ownership of the mines by the coal companies has proven a collosal failure. Under control of the coal barons the mines produce big profits for the owners, but that is all.

The miners who dig the coal at the daily risk of their lives receive low wages and are compelled to work under bad working conditions. The prices charged the consumers for coal are exorbitant.

If there was no other reason for declaring the private ownership of the mines a failure, the fact that in three years the miners have been obliged to go on strike twice to defend their standard of living would be enough.

Every miner knows that a strike means hardships and suffering for himself and his family. A strike brings in its wake violence and bloodshed when the armed thugs employed by the coal barons get in their dirty work. A strike means long legal struggles to save the workers upon whom the bosses try to put the blame for the work of their own plug-uglies, as in Herrin and in West Virginia.

In 1919 the half-million miners of this country were obliged to go on strike to fight the greedy bosses. In 1922 the same half-million miners had to go out again to defend themselves against a wage-cut and to save their organization.

A system of producing coal which twice in three years compels a half-million miners to go thru such struggles has proven itself a failure and should be swept into the discard.

The coal companies have proven themselves unfit to carry on the work of the mines in other ways. Their management of production is wasteful and inefficient. Because of their inefficiency the miners have work only about half the time.

The coal companies try to make the miners pay for their inefficiency by keeping down wages. They endeavor to make up for their wastefulness by saving on the safe-guarding of the miners. They charge exorbitant prices to pay for their wastefulness and to grab enormous profits, and then try to put the responsibility on the "high wages" of the miners.

The only way out of this situation is thru nationalization of the mines. The mine must cease to be the private property of the coal companies.

The United Mine Workers and Nationalization

The 1921 National Convention of the United Mine Workers instructed President Lewis to appoint a Nationalization Research Committee to draft a plan for the nationalization of the mines. This committee has recently made public a report containing a plan for nationalization.

This plan proposes that the government purchase the mines at a cost of $4,500,000,000; that a government commission control the budget and policies; and that a coal mining council be established in which the coal miners, technicians of the coal industry and cousumers will be represented.

This moderate plan for nationalization has met with the united opposition of the reactionaries in the United Mine Workers. President Lewis and his handyman, Editor Searles, is bitterly denouncing the proposal. The struggle over this plan has become a struggle between the Lewis machine and the progressives in the miners union.

In this struggle every rank and file member of the union, every progressive should line up in support of the nationalization program. It is the same Lewis machine which stands in the way of the United Mine Workers becoming a more effective fighting organization, the same Lewis machine which betrayed the miners of Fayette and Somerset Counties after their splendid fight in support of last year's strike, which is now trying to stop the movement for nationalization of the mines.

The Workers Party and Nationalization

The Workers Party does not believe that nationalization of the mines will solve the problem of the coal miners while a capitalist government is in power at Washington.

A government that called upon the governors of all the states to fill the coal fields with soldiers so that scabs could get out coal, which uses courts, injunctions and soldiers against strikers, would make the lot of the miners even worse if it owned the mines.

Nationalization of the mines with a capitalist government in power is not enough. The workers must become the government. They must be the government which carries thru the plan of nationalization.

The Nationalization Research Committee has pointed out the need of a strong labor representation in the government if the nationalization plan is to mean anything. It has pointed out the need of a Labor Party to carry on the political struggles of the miners and other workers.

Altho convention after convention of the United Mine Workers has declared for independent political action by the workers the representatives of the United Mine Workers sent to the Cleveland Conference last December by the Lewis machine voted against the formation of a Labor Party, betraying the instructions of the convention.

The Workers Party is for nationalization and for the formation of a Labor Party. It urges the members of the United Mine Workers' Union to give their support to both these proposals, which the reactionary Lewis machine is fighting. But the Workers Party would be remiss in its duty if it did not point out that nationalization and a Labor Party can only be steps toward the real means of relieving themselves from the evils under which they now suffer.

WORKERS' CONTROL

Nationalization of the mines must be accompanied by Workers' Control. The workers who do the work of the coal industry must take over the management of that industry.

The union must have power to decide upon wages, hours and working conditions. It must have absolute power over the safeguarding of the mines. Modern science can eliminate most of the dangers of coal mining. It is only the greed of the employers which makes necessary the yearly toll of lives lost in mine "accidents."

Workers' Control means that the workers in the coal industry, those who actually dig the coal and those who perform the technical work of the industry will themselves direct the work of the industry, with only such supervision as is needed to safeguard the interests of other groups of workers.

THE WORKERS' GOVERNMENT

The only means of achieving the nationalization of the mines and Workers' Control is thru a Workers' Government.

As long as the coal barons have the power of the government at Washington behind them there can be no relief from the present intolerable conditions in the mining industry.

It is the government which upholds and supports the present system of private ownership of the mines. It is the government which uses its power against the union when it is fighting for better things for the mine workers.

If the mines could be nationalized with the present government in power the government would use its power even more directly against the workers. It is a capitalist government and would do that in the interest of the capitalist class as a whole.

The government in power must be as completely a workers' government as the present government is a capitalist government before the mine workers can emancipate themselves from the low wages and bad working conditions which exist at present in the mining industry.

Such a government would make the mines the property of the workers as a whole and establish workers' control.

MINE WORKERS!

FIGHT FOR NATIONALIZATION AND A LABOR PARTY!

BUT REMEMBER THAT IS ONLY A BEGINNING:

THE GOAL MUST BE A WORKERS' GOVERNMENT AND WORKERS' CONTROL OF INDUSTRY.

Try Sellins Slayers In Penn Court

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Three and a half years after the bestial murder of Mrs. Fanny Sellins, organizer of the United Mine Workers of America, by deputy sheriffs, three of the thugs are now on trial.

The murder of Mrs. Sellins on August 26, 1919, was one of the most shocking crimes ever perpetrated against labor by corporation hirelings. A strike was in progress in the small town of West Natrona, when a squad of deputies, owned by the Allegheny Steel, Coke and Coal Company, fired upon a group of strikers and sympathizers standing on top of a hill. Mrs. Sellins and Joseph Strolski, an aged man who was a spectator, were killed. After shooting Mrs. Sellins the depraved deputies then beat her head into a pulp with their guns and clubs.

Now, at last, a farcical trial is being held for these assassins, as the result of the constant agitation of the miners to force the state authorities to act.

Since the Steel corporation owns this section of the country it is plain that this trial is a mere formality to silence the demands for justice on the part of the miners' union. Since the union miners refused to "forget" the case it is to be "properly disposed of" legally, which means that the defendants will be whitewashed by a capitalist court.

Anna Leisman Dies Victim of New York Prison Conditions

The state of New York killed Anna Leisman, one of the political prisoners recently released by Governor Smith. Last Sunday, about two weeks after her release, her funeral was held, she having died ten days after her release as the result of weakness from exposure suffered while in prison. She had served nine months of a savage sentence imposed upon her by the court when she was pardoned.

She was convicted on framed-up testimony supplied by the notorious bomb squad of New York City. According to her defense at her trial last summer, she was distributing advertisements of a May Day Meeting when arrested. As the detectives knew they could not railroad her on the evidence they obtained from her person, they secured a number of propaganda leaflets issued by a Communist group called "May Day of the Revolution", and accused her of distributing them. Her sentence began last August.

Comrade Leisman was 45 years of age, had been in this country 11 years and was a member of the Workers Party and the United Hat Makers, besides being active in various Lettish organizations. The National Defense Committee is arranging to hold a memorial for her in the near future.

Among the speakers at the funeral were Marion Emerson, member Central Executive Committee, Workers Party; and Rose Barron, for the National Defense Committee. Kate Gitlow, as well as Minnie Kalnin, who went to prison with Anna Leisman, were also at the funeral.

Y. M. C. A. Loves Russian Czarists

EVERETT, Wash.—Favoritism to counter-revolutionary Russians by the local Y. M. C. A. as against unemployed American ex-service men has been revealed here thru a letter by President E. L. Scott of the Y. M. C. A. Scott decribes how the Rev. Edgar M. Rogers of the Trinity Episcopal church has been "nobly befriending" four former members of the czar's army and got them homes in the Y. M. C. A. dormitory. They were given jobs in local mills at a time when six service men were told there were no jobs to be had.

Knit Goods Strike Ties Up Industry

At the end of the first week of the general strike of the Amalgamated Knit Goods Workers in New York, the ranks of the employers are breaking while the workers are daily gaining in strength.

Altho the employers' group, organized under the name of the Knitted Outerwear Manufacturers' Association, has declared that it will not yield to the demands of the union, since last Monday there have been many employers besieging headquarters of the strike committee for the purpose of settling on the basis of the union's demands.

The burden of the struggle has been carried on by the militant elements, who have been continually on the job and doing the vital work for conducting the strike.

I. Ladinsky, manager of the union, in general charge of the strike, is optimistic about the outcome and is sure that the bosses will capitulate before many days.

An amusing incident connected with the strike is the foolish efforts of the representatives of the yellow Socialist organ and enemy of the working class, the New York Call, to capitalize the strike for its own nefarious purpose. Instead of assisting in the actual struggle of the workers, Call speakers have been endeavoring to advertise their publication.

Forttunafly the workers know the Call well enough not to be deceived by such shabby pretenses and the rank and file will win in spite of the meddling of political adventurers from the discredited Socialist Party.

Sunday, March 11th, at 11 a. m., H. M. Wicks will lecture at the Williamsberg Forum, at 76 Throop Ave., Brooklyn. The subject will be: "The Present Situation in Europe." Admission free.

Ida Rothstein Goes on Tour for Amalgamation in the Needle Trades

As a part of the campaign for amalgamation being conducted by the International Committee of the Needle Trades Section of the Trade Union Educational League, arrangements have been made to tour Ida Rothstein, one of the best known members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, thruout the United States and Canada where garment workers are organized. Comrade Rothstein will deliver lectures and do organization work.

The purpose of the meetings will be to familiarize needle trade workers of the seven needle trade international unions with the program of amalgamation that is now being spread broadcast by the Needle Trades Section of the T. U. E. L. All militants in the towns indicated below are urged to attend the meetings and render every assistance possible. Also the militants interested are urged to get in touch with the above committee at 208 E. 12th St.

This campaign is a prelude to calling a national conference of all needle trades militants that will take place in New York City on May 5th and 6th. The following are the places and dates to be covered by Comrade Rothstein:

Philadelphia, March 11-15; Baltimore, 16-18; Pittsburgh, 19-20; Cincinnati, 21-22; Louisville, 23-24; Indianapolis, 25-26; Chicago, March 27 to April 4; Cleveland, 5-6; Detroit, 7-8; Toronto, 11-12; Rochester, 13-15; Montreal (Canada), 16-18; Boston, 19-22.

The Union of Technical Workers, Painters and Sculptors of Mexico adopted a thoroughly Communist Program declaring their adherence to the Red (Moscow) International, their belief in the need of a Proletarian Dictatorship and their determination to work for the destruction of the present system and the establishment of a new order.

Olgin Raps Court Attack by Yellows

Officials of the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union, calling a well deserved denunciation of the rank and file of their own organization, in a desparate effort to buttress their tottering prestige, have appealed to the district attorney to summon M. J. Olgin, editor of the Jewish Daily Freiheit, to furnish evidence of assault by gangsters upon the militants in the union, stories of which were published in the Freiheit.

The representatives of the interests of the rank and file or the "left-lists" in the Furriers union have been subjected to a veritable reign of terror by organized gangsters. So desperate have been the assaults upon the left elements that many of them felt they were taking their lives in their hands to continue agitation against the reactionary joint board.

After being summoned to a capitalist court to furnish evidence upon which the articles in the Freiheit were based, Olgin, in a hot retort to the Joint Board of Furriers, challenges them to permit the question and all the evidence to be submitted to a Court of Representatives of Workers, elected in an impartial manner.

This challenge will undoubtedly be declined, as the one thing a yellow socialists detests is open debate before the working class.

The court attack is quite plainly a part of the campaign of the reactionary Jewish Daily Forward, controlled by the Hillquit-Cahan clique, against the Freiheit, as this paper is fast alienating the support of the Jewish workers from the discredited Forward.

Declare Foreign-Born Workers Integral Part of U. S. Working Class

(Special to "The Worker")

CLEVELAND, O. — The resolution adopted by the great mass meeting here, protesting against the proposed legislation tending to restrict the rights of the foreign-born workers, was as follows:

"We, the foreign-born workers of Cleveland, Ohio, hereby proclaim to the workers of this country that we are an integral part of the working class of America and that no laws aiming at suppression of the foreign-born workers will separate us from the army of American-born workers.

"We call upon the foreign-born workers in this country to rally around the militant element who agitated and lead in the struggle against the proposed measures which tend to enslave the foreign-born workers. Only by the united force of all the workers can we resist the capitalist offensive against the organized workers of this country, an offensive with the purpose to create an antagonism among the working class of this country and keep the workers divided.

"Foreign-born workers! The power of the working class is in organization. The workers cannot afford to linger, but must immediately rally under the banner of the revolutionary organizing among the masses Party of America.

"We call upon the workers to support the Workers Party press, the only press in this country fighting against all repressive measures that strike at the working class of this country."

This resolution might well serve as the basis for similar protests to be adopted elsewhere.

THE WORKERS' REPUBLIC

THE GREATEST ACHIEVEMENT OF MODERN TIMES

By Dr. JOHN HAYES HOLMES

The most remarkable thing that I saw on my visit to Moscow this past summer was the evidence on every hand of the great efforts being made to rebuild the shattered social structure of that unhappy land.

"Come back here in two years," said a Soviet official as he made a good-bye on the eve of my departure, "and we will show you the finest capital in Europe."

What the statesmen of our Western world have completely failed to do — namely, to control and direct back toward restoration the destructive forces let loose by the war—these Russians have accomplished. In this achievements they have perhaps saved not only their own country but all of Europe. I believe this to be the greatest achievement of modern times, and one which is certain to rank the leaders of Soviet Russia among the supreme statesmen of history.

An Invitation to the Proletarian Party

C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers Party, has extended an invitation to the Proletarian Party to unite forces. The invitation was sent thru its executive secretary, John Keracli, and is as follows:

Dear Comrade Keracli: — In the name of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, I am extending to you the formal invitation to join the Workers Party.

The Workers Party has demonstrated during its eight years of existence that it is a genuine Communist Party. It has become a section of the Communist International, and it has been recognized by the Communist International as a fraternal organization. The program of our organization is a clear statement of principles and the constitution provides for a centralized Communist form of organization.

The Proletarian Party has declared itself to be a Communist organization. It has declared its sympathy with the Communist International. On the basis of these declarations we are of the opinion that the members of the Proletarian Party should become a part of the centralized, Communist Party, The Workers Party of America.

We recognize in the membership of your Party an earnest self-sacrificing group inspired by the determination to help realize the goal of the Communist movement. However, as a separate organization, with its present membership, the Proletarian Party cannot play an effective part in the class struggle in the United States. As members of the Workers Party, which now embraces 20,000 members, the members of your organization can render very important service. We believe that this service could be very great indeed along the line of assisting in carrying on the educational work within the party.

The Communist movement in this country is making new steps in advance. After years of persecution it is again openly carrying on its work. The consolidation of the Proletarian Party with the Workers Party will be another step forward.

I request that you bring this matter before your National Committee. Details can be taken up thru a conference of representatives. For unity of all Communist forces in the United States, I am fraternally yours, (Signed) C. E. RUTHENBERG, Executive Secretary.

The Memoirs of a Provocateur

BY JOSEPH FREEMAN

The memoirs of the notorious Russian provocateur Kaplinsky, which are appearing serially in the Freiheit, throw light on some important aspects of the class struggle. They reveal not only the psychology of a certain type of provocateur, but, what is particularly valuable to American revolutionists just now, they emphsize the importance of political action.

Kaplinsky was one of the original founders of "The Bund", in 1897. Two years later he was arrested by the Russian secret police, and under the pressure of their power and chicanety, became a provocateur.

For ten years Kaplinsky was one of the most energetic workers in the Bund, where he served as spy for the Ochrana. In 1909 he was discovered. When the Bolsheviks came into power he was tried for his crime against the revolution, found guilty and shot. In his memoirs, which he wrote to justify his duplicity, he seeks to explain how he became a provocateur. The conversation in which he was asked to serve as a spy for the Czar's government is illuminating. The speaker is Zubatov, head of the political section of the Ochrana, one of the most charming and sly and vile scoundrels in the police of Europe.

"I know," Zubatov said to Kaplinsky, "that you consider me a beast who deprives people of their liberty and causes them great suffering. But I am really a man of ideas, and I assure you that I suffer in my own conscience because I am forced to arrest hundreds of people, many of whom are innocent.

"This is really a very important point, and for this reason: revolutionists are nothing more than a little group of ideologists who exploit the economic miseries of the masses in order to make trouble. Should revolutionists be deprived of this excuse for agitation; in other words, should the workers be given the freedom to fight openly, not for any political basis, for their economic demands, revolutionists would have no success whatever among the masses.

"By thus breaking the hold of the revolutionists on the masses we shall attain two aims — in the first place we shall give the workers a chance to better their economic condition; and in the second place, we of the secret police will not have to arrest ideologists. For this work I need men who are acquainted with my theories and are capable of carrying them to work; namely, capable of creating among the masses a movement based purely upon economic demands."

Of course, Zubatov considered Kaplinsky such a man, and by flattering his intelligence and character succeeded in getting him first to consider, later to take up, the work. The important point of his story, however, is the shrewd recognition by Zubatov, that no movement among the workers is worth a pinch of snuff unless it is a movement consciously aiming at political power. It was this same Zubatov who formed a group of "independent" workers to compete with the Bund—a species of split-politics carefully cultivated by the secret police. Provocateurs recognize the futility of "economic" demands without a political basis. It is imperative for workers to recognize that, too. Only by seizing the political apparatus of the state can their economic demand find any fulfillment in reality.

Among the Magazines

That excellent result of the combination of Communism and Art, THE LIBERATOR, for March, is now on sale at all news-stands. Due to the "new policy" of the magazine, it now contains, besides the usual literary contribution, articles on the situation of the workers' struggle, from St. Joseph to London and back to the militant miners of Alex Howat's district in Kansas.

The March issue also contains the first instalment of Floyd Dell's "Out line of Marriage", written in the engaging style of his "Were You Ever a Child?", and which promises to be a very interesting series of genuine contributions of the eternal question.

There are poems of superior worth by Simon Felshin, Lydia Gibson, Charles E. S. Wood, Gwendolen Haste (Winner of last year's National Poetry Prize) and George Sterling; and there are book reviews which are scarcely to be equalled anywhere, including the astounding review of the Open Shop activities of the bourgeoisie.

An article by Ella Reeve Bloor on Martin Andersen Nexo; one by Max Bedacht on the 8th Congress of American communists; London correspondence by R. W. Postgate, and editorials by Robert Minor complete this issue of what is universally conceded to be the best radical review, artistic and political, which exists in the United States . . . or elsewhere.

The "Labor Herald" Has Meat

The LABOR HERALD, which Lozovsky calls the most interesting review in the international movement, contains features and articles which are of paramount interest and moment to any worker who desires to know what the militant elements in the American labor movement are doing. The March issue just out is filled with Meat, and no militant can afford to do without it.

The insignificant price of the magazine, 15 cents, makes it impossible for anyone to buy it, and it may be obtained from any member of the Trade Union Educational League, or from the national headquarters, 118 N. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

The March "Pictorial"

The March issue of the SOVIET RUSSIA PICTORIAL contains, besides the regular features, additional articles by Isadora Duncan, Attorney Charles Recht, Anna Louise Strong and others. There is an interesting biography of the "super-spy" Azev, and a calender of the March 8 revolutions. Especially fine are the photographs of the Moscow Art Theatre and its members, and of American Communists in Russia.

No one can afford to be without this excellent "Graphic Monthly Review of Russian Affairs", and it is surely worth the 20 cents which it costs.

"The Young Worker"

One of the best features of the March issue of the YOUNG WORKER, official organ of the Young Workers League, is a lengthy report of the recent congress of the Young Communist International, by Martin Abern, who was delegated to the congress by the Y. W. L. The YOUNG WORKER now having assumed a more popular tone by its short stories, articles and editorials, is sure to have an increased sale. It can be obtained from all members of the League or from 2317 Fullerton Ave., Chicago, Ill., for 10 cents.

Sea of Words Helps Drown Ship Subsidy

By JAY LOVESTONE

Sunk beneath a sea of words! This is what befell the Ship Subsidy of the Harding Administration. And in this wreck of the hopes of the shipping interests there was much available flotsam in the political careers of scores of Congressmen and Senators. Today a great flock of lame ducks are desperately fighting with each other in the depths of the muddy political waters of Washington for the few stray morsels not yet devoured by the Republican Administration.

Fights for Shipping Capitalists

One year ago the president launched an offensive on the high seas of oratory to secure a bonus for the shipping interests. This was part of the Government's general program of bonuses for the powerful capitalist interests. The president marshalled all the forces of the Government to secure a subsidy for the shipping magnates. The railroads, the banks, the mineral interests, the great manufacturing corporations have all been handed bonuses in some form or other by the 67th Congress. And the capitalists of the highways of the ocean were not to be left out in the cold when hundreds of millions of dollars were being handed out freely.

But the Shipping Trust did not fare as well as its sister trusts on the land. The consideration of the Ship Subsidy Bill came too late to avoid arousing opposition after so many bonuses had been granted to the giant industrial interests. After the most resolute opposition that any bill had won in Congress in a long time the House passed the Ship Subsidy Bill by a vote of 208—184. Despite the fact that the House consisted of scores of lame ducks, Congressmen whose repudiation was in no small measure due to their sympathy with this Act, and despite the fact that the Administration had a majority of 167 the Bill received only a majority of 24.

At that the Bill as passed by the House does not meet with the approval of the president and the hopes and expectations of the shipping barons. As proposed by Harding in his message of November 21, 1922, the Government would guarantee the shipping capitalists a subsidy of about $30,000,000 a year for fifteen years. Under these conditions the kings of industry and finance would consent to purchase the millions of tons now owned by the Government and operated by the Shipping Board. Needless to say the capitalists would also receive the Government fleet at an insignificant fraction of the price the Government paid for it during the war period. This policy of the Government was opposed by the sale of 2,276 ships on September 12, 1922, at $750,000 or approximately what the United States paid for each one of these ships. But the House, ignoring the president's proposal, required Congress to authorize the annual appropriations out of the subsidy fund. The shipping capitalists were disappointed at this change in their program. They feel that this does not give them sufficient assurance of continuity and to enable them to purchase safely the Government ships.

Harding, as spokesman of the shipping interests, stands for a privately owned, privately operated, and publicly subsidized merchant marine. He consistently and desperately fought for this. He strained every effort to make deals with legislators to put over this program. But it was talked to death in a filibuster.

The Conflict of Interests

The Ship Subsidy Bill has been a bone of contention, a casus belli between two conflicting economic interests. The strong industrial magnates have rallied to its support. The Standard Oil and the United States Steel Corporation welcomed the idea of the Government granting them a bonus for carrying their oil products in their own bottoms. The shipping interests in general took with great glee to the idea of a Government guarantee for fifteen years. Against these big capitalists were arrayed the forces of the farmers and organized labor. The American Federation of Labor saw in the Bill a menace to the already crippled Seamen's Act. The farming masses that had been suffering so much from high railway freight rates, outrageous prices for industrial products, and a general, severe depression, were lent upon putting an end to the orgy of bonuses granted to the powerful capitalists. The farmers who are compelled to pay high prices for everything they buy and to receive low prices for everything they sell could not see any reason for the Government granting hundreds of millions of dollars to the very people responsible for their miserable conditions.

The blow thus administered to the Harding administration is indicative of the recent growth of small-capitalist progressivism. For the present, atleast, a halt has been brought to the orgy of bonuses granted to the capitalists by the Government.

There is a fascination about the Past (Boston, Pub. Co.) by R. W. Postgate. Here we have a collection of excellent sketches of such unfortunately forgotten "minor" figures in the movement for the freedom of the working class, as Blanqui; Ferre, who was chief of police under the Commune in '71; Admiral Parker, who led the Nore mutineers; James E. Smith, who changed from revolutionary to religious mystic; and who was "the brains of the Grand National Trades Union"; and the two Louis' of '48, Blanc and Pujol. The biography and criticism of the works of Blanqui (worth the price of the book) is an audacious figure, who originated the phrase of "dictatorship of the proletariat" and "arming of the proletariat" and the disarming of the bourgeoisie", who dragged out his hectic existence in prison and out, is treated with a fine knowledge, not only of Blanqui, but of the social period of his activity; and Postgate has the keenness to observe that the Spartacus Bund was based on Blanquist principles. The three sketches of incidents under the Commune are interesting and written with skill. The resume of the history of the Commune, however, falls below the one printed in the same author's "Revolution".

Then there is "A World History for the Workers" (Labour Pub. Co.) by Alfred Barton, which attempts to condense even Wells and write history from a Marxist aspect. There you have it: from the Nebular theory to the NEP, of the Bolsheviks. There is much lost by the attempt to sandwich in and occasionally the interpretation becomes even hazy.

All of which brings us to "Secrets of Menshevik Georgia." (Communist Party of Great Britain) by J. Shapir. This pamphlet, based on authenticated documents, clears away the tear-dust of a "Democratic, peaceful" Georgia, which is always brought to the table when the communists attempt to form a united front with the themselves of the passing of the "perfect I. L. P. State" as the lank prop of the Second International. J. Ramsay McDonald, called it. The sordid tale of the collusion of the Georgian Mensheviks with Denikin, with the British Gen. Carey, with the French Col. Bertrand, in sincere desire to suppress any Bolsheviks, is told by Comrade Shapir in a manner which defies contradiction. It is an indictment nearly as damning as that of the international Menshevism.

"The American Labor Year Book, 1921" (Rand School), altho it has appeared at a very late date for a year book (they were too busy kicking out Glassberg and Trachtenberg to publish their books) still contains very much valuable material for all students of the movement, which is inaccessible elsewhere. Significantly enough, the American radical movements are written of with catholicity while the American movement is limited to the exclusion of any notice of the Communist Party, or of the Trade Union Educational League . . . Significantly enough.

The best, most impartial and exhaustive study of the I. W. W. remains "The I. W. W." by Paul F. Brissenden, a new edition of which has just been issued by Longmans, Green and Co. The volume is too well known to need comment, but it is to be hoped that a new edition will contain something regarding the influence on the I. W. W. of the Russian Revolution, the American Communists, the Unity Committee within the I. W. W., and most important the T. U. E. L. Something should also be said about the loss of prestige, and the falling of the organization into the hands of anarcho-syndicalists, and an almost complete detachment from the Marxist theories which they, occasionally at least, professed to hold.

The story of Dr. Frederick von Gunmacher in "Atlantis" was that of a mad love for an eerie child-dancer, with a final regeneration from insanity by the love of a noble woman. In "Phantom" (B. W. Huebsch) the story is essentially the same. Lorenz Lubota, a hunchback clerk is driven to madness, to theft, almost to murder and then to prison, because of a wild infatuation for the daughter of a rich merchant. Like the Doctor he is restored to sanity, to happiness, by the sincere love of another woman. The story is told with such a complete hiding of all the obvious artistic tricks, as to amaze one. Its apparent artlessness is the supreme art of the famous author, Gerhardt Hauptmann.

Get Dolled Up on $4,662 per Year

By HARRY GODFREY

If you are out of work, or if your wages aren't enough to pay the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker, or if any such little thing is troubling you, the reason probably is very simple. You don't pay enough attention to appearances. Appearances, consisting of clothes and details of that sort, the "success" articles agree, go far to make or mar your chances of getting on.

Now, to get you gotta be well dressed. And here's how to do it. The Custom Cutters' Club, composed of tailors from all over the country, and which soon will hold its convention here, has given us the recipe for being well dressed. All it takes, according to the club's budget, is $4,662 a year. That will dress you properly. Why don't you do it?

Labor Film Has Censorship of Famous FSR Film

(By F.S.R. Press Service)

HARRISBURG, Pa.—The Executive Council of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor has adopted a resolution vigorously condemning the State Board of Motion Picture Censors for its interference with "Russia Thru the Shadows," a film distributed by the Friends of Soviet Russia.

N. Y. SEES RUSSIAN FILM.

NEW YORK.—Lexington Theater would have been filled even if it were twice its present size by the crowd that came to see the seven-reel film, "Russia Thru the Shadows," at its first public showing in New York. As it is, great numbers had to be turned away. The enthusiasm which marked the showings in Philadelphia, Boston, and other cities, was evinced in New York, too.

FOR THE RUSSIAN ORPHANS

SHAFT, Pa.—Local 1398 of the United Mine Workers of America in this town has voted fifty dollars toward the support of destitute children in the Workers' Republic. In transmitting the amount to the national office of the Friends of Soviet Russia, the treasurer enclosed an additional $5 as his personal contribution.

Back Stage with Folks of Moscow Art Theatre

By NANCY MARKOFF

I sat on a bench back stage of the Moscow Art Theatre waiting for Constantine Stanislavsky. I had come to invite him and his fellow artists to attend the Liberator Ball. The actors and actresses kept dropping in, some to make ready for the afternoon's performance, others for a little chat. The greeting between these people was the one thing that caught my interest. We in America nod our heads in recognition even if we have not met in weeks. These people who see each other every day and sometimes twice a day have a hearty greeting for each other every time they meet. The greeting is accompanied with a hearty handshake and a kiss on the hand for the women. I watched to see if the kiss would be omitted, but it was there every time.

Stanislavsky walked in. He is a far more imposing figure off the stage than on the stage. Even if you did not know who he was, you at once felt that you were in the presence of the dominating force of the Moscow Art Theatre. I waited a few moments expecting the young man in the office to tell him that I was waiting to see him. But instead, Olga Chekhova, a middle-aged youth nodded to me and said "Here he is". So I was again reminded that Russians are different. Some of them, especially foreigners, call Stanislavsky "I walked up to him, introduced myself and stated the nature of my visit.

Stanislavsky does not speak English. He called upon Madame Chekova to act as interpreter.

"We are truly very sorry," she said, "But it is impossible. I can't stand this American way of living. Two performances a day and after the performance we are invited to social functions. I have no time for anything. I do not read—I have not read anything since I am here—as this cannot continue. I am very sorry, but really we can not come."

Applause, social position, publicity, these American values had no meaning for this great Russian actress. She has had no time for reading, so her life was wasted in this country of ours and she resolved that there would be no more social functions that she caught up in her reading. Can anything be more characteristically Russian?

Big Meeting in Fight for Foreign-Born

Speakers in seven languages opened the national campaign for the protection of foreign-born workers at a great mass meeting in Central Opera House, New York City, the first of similar gatherings planned for all the big cities in the nation.

While the attack on the foreign-born, inaugurated in congress by the Harding administration, has been effectively squelched for the present session, plans are under way to meet the new assault that will come with the meeting of the new congress.

The workers of the country, foreign and native born, will be aroused to fight the schemes of the bosses for registration, finger printing, picture-taking, cancelling of naturalization papers and for deporting militants in the labor movement.

Among the speakers at the New York meeting who will also speak at other gatherings, were Ludwig Lore, editor of the Volkszeitung; I. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The Worker" (New York); M. J. Olgin, editor of the Freiheit; Frank Bellanca, editor of the II Lavoratore, the official Italian publication of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; H. M. Wicks, labor editor of "The Worker"; Alexander Bittleman, secretary, Jewish Section, Workers Party; Alexander Chramoff, editor Novy Mir, and Michael Nastasiewsky, editor Schodenni Visti (Ukrainian daily).

Resolutions were adopted calling for a united front of all workers against this repressive legislation that is interpreted as an attack preliminary to a new open-shop drive.

Labor Must Be Partisan in Its Politics

By BEN GITLOW

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, loves to print eulogies from old party politicians, of himself and his officialdom, in "The American Federationist," official monthly publication of the A. F. of L.

Thus in the current issue we find many printed greetings to organized labor from senators, senators-elect, governors and other happy recipients of the support of labor's ballot.

In the eyes of Gompers and his satellites the pronouncements of these politicians are of the first importance to the organized workers in the country. Evidently Gompers believes that their publication is sufficient indication that the political policy of the American Federation of Labor has been vindicated. The prominence given the greetings proves that the leaders of the American Federation of Labor are satisfied with the political leadership of men who are not responsible to organized labor.

Further on in the same issue the political policy of the American Federation of Labor is explained by Gompers in an editorial as follows: "Labor is partisan to principles not to parties. The success of last November was a success for principles. American Labor's great political strength is its non-partisan political policy. No partisan party fight could have gained so magnificent a victory."

This policy of the American Federation of Labor on the political field is a policy of keeping impotent the political power inherent in organized labor. Labor is partisan to principles, says Gompers, not to parties. If such a policy were to be followed on the industrial field the American Federation of Labor would be smashed in a very short time. Suppose the American Federation of Labor would have declared that the principle of the eight hour day should be handled on the industrial field in a non-partisan manner, that it would not organize the workers as partisans for the eight hour day but instead would follow isolated capitalists who would make declarations in favor of the eight-hour day.

Labor on the industrial field is partisan. It drafts a declaration of its principles, adopts a program of action thereto and then organizes the workers in unions as a class to carry the program out successfully.

Political parties are the political partisan organizations of capital. The republican and democratic parties are the political parties of the capitalists, the anti-labor union forces in the country. Gompers' political policy avoids attacking the political parties opposed to organized labor.

That is why politically organized labor in this country is a lamb. It follows blindly, under Gompers' command, individual politicians in the Republican and Democratic parties. It follows LaFollette, who cleverly utilizes organized labor in the political struggles of the small business men. It follows Senator Johnson, in California, whose political machine there still keeps Tom Mooney and others in jail because they are loyal labor union leaders. It follows Governor Smith in New York, even tho in 1919 he utilized the state police against the steel strikers. And so on.

American Labor's great political strength is its non-partisan political policy says Gompers. Where is that political strength. I fail to see it. Is the cause of the workers championed by representatives directly responsible to organized labor? Not at all! Has the American Federation thru its nonpartisan political policy been able to protect the rights of organized labor against the anti-labor politics of the Republican and Democratic parties? Government by injunction still continues, the Coronado decision is still in force and the power of the government is still brutally being used against workers on strike.

Organized labor on the political field must become just as partisan as it is on the industrial field. It must organize politically to carry out its principles. Its representatives on the political field must be just as responsible to it as its representatives on the industrial field. Organized labor, if organized politically, will become a giant. Organized labor cannot combat the force of the capitalists unless it is able to meet the political organization of the capitalists with the political organization of the workers. This means a Labor Party in the United States. The road to power lies thru a well-solidified labor organization, industrially, and a Labor Party, politically.

Bureau of Technical Aid Issues Statement to Members of Society

The Central Bureau of the Society for Technical Aid to the Soviet Russia has issued a statement to the membership as follows:

COMRADES: The Technical Aid has not, during recent months, fulfilled its mission of giving aid to the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia. Its membership has gone down and its committees have not been successful in Russia. This has been due to bad policies pursued by the Central Bureau and to the fact that the direction of the work of the Technical Aid was in the hands of an inefficient Bureau.

The bad policy was in the advocacy of mass emigration to Soviet Russia, which was in opposition to the desires of the Soviet Government itself. The Technical Aid organized large communes, which could not possibly succeed in Soviet Russia because too many men were sent with the machinery brought to Russia by these communes. Because of this there has been widespread dissatisfaction among the members of these communes and they have failed to give the help to Soviet Russia which properly organized units could give.

The Central Bureau was inefficient because it did not see it. It sent to Russia many persons who had no other desire than to aid themselves and who were not interested in aiding Soviet Russia. The Central Bureau was also not strong enough to keep personal self-seeking and personal business out of the work of the Technical Aid.

To meet this situation the Central Bureau has reorganized itself. There have been excluded from the Central Bureau Wilga, Rubin, Finkelberg, Soubkov and Gorelik who were responsible for the wrong policies and inefficiency in the conduct of the work. The Central Bureau now in charge of the work of the Technical Aid now consists of the following comrades: A. Jakira, B. Rosenblatt, editor of Novy Mir; Radjmanovich, Antonuk, A. Nastasievsky, editor of Ukrainian Daily News; Rose Karsner, Osadchey, John Pepper and C. E. Ruthenberg. To these will be added two members of the New York Branch of the Technical Aid.

The re-organized Bureau will immediately put into effect new policies which will make of the Technical Aid Society an effective instrument for the aid of Soviet Russia. These policies will include the following measures:

1. There will be no liquidation of the Technical Aid. It will not be combined with the Friends of Soviet Russia. It will exist as an autonomous organization carrying out the policies laid down by Soviet Russia and the Communist International.

2. The school in New York, which the old Central Bureau permitted to break up, will be maintained. It will be re-organized so as to train real experts to go to Soviet Russia. It will also be made a training school for those workers who remain in the United States so that they can become more efficient in the labor movement here.

3. The Technical Aid will not in the future agitate for mass emigration or for sending of agricultural communes to Soviet Russia. It will train and send small agricultural groups and especially organized industrial units which can give real help to the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia.

4. It will lay the emphasis on the sending of machinery and capital to Soviet Russia, and only such experts are needed.

Thru these new policies the Technical Aid will become a great help to Soviet Russia, which it could not be in the past, due to the wrong policies and inefficiency of the old Central Bureau. The re-organized Bureau calls upon all members of the Technical Aid to give their loyal support to the Central Bureau in its efforts to make the Technical Aid what it was organized to be and to eliminate all self-seeking and personal interests from the organization.

Central Bureau, Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia.

Eastern Conference of T. U. E. L. on May 6th

The Eastern office of the Trade Union Educational League will send out a call for a conference in New York City on Sunday, May 6, of all militant trade unionists in sympathy with its program. The Eastern District extends from Pittsburgh to New York and from Boston to Washington.

Tremendous sentiment for the program of the T. U. E. L. is sweeping the district and of late such a conference has become a necessity, because of the rapid progress being made in this entire section. At present Leagues exist in all principal cities, and members of the League and their sympathisers have been clamoring for a conference in order to coordinate the work thruout the district upon the basis of information regarding industrial conditions that will be obtained thru such a meeting.

All indications are that the conference will be a huge success.

"Roger Bloomer" Makes History for the American Stage and Equity Players

By JOHN DALE.

The Equity Players have started to make history with the production of "Roger Bloomer" at the 48th St. Theatre. We do not want to belittle in the least the three preceding plays offered by the actors in their own theatre. But the present offering from the pen of John Howard Lawson so far surpasses in theme and execution anything yet offered, that it should be put down as the first chapter in the story of this theatre without a profiteering manager. What has gone before has just been prologue.

Henry Hutt takes the difficult title role and interestingly portrays a character that is not new to young American manhood. "Roger Bloomer" has been brought up to the age of 18 in Excelsior, Iowa, not unlike any other dull American town of the middle west of 30,000 population. The boy's father is a Woolworth on a small scale and has plenty of money, that he wants to lump into his son's lap. But Roger has ideas of his own and the trouble starts. It is decided not to send him to a state university, where there are too many "Socialists", but to Yale, where he can make friends, millionaire friends. Roger takes the entrance exams. for three days and then leaves in the lurch French, the sciences. Then he quits. He refuses to write the necessary "Bies" in answer to questions in the history exams. He is dismissed in disgust by the examiner citing capitalist ethics from his throne. Roger tells his father and his mother of his failure and then leaves in the night for New York. He finds that the rebel with ideals isn't given an ovation upon his arrival in the great city. Thousands of other idealists have made the same discovery, are still making it.

To be sure, there is a girl. She worked in the father's store. He had the spirit to get out and had gone on to New York before, giving Roger her address. Roger has his experiences with his capitalist uncle, with the girl, with the human derelict still young, yet already shaking hands with death as he goes shooting for snipes along the gutters with the youthful street walker. "$5 in silk, $10 in skin" until he comes to the home of the girl. She tries to get him a job where she works in Wall St., but refuses her. He sinks and sinks until we see him dropping into a drug store for poison to end it all. But he fails even in this. The beggar finds him and takes him home to the girl who develops the true metropolitan spirit. She wants to fight the whole town with the man she loves, and steals $5,000 worth of bonds to help give him a technical education and put him on his feet. Young Roger rebels at this, and forces her to take it back. She does, but runs into the arms of her boss, late at the office, who offers her marriage. She refuses his millions. She refuses the offers of Roger's friend from Excelsior, who is at Yale, and has found him in New York, a friend who has accepted life as it is, who makes friends among the millionaires, and is introduced to their clubs. But she wants the good things of life, rather, the soul things, the silk things, and when she learns that Roger is unable, and probably always will be unable to provide them for her, she takes poison and dies. Roger is blamed for her death and thrown into prison, where the discontented always find themselves at one time or another. This prison scene, especially Roger's dream, is more profound that the jail scene in Eugene O'Neill's "The Hairy Ape". All capitalist society passes in review in Roger's dream—education, police courts, business, the "straw man" social climber, the degraded of the streets, the love of the pure but lusty-loving woman.

Roger is more fortunate than most young idealists who get into prison. His father comes on from Iowa and gets him released. We are led to believe that he goes forth to fight his battle anew, still seeking the truth.

"Roger Bloomer" is the first American play of its kind we have seen. It is an ambitious effort. It tries to bare the problems confronting the youth of today who refuses to be bound by the conventional moral code of the present social order. In fidelity to detail it strives towards Moscow Art Theatre perfection. It should not want for enthusiastic support.

World War Vets Plan for Great Throng at Meeting for Prisoners

"I will let nothing interfere with my coming to the meeting," Senator William E. Borah has written to the committee in charge of the mass meeting at which he is to speak for the release of the political prisoners, at Lexington Opera House, 51st St. and Lexington Avenue, Sunday, at 2 o'clock.

The meeting is being held under the auspices of Post 722 of the World War Veterans, S. S. Beldner, secretary, 344 East 8th St., Brooklyn.

Committees of volunteers workers are calling on the various labor unions and other sympathetic organizations and report widespread interest. It is expected, in view of the importance of the topic on which Sen. Borah will speak, that the attendance will more than fill the house.

Many labor organizations have voted to send delegations to represent them at the meeting, some of them reserving boxes for this purpose. The affair is also receiving the active support of a large number of local clergymen and religious bodies, chief among them being the Federal Council of Churches and the Methodist Federation for Social Service.

In addition to Senator Borah's address, short speeches will be made by one of the political prisoners recently released from Leavenworth, and by Jack Bradon, national president of the World War Veterans.

Admission to the meeting will be free but, in view of the unusual interest that has been manifested, arrangements have been made for the sale of reserved platform seats at $2.00 each, and boxes, seating eight persons, at $25.00 per box. These reservations should be secured at once from the Borah Mass Meeting Committee, 167 West 12th St., Suite 1, Stuyvesant 4542, or after 6 p.m. Chelsea 9478. Checks should be made payable to Paul F. Brissenden, treasurer.

The committee consists of Weingart, Beyarski, Johnson, Petrell, Wilson, Kucher, Gizzi, Salesieff, Perlis, Finkelstein, Litken, Levy, Ragozin, Marshall, Lifshitz, Felshin and Pistman.

Trade Union Fakerism

Major George L. Berry, notorious labor fakir, absconder of trade union funds and arch-reactionary who heads the pressmen's union, recently declared before a labor body that the courts are adding the greatest conspiracy in history to break down the labor movement, as their decisions against labor helps the radical and revolutionary elements in this country.

It is true that the court decisions hurled against labor restlts in aiding the revolutionists. The Daugherty injunction and other judicial assaults upon labor have exposed the democracy of the United States government as a fraud and convinced thousands of workers that the only solution for their ills is the path of revolution, the overthrow of the government of capitalism and the creation of a government of the working class. Berry objects to the court injunctions, not that they crush the aspirations of the rank and file, but because they aid the revolutionary movement. He knows that recognition of the class character of the government undermines the conservative leaders of labor, who constantly preach to the workers that revolution is a wicked thing that should be abjured.

Like other apostles of reaction in the labor movement, Berry also charges the revolutionists with conspiring to destroy the labor movement. George, himself, has had considerable success as a dis-rupter of labor. The condition of his own organization eloquently testifies to his ability in that line. He succeeded in breaking up his own union, not because of radicalism, but because this valiant labor leader, patriot and American Legion official could not pillage the treasury of the organization for his own nefarious schemes.

Whether he has another grievance against courts, in addition to the charge that they assist the radicals, as one of the courts convicted him of misuse of funds of his own organization and ordered him to pay back what he had stolen.

George is the connecting link between the Gompers machine and the American Legion and at the present time is supporting the wrecking thug and ball-nit, Alvin Bowler, head of the Legion, in the campaign to create a Fascisti movement in America. The swashbuckling exhibition of Mussolini in Italy appeals to the reactionary labor leaders and super-patriots in America. They imagine it will be easy for them to repeat the performance here. They ignore the fact that the revolutionists have also learned a few lessons through observation of the Italian experience and will smash the American Fascisti in the moment it shows its fangs.

The reason George objects to some of the existing courts is because his idea of courts to deal with militant labor is the Fascisti brand. As a labor leader he is a lallapalooza!

Foreign-Born Workers! Your Fight Is Here!

The Workers Party as the vanguard of the working class of this country is blazing the way for a widespread struggle to protect the foreign-born workers brought to these shores by the avaricious industrial capitalists. The response to our demands for this agitation has been splendid so far and soon the entire labor movement will be aroused to the necessity of fighting for the protection of the foreign-born workers as a matter of self preservation. The interests of one group of the working class are not dissimilar from those of another. The moment a worker from another nation arrives on American soil he should become the concern of the American labor movement. From the first he should be made to realize that the labor movement is ready to defend his interests along with all other workers.

As a matter of fact our agitation for protection of the foreign-born workers receives a readier response among native-born workers than among the foreign-born themselves. There is a strong tendency among the workers from other lands to remain isolated from the great mass of American workers. They congregate in certain localities and set up a community life on the basis of the social traditions of their former "fatherlands". We have in every great industrial center our "Little Italys", "Little Russias", and so on. The foreign-born workers establish nationalistic clubs, even tho they pretend these clubs are sometimes revolutionary, where they maintain intimate connections with the politics of the land they have abandoned, but remain totally in the dark in relation to the problems of American political life.

In our every day agitation among organizations and press there is the strong tendency of different nationalities to insist upon devoting all their energy to fighting the battles of the working class across the seas. One would sometimes think they were only a branch of the revolutionary movement in Germany, or Italy instead of America. There is constant agitation for relief of various European organizations. Worthy as such work is, it should never be the major task of even a part of the American movement, except in case of a threat to the existence of a victorious proletariat, as in the case of the famine in Russia.

While the American working class is defending the foreign workers that find their way to these shores, at the same time we must emphasize the fact that in every country the working class must use its energy and resources to fight its own capitalists. The class struggle in every country assumes the form of a national struggle and since the foreign-born workers in this country are now part of the American working class, their place is in the American labor movement, fighting side by side with the native-born Americans in the every day struggle against the assaults of the capitalist class.

So while we do our part toward protection of the foreign-born workers, we demand that they do their part toward us by joining the trade unions in America, supporting the revolutionary political party, the Workers Party, and in general entering into every struggle here.

Foreign-born workers! You must cut the umbilical chord that binds you to the land of your birth. The workers of the countries from which you came must carry on their fight. You can help them best by building a strong movement in America.

We are internationalists and not nationalists for the reason that we recognize the class struggle as a world-wide struggle of all the workers of the world against the capitalist class of the world. If one part of that world-embracing battle line is weakened thru the defection of revolutionary energy into impotent channels, the entire movement suffers. By settling the fight here with our own capitalist class we can do far more for the fight in other countries than trying to fight the battles of the European workers from this side of the Atlantic.

Nail Lewis Slander

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, undoubtedly thought he had definitely disposed of the rank and file demand for affiliation with the Red Trade Union International that has crystallized in a number of districts, by his vicious assault upon that organization contained in a reply to District No. 26 (Nova Scotia, Canada) when the executive board of that district demanded application for affiliation with the R. I. L. U.

Altho the district executive board complied with the request of Lewis and the International Executive to withdraw their demand, they still continue the fight for support of the Red International. In a letter replying to the International Board, J. B. McLachlan, secretary of District 26, assails Lewis for his unfounded assertion that the Red International is trying to destroy the labor unions and insists that Lewis cannot point to one iota of evidence to substantiate his charge.

Another slander of Lewis was that the Red International is an outgrowth of the O. B. U. This is such an absurdity that it refutes itself. His ignorance of the O. B. U. was shown by his assertion that it reached its apex of power in 1918, when, as a matter of fact, it was not organized until 1919.

Lewis exposes his total inability to speak for labor or to enter any controversy over questions of International affiliation by repeating the outgrowth of the Gompers' machine in its desperate effort to keep American labor in ignorance of the world revolutionary movement.

Letters to the Editor

Ex-Politicals Speak

Editor, "The Worker":—Many people are asking what they can do for the political prisoners. Sympathy alone, no matter how sincere, is of little use to them. It is ACTION they want.

There is one thing that all interested persons living in and around New York can do right now to help the movement—by asking that these men —namely, attend the mass meeting at which Senator Borah is to speak at Lexington Theater, Lexington Avenue and 51st Street, next Sunday, March 19th at 2 p. m., advertise the meeting among their friends and do all they can to help make it such a smashing, record-breaking success that the official in Washington (and the unofficial persons in Wall Street) who are keeping these men in prison will have to pay heed to the growing, insistent demand for their immediate and unconditional release.

A. V. Arnava, Ted Fraser, Archie Sinclair and Pierce C. Wetter, Ex-political prisoners.

Printers to Meet Sunday

Militant workers in the printing industry, comprising compositors pressmen, stereotypers, bookbinders, photo-engravers, press feeders and binders workers, will meet on the fifth floor of the Workers' Building, Sunday, March 19, for the purpose of increasing activity for amalgamation in this industry.

At this meeting H. M. Wicks will speak on a "Practical Program for Amalgamation of the Printing Trades Unions."

While there is the usual official opposition to amalgamation from the photo-engravers' and pressmen's union, the best elements of the rank and file are for it and the amalgamationists are endeavoring to arrange a series of debates with trade union officials opposed to amalgamation.

A Billion Dollar Phone Trust

In the growth of greater trusts in the United States, the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. has quickly leaped into the lead by proposing to increase its capital stock from $750,000,000 to $1,000,000,000.

The phone trust has therefore out-raced the United States Steel Corporation capitalized at $950,000,000. The phone octopus does not weep about hard times. Its net income during 1922 climbed up to $66,170,428, while during the previous year it profiteered only to the extent of $54,002,704 compared to a beggarly $5,486,058 in 1900. With only two exceptions the profits of the phone monopoly have gone up and up, during the last quarter of a century.

In no industry has there been such rapid development during the past decade as in the use of the telephone. During the past year over 600,000 new stations were installed by the Bell System, bringing the total to more than 14,000,000. The number of connections daily was 38,000,000 or an average of about one for every three inhabitants.

The phone trust like other monopolies is trying to popularize its profiteering by spreading its minority stock thin among a large number of holders, especially its exploited wage slaves. On Dec. 31, 1923, it boasted 248,925 stockholders. But this in no way lessens the grip of Wall Street, which thus gets the use of the workers' savings, as well as their brains and muscles.

Labor in the phone business is plundered as much, if not more than in any other industry. It is among the least organized. Attempts of girl operators to build unions have been met with brutal opposition. The billion dollar phone trust rears its towering structure of new wealth on the shattered nerves of thousands of overworked "hello" girls. Here is a giant problem calling for solution worked "hello" girls. Here is a giant problem calling for solution worked "hello" girls. Here is a giant problem calling for solution not only in the organization of labor in the phone business, but in complete workers' control over this rapidly developing necessity in modern life. American labor cannot afford longer to be prostrate before this huge capitalist octopus. It must fight.

It is reported that even the Paris emigres, the most bitter of the Russian counter-revolutionists, now admit the stability of the Soviet Regime.

La Follette's Harmless Sting

Only the familiar LaFollette nostrums appear in the report of the Wisconsin senator dealing with the Standard Oil monopoly. "Regulation" back in the badger state, in its earliest days, knew such recommendations as "uniform bookkeeping," "compulsory system of reports," establishing "real common carriers," adjusting freight rates, regulating exports, opposing price manipulation and hitting at agreements.

This little LaFollette farce winds up with an eighth recommendation that the "department of justice," save us from it, institute a "rigid investigation" into other questionable practices.

There isn't even the slightest suggestion that private ownership in the oil industry be deposed by a single iota. This report helps one understand why LaFollette's conference last December, in Washington, rejected even the popular demand for the nationalization of the railroads.

Big business fears LaFollette less than the cattle in his own Wisconsin barnyards fear the flies flitting from mare's nest to mare's nest. His recommendations are without sting. They rouse from W. C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, the slight ejaculation, "Unfair."

Senator LaFollette says, "the people of the country must be prepared before long to pay at least $1 a gallon for gasolene," such is the power of the Rockefeller octopus to squeeze its victims. But John D. can push it up to $2 or more, and still LaFollette will offer no effective remedy.

Let the workers take stock of LaFollette's puerile report on the Standard Oil Trust and see how far he is away from any really working-class solution of problems that confront the nation today. Let the workers open their eyes. Know La Follette for what he is, and unanimously desert his leadership.

Russian Food for the Ruhr

French power is collapsing in the Ruhr. The Bonar Law government in England, which has given a half-consent to the Poincare imperialistic ventures along the Rhine, are being defeated in one by-election after another.

In the meantime Soviet Russia is not inactive. It is significant that the Russian trade unions have telegraphed the German shop committees that they are ready to ship 9,000 tons of foodstuffs to the starving Ruhr miners.

The cables report that Karl Radek has an article in Pravda, official organ of the Russian Communist Party at Moscow, claiming that shortly after the armistice brought an end to the world war, the Russians offered to send food into Germany.

But Hugo Hause, an independent Socialist, was then director of food in the new German Republic, and he chose rather to turn to President Wilson and the capitalist United States.

The "Socialist" President Ebert, of Germany, and the German social-democratic party, with which the independents have now re-united, will no doubt even now turn anywhere but towards Soviet Russia for food, even for the Ruhr miners. It remains to be seen whether the workers will be powerful enough to force the "Socialists" to permit food to come into the country, food from Russia's great granary that is now getting back to normal after the famine.

In the words of Radek, one of the most far-seeing of the Soviet spokesmen, the German workers now, just as in the days of the armistice, have an opportunity to unite with the Russian workers and peasants in beginning a new era in history. The only question is—can the "Socialists" of Germany hold back the masses who must now know that their salvation is to be found in the leadership and thru the struggle of the German Communist Party?

The New York Republican Club got off the touchy subject of Soviet Russia at its last luncheon by discussing plans for beautifying New York. The discussion was confined to Central Park and Riverside Drive. It was carefully kept away from any sordid contact with the slums.

Give Them Back Their Dirt

Into the faces of the capitalist sycophants, especially those of the press and the pulpit, tradncers of the Russian Soviet Revolution, we hurl back the dirt of their most recent, self-confessed social crime.

Frederick Schneider was a contractor-builder of homes in New York City. He made money out of it. He became a millionaire. He inherited the vices of riches. For the past eight years he had been living with Mrs. Anna Buzzi, without being separated from his wife. Thru some course of reasoning he had decided on a reconciliation with his family. Mrs. Buzzi stopped him with a bullet. He is dead. She is in prison.

Schneider was a prodigal lover according to all reports. When he went to war he corresponded with both his wife and Mrs. Buzzi. Reports also came to New York that he was "running around with women" in Baltimore. It also seems that Mrs. Buzzi, in addition to being jealous of Mrs. Schneider, was also fearful of her keeper's confidential secretary, Dorothea Heu. If there ever was any real love inhabiting these sordid surroundings, it must have chilled its tent long since and departed.

This is just another salacious story of "the two-home system," with other women, and sometimes young girls, on the side, that works its way to the surface of life in the great metropolis, and to a lesser extent in every city in this capitalist land. Polygamy is outlawed but it is practiced in greater or less degree by our best and most wealthiest citizens, staunchest upholders of the present social order.

Before he tumbled into his grave, murdered, Schneider had bought 16 lots in the Bronx, and had planned to build new "love nests," costing $1,800,000. All at handsome profits.

In the meantime, in the densely populated working-class districts of the great city, large families divide small rooms in crowded tenements. Fathers here do not know, let alone practice, "the two-home system" of polygamy.

Yet it is the Schneiders, and all their profiteering crew, who denounce Communism as destructive of morality. The churches of the Schneiders and the Buzzis charge Communism with threatening to break up the home. The parasites of the Schneiders and Buzzis points the finger of scorn at Soviet Russia, where they know the tower of profits has been pulled down, and with it the "two-home" order.

The hypocritical Schneiders and Buzzis hate the new morality, the new religion, the great aspirations that are coming out of the poverty and misery of the tenements. It isn't much longer now that they will be able to label Communism with their own private crimes. Daily the masses grow better acquainted with the viciousness of the present social order thru the revelations of the inner lives of their oppressors, the Schneiders, the Schoellkopfs, the Stillmans, the Stokes, the Whitneys, the Vanderbilts, the McCormicks and all their vile and wealthy "equals."

No oppressed class has ever had the foulness of its masters presented to it so completely as does the yellow press of today. It is time the stench became stifling. It is time the swift retribution of an enraged working class should destroy the lecherous social system that winks at, where it does not uphold the vices of its choicest spokesmen. It is time the workers put their heel upon the neck of capitalism and all its crimes.

Save, Save, The Boss's Friend!

BY ROSE PASTOR STOKES

"Boss Judge Lobster Quarrel" read the headline in the Times, their standard organ of Labor Gompers. "Decision in favor of the employers." This is the theme song of Gompers' Executive Council. What's the matter with their champion? What's disquieting them? I was further told that the American Federation of Labor executive council decides to enter into "active co-operation with the International Federation of Trade Unions." Well, NOT the Red International of Trade Unions; not even the Yellow Amsterdam International. It is something distinctively Gompersian. It is the International "Labor" Organization of — Geneva!

The A. F. of L. Executive Council notes with pleasure the "awakening interest" in this organization by the "Employers of the United States," invites them to send representatives to the next annual gathering," and pats itself on the back for its treacherous part in organizing this instrument for the betrayal of labor.

The headline looked good, but the news under the headline reveals Sam Gompers arranging again for a little International Lion and Lamb Show where the Lion will be given the opportunity to solve the Lamb's problems! Instead of learning that labor in America will grasp the idea of Labor in international fellowship we learn that Gompers' tongue will cleave, once again to the toe of the Boss's boot! How much longer will the organized working class stand for leaders who betray them to the bosses for the unsavory privilege of tasting a little high-grade shoe polish?

John Farmer Goes to Washington

By HAROLD WARE

Any farmer who studies rural credit or any other "farm" legislation learns that it is designed to help the "Agricultural Interests" but exclude the working farmers. The War Finance Corporation was a typical example of "remedial legislation." Their report shows that they loaned Banking, Financing and Export and Live Stock loaning companies $217,014,000 and only $7,541,000 to farmers' co-operatives.

I sat in the gallery of the House of Reprobates last week. It is not an inspiring sight but I stuck it out long enough to learn that another political gold brick bill was about to be passed. After being in session nearly two years a discredited Congress gets a jumble of three bills put together by the House Committee on Banking and Currency. Th's panicky eleventh hour apology has since been signed by our worn-out President who is going out to Florida to fish and forget the farmer. After John Farmer gets a close-up of th's Cred't Bill in action he wont let Harding forget.

Under the new law, Wall St. controlled Federal Reserve Board has the power to continue the "deflation" which squeezed billions from the farmer. It allows the Banks to charge "up to 10 per cent interest" on farmers' papers discounted. Compare that with the 3½ per cent charged England in the Debt Refunding legislation. John! But then, England is a good "risk", and even the farmer himself knows he is "bankrupt."

I met farm organization men from different parts of the country. Their descriptions of the farm conditions are practically uniform. The farmers are literally "down and out".

Last year the average labor income of all farmers was only $100. With the high prices necessities they cannot pay even the interest on their aggregate debt of $15.000.000.000. They are behind in their taxes. The farmer cooperatives cannot compete with the highly centralized monopolies of the Middlemen. They are forced to buy and sell in markets controlled by the big capitalists. The product both raiser producer and city worker consumers. Thus they must produce at a loss. United States Department of Agriculture investigations show that all staple crops sell from the farmer for less than cost. Wheat, for instance, costs in the principal grain states $1.00 to $1.50 to market at $1.18. Other crops are equally unprofitable, and there is no prospect of better conditions in 1923. America's refusal to recognize Russia has aggravated the effect of Europe's unstable financial condition on farm exports. Hundreds of thousands of farmers are being "carried" by Banks who have not formed any policy as to the next step. What that step shall be must be known soon for more than 100 country banks were busted during the last 45 days. Indications are that there will be wide-spread evictions from the farms; resulting in either increased tenancy, or great deflation of land values, to get a new crop of "owned farmers", or it may mean that this is the beginning of industrial exploitation of the land by the Capitalist class.

Farm Editors and "Leaders"

In spite of these conditions which create great pressure from the rank and file of farm organizations upon their leaders we find a tendency in them and how about affiliation with Union Labor in the common fight.

One editor of a large Farm paper says, "We don't like the idea of farmers working together for any length of time with Union Labor or Big Business." No doubt that worthy's rank farmer wants to continue the isolation of the rural masses. That ignorant, individualistic sectarianism is happily being dissipated in spite of the misleaders and middlemen-controlled Farm Press.

John Farmer is rapidly learning in the famous school of hard knocks that Big Business means Capitalism. That the same capitalists exploit both farm and city. That liberation from their oppression lies in effective unity to finish the job started at the doorways of State and Federal Legislatures until the workers and working farmers go together with all the American Labor Party.

PROTECTIVE LAWS

For the comfort of all those yellow, pink and other shades of reformers who, after many decades of legislative lobbying and political wire pulling in the various state legislatures of the bourgeoisie, are beginning to lose heart because they have not moved as fast as they'd liked it putting good laws on the statute books—and also for the vindication of those in the same camp who claim that we are moving fast in the direction of liberal reform, we reprint the following brief item from the bottom of the front page of one of our capitalist contemporaries:

Laws for the protection of bear have been placed on the statute books of 13 States in the last eight years.

the Soviet State and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

Wherever the revolutionary minorities, within the old unions, lined up the rank and file members behind their concrete policies and thus promised to capture the leadership of the organizations, immediate expulsion would follow. In France for instance, in 1920 when the unions were still strong and the revolutionary syndicalist council gained many support, the old standpatter- began their campaign of expulsions and provocations. Also it must be admitted that some of the militants when facing such serious situations lost their head and became too easily provoked. Finally in December, 1921, and January 1922, this method culminated in the expulsion of a whole block of unions, thus forcing the split. The division was about in half approximately an equal number going to each side.

A serious obstacle in the road of the arch-gaunt-French imperialism had been removed and it could freely carry out its ruthless policy of strikebreaking and abolition of all the gains won by the workers thru their organization. All attempts since made by the revolutionary group (C. G. T. U.), which adheres to the Red International, to form a united front of all organized workers to resist the capitalist offensive have been rejected by the reactionaries. The congress approved of the united front tactics in France and appealed to all French workers to bring about trade union unity in spite of their reluctant leaders.

The reports showed Germany to be the only country which had not lost in trade union membership. However, this need not necessarily be ascribed to any greater potency of the unions or better leadership. It was mainly brought about by two factors.

First, the great pressure upon the workers by the terribly increased exploitation brought about by the process of depreciation of the currencies, the constantly decreasing real wage and the increased cost of living. The workers were compelled to remain in the unions.

Secondly, by the judicious application of the tactics of the Red International by the German militants. When the German capitalists, after the war, again attempted to regain their equilibrium the yellow socialist trade union leaders made their compact with them to rebuild the old capitalist structure upon the ruins brought about by the war and the Versailles Treaty, at the expense of the workers. All obstacles had to be removed and a campaign of expulsion of Communists was launched, often leading to expulsions of whole unions who supported them. However, these expelled members immediately began a struggle for reinstatement. No dual unions were allowed to be established, nor were the expelled unions allowed to disband. They refused to recognize the expulsion and appealed to the rank and file over the heads of the officialdom for reinstatement.

These tactics were a great success. Most of the expelled unions have been able to force their way back into the mass organization in this manner and also to check the campaign of expulsions. But it has become a great lesson to the rank and file and greatly strengthened the Communist militants thruout the German trade union movement. At its last congress the metal workers industrial union, numbering 1,800,000 members, definitely went on record against expulsions.

The extent to which the Communists have gained support within the German trade unions can best be illustrated by the movement for the establishment of workers' control in the industries. This movement is expressed by the shop councils (Betriebsrate) and led by the Communists. It has been given especial impetus by the glaring inefficiency of the trade union bureaucracy, as it is a distinct rank and file movement in opposition to the policies of the reactionaries. These shop councils held a national congress in Berlin, almost simultaneous with that of the Red International in Moscow. About 1,500 delegates attended representing 4,000,000 organized workers, despite the fact that the bureaucrats had threatened to expel all participants as well as their supporters.

In Czecho-Slovakia, when the Communists were elected to the important trade union offices, all the reactionary machinery was set into motion. The Chemical Workers and Wood Workers unions, comprising a total of 110,000 members, were expelled in one day, the result being two national movements with the majority following the militant policies. In Italy the employers used extensively the method of blacklisting all militant workers and close the factory gates to them. Thus the yellow leaders, working hand in hand with the Fascisti murder brigands, were not slow to take advantage of by the process of simply dropping all such members from the books and inability to pay dues. In this manner about 400,000 workers have been eliminated. Similar experiences were related at the congress from most of the European countries. Only in Soviet Russia the trade union movement is making great strides forward, strengthening the morale, discipline and understanding of the tremendous tasks of their members. They are working energetically to build, and perfect the economic structure of the country, for only there is it possible for the workers to better their own conditions by increasing production.

Under the slogan of political neutrality, which in reality would mean nothing but neutrality in the class struggle, even the standard bearers of petty bourgeois ideas, the anarcho-syndicalists joined in the general onslaught upon the Communists who were active in the unions. Ideologically their furious attacks became linked up with that of the yellow reformists and the capitalists, despite the fact that these revolutionary phrase mongers at the time of the organization of the Red International adhered to it and professed full support to the Russian revolution.

Against these dastardly betrayals of the trade unions, the Red International congress held forth the slogans of the united front and trade union unity. By practical plans these slogans were worked out to fit the realities of the movement. The congress again went on record against the immediate formation of new international federations, despite the fact that the doors of the federations controlled by the Amsterdam crowd have been closed to many unions thruout the world. However, it decided to strengthen the international industrial propaganda committees so that they may work for the realization of complete unity on the international field.

No secessionist tendencies were tolerated by this congress. Irrefutably the fallacy of such methods were brought home to the delegates. The strengthening of the existing mass unions was considered as the first duty of the militants; thereby strengthening the working class and the social revolution. Yet it was made clear that the revolutionary workers before unity can be realized must be guaranteed at least a minimum of protection. And the congress stated its readiness to realize trade union unity on condition that the liberty of propaganda be guaranteed to the minority, reformist or revolutionary, on the basis of strict discipline during actions against the capitalists.

The question of relations between the Red International of Labor Unions and the Communist International was solved to the satisfaction of all, by a resolution offered by the delegates of the French C. G. T. U., practically the only opponents of the former organic relations between the two Internationals. Henceforth these relations are to be of a voluntary character.

Many special problems peculiar to the various countries had to be settled at the Second Congress and where conflicts between contending theories prevailed they were handled firmly and decisively. All adherents of the Red International in the United States, whether being minorities within the larger unions or organized in the smaller independent unions, were told to do their utmost to bring the structure of all revolutionary trade union activities. According to the program of trade union unity it was pointed out to these independent unions that the campaign of amalgamation could only become complete when they enter actively in the struggle for unity of all unions and attempt to re-enter the A. F. of L. as organized groups. When some of their advocates held that this body was too conservative for them and could not be reformed they were told: "If that is true it merely indicates that you must give up for the time your hope of social revolution, since without the nucleus in the trade unions the revolution is impossible."

That the Trade Union Educational League has become a real factor in the American labor movement was acknowledged at the Second Congress. Its work was highly commended. Altho no shortcomings were overlooked, it was pointed out that its policies were correct and a militant and revolutionist, including those in the independent unions were urged to put their shoulders to the wheel and make an ever more aggressive campaign for the complete realization of its policies. The league was made the official representative of the Red International of Labor Unions in the United States.

On the great fundamental principles there was no difference of opinion at this congress. It adjourned with unanimous decisions on all important points. The delegates from Japan, China, the Dutch Indies, America and the European countries departed pledged to work for establishment of real unity, of all workers against the growing capitalist exploitation and to re-invigorate the existing trade unions with a true spirit of understanding of their mission—the liberation of the working class.

A Line From His Excellency

Florida, Mar. 16, '23.

Dear Irv,

Am continuing my third year vacation down here. Have spent a fine and fun having a splendid time. Plenty of bootleggers around. I hope your readers are not getting to fine and away. I hardly deem my absence is noticeable—what difference does it make where I'm playing golf? I heard you people in New York are having cold weather again. I advise you to stay where you are and keep cool here. The weather is splendid. Hoover informs me that there'll be plenty of coal by the Fourth of July, so why worry?

Pick Jury in Foster Trial

Michigan Prosecutor Challenges Right of American People to Revolution

The Issue in the Michigan Trial—Slaves or Freemen!

In this cartoon, Robert Minor, the famous Communist cartoonist, among those facing trial in Michigan, shows what the bosses of America would like to do to the workers. "Slavery or Freedom" is the big issue raised by the Michigan indictments, and is a challenge to every worker in America to get behind the Michigan defense and join in the fight for his emancipation.

Outline Plan of Michigan Trial Defense

The Workers Party has issued a statement outlining the defense planned for the Communists who will go to trial in Michigan. This statement is issued to set at rest misleading and false speculations indulged in from day to day by the kept press.

The Workers Party of America strongly protests against the newspapers' persistent, gross misrepresentation of the policy of the defense in the trial of the Communist workers in Michigan for violation of the State anti-Syndicalist law.

The press has been spreading the utterly false report that the defense will contend that the "proceedings, meetings, and program, were largely planned by the Burns Detective Agency and that the delegate were [illegible] of the fact happened at Bridgeman, Michigan. The defense will not contend anything of the kind. In view of the fact that several of our active members are involved in this case, the Workers Party completely repudiates the charge that private detectives or Government agents had anything to do with the proceedings, program, or meetings at Bridgeman. Every resolution, every decision, every document, every statement that was adopted at Bridgeman was written and adopted by the Communists present. It is true that a Government stoolpigeon was present at the Convention as a delegate. This spy, a Mr. Morrow, alias Ashworth, did not write a word of any document, was on no sub-committee and did not even utter a word or participate in the proceedings of the Convention.

It must be made plain, however, that it is not a special privilege of the Communist organizations to have a spy in their midst. Government and private spies and stoolpigeons infest the labor unions and labor organizations. The Communists are fully aware of the plans of the capitalists and their Government to plant spies in all labor organizations. The Communists take far greater precaution than the average labor organization does to keep out such dastardly agents of the employing class and its Government. The Communist organizations are, therefore, far less infested with spies, provocateurs, and stoolpigeons than most workers' organizations are.

The Communist workers on trial will wage only one kind of defense. The Communists will take full responsibility for everything that was done at the Bridgeman Convention. Throughout the trials the defendants will maintain that they had a full right to assemble and to discuss the problems and struggles of the working class. The defendants will fight for the right of all workers. Communists included, to the freedom of speech and assembly. The militant workers on trial will not shrink one inch from the defense of their right to believe in and propagate their Communist principles.

This and this only will be the defense policy of the Communists. The Workers Party of America urgently requests that the press give the fullest possible publicity to the above statement and, once for all discontinue the campaign of misrepresentation in the trials of the workers now going on in Michigan.

COURT HOUSE, St. Joseph, Mich.—The right of the American people to revolution as a method of changing their government and achieving social changes is on trial in the court room here where William Z. Foster is on trial as the representative of the Communist movement in the United States. This was clearly brought out in the clash between Attorney Humphreys Gray, the colleague of Frank P. Walsh in the defense, and Assistant Attorney General O. L. Smith, representing the state of Michigan, in the examination of jurors.

"Would you be prejudiced against the defendant," Gray asked of a prospective juror, "if it appeared in the evidence that he believed that no great social changes have been achieved in past history without a resort to force, and that it was his belief that when a majority of the workers and farmers of the United States demand a change which will abolish the private ownership of the industries of the nation by the Capitalists, even tho they are in the majority, this change will not be achieved without a resort to force, because the capitalists will resist?"

"The juror thought that such view might prejudice him, and Attorney Gray flashed back, "Then you believe that the Declaration of Independence should be suppressed because it advocates the fundamental right of the people to revolution, if necessary by force."

Attorney Smith was on his feet at once objecting to such an interpretation of the Declaration of Independence. Gray offered to read a letter written by Thomas Jefferson on the subject in answer to which Smith shouted, "We object to getting the influence of Thomas Jefferson on the minds of this jury." Gray proceeded with examination of the juror along a new line asking:

"You know that in Hungary the Communists gained power without any violence, the Karoly Government surrendering to the Soviets there in 1919, but later the aristocracy and the capitalists, with the help of the Roumanian army, made war on the Soviets and overthrew them, and in Finland the Socialists elected a clear majority of parliament but their government was later overthrown by the capitalists by force of arms, and in this country the Socialists elected members of the New York Legislature who were excluded by their political opponents. Knowing these things, would you be prejudiced against William Z. Foster if it appeared that he and the Communists generally said that the struggle of the workers and farmers against the capitalist system could not be won without force, altho they did not advocate any acts of force or violence at this time, but merely made the historical forecast that force would be necessary."

The Prosecution again objected to the form of the question claiming that Mr. Gray was asking if the juror would be prejudiced if the defendant had done the very thing that he was charged with. In answer, Gray drew a clear distinction between the advocacy of the use of force now or in the immediate future and stating or bring in a charge of advocacy in the state of Michigan by some intricate interpretation of the "Assembling with" clause of the indictment. This issue was not, however, deduced as the issue was not clearly drawn.

"Do you know proletariat means people who work?"

"If evidence shows Foster to have been leader and spokesman of 300,000 steel workers during the great steel strike of 1919, would that prejudice you against him?"

"If Foster is shown spokesman against the beef packers in Chicago, would that prejudice you against him?"

These questions asked by Walsh cause workingmen and women, small merchants and farmers to sit forward in their seats and strain their ears.

"If evidence shows that prosecutors deliberately provoked violation of law in order to convict another for it, would you give credence to that man's word?" was a question which electrified the courtroom and effected visible change of atmosphere among an array of nationally famous strikebreakers, who sit in a long row behind the prosecutor.

Thus, little by little, the cloud of technical verbiage raises and shows that there is being fought out the question of whether a revolutionary workers political party shall be allowed to exist in the open, or whether such parties must exist underground.

"Do you believe the Criminal Syndicalist law a good one and should it be enforced?" Prosecutor Gore categorically asks each venireman. All must answer "yes", or say "no", and leave the jury box.

Meanwhile the community is being flooded with printers ink paid for by [illegible] interests that know [illegible] facts not yet distorted.

Minor Writes on Court Duel

(Special Wire from Robert Minor to "The Worker")

COURT ROOM, ST. JOSEPH, Mich.—As the duel develops between Frank P. Walsh, attorney for William Z. Foster, and Prosecutor Charles W. Gore, backed by a big corps of Burns men from Chicago and New York, onlookers are beginning to realize that a national political battle of deep significance is being fought here.

The jury that is being selected must express itself on the issue of whether the United States is to be a land of certain political liberties or whether those liberties are to be abolished permanently.

This fact begins to dawn upon the more acute, while the dullest begin to scent that at least some strangely fundamental question touching all men's lives is being dealt with.

For the United Front of Labor

A Call to Action by the Workers Party

To All Labor Unions, All Organizations of the Working Farmers, the Farmer-Labor Party, the Socialist Party, the Proletarian Party, the Socialist-Labor Party and the Industrial Workers of the World:

A new offensive is being organized against the workers. The employing class is preparing a new Open Shop drive, more intense and more widespread. Everywhere we see the employers solidifying their ranks, reforming their lines, and reorganizing their army for the new onslaught on the laboring masses.

Capitalists Are Amalgamating

This is the golden age of business mergers. Billions of dollars of capital are amalgamating. The railway capitalists are uniting; witness the plan for dividing the country into 19 great railway systems, and the proposal to merge the western railways into four great systems. The copper capitalists are uniting; witness the Anaconda-Chile and the Calumet-Hecla mergers. The oil capitalists are closing their ranks; witness the Mutual-Merritt oil merger. The bankers are getting together; witness the $65,000,000 consolidation of the Industrial Bank and the Manufacturers' Trust Co. of New York. The textile capitalists are amalgamating; witness the $250,000,000 alliance of the Wool Trust with the Consolidated Textile Co. The packers are uniting; witness the $600,000,000 merger of the Armour and Morris Cos. The American Telephone and Telegraph Co. is organizing a billion dollar corporation, the largest in the world.

The objects of these mergers are obvious. The more concentrated the ownership and the more centralized the control of capital is, the more easily can wages be lowered, the longer can the employers hold out in strikes, the better equipped are the bosses to control the press and the government, and the more ruthless they can be towards the workers. Having amalgamated, the giant trusts will be more easily able to manipulate and raise the cost of living. Because of increased prices the workers and working farmers will find it much harder to make ends meet.

And the great flood of stock dividends totalling over $2,000,000,000 in the last year is only an advance notice to the workers that the capitalists are preparing for huge profits. In the words of the National City Bank, "A stock dividend is usually a preparatory step to a larger distribution of earnings in the future". The employers are preparing to force the industrial workers and working farmers to grind out more profits for them. The working masses are to

Program Distribution Close to 300,000 Mark

The orders for the program of the Workers Party, adopted at the Second National Convention, are rolling into the party headquarters faster than ever. Total orders received at the time of going to press run close to the 300,000 mark.

The program of the Workers Party adopted by the second convention has been called the clearest statement of the Communist principles made in the United States. One of its strongest recommendations is that it deals with the experiences of the workers of the United States, illustrating the principles presented with facts from the recent labor history of this country.

THE PARTY HAS SET OUT TO DISTRIBUTE A LEAST A MILLION PROGRAMS. There should be ten millions distributed. Every worker in the United States should know the facts of the life of the workers as set forth in this program, which is called, in the pamphlet form "The United States Today". It is a pieture of the United States—a picture in which is delineated in clear cut lines the facts about the oppression and exploitation of the workers.

The program is printed in four pages half the size of this paper and is illustrated by four cartoons. The price is $5.00 per thousand, or 50c per hundred. Party branches and members who have not ordered their supply should do so at once.

"Fascisti" in Lawrence, Mass.
(Special to The Worker)

LAWRENCE, Mass.—A meeting in Italian to protest against the infamous acts of Mussolini and his black-shirt hordes in Italy, and addressed by C. Presi, editor of the New York Communist organ, Alba Nuova, was attacked by bands of hoodlums, calling themselves American fascisti. All of the gangsters were Italians and were under the leadership of rowdies and suspicious elements of the Italian population who support a local publication which espouses the cause of Fascism in America.

When the crowd was shouting, "down with Fascism, down with Mussolini!" armed ruffians invaded the hall. There was a free for all fight in which chairs, knives and even pistols were freely used. A riot call was sent in, but when the police came the hall was deserted.

Next day, as usual, the kept press of the city, instead of stating the facts, published screeching headlines to the effect that "Red Orator Provokes Riot By Attack Upon U. S. Government."

Sacco Near Death

By KARL PRETSHOLD
(Special to "The Worker")

DEDHAM JAIL, DEDHAM, MASS.—The condition of "Nick" Sacco is very serious on this the 27th day (March 13) of his hunger strike. The prison physician doubts that Sacco will be able to attend the hearing on motion for a new trial, for himself and Vanzetti, on Friday.

Sacco spent most of yesterday and today in bed, getting up only to see his wife who visits him every day. For 27 days both Sacco's wife and his many friends have urged him to eat, but he has refused to listen to their pleas, and seems as determined today to continue his hunger strike as he was when he began Feb. 15.

The jail physician reports his pulse, respiration and temperature as sub-normal. Since he began his hunger strike his weight has dropped from 147 pounds to 127 pounds.

Railroaders Hit Again by 'Labor' Board

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER
Editor, The Labor Herald.

The U. S. Railroad Labor Board has just handed down a decision restoring the eight hour day, with time and one-half pay for overtime, to 15,000 members of the Signalmen's Union.

The workers demanded increases in wages but these were denied by the Board. The three railroad representatives voted against the decision.

One labor member, A. O. Wharton, did not vote for it, but filed a dissenting opinion in which he maintained increased living costs called for higher wages.

How the capitalist interests generally look upon this decision is shown by the notorious Chicago Tribune, valiant champion of reaction. This paper says frankly that the restoration of the eight hour day was as "a reward to the Signalmen for their refusal to join the shopmen's strike last summer."

It expresses the hope that similar action will be taken in the case of the Maintenance of Way and the Clerks. All over the country at the present time substantial bonuses are being handed out by the railroad companies to those individuals who betrayed their fellow workers by refusing to strike.

Can it be that they are going to pass around a few of these bonuses to the organizations whose officials betrayed the shopmen much more dastardly than did the men who actually scabbed?

For many years past William G. Lee, President of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, has been a curse to the organized railroad workers. Movement after movement among them for better conditions he has wrecked with his reactionary conduct. To tell the story of his treason would be to recite the principal causes of all these defeats of railroad men. He has been a faithful representative of the companies.

But at last it seems that we are to be rid of him. Among those who know what's going on, it has long been an open secret that Lee was slated for a good job by the companies when his period of usefulness to them in the union had passed. That point is just about reached. He has openly run his course.

At the last convention of the B. of R. T. he was elected by only four votes, and opposition against him is constantly growing. He dare not face another convention, so it is up to his masters to give him his reward now.

Hence the timely announcement that he has accepted the presidency of the Steigelmyer Manufacturing Company, a $10,000,000 corporation to manufacture automatic train control devices. No doubt Mr. Lee will prosper well in his new venture, with the support of the companies. Like his predecessor, Morrissey, he will get his Judas' silver. Good riddance to him, say we.

Young Communists Stiffen Morale of Russia's Red Fleet

BY ANNA LOUISE STRONG
Staff Correspondent Federated Press and "The Worker."

MOSCOW.—Six hundred young communists of military age have gone to the Baltic fleet as volunteers, to stiffen the morale of that organization. The fleet was the one question which Russia refused to settle in the recent disarmament congress in Moscow, stating that it was a question in which larger powers were involved than the little border republics. Russia wishes to protect her own ports and territorial waters, in which even at the present time she is having difficulties with Great Britain.

In 1920, Russia passed a law declaring a 12-mile territorial zone on the waters surrounding her, in order to protect her northern fisheries and the port of Petrograd. Britain refuses to recognize Russia's rights, any farther than three miles out, according to an old custom which has never been definitely fixed by international law, but which has been assumed for several decades by Great Britain and not much contested by other nations.

British ships fishing off Murmansk within the 12-mile zone were arrested by Russian authorities. Great Britain promptly sent a warship to protect those ships, and they fish now continuously under her armed protection, within sight of the Russian coast. The Russian foreign office has repeatedly warned Britain to take her ships away, but without result. The Russians feel that the presence of even one submarine in their harbor in Murmansk would give them the power to tell foreign vessels to keep off.

Norway, whose interests in the northern fisheries and seal is greater than that of Britain, has agreed to negotiate the question with Russia, but Britain refuses.

Communists Throw Challenge in Face of Michigan Authorities

(Special to "The Worker")

ST. JOSEPH, MICH.—On the eve of the beginning of the trial here Monday of William Z. Foster, Executive Secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party of America, and ten of the Communists named in the Indictment, the Communists and sympathizers have been unable to arrest previously, without the consent of the authorities involved.

The ten Communists who came into court to challenge the prosecution in the Bridgeman case were Jay Lovestone, Robert Minor, Rose Pastor Stokes, Charles E. Ruthenberg, Alfred Wagenknecht, Gil Green, C. E. Stedman, Max Schachtel, A. J. Schplenberg, Rebecca Shelkovitz, Edgar Owens and John Reiliam, all of whom have taken a prominent part in the work of the Communist movement in the United States during recent years.

Commenting on the surrender of the Communists, C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary, Workers Party, issued the following statement in the name of the Workers Party (Communist) of America:

"The surrender of ten leading Communist workers to the Michigan authorities at St. Joseph has the full approval of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party of America. Others named in the indictment charged with participation in the Bridgman convention will undoubtedly follow the same course if they can be assured that bail will not be fixed at the savage figure of $10,000 for each defendant.

"The Communists are not surrendering themselves to the Michigan authorities because they have any faith in the justice of the capitalist courts and prosecuting authorities. They have had too many experiences with these institutions showing the willingness of judges and prosecutors to ignore their own laws and rules in order to put Communists in prisons.

"The Communists do, however, have faith in the working people of this country. The time has passed when governmental authorities can put Communists in prison on trumped-up charges. The working masses of this country have learned by bitter experience in the strikes of the past few years that the government which persecutes Communists is the same government which attacks the workers on strike and these workers are ready to fight with the Communists against such persecution.

"The surrender of the ten leading Communist workers in addition to the 22 others already under bond in the Bridgman case is part of the Communist defense in that case. The Communists are keeping away from the Michigan persecution. They do not intend to play the part of defendants but to put their prosecutors on the defensive. Burns and his gang of private detective crooks are already running for cover because of the exposure of their methods in this case.

"The Communists will uphold their right to openly and publicly advocate the political principles which they support during the St. Joseph trial. The Communists have nothing to hide. They desire nothing more than the opportunity to submit their principles and proposals for a change in the existing social system to the judgement of the working people of the United States."

Prospective Jurors Bewildered by "Rights of Revolution" and "Soviet Government"

(Special to "The Worker")

ST. JOSEPH, Mich.—The first day of examination of jurors called in the trial of William Z. Foster for participation in the Communist Convention at Bridgeman, Michigan, indicated both the character of the prosecution and the line which the defense would take. Prosecutor Charles W. Gore examined the jurors on the question whether they believed that the accumulated surpluses of private property should be defended by the government, and Frank P. Walsh, counsel for the defense, demanded of each juror whether he or she believed in the fundamental right of revolution as set forth in the Declaration of Independence.

Prosecutor Gore took about an hour examining the men called to the jury box. One of the jurors expressed such definite prejudices that the prosecutor was obliged to ask that he be excused. Two women were taken by the other woman, so that there are now three women and nine men in the jury box who have been tentatively accepted by the prosecution. The jurors are farmers, small business men and housewives.

Prosecutor Gore carefully examined each juror on the question, "Are you a member of a union?" "Do you believe in the soviet form of government?" "Do you believe in the principle of private property and do you believe that the government should protect the accumulated surpluses of private property?" "Do you favor violence and armed insurrection to change our government?"

All the jurors, of course, believed in private property, altho one or two advocates of municipal ownership appeared. All were opposed to the soviet form of government and none confessed to membership in a union. None of them favored violence and armed insurrection.

Attorney Walsh electrified the courtroom by meeting the challenge of the right of revolution by his first question to the jurors, "Do you believe in the fundamental right of revolution," he asked, "as set forth in the following words, 'every human being has been endowed by the creator with certain inalienable rights' to their right to alter or abolish it. "Do you believe that this fundamental right of revolution stated in the Declaration of Independence is the right of the people tho carrying it out might involve the use of force?"

The jurors thus far questioned by the defense all avowed their firm belief in this fundamental right to revolution. Thus contradicting what they had answered when questioned by the prosecution.

Something of the same character happened in regard to the soviet form of government. All the jurors were opposed to it when questioned by the counsel for the defense, none of them seemed to know what the soviet form of government was.

Only two of the panel questioned by Attorney Walsh up to the close of court Monday had been tentatively accepted by the Defense. Three others confessed to prejudice under the skilful questioning and were excused by Judge Charles E. White. Three of the defendants who surrendered on Saturday gave bail today making four out of the ten who have been released on bail. The other six are free on their own recognizance for a few days more until bail can be secured.

Win Opening Clash in Michigan Trial

(Special to "The Worker")

ST. JOSEPH, Mich.—The Defense in the Communist case, in which William Z. Foster went to trial, Monday, won a sweeping victory on Saturday when the prosecution withdrew three of the four counts in the indictment against the seventy-five men and women who attended the Bridgeman Convention.

Evidently this action on the part of the Prosecution was the result of information that if these counts were not withdrawn the motion of the Defense to quash the indictment would have been upheld.

The indictment as originally drawn charged the defendant with advocating, teaching and circulating publications advocating and teaching the doctrine of criminal syndicalism, and with voluntary assembling with an organization which advocated the doctrine of criminal syndicalism.

The first three counts were withdrawn and the only charge which now remains is that for voluntary assembling. Attorneys for the defense look upon the withdrawal of the three counts as an admission by the Prosecution that it has no evidence to prove that the defendants did anything to violate the criminal syndicalist law of the state of Michigan in that state. From all appearances the Prosecution intends to endeavor to prove that in some other state, or in some other country the Communists advocated or taught certain ideas, and then to endeavor to send them to prison because persons who held these beliefs met in the state of Michigan, altho they did nothing to violate the law of the state except to meet in the state.

Attorney Frank P. Walsh says: "It is something new in the history of even political prosecution in the United States to prosecute for merely holding a meeting within the borders of a state where there is no charge that the defendants violated any other section of even such a law as the criminal syndicalist law within the state."

The defense feels that the new form the case has taken will make it even more clearly a case of persecution of political opinions and not for crime which will rally to the support of the defendants a larger element of the working people in the country.

Women Denounce War.

Resolutions were adopted denouncing the recent arrests and a conference of the Lithuanian Women's Progressive Alliance of America, District No. 6, held at Mahoney City, Pa. All Workers Balloting on Labor Party

The Trade Union Educational League has launched a campaign among the Members of Labor. It is a nation-wide referendum of the whole trade union movement on the subject of a Labor Party.

Every local union in the United States is being sent letters and circulars outlining the arguments in favor of a Labor Party and requesting a definite expression regarding the same.

All told, fully 35,000 local unions will be circularized. It is the biggest single stroke of educational work yet undertaken by the League.

Not to speak of the political necessity for a militant independent party of the working class, the Trade Union Educational League holds that it is impossible to have a successful trade union movement in this country until Labor has declared definitely for a Labor Party.

The Gompers' political policy of rewarding our friends and punishing our enemies is fatal to the labor unions. In the first place it has demoralized the workers, scattering them among the old parties and making of them a political zero.

The whole governmental machine, local, state, and national is in the hands of the capitalist enemy, that uses it without scruple to crush labor ruthlessly. Whatever the workers are able to gain by their strength industrially is taken away from them by their weakness politically.

Worse yet, the Gompers' policy opens wide the union doors to all sorts of capitalist political crooks, who poison the organizations with corruption and master-class economics.

The workers will never be able to think or act intelligently as proletarians so long as their trade unions are linked up with capitalist political parties. This is a fundamental of unionism. A Labor Party is one of the most vital needs of the American labor movement.

Our bankrupt labor leadership refuses to recognize this patent fact. The arch-reactionary, Gompers, is content to go along from year to year with the working class almost totally disfranchised by his stupid political policy.

And the alleged progressive leader, Johnston, as little, if any, better. His Cleveland conference was a stench in the nostrils of all honest unionists.

For spinelessness, lack of vision, and betrayal of the mandates of the rank and file, it was without parallel. All it could do was to reaffirm the utterly discredited Gompers' policy.

The Trade Union Educational League scorns such pitiful leadership. It knows that it does not represent the wishes or aspirations of the organized workers. Hence the present national referendum.

Leisman Memorial at Parkview Palace on Wednesday, March 28

March 28, at Parkview Palace, 110th Street and 5th Avenue, a memorial meeting will be held in memory of Anna Leisman, who died on March 1, ten days after her release from Auburn Prison.

Anna Lelsman died on the fighting lines of the Class War. There is no question but that her death was the direct result of her incarceration. Lack of clothing, exposure to cold, insufficient air, vermin and germs, and miserly food undermined her health to such a degree that she could not muster enough resistance to fight pneumonia contracted shortly after her release.

For 20 years Anna Leismen was active in the Revolutionary movement of Latvia and America. Her work in the union as well as on the political field was of a quiet and constructive nature. She does not stand out as a prominent figure in the role of speaker or organizer, but as a true and tried comrade who was ready to give her life in the fight of the workers with the capitalist class for the establishment of a Workers Republic. Comrades and friends! Anna Leisman is a martyr of the Class War, and in tribute to her you are duty bound to attend the Memorial Meeting on Wednesday, March 28, at Parkview Palace.

Jeanette Kean Wimitsky will sing. Addresses by prominent speakers will be made. The Lettish Orchestra and chorus will follow. Come en masse. Admission 25 cents. Auspices: National Defense Committee, New York Division.

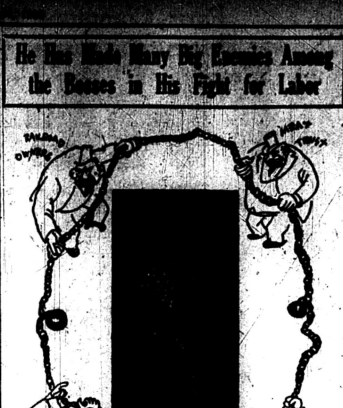
He Still Has Many Big Battles Among the Bosses in His Fight for Labor



The big bosses have their eyes on St. Joseph, Mich. They are watching the outcome of the trial where William Z. Foster is on trial. They are doing this because they hate Foster. They know him thru his efforts to organize the workers in the industries they now own. They would like to see him sent to prison for a long term. What do you workers say? Give your answer by responding heroically to every appeal addressed to you by the organization that is conducting Foster's defense, the Labor Defense Council, 80 E. 11th St., New York City, with its New York office, Room 434, 799 Broadway.

Marx Dead 40 Years; but His Ideas Live On!

KARL MARX
May 5, 1818.....March 14, 1883

By MAX SHACHTMAN.

Karl Heinrich Marx was born in Treves, May 5, 1818, the son of a German-Jewish rabbi, who in 1842, embraced Christianity. Karl, the only child of the rabbi, who showed any genius, finished grammar school, spent a year of revelry in the University of Berlin (1836). He threw himself in his studies, made the acquaintance of Hegel's works, and of Bruno, Bauer, and Friedrich Koppen. In 1841, the degree of Doctor of Philosophy was conferred on him at Jena.

He hoped to obtain a professorship, but the Prussian universities were not tolerant of free opinions, and what remained was Journalism, his first venture into which was made by articles in the liberal Rheinische Zeitung. His essays attracted very much attention, and on the retirement in October 1842 of Dr. Rutenberg, the editor of the Zeitung, he assumed the chief. After having joined with the Left Wing Hegelians: Feuerbach, Arnold Ruge, Bauer, Strauss and Moses Hess.

After giving up the editorship, he moved to Paris, where he issued (1844) the first and only one of the Franco-German Year Books founded by Ruge. He was beginning to criticise the Utopianism of Cabet, Weitling, Proudhon, and Dezamy. Engels was rescued by him from Owenism, and then formed a friendship which lasted with but few interruptions until Marx's death. The latter now began an exhaustive study of political economy, history and Socialism, with the result that in 'The Holy Family' he definitely broke with the Hegelian mysticism, demolished Bruno Bauer's "idealism" and, later, Arnold Ruge's disbelief in a ptoletarian revolution.

The activities of Marx were cut short by his expulsion from Paris, in January 1845, by the French Government at the instigation of Prussia. He left for Brussels, where, in 1847, he published his great criticism of Proudhon's shop-keeper's economies, "The Poverty of Philosophy", which resulted in a break with the historically reactionary philosophy of the "theoretician" of Anarchism. Marx's damning criticism was the preliminary to the Communist Manifesto.

The revolutionary wave of the '40s resulted in the transformation of the League of the Just, an organization of German workers with headquarters in London, to the League of Communists, at whose second congress (London, November-December, 1847) Marx and Engels commissioned to formulate a program. A comparison of Engel's draft of the Communist Manifesto (edited by Edward Bernstein in his "Grundsätze des Kommunismus") with the actual manifesto, shows the immense intellectual superiority of Marx over Engels. The program was adopted, and soon after the French Revolution of '48 broke out. Marx, on the invitation of Ferdinand Foclon, left for Paris, but did not remain, for he took Engels and the members of the League of Communists into the Rhineland, and there established (June 1, 1848) the Neue Rheinische Zeitung. The articles he wrote in it have, as Max Beer says, supplied the Bolsheviks in their tactics. The financial strain and government persecution forced Marx to return to Paris in time to see the triumph of the counter-revolution and be banished to Brittany; he left, instead, for London where he remained to his last day.

The '50s were hard for Marx. His only source of regular income was a sovereign per article to Horace Greeley's New York Tribune. (Can you imagine Lenin as Moscow correspondent for the New York Times?) His happiest years were the '50s. He was eased by a legacy from Wilhelm Wolff, to whom he inscribed the first volume of "Das Kapital", and by Engels' generous support.

The International Working Men's Association was formed in London, September 1862, Marx delivering the Inaugural Address. He expected much from the International, writing to Engels that "in the next revolution, which is perhaps nearer than it seems, we (Marx and Engels) have this powerful machinery in our hands.". The International, however, after passing from the hands of Proudhoun to those of Marx, was split by the former's forces, and Marx exiled it to New York where it died meekly. Its back-bone had been broken by a dual organization formed by the Bakunists, who denounced Marx as a Pan-German, and were in turn called Pan-Slav. Neither side, of course, had any justification for that.

It is a sign of Marx's revolutionary spirit, altho he had described the idea of the establishment of the Paris Commune after Sedan, and strongly advised against such a step, when the Commune was declared, he became its most energetic supporter; and when it fell in its own blood, he wrote his magnificent "The Civil War in France, 1871" and, later, "Class Struggles in France", the epilogue of the Commune and the First International.

His last twelve years were filled with struggles against bodily disease. Even Karlsbad did not help. As he saw his principles taken up by Guesde, Hyndman, Liebknecht, Plechanov and the other pioneers, he became worse. Added to his bronchial Catarrh, inflammation of the lungs, liver troubles and spasmodic asthma, came the death of his wife and of his eldest daughter, Mme. Charles Longuet.

He died March 14, 1883, in the presence of his weeping friends, Engels and Paul Lafargue, being both spoken at his funeral three days later. Engels edited the two remaining volumes of "Das Kapital", and Kautsky the three volumes (not yet translated into English) of his historical studies on surplus value.

There is really no adequate biography of Marx in English. For a man who had and is still having such a gigantic influence on his times, they all seem insufficient. Spargo's is a joke; Loria's misrepresentations of his economic theories, as is Beer's, who is, however, much better informed; Liebknecht's is merely reminiscenses, while Lafargue's is still untranslated.

Marx has the misfortune of all great revolutionaries. His "followers" have grown respectable and are uneasy at some of the more bold words of the master. 'The Critique of the Gotha Program, though printed in the United States now for twenty years ago, is ignored; his remarkable address to the League of Communists on revolutionary tactics, is comparatively unknown, his numerous articles, pamphlets, correspondence and essays are known only to Geiger, London and Franz Mehring collection.

Yet, despite the renegade disciples, despite the innumerable professors from Bernstein to Tugan-Baranowsky, who have "disproved and demolished" Marxism, despite the fact that his grave at Highgate Cemetery is overgrown with weeds, the ideas of Marx manifest themselves in the irresistible, inevitable march of the proletariat towards Communism. The entire philosophical system of Karl Marx belongs to the last oppressed class of History. It is their key to the future.

Borah Is Kept Busy on Eve of Russian Trip

By ROSA LADDON
Staff Correspondent, Federated Press and "The Worker"

WASHINGTON.—Senator Borah's office is now the busiest establishment on Capitol hill. Since the announcement Feb. 17, that the Idaho Senator was contemplating a trip to Russia to study at first hand conditions in the new republic for whose recognition he has often pleaded in congress, he has been besieged with inquiries from every quarter.

There is much talk and study in Washington about the invitation recently officially extended to Borah by the Russian government to visit that country, which, if he should go, would afford him unrestricted opportunities for investigation.

It is stated, upon good authority here, that the Russian government will welcome any individual or group of senators and representatives who desire to visit Russia for an impartial investigation of present political and economic conditions there.

Those who believe it is time for the United States to recognize Russia, holding that a government which has endured for more than five years must have the support of its people, find great encouragement in Senator Borah's statement—published in the Washington Post, said to be semi-official organ of the administration—that he believed "recognition by all the leading powers would be an accomplished fact before December."

ADDRESS:

Debs Urged to State His Unity Stand

Eugene V. Debs, who is now campaigning for the Socialist Party presidential campaign in Chicago, is called upon to make a declaration on the question of a united working class political front, in a letter addressed to him by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The Worker".

In his Chicago speeches Debs claims he is for the united political front. Yet it was the Cook County (Chicago) Socialist Party that deliberately broke unity with all other working class elements, and brought demoralization into the present electoral struggle.

In the words of "The Voice of Labor", official organ of the Workers Party in Chicago:

"Eugene V. Debs talked very optimistically of the unity of all radical elements. He appeared to speak for the Socialist Party. Yet all the actions of the Socialist Party are against unity of any sort.

"In the present municipal campaign they spoiled any possibility of united action by springing a surprise candidate on the politically conscious workers of Chicago, with the result that in the aldermanic contests neither the Workers Party, the Socialist Party nor the Farmer-Labor Party elected a candidate. There was a division of working class political action with a vengeance".

The letter addressed to Debs by "The Worker" is as follows:

Letter to Debs

Eugene V. Debs,
c. o. Local Cook County,
Socialist Party,
1501 Warren Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Comrade Debs:—I have just received the Saturday, March 10th, issue of "The Chicago Socialist", and have just completed reading, with great interest, your speech on the second page. Under the sub-head, "Co-operate with other Parties", I find the following statement of yours: "I am in favor of co-operation with other parties that represent the workers, but the Socialist Party must preserve its identity as the uncompromising working class party."

The facts show that the Socialist Party position is in direct conflict with yours. The Socialist Party delegates at the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action spoke and voted for the exclusion of delegates of the Workers Party. The same situation developed in the recent New York Conference of the American Labor Party, which is reported on the first issue of the "Chicago Socialist" that I have before me. The closing statement is as follows: "The application of the Workers Party was denied by a vote of 330 to 85. This follows on the action of the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action, which also rejected the application of the Workers Party, which seems to have as few friends as it has members."

Let me make just two corrections in this report: The vote was not 330 to 85, but 352 to 58, showing that more than 25 per cent of the trade union delegates were in favor of seating the Workers Party delegates; the official figures of both, the Socialist Party and the Workers Party, will show that the Workers Party has by far the larger membership.

May I also add that the tactics adopted at Cleveland and New York have been carried out at St. Louis, Mo., and Washington, D. C., the only exception to the general rule being a special Congressional election in San Francisco, where all working class political forces were able to get together and work together.

I, therefore, put the question to you, "Are you in favor of the Socialist Party position at Cleveland and in New York, St. Louis and Washington, D. C., especially in New York where the Workers Party was excluded, and such a non-working class element as the Single Tax Party admitted?" I feel that in justice to yourself you should make a public declaration on this question at the present time.

Fraternally yours,

J. Louis Engdahl,
Editor, The Worker.

Communist Polls Big Vote

In the recent primary election in Chicago, the Workers party was only able to put forth one candidate, Comrade Louis A. Cejka, for Alderman, in the 22nd Ward. The Socialist Party, with its usual disruptive tactics also put up a candidate, Morris Seskind, of the Chicago "Forwards". In spite of the latter's endorsement by the Municipal Voters' League, which was daily featured in The Daily News and the Tribune, the Communist candidate polled over 22 per cent of the vote cast, while Seskind, representing a party which has been in the field for over 20 years, failed to poll more than 15 per cent of the vote. Comrade Cejka received over 1200 votes in the Ward, a sign of the progress being made in Chicago by the ideas of the Workers Party.

Howat Describes Treachery of "International" Machine

BULLETIN

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Alexander Howat, speaking to a large audience at the Labor Lyceum here at a mass meeting of the Progressive Miners of District No. 5, graphically described the vicious tactics of President John L. Lewis and the machine in control of the United Mine Workers of America, in its assault upon the Kansas miners.

His narrative of the crucifixion of the 12,000 members in the Kansas district revealed this dastardly deed of the Lewis machine in all its cruelty.

Under the passage of the Kansas Industrial Court Law, which declared strikes illegal, Howat and the other officials of the Kansas District that in their opinion this law should be fought with all the means available. The Kansas miners agreed with this proposition, and while they were determined to fight this law in the courts and at the ballot-box, they were unwilling to admit that what they considered the inalienable right to strike could be taken away by any law. The convention therefore pledged the support of the entire membership to Howat and the other officials in a fight to the finish to show that this law could not be enforced and that it could not prevent strikes.

In accordance with this policy, the administration of the Kansas District proceeded to call strikes the same as if the Law did not exist. As a result, Howat and other officials were arrested and jailed Sept. 30, 1921. This was followed by a protest strike of 12,000 Kansas miners which, after continuing over four months, was abandoned by the men upon the advice of Howat and the other former district officials, who still retained the entire confidence of the men even tho they had been expelled from their official positions by the International twelve days after being sent to jail. Howat stated that by this strike the Industrial Court Law was so thoroly discredited that it is a dead letter even tho still on the statute books.

The Kansas miners feel that by this action they have performed an invaluable service to the entire Labor Movement. They feel that had the Industrial Court Law in Kansas been successful it would have been taken as a model by other states and the shackles of industrial slavery firmly riveted on the whole working class of the United States. As a result of the failure of the Kansas law to prevent strikes, the movement for anti-strike laws has been stopped. Therefore the Kansas miners believed that they were entitled to the full moral and financial support of the International Union in their struggle, and Howat stated that he wrote to President Lewis requesting such backing. To this request Lewis returned an evasive answer and in the September 1921 International Convention denied ever having been appealed to. The expulsion from office of Howat and the other officials was followed by their expulsion from the United Mine Workers for life, and the revocation of the charter of the Kansas District, which left the 12,000 miners outside the pale of the Organization, to fight unsupported against one of the most iniquitous laws ever placed on the statute books.

The International then began a campaign to break down the miners' resistance to the Industrial Court Law. The notorious Van Bitner, who had been driven from the Presidency of District No. 5, in Western Pennsylvania by the outraged membership, was sent to Kansas as the special representative of John L. Lewis and, so Howat stated, soon became the virtual General Manager of the Kansas mines. Men were imported, and a few mines got into operation. Van Bitner allowed the operators to abolish the conditions for which the Kansas miners had fought for years, and the operators agreed that the Provisional District which was set up was a fine organization.

After the calling off of the successful four-month's strike, the Van Bitner policy became that of punishing the friends of Howat. In this Howat stated that no coal operator was ever more cruel, brutal or oppressive than was Van Bitner.

The strikers had been expelled and to get back into the unions had to join as new members. The operators told them that they could not get their jobs until they were members of the union, and then when they applied for membership, Van Bitner told them that they could not join until they began working in the mines.

Those succeeding in getting back in the mines, thousands of Howat's supporters were not permitted to join the union for months. Five thousand friends of Howat were deprived from voting in the election Dec. 12, 1922, for officers for the reorganized District, because they had not been members long enough, and 1500 men who had been elected by the constitutionally necessary three months, were kept out by a special International ruling that three months and twelve days membership was required.

In conclusion Howat stated that he is seeking only for justice at the hands of the International for him self and co-worker, of Kansas.

When Howat rose to speak he received a tremendous ovation, the audience rising to its feet and giving three cheers for Howat. His remarks were time and again interrupted by tremendous applause.

One cannot believe that the International Officials will long be able to resist the pressure which the rank and file, as indicated by this meeting, will place upon the International for the granting of justice to Howat and the other expelled officials.

Amalgamated Bank Shows Speed

CHICAGO.—Unusual speed, even by prewar standards, has been achieved by the Amalgamated Trust & Savings bank in transmitting money to Russia. The money is repaid in Russia in American dollars.

Eight days from Chicago to Odessa is the record made by the bank thru an arrangement with the Russian-American Industrial corporation of New York. Both organizations are controlled by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. To direct points like Moscow money is delivered in far less time. Money sent from Chicago on Feb. 5 was delivered in Moscow by cable on Feb. 8.

Demand Howat and Others Ousted be Reinstated

The following resolution was adopted amid great cheers by the audience, representing eighty local unions in all sections of the Pittsburg District:

WHEREAS, Alexander Howat, former president of District No. 14, of Kansas, and other officials of that District were expelled from their official position, and,

WHEREAS, no charges have ever been preferred against them, having never been given a trial or an opportunity to defend themselves in any way, and,

WHEREAS, they were expelled in violation of the International Constitution with no cause whatever for so doing, and,

WHEREAS, they have been out of the organization now for the past 17 months.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that we the Progressive Miners of the Pittsburgh District in meeting assembled, representing eighty local unions of District No. 5, urge the International Executive Board to reinstate Brother Alexander Howat and the other expelled officers to their former standing in the organization with all rights and privileges belonging to them, the same as they enjoyed before their expulsion from office.

U. S. Negroes Refuse to Dig Coal for Imperialist France

By HARRY GODFREY

George S. Daugherty is a former deputy police commissioner of New York City. Now he, with his brother, Harry V. Daugherty, runs a detective agency which maintains a private uniformed police and which advertises to do "industrial plant observations."

Several weeks ago Harry V. went to Europe. When he came back he brought with him a money-making scheme, the biggest strike-breaking project ever essayed by a member of the gentry which has coined millions in that gentle trade; nothing less, in fact, than a plan, all worked out and agreed upon with a Paris "labor agency," to send thousands of American Negroes as strike breakers to dig coal under the protection of French bayonets in the Ruhr.

For this, Daugherty, or the Daugherty agency, was to receive 50 cents per ton each Negro provided. It was a gorgeous plan. The only trouble was that it struck several snags immediately after the jubilant announcement was made by the gentlemen who would have profited.

According to Daugherty, it was found that not more that a handful of Negro miners could be found who was willing to dig German coal for France, even at wages equivalent to $7 a day and with board and lodging thrown in.

Word was received here from Washington just about the time Daugherty gave out that statement to the effect that the government would take a "thumbs down" attitude if the project were brought before it.

So now it seems as if the Daugherty detective agency will have to worry along on what it can make from its private police, its "shadowing," its "industrial plant observations," and from its supplying of "large bodies of men for industrial organizations" of which Daugherty told the French labor agent.

In passing, it may be said that Harry V. Daugherty rather "spilled some beans" in talking about his negotiations to ship a shipload of Negro strike breakers to the Ruhr. In talking over the project with Louis Jouseran, French labor commissioner in the Ruhr, he said that Jouseran told him that the Arabs that France has been taking to the Ruhr to dig coal have proved miserable failures.

Crowds Cheer Cannon's Talk on Revolution

The [illegible] P. Cannon, chairman of the Workers' Party, is proving a gratifying success. Even the small crowds show an enthusiasm and a desire to advance their knowledge in the revolutionary movement is growing.

In Philadelphia, Pa., last Saturday, Comrade Cannon spoke on "Today and After Five Years of Revolution," to over 500 people at the Labor Lyceum, and the Philadelphia comrades are unanimous in proclaiming it the most inspiring and informative lecture they have yet heard on Soviet Russia.

He showed that in spite of the lies of the metropolitan press and the network of fabrication that has been woven by the yellow Socialist Party and other servants of capitalism in this country concerning the Soviet government that Russia is definitely on the upward path toward economic reconstruction.

"The position of Russia is steadily improving, while all other European countries are descending into complete disorganization," said Comrade Cannon. "While the condition of the masses of Russian workers and peasants is constantly improving, the condition of the workers in all other European countries is rapidly becoming worse."

The influence of the Communists in the trade union movement was also described. Facts and figures were presented to prove that over 90 per cent of the delegates to the Fifth All-Russian Congress of Trade Unions were members of the Communist Party, which is convincing evidence that the vast majority of workers today as in November, 1917, staunchly support the policy of the Bolsheviks.

Counter Revolution Is Dead

"The fact that the counter revolution is dead was clearly demonstrated at the world famous trials of the Social Revolutionaries," declared Cannop. This trial was held while he was in Soviet Russia. He witnessed the tremendous demonstrations in Petrograd when the entire population rose as one man in mass identification of the Social Revolutionaries on the anniversary of the murder of Volodarsky."

The description of the valiant Red Army, which has defended the Revolution against the external enemy, thrilled the audience and gave them a true perspective of the indomitable will of the masses of Russian workers to support the Bolshevik government to the last drop of blood in their bodies. This is the first army in all the history of the world where the rank and file knew precisely what they were fighting for.

Questions Very Interesting

The period for questions at the close of each meeting brought out some illuminating facts. One person in the audience asked if persons were shot for their political opinions in Russia. Cannon replied that no one was molested for his opinions, but that a few had been shot for attempted assassination of government officials.

Another individual declared he heard that the Soviet government depended entirely upon violence to maintain its power. It developed that the questioner had been reading some tirades against Russia by Ben Schlesinger, tool of Abraham Cahan, of the notorious apostle of reaction, the Jewish Daily Forward, and former president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Cannon denied the assertion and then added that, "Ben Schlesinger should be the last person to talk of violence, for he does not even know how to run a labor union or preside at a convention without resorting to violence against representatives of the rank and file of the membership." Evidently there were some garment workers present who remembered Schlesinger's performance at Cleveland for this thrust evoked thunderous applause.

The Philadelphia meeting certainly showed a rejuvenation of the movement in that city and the comrades there are enthusiastic about prospects for future activity upon the basis of the interest aroused by the Cannon meeting.

Police Brutality Exposed at the Gary, Ind., Wreck Trial!

THE USELIS JURY DISAGREES!

By Jack Carney

GARY, Ind.—In this town, dominated by the United States Steel Corporation, there have been many instances in the past, but the special agents of the corporation have never before been exposed in the alleged wrecking of the Michigan Central train near Gary last August, [illegible] Captain Quinn, of the Michigan Central Railroad, admitted on the stand that his company would pay $5,000 for the conviction of those responsible for the wreck.

It is a well established fact that the wreck was caused by defective equipment and was not the work of wreckers.

Worker Beaten By Police

The Gary police were aiding the Michigan Central against the strikers and arrested Uselis and after a series of most inhuman beatings claimed he had confessed to complicity in the wreck.

Dr. H. M. Hosmer, major in the medical corps during the war, testified that he examined Uselis on August 30, 1922, and that the man was so terrified that he cried like a child when he asked him to strip so he could be examined. He had been beaten so inhumanly by the police that his mind was shattered and he thought the doctors were going to administer more beatings. Finally, a union man showed Uselis his card and the victim submitted to examination. The doctors testified that his eye was blackened, his legs, neck, ribs, arms and head fearfully beaten and bearing great welts. There was a recital of fiendish cruelties that beggar description, exposing the police as the vilest of vile degenerates. He could not take a full breath due to the pain. A hemorrhage resulted in a great clot of dried blood in his ear. Dr. Hosmer testified that these injuries could have been received by blows either from a hose, black jack or iron bars or clubs.

Complete Alibi To Be Established

A complete alibi will be established for Uselis by the defense who view the whole trial as merely an effort of the Michigan Central detectives and the Gary police to save their faces for arresting, assaulting and beating into a stupor union men they picked for victims during the strike.

This story is the backbone of the great steel trust and Gary & Co. boast that within their feudal domains there can never be any unionism.

It is up to the shop men of the nation to watch this case and to defend Uselis against this frame-up, which seems to threaten the right of workers to organize into unions in every part of the United States in spite of Garyism combined with the Michigan Central aggregation of private thugs.

Attorney Paul Glazer, who long ago earned the execration of the Steel trust because of his determination to support the interests of the working class, is defending the case and is bringing to light facts that are seldom known outside the immediate circle of those affected.

Engdahl Speaks for the Rochester "Amalgamated"

(Special to "The Worker")

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—More than a thousand members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers heard J. Louis Engdahl, editor of "The Worker" tell the story of "The Bureau Detectives and the Spy System" at the regular Friday night "open forum" here. Engdahl congratulated the members of the "Amalgamated" in Rochester on their good fortune in having Paul Blanshard as their educational director, stating that his work rivalled even the educational efforts in New York or Chicago.

The Rochester educational meetings are held in the union's own building. There is a musical program before the evening's address. The children brought along by fathers and mothers have a separate program in a separate hall, that is, until the final number of the evening, which is usually a movie comedy.

be compelled to increase by many billions of dollars the already gigantic tribute they pay to the owning class for the chance to live—with a mere existence.

Misleading the Working Farmers

On Oct. 24, 1922, the agents of the Packing Trust, the International Harvester Trust, the railway kings and the United States Chamber of Commerce met in Chicago to organize a campaign to win the working farmers over to the side of Big Business.

These exploiters of the rural toiling masses are trying to separate the working farmers from the industrial workers. Having themselves forced the farming masses into bankrupt.y they are attempting to deceive the working farmers with the hackneyed fraud that their salvation depends on the further reduction of wages and the continued deterioration of the working conditions of the industrial masses.

The Government is Preparing.

What is more, the Government is becoming evermore absolutistic—and industrially it is becoming evermore involved in the European imbroglio. At the same time conference there were American Government "observers" to protect the interests of Rockefeller's Standard Oil Trust in the lifting of the Mosul Oil Fields. Ambassador Harvey is opening by playing Morgan's game of Lombard Street, the Wall Street of Europe. Harding, elected on a platform of opposition to the League of Nations, has made a complete right-about-face and is now advocating that the United States "participate in European "affairs". For the working masses of America such a policy can mean only one thing—a greater army and a more powerful navy—the iron heel of a militarist dictatorship, and war with its high cost of living, and millions of maimed and killed.

Dividing the Workers

Just as the Democratic Wilson Government prepared the ground for the great Open-Shop drive of 1920-1921 by a ferocious onslaught on the foreign-born workers, resulting in unbridled brutality and hundreds of arrests and deportations of innocent men and women; so today, the Republican government is preparing the new attack on the whole working class by a preliminary drive against the foreign-born workers. Secretary of Labor Davis, and Senator Colt, [illegible] Department of Labor, are preparing for the passage of the Johnson bill, providing for the deportation of foreign-born workers. The Department of Justice is preparing to deport workers by raiding their meeting halls, photographed, and fingerprinted. The aims of this capitalistic drive against the foreign-born workers are plain. First, the exploiters want to lower the standard of living and the conditions of employment of millions of our workers who happen to be foreign-born. Then they will blame and attack these worse oppressed and more ruthlessly exploited foreign-born workingmen to the native workers for the degrading conditions they themselves have forced upon these laborers. The capitalists are thus hoping to sow dissension in and divide the ranks of the working masses in order to crush more easily all the workers—native and foreign-born alike.

Dangers of 1924 Election

Both dominant parties are actively preparing for the coming 1924 Presidential elections—preparing to foist another reactionary administration on the workers. There is talk of the Republican Party renominating the strikebreaker, Harding. In the Democratic Party there are plans afoot to nominate for the presidency, the reactionary Underwood, who applauded the notorious strikebreaking Daugherty injunction, and who opposed the passage of the anti-child labor law.

The Present Situation

The present situation in Hungary with smoke and fire, is very clear. The workers cannot defend themselves successfully. But in order to resist the capitalist onslaught successfully, the workers must overcome several obstacles which make it successful defense impossible today.

First of all, most of the workers who are unionized, they are organized into craft unions which are entirely out of date and such as fighting organizations are the conditions of the highly trustified modern capitalist industry.

Also, the workers are divided amongst themselves into foreign-born and native. The multitude of languages, the Babel of Tongues further tends to foster differences among the workers.

Finally the workers are not organized politically to meet their enemy. We do not have a powerful mass party of the workers—an independent working class political party, unreservedly committed to the protection of the interests of the industrial workers and working farmers.

The Workers Party knows that the complete liberation of the working class can come only thru the revolution; that is, thru the setting up of a Soviet Government of the workers and working farmers based on their mass organizations. Only thru such a government—the dictatorship of the working class—will the workers be able to abolish wage slavery and build up a Communist society.

But the Workers Party is aware of the fact that today the overwhelming majority of the working class is not yet sufficiently class-conscious or convinced of the necessity of Communism. As militants we cannot sit idly by and wait for the final conflict. The workers must immediately organize a vigorous campaign of defense against the increasingly menacing attacks of their employers.

A Program of Action

The Workers Party therefore proposes that all working-class organizations, labor unions, workers' benefit organizations, working class political parties and working farmers' political and economic organizations get together to present a united, common front against the common enemy—the employing class. To achieve this united front of labor, the Workers Party proposes, that all working class organizations, regardless of political differences, get together and marshal their forces on the basis of the following immediate program.

1. Amalgamation.

Immediate concrete steps should be taken to amalgamate the present craft unions into fighting industrial unions.

2. For the Protection of the Foreign Born Workers.

All workers in America, native and foreign-born, have but one enemy—the employing class. The separation of the American workers into English and foreign-language speaking is one of the greatest obstacles to unity of action and class consciousness in the ranks of the working class. The employers capitalize this condition to advance their own ends of exploitation and oppression. All the workers must get together against their common enemy and oppose the attack of the employers on the foreign-born workers, especially attacks which are only preliminary to and an integral part of the onslaught against the working class in America.

The International Labor Movement

The struggle of the working class is international. The workers of America cannot wage a successful struggle against their own exploiting class and at the same time put their trust in organizations that have been and are hampering and betraying the struggles of their brothers in other countries. The American workers must therefore repudiate the Second, Two and One-Half, and Amsterdam Internationals.

4. Recognition of Soviet Russia.

The workers of Russia have won their strike against their Czarist oppressors, capitalist exploiters, and the foreign imperialist invaders. The workers of Soviet Russia have succeeded in ending the rule of the land- and moneyed tyrants. They have established a Government of the city workers and poor farmers. And this Government is growing ever stronger, despite the blockade and wars of the French and British imperialist lords of finance and industry.

The American workers must help the Russian workers maintain their victory and in this way help themselves. We must fight for the full recognition of the Soviet Government. The workers of America must aid their Russian brothers in their efforts to rebuild their country and resist the attacks of the foreign capitalist plunderers.

5. For the Removal of Governmental Obstacles.

The organization of the American Government is replete with the most clever and effective devices to block the development of a powerful, militant working class movement. We propose the removal of all such Governmental obstacles now hindering the workers in their struggle against the exploiting class. The united workers should fight to abolish:

a) The Supreme Court and the veto power of courts over legislation.

b) The United States Senate.

c) The veto power of the President.

e) The present Committee system in Congress stifling even the faintest voice of protest that a workers' representative might raise.

f) The present 48-States system of Garden Sti.

law serving as a big loaf for the centralized dictatorship of the employing class. It is a device of Government confusing and making more difficult the struggles of the workers for remedial legislation and further buttressing the whole notorious system of checks and balances on which the American Government is based.

6. For a Labor Party.

In the struggle of the workers against the employers the government fights the battles of the exploiting class. The class struggle is therefore a political struggle. The workers must organize an independent working class mass political party consisting of all workers' and working farmers' organizations, regardless of political differences, and unreservedly committed to the protection of the interests of the industrial and agricultural working masses. The organization of such a mass labor party is indispensible to the establishment of a Government of, by and for the city and rural working masses—a WORKERS' GOVERNMENT.

A CALL TO ACTION!

New and most serious dangers are confronting the workers. Unless the workers organize to meet the new offensive of the employing class they will lose every vestige of their hard-won gains of many years of bitter struggle. They will be completely enslaved by the victorious employing class dictatorship.

The Workers Party calls on the workers of America to unite for their common defense. We must pit the unity of the laboring masses against the unity of the exploiters and oppressors! We must match the solidarity of the working class whose ideal is freedom, with the solidarity of the employing class whose aim is exploitation and tyranny! The workers must marshal their forces and close their ranks in defence of their unions, their ideals and their lives!

The Workers Party calls upon all the organizations of the workers and the working farmers, to join into one mighty army, to present one common front—a united front—against the one common enemy—the employing class!

Attempt to Terrorize in Knit Strike

Faced with defeat, their ranks breaking under the magnificent solidarity of the knit goods strikers, the employers group is resorting to the use of armed gangsters who rove the strike districts assaulting and slugging workers on the picket lines.

The strike is now in its third week and the workers' organization, the Amalgamated Knit Goods Workers Union, under the leadership of I. Lederman, has increased the effectiveness of the strike from day to day, while the ranks of the employers have been depleted by many of the individual employers deserting and accepting in full the demands of the union.

This desertion of their ranks has infuriated the "open shop" employers so they have resorted to the employment of hordes of gangsters, who in automobiles and on foot assault individual strikers. In one instance a meeting of strikers in Williamsburg was attacked by armed thugs and a number of strikers near the door violently assaulted, the sluggers making their escape before the other members realized what had happened. Joseph Sachs, one of the prominent "open shop" employers is charged with having personally led an assault upon strikers at 76 Throop Ave., Brooklyn, and a warrant for his arrest has been secured by the union, tho so far he has not been apprehended.

The left elements, mostly young workers, are taking the lead in maintaining the morale of the strikers and their agitation has been so effective that none in the ranks has yielded to the rosy promises of the individual bosses, who have tried to break the ranks of the strikers.

A stirring leaflet entitled "Your First Strike" was issued by the members of the Young Workers League, and has been widely distributed among the strikers and has had a tendency to keep the younger elements, who are in reality experiencing their first struggle against the employers, solidly in line.

Fur Union Officials Desperate in Court Fight Against Freiheit

In a desperate effort to stop the avalanche of criticism heaped upon them by the representatives of the militant members of the Furriers Union, the officials of the New York Joint Board of Furriers are frantically appealing to a capitalist court to come to their assistance.

After declining to defend themselves in a labor court against the exposure of their use of thugs by the Jewish Daily Freiheit, the officers of the Furriers' Union are acting the part of agents provocateurs by appearing in court and declaring before the District Attorney that the Freiheit contemptuously refers to the court as "capitalistic". The District Attorney declares he will "investigate" the article in question. Evidently Morris Kaufman, international president of the Furriers, imagines the courts of law in the United States are not capitalistic, but that they exist for the purpose of assisting the gallant leaders of labor in their valiant efforts to keep reaction enthroned against the rank and file of labor.

At a meeting of over 100 members of the Waist and Dress Makers' Union, the action of the officials of the Furriers' Union was condemned in a sharp resolution.

A Dogma of History

By H. M. WICKS

Almost three quarters of a century ago Marx and Engels proclaimed a new theory for the interpretation of history. Altho no bourgeois apologist has ever been able to refute the doctrine of these orig nators of the scientific basis of the modern Communist movement—which it has wrought storms of criticism from every source, capitalist or reformist labor—still it has not been applied or understood by any appreciable number of those who claim to speak in the interest of the proletariat.

It is not at all difficult to understand why the reformist Socialists have not embraced this mighty weapon and turned it upon the capitalist class; for historical materialism is a weapon—not merely a means of interpreting history better than before, but of making history. The Socialism that dominated the movement in the United States was essentially of a petty bourgeois character. Historical materialism with its revolutionary implications would have wrecked the bourgeois conceptions of the Socialist leaders, so they ignored it for many years.

When, at last, as the result of the World War and the Russian revolution vindicating the predictions of historical materialism, it became the fashion to embrace this doctrine, a whole crop of pseudo-Marxists sprang up. Those who had carelessly dabbled in Marxism suddenly became oracles. Quoting a few phrases from the historical writings of Marx was a favorite pastime. There, being but few who understood the fundamentals of this theory, there were few to dispute the shabby pretenses of these who professed an understanding of Marxism.

Even James Oneal, editorial writer of the New York Call, began to speak learnedly about the modus operandi of history. Tho he had long before demonstrated his total incapacity to deal with even the simplest facts of history in American labor movement, he endeavored to apply his scant knowledge to those derived and complex factors that produced the catastrophic action of the World War.

History is not a simple thing, but simpletons and those of a primitive type of mind constantly endeavor to reduce every effect to one simple cause. Just as primitive man in the dim past translated his ignorance into one word and called it God, so the pseudo-revolutionists of our day, endeavor to reduce history to one factor—but today they call it OIL.

Around the question of oil a new dogma of history is being formulated. The new "historians" account for every political movement since the discovery of naphta as a conflict over the question of oil supremacy.

Important as the question of control of the world's oil supply has come to be, since the close of the War, it certainly played no part in the gathering storm of the crisis that culminated in that titanic struggle. Had the war been fought over the question of oil the United States would not have fought on the side of Britain, but against her, for it is these two nations today that are engaged in the struggle for control of the oil supply of the world.

A plain historical fact, however, does not deter the editorial writer of the Call from proclaiming on Friday, March 9, that the late War was a war for petroleum.

Surely no one with even the faintest perception of history could make such an abysmal blunder with the exception of the spurious historian, Oneal. This is quite typical of the low degree of understanding possessed by those who furnish the intellectual fare dealt out by the Call.

To intelligently explain the origin of the world war involves an understanding of the social and economic forces at work thruout the world, covering the entire epoch since the close of the Napoleonic wars. It was capitalist imperialism with its myriad of economic interests, generating conflicts between nations in every part of the world that caused the War, and among all the economic factors leading up to the final clash of arms, the question of oil played no part whatsoever.

The importance of oil in warfare became general knowledge only during the latter days of the world war. Before the war Britain had realized the importance of oil in naval warfare and had converted its fleet of coal burning engine and since supremacy on the sea is necessary for the continued existence of Britain as a world power, certain capitalists of England were secretly contriving to control the world's oil supply. This was not war against the Standard Oil Company of the United States, which had been supreme and unchallenged in the world. Very subtly this monopoly of oil lands was proceeding when the war broke out as the result of a complex of economic forces designated in their totality under the general term capitalist imperialism.

Had the United States been aware of the sinister plans of Britain it is quite probable that the question of the partition of the world's oil supply would have been settled before this government would have consented to enter the war, even to protect the billions of Morgan.

It was only after the War, when Standard Oil began to search for new fields of exploitation that it discovered that Britain had succeeded in getting control of most of the oil supply. From first place in the business of oil monopoly the American Standard Oil Company then found itself a very poor second. The British combination of Royal Dutch Shell and its subsidiaries, had successfully blocked the expansion of the Standard in every part of the world.

In the immediate future the question of oil will play a dominant part. It was the material factor in the struggle of the Turks and Greeks, respectively tools of France and Britain. It was on the order of the day at Lausanne. It will be a dominant factor in the further development of relations between Britain and the United States. It is responsible for the United States viewing with approval the occupation of the Ruhr by France, while Britain gnashes her teeth and tries to neutralize America by agreeing to a debt funding proposition.

But in spite of the importance of the question of oil, historical materialism cannot be reduced to a dogma wherein one simply investigates the potentialities of petroleum and immediately proceeds to write a brochure on current history. Petroleum must be considered in relation to the sum total of economic factors involved in modern imperialism, and certainly the mere memorizing of a few Marxian phrases and distorting them to apply to the oil question will not suffice for an explanation of the complexities beneath the surface of national antagonisms today.

The dogmatist may console himself with his vain imaginings of profunding as he proclaims the gospel of oil in place of the conflicts between nations over the appropriation of the surplus created by the working class.

In the near future we will face a war that in form will be over the question of petroleum, but in substance will be a continuation of the imperialist struggle that produced the world war. Thus we can speak of a war for petroleum, but surely any one who visualizes the future war in such belongs in the category of intellectual eunuchs, who might function as a perverter of history in the Rand School of Social Science, but who surely has no business endeavoring to enter the realms of historical materialism.

Peer Gynt

With Joseph Schildkraut

Reviewed by Nancy Markoff

Go to see Joseph Schildkraut in "Peer Gynt", Henrik Ibsen's masterpiece, being given at the Shubert Theatre by the Theatre Guild. From the first scene in the play where we meet him, a carefree dreamer in rags, revolting against all responsibility, and as we follow him thruout his career, right up to his return home a broken old man tortured with the ever existing problem, "What is this we call life", we feel the grip of this wonderful drama and the masterful interpretation of it. For Joseph Schildkraut's interpretation of Peer Gynt is real.

Louise Closser Hale as Peer's mother will live a long time in my memory. The scene in which she welcomes her wayward boy home and in which they play a game at make believe, is equal to anything done by the best of the players of the Moscow Art Theatre.

The Theatre Guild is to be complimented on this great achievement in artistic setting and production. Peer Gynt surpasses all the other plays they have put on this season and is a worthwhile contribution to the American theatre.

Germans Don't Appreciate Selves

The Germans must learn from the Russians how to appreciate themselves sufficiently to make America anxious to make their acquaintance. In other words the German managers should sit at the feet of the Russians and learn the gentle art of publicity.

If the Russians had as good an offering to give to the American lovers of music as the Berliner Opern-Gesellschaft, now at the Lexington Opera House, the American public would have felt their presence in this country.

All lovers of music should avail themselves of this opportunity to hear Wagner's operas by this able cast of German singers.

Moscow Players Go on Tour

The Moscow Art Theatre, upon completion of its engagement at Jolson's Theatre, New York, March 31, will play in Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia. According to revised plans the Moscow Players will open at the Great Northern Theatre, Chicago, April 2, for an engagement of three weeks; to be followed by two weeks at the Lyric Theatre, Philadelphia, and then two weeks at the Majestic Theatre, Boston. Next week there will be a repetition here of "Tsar Feodor Ivanovitch"...

It is announced that the Theatre Guild is planning a theatre of its own on Broadway at the cost of $500,000. One of the first plays that will probably be offered in the new home will be "Masse Mensch", by Ernest Toller, the German Communist, still confined in Niederschonenfeld, a fortress-prison for politicals. It was planned to offer this play this year, but the time was too limited to give it a fitting production. The present offering of the Guild, Hendrick Ibsen's "Peer Gynt," having moved to the Shubert Theatre. "The Adding Machine" opens at Garrick, March 19.

Unions Join United Front for May Day

Many unions are responding to the Second Conference for a United May Day Demonstration, among them being Locals 1 and 9 of the International Ladies' Garment Workers. The proposition will also be taken up by the Joint Board of the Waist and Dress Makers.

The militants in New York are leaving no stone unturned to make this the greatest May Day demonstration ever held in America.

An executive has been elected and has sent communications to other unions and labor groups asking them to attend a second conference that will be held March 25 at the Labor Temple, 243 East 84th St.

It is appropriate that such a demonstration should be held in view of the ever increasing sentiment for amalgamation of the craft unions into industrial unions and the general tendency of labor to close its ranks to meet the assault of the capitalist class. The slogan of the demonstrations on May Day will be the questions of amalgamation, a labor party and a workers' government.

As to Labor Banks

From The Labor Herald, Official Organ of the Trade Union Educational League

The failure of cooperation as a movement of its own is almost complete in the United States when compared to the great and flourishing cooperative movement of other countries. Incompetence, graft, and a general lack of solidarity on the part of the workers has made it practically impossible for the cooperatives to grow. The situation has reached such a stage, apparently—if we are to have cooperative institutions the trade unions themselves must take the matter in hand and bring the cooperatives into existence.

The tendency for the unions to do this is one of the most pronounced features of our present-day movement. The recent rapid growth of labor banks is the most striking example. Every friend of conciliation welcomes these banks and helps to establish them. But a note of warning must be sounded. In the hands of progressive officials such banks will be constructive and helpful institutions, but in the hands of reactionaries they will do great harm. We view with alarm the founding of banks in various industrial centres by A. F. of L. hide-bound reactionaries. Any one who thinks that such banks will be used in the interests of the workers has his economic A. B. C's still to learn. On the contrary, we can expect such reactionaries, strengthened by great financiel power, to use this power in every possible way to prevent the growth of progressive sentiment in their organizations.

A move which is bound to cause much unfavorable sentiment is the recent affiliation of Warren S. Stone to the Empire Trust Co., as a director of that body. No good can possibly come from such an alliance, which, in a crisis, will inevitably be turned against Labor. Such class-collaboration must be fatal to the workers' interest. Labor banks, yes, but in the hands of progressives, not reactionaries.

Labor Can't Beat Bankers at Own Game

Sixth Article
By H. M. WICKS

We challenged the assertions of Dr. Walter F. McCaleb to the effect that labor could control the banking power of the United States in ten years, at a meeting held for union printers in the city of New York, and mildly suggested that he had better study the simple fundamentals of economics before he appears before other audiences of working people with his inane claims.

The eminent doctor became exceedingly hostile and after finding himself unable to reply to the questions hurled at him, began reciting the story of his life.

His autobiography was interesting inasmuch as it exposed this expert for the labor banks as a typical petty capitalist. At college he obtained the degree of doctor of philosophy, which accounts for his learned ignorance of everything worth knowing. When one emerges from an American college saturated with the hallucinations of speculative philosophy he may be able to feign intelligence among the cultured imbeciles of the educated bourgeoisie, but he is totally unfit to enter into controversies with working people who possess a knowledge of Marxian economics.

The absurd proposition of McCaleb, Stone and the other half-wits and charlatans trying to impose labor banks upon the trade union movement of America, can be easily exploded by considering for a moment the fact that it takes the average worker in less than two hours to produce commodities equal in value to his daily wage and that the extra six hours he works constitutes surplus-labor time, for which he receives no compensation whatever. This surplus-labor time produces surplus value, which is the amount the capitalist class takes from the working class without rendering any service whatsoever to society in return.

By way of illustration, let us imagine that the average wage is $5 per day. Two hours' labor time is required to produce commodities equal in value to the $5. The first two hours is what Marx calls necessary labor time. Instead of stopping work at the end of two hours, the worker continues on the job an average of six hours more. The six hours constitute unnecessary labor time, or surplus labor time, and it is during these six hours that the exploitation of labor takes place. Every worker, under the condition described, would therefore produce commodities equal in value to $15 per day in addition to his wages. Now the absurd proposition of the apostles of labor banks is that the workers, after paying their living expenses out of their $5 will still have enough left over to go into the banking business and in 10 years time put the fellows obtaining the $15 off the labor of every worker in industry out of business.

There is another phase of the question of savings accounts of workers that has been conveniently overlooked by the labor bankers, and the eminent doctor of philosophy who is their chief adviser. That is the commodity nature of labor-power and the fact that it is subject to all the laws of other commodities. If labor receives sufficient wages to enable it to save a portion of this wage, that is proof that the price of labor-power is greater than its value, and since the inexorable tendency of commodities of every kind is to exchange at their value, it follows as day follows the night that the price of labor-power will gravitate to the level of its value, which is the equivalent of the food, clothing and shelter necessary to enable the slave to live and multiply day by day, support a family in order that there may be another generation of wage-slaves to replace him when he goes to the scrap-heap. If all the workers were to practice that capitalist virtue of thrift, by voluntarily reducing their standard of living, in order to place money in the banks, it simply means that wages would sink to the level of the actual amount necessary to live during the first period of unemployment that followed such "thrift".

When a worker is unemployed and his family are facing the horrors of privation he does not stop to consider whether he can save money out of his wages, he only wants a chance to work so that he can live and support his family, therefore he takes the first job that will guarantee him a so-called living wage, which is the value of his labor power. Not all the beguiling wheedling of all the apostles of labor banking can ever change that fundamental feature of capitalist production nor can all the doctors of philosophy on earth successfully refute this fundamental law of capitalist production.

MAKE THE PARTY GROW 50¢

To the Members of the Party—Have you the badge of merit represented by the above facsimile of the "Make the Party Grow" stamp in your dues book?

We call the stamp a badge of merit because the money derived from the sale of the stamp will help us to get results like this:

On Wednesday, March 7th, we received from our field organizer in Pennsylvania an application for a charter for an English branch of the party. The signers of the application were the president of the Central Labor Council, the secretary of that body, the president of the miners locals and half a dozen of the delegates of the central labor body of the city.

On the day before the National Office received a letter from the vice-president of a central labor body in another city of the same state, who is also president of a local union, asking for information about how to organize a branch of the party.

There are hundreds of such opportunities in existence to strengthen the party, to sink its roots deep into the organized labor movement, and make it a powerful influence among the working masses.

The party needs organizers and workers to reach these workers who are ready to join our party and work with us. The "Make the Party Grow" stamp will provide the money for the work.

PUT ONE IN YOUR BOOK WITHOUT FURTHER DELAY AND JOIN THOSE WHO HAVE DONE THEIR SHARE TO REALLY MAKE THE PARTY GROW—NOT ONLY IN NUMBERS BUT IN STRENGTH AND INFLUENCE.—C. E. RUTHENBERG, Executive Secretary.

Destitute Amid Their Orchards

YAKIMA, Wash.—Hundreds of farmers are leaving the fertile Yakima valley, nationally known for its orchards and apples. Household goods are being sold to buy food, and ranches are selling for just enough to get families out of the district.

This was revealed recently by Y. C. Mansfield, of the Farmers' League, who has proposed that the farmers be paid $3 a day for their labor by the government.

Another Anti-Soviet Lie Nailed

AUSTIN, Tex.—Russian scientists are not starving creatures in rags clinging despairingly to their microscopes in obscure garrets, according to observations of Prof. H. J. Muller, department of zoology, University of Texas, who visited Russia by monoplane from Berlin last year.

"I found the reality different," Muller declares. "The Russian scientist I saw was busily engaged in his laboratory, actively interested in his scientific work and getting results and desirous above all of getting into touch with the work that the west is producing."

Famines Have Always Happened in Russia

Why Does the World Know About This Famine?

In Russia

famines have been a common occurence since the year 1891.

During the Czar's regime Cossacks were always sent to the afflicted area with instructions to force the peasants not to leave their villages.

In this manner thousands died but the world knew nothing about it.

To-Day

the Soviet Government has thrown open the best buildings to the sufferers. It has attempted in every possible manner to save the unfortunates.

It has appealed to the workers of the world for assistance in this gigantic undertaking.

That is why the whole world knows about THIS famine. That is why we know that.

There Are Two Million Orphans.

a large number of whom are a direct result of the famine.

The greater portion are the toll paid for the capitalist war and blockade waged against the First Workers' Republic.

ADOPT AN ORPHAN. $5 for equipment; $2 a month for upkeep.

The Farmer and the Labor Party

By ALFRED KNUTSON

The conditions under which the American farmer has been forced to work and earn his living in the past, has made it rather difficult to get to him the idea of socialism.

For decades he has been taught diligently by the capitalists that his prosperity depended largely upon getting a deed to and "owning" a piece of land. As long as there was plenty of cheap land to be had and before the rise of the mortgage system to its present tremendous proportions, the banker and the mortgage company were able to fool the farmer into believing that what they said about land and land ownership was true.

As a consequence his mind became saturated with the idea of capitalistic property rights, and the Socialist who ventured to warn him of the insecurity and futility of such "rights" was called a dangerous dreamer. His debate with the Socialist came to an abrupt end because he knew, in a concrete way, that he had so many acres of land worth so much per acre, which might be disposed of for cash whenever he wished.

Today, however, all this is changed. It is quite possible now to talk to some farmers about a different system of landownership, such as rent, for example, as proposes to make the occupancy and use the sole title of the land. Today, also, a discussion of having the national government take over and operate banks, railroads, coal mines, flour mills, terminal elevators, and warehouses, etc., will get a respectful and even enthusiastic reception at almost any bona-fide farmers' meeting.

What is the reason for this change? The truth is that the farmers of America today—easily 75 per cent of them—are absolutely bankrupt, and this fact of bankruptcy coupled with low prices of farm products and the inability of the poorer class of farmers (at the present time these constitute the majority) to borrow any more money from the banks, cause them to lose respect for capitalistic property rights and to lose faith in the present system of marketing agricultural produce. Large masses of farmers cannot earn enough to pay taxes and interest on their land, and it is an utter impossibility for them to pay anything off on the principal. Nor can the farmer sell his land because very few can pay the price. For this reason it is freely acknowledged among farmers today that the so-called owners of land are worse off than the tenants. The ownership of land under capitalism has actually become a crushing burden, and it is therefore little wonder that the farmer is beginning to look for a real solution of his difficulties.

Outside the Workers Party there is not a single organization in the United States at the present time that shows any capacity for solving these problems for the farmer. All existing farm organizations and political parties are endeavoring to help the farmer out of his dilemma without seriously interfering with the present system of property rights which, of course, we know cannot be done. The capitalist mortgage system must be abolished, every bit of debt cancelled, and the marketing facilities for agricultural products nationalized, before there can be talk of any real relief for the farmer. Labor rights instead of property rights must become the governing principle even for the farmer. The realization of such a plan will, of course, injure banks and loan companies, but what of it? How about the seven million farmers in the country? Are they of less consideration than the few thousand bankers?

The farmer needs a Labor Party as much as the city worker does. There are signs that the two big working class groups are beginning to realize that their interests are identical, that they see in the capitalist a common enemy. Sheer necessity force them to co-operate with each other. Of course, it should be observed that there is not now very much sentiment among the farmers of America for a labor party. This is to be expected. However, the very fact that there is real necessity for establishing such a political party among the exploited farmers is sufficient guarantee that sentiment can be developed for it by means of intelligent organization and propaganda.

May the Labor Party come quickly. The farmers will join it, because there is no organization or political party in the country today that has the capacity to give expression to the real needs and aspirations of the agricultural classes.

The Technical Aid

Statement by the Workers Party.

During the past weeks two groups have been fighting each other within the Technical Aid Society.

This conflict has not merely been fought inside the organization but has been carried outside of the organization.

We believe that this conflict hinders the constructive work which the Technical Aid Society should be doing.

For this reason—we—in harmony with the Communist International are opposed to mass emigration to Soviet Russia, and are at the same time strong in our support of the activities of the Technical Aid in behalf of Soviet Russia.

We Call upon all Comrades:

1. All Party comrades who are members of the Technical Aid shall cease carrying on this conflict.

2. The new and old bureaus of the Technical Aid shall unite in comradely spirit.

3. The convention of the Technical Aid shall be postponed pending the final decision of the Communist International.

Since it is an impossible condition that in one party two discussion clubs rule, the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party of America emphatically demands that comrades cease carrying on this conflict.

All comrades who are active in the Technical Aid shall not forget for one instant that first of all they are party members, and first of all they must therefore obey party discipline.

(Signed) C. E. Ruthenberg,
Executive Secretary.

The Worker in "the South"

Dear Comrades:—Enclosed find check for $5 for five subs to "The Worker". Among the subs I have sent in, a few are Negroes and for every one, I know 25 read it. If it is not worn out. They sure like it, but cannot afford to get it for they are the worst off of any of the wage slaves.

The bosses here pay from 83 Cents to $1.25 per day for their labor. Most of the workers get less than $1.25 and have families to keep, and living is just as high here as any place. These same slaves pay taxes and as they constitute 60 per cent in South Carolina and North Carolina they are not allowed to vote. Comrade Stokes' article made a hit with them.—F. W. Dietrich, Laurens, S.C.

Workers' Victories in Peace

The London Correspondent of the New York Times is shedding tears because E. F. Wise, rated as one of the leading economic experts of the British government, has quit his job and thrown in his lot with the Russian Soviet Republic. In the language of the Times' man, Mr. Wise gives up a "good position, excellent prospects and a pension," when he can find no information as to the stability of the Russian Workers Republic "to render such a sacrifice justifiable."

We judge that Mr. Wise knows exactly what he is doing. He has been sitting in at international conferences for the last few years, and he knows the economic outlook for Europe and the world. He believes that Europe cannot recover until Russia recovers. So he is now the economic adviser of the Central Union of Russian Co-operative Societies.

Mr. Wise points out that last year Soviet Russia exported a million tons of goods valued at $60,000,000 and this is just the beginning. He declares that if American agricultural implement firms would extend one or two years' credit to the peasants of Russia, now, as they did before the war, there would be an immense demand for the products of the American farm implement industry.

The stand taken and the declarations made by Mr. Wise are merely an indication of which way the wind is blowing in Eastern Europe and in Red Silseria. The Soviet Republic is rapidly getting on its feet, the wheels of industry are moving ever faster and faster. What Mr. Wise admits, and what the great capitalists know, deep down in the bottom of their black hearts, all the imperialist world must soon admit,—that workers' rule in Russia is victorious in peace, even as in war.

"Down with the King!"

We have been assured by the labor lieutenants of British capitalism that the King can do no wrong to labor. They say that labor is oppressed under America's industrial czars, as well as under British royalty.

This is all very true, but at least America's workers are saved the spectacle of their yellow officials donning silken knee breeches to wait upon a puppet king, under the guidance of a Lady Astor, warming them, "Pull up your stockings."

There was James Henry Thomas, general secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen; John Robert Clynes, president of the National Union of General Workers, and Philip Snowden, all staunch supporters of the Second (Socialist) International.

In fact, the New York Socialist daily, The Call, tells us that, "The king has interpreted the handwriting on the wall as meaning that the day may not be far distant when Britain may have a labor government and that he thus desires to become personally acquainted with his possible future ministers."

No doubt the Second Internationalist "Call" expects some Judas labor leader in England to play the role that Branting now finds himself in before the Swedish king, altho we have not yet heard that Branting has donned silken knee breeches and stockings. The Call even professes that, "It fell to the lot of Lady Astor to burn the bridges between capital and labor."

We have not noticed that British Communists have been invited to meet the king. They will not be invited because they will stand faithfully by their slogans, "Down with the king! Down with capitalism!" until there shall be no more kings, until capitalism shall have been swept away, and all human beings stand erect as equals.

Isadora Duncan Loses Her Citizenship

There is a breath of relief soughing thru the departments of government in Washington, D. C.—Isadora Duncan is no longer a citizen of these United States.

The department of labor, headed by the Pittsburgh millionaire, Mr. Davis, has ruled that Miss Duncan made the mistake of marrying the Russian poet, Serge Essenine, on April 1, 1922, instead of after September 22, 1922, the date of the passage of the Cable Women's Separate Citizenship Bill.

This, of course, saved the department from ruling upon the important question of whether Miss Duncan's remarks while in this country could be made the basis for the withdrawal of citizenship. The government has played the role of a coward as usual. Yet this same government will, no doubt, use this indefinite ruling as the basis for further attacks on the citizenship of native-born Americans.

It will be interesting to watch the antics of America's capitalist officialdom when next Miss Duncan seeks to come to these shores. A big effort will, no doubt, be made to keep her out. If she is kept out, America will be the loser, a heavy loser, and not Isadora Duncan.

The War Veterans and Amnesty

The World-War Veterans are to be congratulated on the success of their amnesty meeting held at the Lexington Opera House, Sunday. It was a great throng, and Sam Scarlett, deported after five years at Leavenworth Prison, put the spirit into the gathering that could not be expected from U. S. Senator Borah.

We repeat the reminder, however, that we did not urge the World-War Veterans to broaden their amnesty demand. We had understood that the Lexington meeting was to be for all the class-war prisoners. We came away with the feeling that attention had only been given to the cases of the war prisoners of the Industrial Workers of the World, leaving out even the Wobbly victims of the state criminal syndicalism laws. No word was uttered about Mooney and Billings, Ford and Suhr, Sacco and Vanzetti, Dolla and Bentall, not to mention the Communist prisoners.

The World-War Veterans should be something more than an organization of soldiers of the late conflict who discovered that it was not "a war for democracy." If this organization is to live as part of the labor movement, it must take an active part in the daily class conflict, taking a stand for all the prisoners, and declaring its position in definite terms on all working-class issues. It blazed the path in this direction when it issued its declaration warning the workers of this country against the development of an American Fascisti. It must not follow the rather lukewarm declarations of even a U. S. Senator Borah, the prosecutor of Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone, in the war of the western mine owners on the Western Federation of Miners; also one of the few members of congress who fought the woman suffrage militants to the last, even showing them the door of his senatorial office. It is easy to talk about amnesty for the war prisoners now, more than four years after the armistice. Even Borah talks for it.

But the World-War Veterans must broaden their fight, and put the militancy of the present into their struggles. Then their organization will grow and become a power. Otherwise it will disintegrate and decay.

Armour and Co. has swallowed Morris and Co., and the new food trust is capitalized at $500,000,000. With a few more swallows the Armour monopoly ought soon to rival the billion dollar capitalization of the phone trust.

Free Speech in Logan County

The Civil Liberties Union is again to be commended on the performance of another real service rendered the labor movement. It has sent speakers into the "closed" territory of Logan County, West Virginia, and held a meeting on the steps of the county court house under the nose of the mine owners' sheriff, Don Chafin, sworn enemy of the miners' union.

We hope that the miners' officials will take every advantage of this offensive against the anti-union coal barons, and use this opportunity to the utmost to carry on the work of organization.

Some years ago, in the heat of the miners' strike along Paint and Cabin Creeks, we were told by the international executive board member of the United Mine Workers, in charge of the strike, that all West Virginia could be organized by flooding the state with organization literature, by carrying on a real propaganda campaign. It was such a campaign that made the steel strike possible. We wondered why such a campaign was never launched in West Virginia, but could never find an explanation until we learned that this executive board member had later turned mine owner.

The Civil Liberties Union has shown the miners' union what is possible, not only in West Virginia, but in every other mine field in the land. The way can be opened, if the miners' officials wish, for reaching every unorganized mine worker in the land. Surely every oppressed coal miner can see the necessity of organization. It is now the turn of the Lewis administration in the United Mine Workers' international organization to make the next move. It is organization or destruction for the coal miners' union. The international officialdom that will not carry on the work of organization to the utmost should and must be driven into the discard.

Alexander Schreider, one of the spokesmen of the Left Social Revolutionary Party of Russia, fears that the so-called unity conference of the Second and Two and One-Half Internationals, Hamburg, will result in too much of a love feast. He protests against the exclusion of delegates from Communist Parties. Schreider no doubt sees the Second (London) Internationalists leaning upon the remains of the Two and One-Half (Vienna) Internationalists, who are bidding farewell to any radical pretensions they might have had in the dim past.

Belasco Ibanez, from his beautiful villa on the shores of the Mediterranean, decla s that his "Four Horsemen" will again ride over Europe because "literature is international, science is international, trade is international, but politics is not international, but narrow and nationalistic." Ibanez ought to study up on the Communist International, that is teaching international politics to the workers of the world, the International that will send his horsemen on a vacation forever.

We are not surprised at the charge of treason launched by the Italian Fascisti government against our comrade, Menotti Serrati, communist member of the Italian chamber of deputies and editor of the Communist daily, Avanti. Conviction means a sentence to prison for life. But we would say that the Mussolini dictatorship is merely turning on the gas and taking its own life. It has its own way of committing suicide, not uncommon to capitalist tyrants.

"There is not the slightest chance of the government being overthrown," declares Lieutenant Commander Kenworthy, member of the British Parliament, who is returning to London from Moscow to urge British recognition of the Soviet Republic. American congressmen will teach the same conclusion when they go to Russia, if they can study conditions there without prejudice.

French imperialists have not been able to silence the Paris Communist daily, L'Humanite, by sending its editor, Cachin, to prison. They are now hot-footing it after the business manager, allowing the paper to bring to destroy the morale of the country. No doubt Poincare and his gang feel they are losing the confidence of the country, something that anyone with a little common sense could have told them before the French army advanced into the Ruhr.

Labor Rallies Behind Foster

Much Written-up Case of Burns-Daugherty Prosecutors Proves "Dud" in Michigan Court

Debs Out for Program of the T.U.E.L.

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—"The workers of this nation need to be industrially organized without any further delay," writes Eugene V. Debs in the April Labor Herald. "It is the crying need, the urgent demand of the working class.

"That does not mean that dual unions should be organized. Not at all! I should be the first to oppose any such program. The lessons of the past experience warn against any such further attempt.

"The Trade Union Educational League, under the direction and inspiration of William Z. Foster, is in my opinion the one rightly directed movement for the industrial unification of the American workers. I thoroly believe in its plan and its methods, and I feel very confident of its steady progress and the ultimate achievement of its ends. Of course, I also believe in political unity, and the necessity of the working class building up an independent political organization.

"The urgent, imperative need of thoroguoing working class unity was never so glaringly manifested as it is today. Recent lessons growing out of the defeated steel strike, the defeated mine strike, and the defeated railroad strike, are tragically in evidence in the appealsthey make to the workers of the nation. Each of these strikes that resulted in such disastrous failure could and should have achieved a clean-cut victory. The grievances in each instance were sufficiently flagrant to arouse the attention of the entire nation, and the conditions were as favorable for the successful outcome of the battles as they could possibly be.

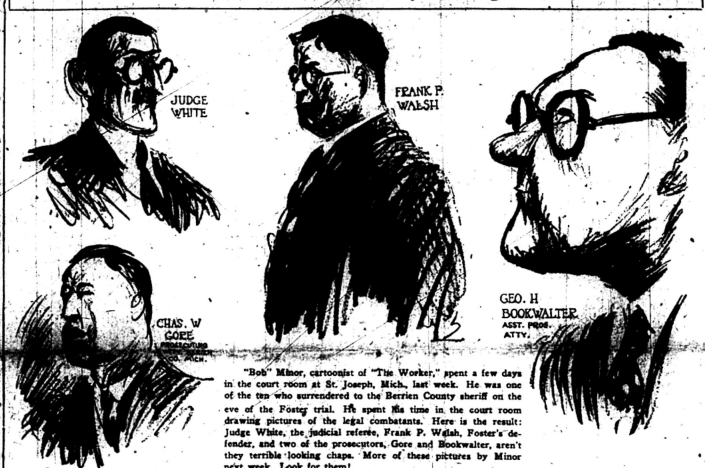
"The only reason that the brave soldiers who fought these heroic battles against starvation went down to ignominious defeat thousands of them having been rewarded with the blacklist in return for their lost jobs, is that they fought under a craft union instead of an industrial union standard, and consequently became the prey either of their misleaders, or of the designs of their masters and exploiters.

"Craft unionism today is not only an obsolete form of organization, but characterizing it bluntly it is a crime against the working class. Its sole purpose in the present industrial development is to keep the workers divided, arrayed against each other for the benefit of their masters and misleaders."

Shoe Workers Meet.

The Shoe Workers Group of the Trade Union Educational League will meet Saturday, March 24th, 3 P. M., at 208 East 12th St., Room 1.

As "Bob" Minor Saw Chief Combatants in Michigan Communist Trial



"Bob" Minor, cartoonist of "The Worker," spent a few days in the court room at St. Joseph, Mich., last week. He was one of the ten who surrendered to the Berrien County sheriff on the eve of the Foster trial. He spent his time in the court room drawing pictures of the legal combatants. Here is the result: Judge White, the judicial referee, Frank P. Walsh, Foster's defender, and two of the prosecutors, Gore and Bookwalter, aren't they terrible looking chaps. More of these pictures by Minor next week. Look for them!

Starding revelations, promised and heralded by the Burns-Daugherty attack on the Communist movement thru the trial of William Z. Foster, at St. Joseph, Mich., are falling on deaf ears as the prosecution offers its "Harry Orchards" and "Ortie MacManigals" for the approval of court and jury.

Thru the "pay-triotic" energy of R. B. Whitney, erstwhile professor at exclusive Harvard University, head of the 100 per cent American Defense Society, the whole case of the prosecution had been spilled long ago thru the "exposures" of the Boston Transcript, and associated publications, and later thru the New York Herald, and any kept sheet that would buy its stuff.

In fact, the Burns Detective Agency, in full charge, it seems, of all the testimony in the case, has been peddling it around for the past six months to any capitalist sheet that would buy it, with the result that the "Michigan Trial" viewing the offerings of the prosecution, has the bad taste of "the morning after".

Wherever mass meetings of workers are held thruout the land, and the name of William Z. Foster mentioned, and the Michigan trial discussed, there is great enthusiasm for the secretary of the Trade Union Educational Leage, and the editor of its official organ, "The Labor Herald". Every indication is that, altho some reactionary officials may seek to use kept press reports of the Michigan trial to create prejudice against the militants, nevertheless, the great mass of the workers are with those whom Burns, Daugherty and other hireling prosecutors of the open shoppers, would victimize and send to prison, for their loyalty to labor.

This week's testimony has definitely shown that the Burns-Daugherty department of justice, at Washington, with the Burns Detective Agency as its ally, was definitely back of the Michigan case, manhandling the Berrien County sheriff's staff, and the Michigan attorney general's office to suit its will, which is the will of William J. Burns and the big bosses of American industry.

Judge Rules that Everything Is Admissable at the Communist Trial in Michigan

By EDGAR OWENS

(Special to "The Worker")

COURT ROOM, St. Joseph, Mich.—The star of the State's star witness, Federal detective Francis Morrow, became somewhat dim when he attempted to identify the questionnaire of W. Z. Foster, defendant in the Communist trial here.

Even after admitting that Foster was 15 feet away from him and that about twenty people were between him and Foster when the latter was alleged to have been filling out the questionaire, and that it had been deposited upon a table among 74 other and like questionaires, Judge White allowed it to be received and read to the jury. Morrow testified that Foster was industrial director of the Communist Party, stating that he knew this to be a fact because it had been announced at the convention and had been previously reported thru party channels. He produced a bundle of documents one of which he handed to the prosecutor, who offered it as an exhibit.

It was at this time that he again got his wires crossed. He had testified that all party documents came thru the mails. The exhibit was a bi-weekly news letter and the paragraph which the prosecution wanted to introduce referred to Communist activity on behalf of the striking coal miners and called for maximum support on behalf of the West Virginia miners in their so-called treason trials, which followed their conflict with the coal barons. Other documents, read to the jury over the objection of Attorney Walsh, where the Communist party program and constitution, an article from the March issue of "The Communist" entitled "Our Prisoners", and an article in the July number of "The Communist" entitled "The Vice of Purity".

The prosecutor offered the theses and statutes of the Third Congress of the Communist International and the "A B C of Communism" by Bukarin. Judge White has ruled these to be admissable.

Reactionary Mine Officials Stop Meeting

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Made desperate by the tide of sentiment sweeping District Five, United Mine Workers, as a result of Alexander Howat's meetings around Pittsburgh, the Lewis machine staged one of its most disgraceful examples of rowdyism when they succeeded in stopping a big mass meeting in Charleroi, Pa., Sunday afternoon, March 18, and prevented Howat from speaking.

Mass Meeting Protest

Their conduct proved that the Lewis machine regards Howat as its most dangerous foe in the miners' movement today. The reaction from the rowdyism on this occasion is tremendous. The crowd was overwhelming in the approval of Howat and many doubters were made permanent enemies of the machine by the conduct of the gang.

As a result of the rowdyism on this

Alex Howat Plans Tour of East for Benefit of Fayette Coal Miners

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The Lewis machine has adopted a policy of preventing Howat from speaking before the miners of America. They have broken up the meeting in District Five and attempted to break up a second meeting. They are spending money like water to maintain a pay-roll gang of thugs and rowdies.

There is only one way to answer them. Call for dates for Howat from all over the country immediately. Howat is starting a tour of the Eastern part of the U. S. Protest against his persecution by staging big mass meetings and demonstrations. Proceeds go to the benefit of the Fayette County miners who are locked out since they were practically deserted by the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America January 18, 1923.

Rush all requests for dates to J. A. Hamilton, Secretary, Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller Street, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Workers! Support the Labor Party Referendum of the Trade Union Educational League

The Trade Union Educational League has taken its first big step in the campaign to popularize independent working-class political action. It has sent out 15,000 letters to practically every local union in the United States. These letters each contain a leaflet outlining the position of the League regarding a Labor Party and a ballot whereon the multitude of local unions are requested to express their opinion on the commitment of the whole labor movement to independent working-class political action.

The communication points out the need for not only a united political movement, but also for a strongly built industrial movement, the two issues being linked together. A quotation from the letter follows:

"Amalgamation and a Labor Party! These are the supreme needs of the labor movement at the present time. On the one hand, we must amalgamate all our craft unions into a series of powerful industrial organizations, and on the other hand, we must discard our present antiquated political policy of rewarding friends and punishing enemies and organize a militant Labor Party capable of defending our political interests. The recent great strikes of shopmen, miners, and others, with the Government entirely on the side of the employers, shows the absolute necessity of a Labor Party. The future progress of the entire labor movement depends upon the accomplishment of these two basic and vital measures, Amalgamation and a Labor Party."

In order to learn the sentiment of the rank and file of the labor movement generally on the proposition of independent working class political action, each of the 15,000 local unions is requested to vote on the following proposition:

Resolved; That we endorse the formation of a Labor Party by the whole trade union movement, to be based upon direct representation from the local unions, and to include as affiliated organizations all existing working class political parties."

Wide-spread interest has been aroused by this unusual referendum. Labor papers from New York to California have carried long stories about it, and have commented favorably upon the project. In thousands of unions it is becoming the subject of conversation. Does the labor movement need a Labor Party? Do the rank and file want a Labor Party? The referendum will give the answer.

Every union man should see that this referendum is brought to the attention of his local union. If the members are not yet thoroly posted on the issue, they should have it explained to them in short talks by those who have studied the question. The statement issued by the National Committee of the Trade Union Educational League gives the conclusive arguments to bring forcefully home the lesson of the need of a Labor Party. This statement is now available in leaflet form at a small price; a few of these distributed at a local union will quickly clarify the issue and bring the organizations enthusiastically into line.

Every reader of THE WORKER should join at once in this great educational campaign. Talk about Amalgamation and a Labor Party. Raise the issue in your local union. Distribute the leaflet issued by "The League." Introduce the resolution cited above. Send to the vote of your local union to the Trade Union Educational League. Let us act all together; as a result the demand for a Labor Party will soon be as widespread and insistent as the demand for amalgamation.

Rail Heads Balk Efforts at Solidarity

By WILLIAM E. FOSTER,
Editor, The Labor Herald.

The general calibre of the men to be found at the head of some of our labor organizations, as well as how little attention they pay to convention instructions, is well exemplified by the farcical amalgamation negotiations carried on between the presidents of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and of the Switchmen's Union of North America.

At the 1922, Toronto Convention, of the B. of R. T., a resolution was adopted calling for the amalgamation of the B. of R. T. and the S. U. It specifically stated, "Inasmuch as the yardmen of this country are organized into two separate orders, which in the past has had a harmful effect, and their interests would be better served by uniting into a single and stronger organization, this Convention is in favor of making an offer to the Switchmen's Union looking to the merger of the two orders.

Shortly afterward President Lee, "merely for your information," sent this resolution to President Cashen. The latter wrote demanding further information. To this Lee said, "I am unable to give you any additional information other than contained in the resolution. . . The only argument I remember presented to the convention by those supporting the resolution, was that in the interest of trainmen and yardmen, one organization only should be arranged for."

Taking his cue from Lee's deliberate sabotage of the amalgamation resolution, Cashen backed away from the proposition altogether, saying, "In the absence of a definite understanding as to the intent of this resolution, the Board finds itself in the position where it is unable to take action. It is our opinion that the intents of the resolution has for its end the absorption of the Switchmen's Union by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. This apparent intent is totally at variance with the fundamental principle on which the Switchmen's Union of North America is based." He then plumps for 100% unionism complete. With such reactionary leadership, how can railroad men make any progress?

The plutocrat's rapacity stops only at the labor capacity of the worker —and oft-times not even there.

Special May Day Issue of "The Worker"

"THE WORKER" will issue a "Special Edition" for International May Day, 1925. This issue will be dated Saturday, April 28, and will be put out long enough in advance to reach all May Day Meetings, no matter in what section of the country they are held.

There will be articles by all the best writers in the world Communist Movement. There will also be articles and cartoons dealing with special conditions in the United States.

The world solidarity of labor is rapidly growing stronger and stronger. The different manifestations of this development during the past year will be reviewed in this issue. Attorney Sees Dr... Justice Plot Back of Raids

Department of Justice and that the Bureau of Investigation may try to force a conviction in the city to a more agreeable prosecutor.

Sleuths Conveniently Forget.

Wolf testified that he had never heard of Allen Moyers, general manager of the Burns' detective agency until the day following the raids at Bridgeman. This, in spite of the fact that he had been a Pinkerton detective for about eight years preceding July 1919, when he became an employe of the Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, of which Mr. Burns is the directing head.

In fact, all the Burns' federal detectives denied they had ever heard of Moyers, the manager of the Burns Agency, previous to the Bridgeman raids. Yet it was quite evident from Wolf's testimony that Moyers had advance information concerning the raid, as he appeared at St. Joseph from New York City the morning following the raids.

After the raids, according to the testimony worked out of Wolf by Mr. Walsh, the seized material was at all times accessible to the federal agents who had keys to the room in which the material was kept. Meyers also had access to the documents but the witness could not remember whether or not Meyers had examined any of them while alone in the room.

Walsh asked Wolf, "Did you not say to the Berrien County Board of Supervisors that Berrien County will not be put to any expense for what has taken place, and what will happen in these cases. The money will come to pay all expenses. The source from which it will come I cannot say at this time, but it will come?"

Wolf denied making such a statement and when he was asked if Max Berger had not done so he reiterated that he had made no such statement.

Mr. Walsh based his question on an affidavit which he held in his hand. Incidentally an affidavit making such a charge and signed by Delegates Hamill and Representative Ketcham, Congressman from this district, was filed by a member of the Berrien County Board of Supervisors and was one of the grounds upon which the defense based its motion for a change of venue.

The second affidavit is a matter of public record. This is significant when it is realized that Michigan has a statute forbidding the use of outside funds for a public prosecution. Mr. Wolf was excused shortly after the noon recess much to his relief.

The next witness was Francis A. Morrow. Morrow announces himself as a "federal employee". He was a delegate to the Communist convention last August and is counted as the State's star witness. He testified that he was a duly elected delegate from Philadelphia, and gave "expert" testimony regarding the structure of the Communist Party and attempted to explain its functions.

Morrow Well Schooled

He was generally ready with his answers before Prosecutor Smith had fully framed his questions, which gave the impression that he had been thoroly rehearsed. He identified "the call for the convention," which Judge White allowed to be read into the record over the strenuous objection of Mr. Walsh. He identified a number of documents which were read into the record. Mr. Walsh objecting. He told of how Duffy of the Grounds' Committee had dropped the roster of delegates which he had picked up and bid for this trial, a statement so raw, and palpably a falsehood, that it called forth a smile even from those on the inside of this prosecution.

The Battle to Get a Jury

(Special to "The Worker")

ST. JOSEPH, Mich.—The first prospective juryman to admit he once was a member of a labor union was Frank Gore, and dismissed from the jury box. Foster will be tried for unlawful assembly under the criminal syndicalist law. William Gatchell, who said he was a former member of the Cement Finishers' Union, Chicago, now farmer, was dismissed. Another man who said he was a member of a union, and had read Marx very closely, was questioned by Prosecutor Gore, under guidance of Max Berger, "anti-bolshevist expert" from Burns' Department, Chicago.

"Do you believe in the fundamental right of the American people to make revolution as expressed in the Declaration of Independence," was a question asked each venireman by Walsh. Prosecutor Gore countered with, "No; you believe criminal syndicalist law a good law and should be enforced?" incessantly today as yesterday. Also Foster's leadership in steel strike and packing house workers were prominent factors in asking jurors whether they were prejudiced. Prosecutor Gore today asked juror whether he understood steel workers had better working conditions now and whether he attributed improvement to Foster's activity, if so whether it would tend to prejudice him in favor of Foster.

One retired capitalist, living on investments, this morning admitted fixed prejudice. He was excused. Another business man admitted fixed opinion, he also was excused.

A roar of laughter was created by a juryman who said he had talked with a storekeeper, who declared his show window had fallen in and thought it was because Communists were in town. Juror said this had not prejudiced him.

The case takes more and more a social atmosphere as auditors catch threads of deeply political ideas and class struggles thruout the world. Walsh frequently refers to First, Second and Third Internationals, and international associations of business men—such as the chambers of commerce, asking whether prospective jurors realize that all phases of life have become of international scope, and whether they believe workers have same right to organize international associations as capitalists have.

$5,000 Bail!

At least $5,000 more bail is needed to secure the freedom of the comrades who surrendered recently in Michigan. Among those still awaiting bail is Rose Pastor Stokes, who was one of the ten who voluntarily returned to St. Joseph, Mich., and gave themselves up to the authorities who claimed they had been looking for them in all parts of the country. Those able to do so should bail should get in touch with Morris J. Loeb, secretary, Labor Defense Council, 166 W. Help Get Throngs Out to Attend the Cannon Meetings

Every reader of "The Worker" is urged to help make the James P. Cannon meetings in his town the big success it ought to be. These meetings are being arranged on a subscription basis, every admission ticket being good for a subscription to "The Worker". The bigger the meeting, the more readers won for "The Workers".

Thru these meetings thousands of new readers ought to be won for your paper, and the basis laid for the building of a more powerful Workers' Party organization in hitherto unorganized territory.

If you are a reader of "The Worker" and not in touch with the Workers Party in your town, now is the time to get into the party, and help strengthen its official organ.

If there is no Workers Party organization in your town, this is the opportunity to get it going. In some cities long contributors have made a success of the Cannon meeting, getting the hall, putting out the publicity, selling the sub cards, in fact, putting it over much bigger than in some cities where strong committees had been on the job.

Write for terms, find out what you can do to help by addressing Elmer T. Allison, Business Manager, "The Worker", Room 405, 799 Broadway, New York City, N. Y. The list of Cannon dates arranged so far will be found on Page Five.

WORST BOSS EDITOR: The scene was laid in the office of a gas station. Setting: The employment agency sent you over here, kid. You're an operator, eh? We don't need no assemblers . . . . Can you operate a power pressing (a youth of 18) answered somewhat dubiously . . . I've learn . . . I think I can work it."

"You THINK you can work it! . . . Anybody here can opritate a power press?" (With a growl of job seekers in the office.)

No reply.

"See here." (This to the youth.) Charlie by name.) No thinking. Are you sure you can operate the press?"

"Yeh, I'm sure."

"You're sure, eh? All right, go down in the cellar and tell Phil you're the new power press hand."

The boss turned to the next applicant and Charlie walked down to the dim and dirty cellar.

Ten minutes later and Charlie was up again with blood dripping from a mutilated hand and with a deadly pallor on his face. The boss was cursing: "Don't you know enough to keep your damn fingers out of the machinery. Why the hell did you tell me you worked for a year on a drill press? (The poor boy had of course said nothing of the kind.) Why the hell—" But Charlie had already fainted and was being rushed by his fellow slave Phil to the nearest doctor.

Three weeks later, at 8.30 A. M. Charlie was being lectured at by the boss: "See what comes from lying. But the doctor patched you up all right, didn't he? What's that, you can't use your thumb? Oh, that's all right, just give it time. You learned a lesson, anyhow. And I'm giving you back your job, too, after all the trouble you gave me . . . Phil 'll show you how to run the press right. You better go downstairs, it's after half past eight. You say you can't use your thumb? Aw, it's all right, it'll limber up. You don't have to use your thumb on the press anyway." And the boss walked into his private office. And Charlie walked downstaire to the power press. But a moment later the boss was out of his office, and yelling after Charlie: "Hey, you, wait a minute. You're right. That thumb aint in a condition to use. I guess you're right." He looked into a closet for a moment and then turned back to Charlie: "You're right, but this'll fix you up all right." And he patiently adjusted a rubber finger-cap over Charlie's wounded thumb. "That'll fix you up fine. All right, Phil's waiting for you."

And Charlie, dumb slave, walked down the cellar stairs, and the boss muttered after him: "Did you ever hear? Can't use his thumb, he says, the damn kid, after all the trouble he's given me." So too did the boss mutter at the end of the week when he fired Charlie for being too awkward about the machinery."

And after a fashion the boss's slaves muttered too. And their mutterings, now silent, will soon become roaring, and their thoughts will become deeds, and then bosses will no longer mutter, because there will be no bosses.—T. Herberg, Brooklyn.

A Canadian court has now held that the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is an illegal organization, operating in restraint of capitalist trade. Perhaps this will set a few more of the 100 per centers thinking the members of this aristocratic labor union to thinking, if that is possible.

"Harding Horsehoat Runs into the Mud," says a headline about the president's pleasure trip down in Florida. Well, that's where the ship of state in Washington, D. C., has been for a long time. So now it has company.

The White Terror still rules in Jugo-Slavia, and last Sunday's elections have passed off safely for the Belgrade friends of the Paris allies.

If labor loved itself as much as President Harding loves his golf, the capitalist game in America would be up, with the workers the winners.

Philadelphia Labor Falls Into Line

PHILADELPHIA.—Another influential trade union body has taken action in support of the victims of the Michigan Criminal Syndicalism cases. The Philadelphia Central Labor Union at its meeting recently endorsed the Labor Defense Council and issued credentials to its organizers. J. P. McCarthy who made the appeal before the central body has been appearing before local unions in Philadelphia soliciting support. Many unions in the city are helping financially and have passed resolutions demanding the dismissal of the case to the Governor of Michigan.

Deserting the Fayette Coal Miners

(SPECIAL TO "THE WORKER")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The following statement can now be authoritatively made:

The present Lewis administration of the United Mine Workers of America and a committee of its grand executive board, the Fayette County Committee, are the only committees, after close investigation, recently visiting the Fayette district, to find a healthy condition and recommend that the strike be called off. The Lewis committee has also recommended that the strike benefits be withdrawn, as unnecessary and unwarranted. Their report was made to the executive board which was called Dec. 30, 1924, in Pittsburgh. Lewis, in addition, has been quoted in the press as having made a report to the executive board.

Poems by Communist in German Prison

THE WORKER has just secured three sonnets written by Ernest Toller, now imprisoned in the Fortress Niederschönenfeld, in Bavaria, Germany, because he was one of the members of the Munich Soviet, at the time of the establishment of the short-lived Bavarian Soviet Republic. Toller is author of "Maschinen Stürmer", "Masse Mensch" and other plays being produced by the Incorporated Stage Society, in London, and that the Theatre Guild is planning to put on in New York City. The three sonnets are as follows:

PRISON NIGHTS

The nights are full of silent tears, there
Are infant's timid tapping at thy wall.
Like a migrant, Will sorrows press thy hand?
Ah no; thy hand encounters but the stones.

Grease and rebellion soothing in the night.
And wild desire that for the woman's form.
Sleep, all trembling from enfolded
sleep,
By mocking phantoms fondest thy dreams
distorted.

The air and night teemeth with image unruly.
Like velvet butterflies that faint and fade
In depths of ever kissing mysterious things.

Love melodies then'll never hear again
As then youthful notes them now they discharge.
Where is no road to follow, no return.

A PRISONER GIVES HIS HAND TO DEATH

At first the cry of the unfortunate;
Then curses ringing thru the noisy halls,
The call of nurses sounding the alarm.
And then to offer the death-wreck her fat hand.

Why hast thou given thy hand to Death,
O friend?
Was it the sounding of the beaten ones,
The sob of hunger, or the years that sat
One bodies gnawing at the bars that gnaw
The stiffening corpses? Was it then the steps
That thronged above our heads with ceaseless noise,
Or yet the silent mockery of these walls
All sorrow-draped, O, nightmares, that oppress
We cannot tell. This only he we know
That must hurt other pain, and that so pledge

Surely untied us, YOU and I; apart
Thou shalt remain; my loss is in the night
Of this drear edifice; and we do freeze,
Frozen in the symbosis of a hurtful cold.

FORESTS

Forests appearing as horizons far
That with the breath of evening wake to life
Have my desire doth enter into thee
—Mankinds my captive address can surmount!

I broke my face upon the tree bark,
And my hands to cure their leveled
stems;
O poetry, that an outcast dost I am
The anguished death-cry of the hunted beast
I scream.
Forests, O temples of the oppressed,
O pines that are my country's harps, ye
Healers of sorrow, round your joyous child

The wordless forecast of my far-off land
Thou shalt I elded in your markers deep
List to the lofty humming of your soul?

Do They Prepare?

A WHITE GUARD "T"

The N. Y. Chapter of the Knights of Columbus have bought seven tenements at Eighth Ave. and 51st St., where they are going to erect a twelve-story building for their "general welfare and educational work". The new building will contain "one of the finest auditoriums in the city, gymnasiums, swimming pools, restaurant, 300 living rooms, class rooms for the educational work and meeting rooms and offices to house a large percentage of the Councils of the Knights of Columbus in Manhattan and the Bronx." This promises to be a new, purely White Guard type of "Y".

FOR 1924

The Appropriations Bill for 1924 now before Congress calls for the expenditure of 85 cents on every dollar of Federal taxes to pay for war. To develop and maintain land forces it calls for $340,341,396.28.

THE MILITARY IRON HEEL

House Committee Resolution 78 asks for a commission to investigate the best and most practical methods for "drafting all the resources of the United States, human and material, for national defense, so that in event of future wars every man and woman may be rallied under the flag for assignment to duty for whatever service, military or civil, the individual is best fitted, and every plant, agency, and facility may be called to universal service, all in sublime sacrifice for the country . . ." To make the above "popular", no doubt, a little joker is attached which reads "and not a penny of war profit shall inure to the benefit of private individuals, corporation or combination."

IN JERSEY

The Haddonville and Mount Ephraim Detective and Pursuing Association is an "amateur police" organization composed of 750 solid citizens; among them seventeen "pursuers". They are practicing, like so many of these "civic bodies", for "combatting crime" upon petty crime cases, in perfect themselves for later emergencies when a rising working class will demand their attention. "In the event of a crime being committed, the pursuers organize posses of men and block off and capture estaping criminals. Crime has been at a minimum within the area covered by the posters announcing a good cash reward for the capture of any person committing a crime against any member of the association."

TEACHING HOW TO SHOOT.

How can the children of the Boy Scout movement be taught to shoot straight and yet not be given guns, which may prove a stumbling block thru the objection of parents and of children? They seem to have solved that problem in Chicago. There the Boy Scouts are being encouraged in the practice of archery. Bow and arrow make no noise, need no bullets, and give perfect practice for straight shooting, steady nerve and hand and good muscle. Time enough to put the gun in his hand later. The bow and arrow Douglas Fairbanks used in his Robin Hood picture are offered by a Chicago paper for the best essay on Archery, only members of the Boy Scouts participating in the contest.

Henry Noel Brailsford, an erstwhile liberal who was shocked at the horrors of the aftermath of the War, turned socialist, joined the Independent Labor Party, became editor of their main organ, and went another book. "After the Peace", (Thomas-Selizer). It is a gloomy picture of post-war Europe, and is illumined by occasional flashes of keen insight. But like all who try to combine the bewildered honesty of the liberal with the irresolution of the mild socialist, his conclusions, his attempted remedies, are woefully weak. The statement that Capitalism can no longer feed Europe, may be "startling" to the editors of the New Republic, but it's humbly suggest that we have had some sort of a suspicion to that effect for some time. . . .

After all, might not all the gloom be dispelled by having Mr. J. Ramsay MacDonald, leader of Mr. Brailsford's party, attend another reception in silk breeches and long stockings, and shake the hand of his most gracious majesty, George V, Rex Britannicus, India, Ireland, Egypt, Mesopotamia and the House of Morgan.

Fritz Adler, leader of the 2½ International and of the Austrian Social Democrats, has in conjunction with the Christian Socialists, framed an Election Law, directed solely against the Communists. The Act provides that all imprisoned or interned under previous laws, including those of Horthy, are disfranchised for three years. The formation of Communist Party organizations, thanks to Adler and his consorts, is accompanied with the most severe consequences for the members.

THE WORKERS SHOULD READ THIS COPY OF THE WORKER. KEEP, IT IN CIRCULATION

Wage Cuts Planned by Mine Owners

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Now that the United Mine Workers' Organization has deserted the coke region miners, the operators can be expected to begin wage cuts in order to win back as much as possible of the huge fortunes spent in strikebreaking activities.

During the past week a cut of $2.50 per day was put into effect at the Smiley plant near Fairchance, and when some of the men who quit in protest applied at another plant, they were told that the same was going to be done there.

Along with this goes the effort to weed out the militants from among those who, forced by starvation, had gone back to the mines before the strike was called off, or who, loyal to the Union, had applied for work as ordered by the International, and succeeded in getting back. At the great Buckeye plant 25 men were discharged a few days ago because it was discovered they still claimed membership in the United Mine Workers.

Thus is increased the number of jobless in the region, which is already largely due to the inability of a part of a great many to get their jobs back. Besides applying for their former places, thru a committee representing them and the other members of their Local Union, President Woods and Treasurer Wisdosh, of Fairchance Local Union, went as individuals to get their old places and were told that the mine was not getting enough cars to keep the men busy that were already employed.

The answer of John O'Leary and William Feeney to those who complain that they are unable to get work in Fayette County is that many mines in the union district are in need of men. John Sinko, of Brownfield, called their bluff in this matter. He visited several mines whose names Feeney gave him, and was turned down flat. The truth is that the mines in the union districts have for months been badly overcrowded. There were plenty of miners in the union districts in normal times and thousands migrated there from the non-union territory after the Cleveland Agreement.

In face of these conditions which demonstrate that the policy of the United Mine Workers' organization as followed by the Fayette miners in the January convention has been an utter failure, Feeney and O'Leary continue to repeat the discredited formula "Get your jobs back; keep up your local unions; pay dues; if you can't get work in the coke region, we will move you to the union field in District No. 5; don't come back for any more relief as we won't have any more for you." Such pittances of relief as are secured by the locked-out miners require on their part a long and humiliating argument with the men in charge of the relief headquarters, which without doubt would have been discontinued weeks ago had it not been for the action of the Progressive Miners and Pittsburgh Miners Relief Conference in giving publicity thruout the country to the treachery of the union.

Under the pressure of the militants aroused by this publicity, the International has not dared to leave the field entirely, but in order to make a show of activity, has moved its coke region headquarters across the river from West Brownsville where they had been for ten months, to Brownsville, in Fayette County. They have also announced that the strike is to be continued at several plants near Brownsville which are adjacent to unionized mines. But the seriousness of this proposal can be judged from Denbo, one of these mines, where the strike was carried on during the last week of February by eight married and a few single men. For this group, supporting a strike and not being helped merely until they could get jobs, the Headquarters gave during this week the princely sum of $56 to supply 16 adults and 30 children.

If William Z. Foster should wish to write an additional chapter to his booklet on "The Bankruptcy of the American Labor Movement," he would have no trouble in filling it with splendid examples from the actions of the officialdom of the United Mine Workers in their efforts to liquidate the coke region strike.

"Theology," says Anatole France, "treats of the unknowable with minutest accuracy."

The "Italian Fascisti" in America

The New York Times announces in all seriousness that in Boston has been organized a branch of the Fascisti movement, the counterpart of similar organizations in other large cities in this country.

No loud outcry is raised by The Times against the banding together of these American counterparts of Mussolini's assassins and assassins in the homeland. No demand is made upon the department of justice for the extinction of this terror crew with headquarters in New York, in touch with G. Bastianini, the political secretary of Mussolini.

These "Fascisti" in America, getting their inspiration from the Mussolini dictatorship in Italy, have already a long list of crimes to their credit. The prevention of the Carlo Tresca meeting at Waterbury, Conn., was followed by the shooting up by these hoodlums of the meeting addressed by Antonio Presti at Lawrence, Mass.

It is encouraging to note that the forces of organized labor have been quick to realize the danger. This was shown at the mass meeting held at the Amalgamated Temple, in Brooklyn, where more than 2,000 Italian workers, tailors, shoe makers, carpenters and other building tradesmen, barbers,—pledged themselves to combat Fascism as a regime of "terror and assassination".

The situation demands an immediate and complete united front of all radicals among the Italian workers in this country, —unity of Communists, Socialists and Anarchists, against the common enemy, the American brand of Mussolini's Fascisti, who together with all nationalities in their war upon the organized labor movement.

If Mussolini can organize his Fascisti in this country, then Horthy, of Hungary, can come here and organize bands of White Terrorists, and the Bavarian Hitler can send his emissaries into our midst and organize royalist Germans for the restoration of the Kaiserdom.

The 100 per cent American open shoppers stand ready to utilize these reactionary organizations, no matter of what breed, for their own vile purposes, even by incorporating them bodily into the American Legion or the Ku Klux Klan.

All labor must unite now to combat the spread of Fascism in America by helping the Italian workers in this country scotch the Mussolini snakes already in our midst.

Needle Trades Must Amalgamate, Is Declaration of T. U. E. L. Militants

The International Committee of the Needle Trades' Section of the Trade Union Educational League has declared in emphatic terms that the present craft form of organization must give way to a departmentalized union embracing all the workers in the needle trades under the banner of the American Federation of Labor.

In a four-page leaflet that is being distributed thruout all the needle trades' unions in the United States and Canada the militants of the Trade Union Educational League have pointed to the defects in the present form of organization. In place of decisive action in case of strikes against the employers the organizations in the needle trades, not involved in the actual struggle, now extend "moral" support and sympathy. Neither sympathy nor morality ever won a strike. What is needed is power to combat the employers.

The leaflet points to the consolidation of the various manufacturers with the "open shop" forces in the United States, and points to the necessity for the workers closing their ranks in order to effectively combat the open shoppers. Furthermore the tremendous problem of organizing the unorganized can never be successfully solved until there is one union in the industry that can make an irresistible appeal to all workers, and can show by its achievements that a wide breach separates the conditions of the unorganized and organized workers.

Not Federation, but Amalgamation

The futility of federation is clearly depicted by reciting the history of the Needle Trades Alliance in its impotence against the employers.

There is widespread demand for amalgamation among the rank and file of all the needle trades unions. The leaders of certain unions, realizing the extent of this demand, have tried to pervert the sentiment into the abortive channels of a Needle Trades Federation. This propaganda on the part of the reactionary officials is merely an effort to thwart the will of the membership and prevent effective organization.

Of particular interest is the section of the leaflet dealing with the structure of the departmentalized union proposed by the Trade Union Educational League group, which is partly as follows:

"The departmental type of organization settles the long-continued argument between industrial unionists and craft unionists. The old-fashioned industrial unionists, in seeking to achieve the required solidarity of labor, proposed a general type of organization, mixing the trades together. The skilled worker rebelled at this prospect of losing his craft identity, and sought to bring about solidarity, of which he also perceived the necessity, by setting up various kinds of flimsy alliances between the craft unions, which the industrial unionist rightly condemned as ineffective. So the craft unionist and the industrial unionist remained at loggerheads, with little chance for agreement. But now comes departmentalized industrial unionism and satisfies the essential demands of both. With its broad, well-knit industrial form it develops the great power sought by the industrial unionist, and with its specialized subdivisions it gives the craftsman the expression and protection without which he would not go into any general combination of labor. Departmentalized industrial unionism is the most effective, therefore the most scientific form of labor organization yet developed."

New England Granite Cutters Understand the Big Strike of Red Russia's Workers

By WILLIAM SIMONS

(Special to "The Worker")

LANESVILLE, MASS.—Red Russia on strike against the capitalist world—this the granite workers of this town could grasp, for they had just passed thru a seven months' fight against wage slashing. The Red Army as the pickets, and workers' control of industry and government as the goal, recalled to the granite workers their own bitter fight against increased exploitation. The Lanesville workers gathered in the Finnish Hall felt that the Russian workers were waging a struggle in the interest of all workers, wherever they happened to live.

Comrade James P. Cannon got his message across, thru his earnestness and forcefulness. He does not wait for inspiration, but is constantly perfecting his lecture. He approaches his lecture tour like an artist, taking his mining pains to make every sentence fit in. The writer considered it a rare privilege to hear the talk on "Russia Today."

As a result of the meeting, the establishment of a Scandinavian branch in Lanesville is a probability.

No reply has been received (March 9) by the Russian trade unions to their offer of 9,000 tons of food for the starving workers in the Ruhr. The reactionary social-democratic officialdom stands in the way.

Indianapolis City Council Stops Pickets

[illegible] the city council in 1921 [illegible] by the city [illegible] and [illegible] workers have fought this law bitterly as an [illegible] many of the most powerful [illegible] of the struggle between the capitalist class. The ordinance also outlaws the labor union boycott.

Even [illegible] labor-hating employers of Indianapolis have succeeded in getting two of the lower courts to place their O. K. upon the ordinance. The Associated Employers of Indianapolis have begun a nation-wide campaign for the purpose of inducing other communities to adopt similar ordinances.

In the intense fight that was carried on against this ordinance the unions resorted to every method known to them that they might be able to inform workers in struck concerns that they were being used as strike breakers. The ordinance prohibited the display of banners so the pickets had letters sewed in their shirts reading "This Place Is Unfair To Organized Labor." They were arrested for this, sentenced to pay a fine and the circuit court upheld their conviction. The cases are being appealed to the State Supreme Court.

After this victory for the employers their association began circularizing other cities in the country urging them to adopt similar ordinances. A copy of the Indianapolis ordinance is sent to councilmen and other legislators advising them to introduce it in their city councils. It is one of the most vicious legislative assaults yet made upon the labor movement and provides as a penalty a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $1,000, to which shall be added imprisonment in the county jail or state penal farm for a period not less than 30 days nor more than 2 years.

It even goes so far as to prohibit individual members of a union from talking to a scab concerning the nature of his employment or even mentioning the fact that there is a strike in existence in the place of his employment.

The labor unions of Indianapolis are determined to fight this ordinance to Indianapolis "to the limit," as they know its success means its rapid spread to other cities. Many of the large International Unions have their headquarters in Indianapolis and transact millions of dollars worth of business in the course of a year and in case the ordinance is sustained they all propose moving from the city as a rebuke to the scab herding employers and their hireling city council.

Textile Conference to be Held May 5th and 6th

The General Amalgamation Committee of the Textile Industry, composed of rank and file militants of the various textile unions, is launching a huge campaign for amalgamation of all the unions in the industry.

Nowhere are the workers more ruthlessly exploited than in the textile industry. Wages are at a starvation level, working conditions are extremely severe, and only a fraction of the 1,600,000 textile workers are organized.

The formation, recently, of the Federated Textile Unions of America, a loose alliance of some of the larger unions, has only served to awaken the workers more keenly to the imperative need for organization, and for the consolidation of the workers' forces thru the amalgamation of all the conflicting unions in the textile industry into one mighty industrial organization, with interlocking directorates corresponding to the main sections of the industry.

The General Amalgamation Committee of the Textile Industry will issue a call for a National Conference of the militants of all textile unions, to be held in New York on May 5th and 6th for the purpose of organizing a militant vanguard in the amalgamation campaign.

All together for amalgamation.

U. S.-British Agreement Breaking Point in Oil Conflict

[illegible] the Royal Dutch Shell. It tried to influence the French government to permit it to enter Mesopotamia, but British again played the winning hand by ignoring the San Remo agreement with Frnfica on April 25, 1920, that ceded to the British oil interests the exclusive right to develop this marvelously rich field. The American government protested and demanded the "open door" to Mesopotamia, which demand Britain contemptuously ignored, forcing San Remo agreement.

Capitalist Hypocricy

The hypocricy of the American government was never more clearly revealed than in its application of dollar diplomacy to oil. In the case of Mexico it wants to have absolute control and is striving by every form of diplomatic trickery to bring that government under the undisputed control of American capital. But in the case of Mesopotamia and Persia it demands the "open door."

Secretary of State Hughes has threatened to invoke the Monroe doctrin in the case of Argentine, altho it could hardly be applied to economic penetration, but only to the attempt at political control thru armed force. Nevertheless, the government of the United States knows well that Britain has her hands full endeavoring to maintain her industrial supremacy against France. Britain also attempted to palliate the United States by agreeing to the debt funding proposition, in preparation for open warfare against France. Under these circumstances the Harding administration feels that it can with impunity kick the Royal Dutch Shell out of the country.

While the United States thru the Fall decision can twist the tail of the British Lion today, it is certain that this act is only the prelude to an open break between the two countries in the near future that will again revive the bloody imperialistic conflict over the domination of the earth.

Our late affy is today economically our enemy, and economic conflicts are the explosive forces that burst into World wars. In the next war our imperialists will be devising sentimental slogans to beguile the American workers into the human slaughter house in defense of the interests of Standard Oil, just as Woodrow Wilson coined the slogan "Make the World Safe for Democracy" to conceal the sordid interests of the House of Morgan in the late war against Germany.

Western Canada Favors Amalgamation

The Alberta Federation of Labor (Western Canada), assembled at Medicine Hat, unanimously endorsed a resolution demanding amalgamation, and urging the Dominion Trades Congress "to promote the necessary work for the amalgamation of existing unions into industrial unions, one union for each industry." A resolution endorsing the Red International of Labor Unions failed by just a few votes.

Amalgamation in Japan

By GERTRUDE HAESSLER

TOKIO.—The greatest labor organization ever formed in this country is the result of the amalgamation of the two main agricultural labor unions.

Between 45 per cent and 50 per cent of all farmers in Japan are tenant farmers. Disputes between tenant and landlord have increased so that drastic measures are contemplated by the government to keep the young men on the farms.

AMALGAMATION GROWS

The Ohio Federation of Labor was the tenth state federation to endorse the principles of amalgamation or industrial unionism in preference to the present craft unionism. The convention indorsed "the principle of organizing all workers in the same industry into one industrial union in each department." The resolutions adopted called upon the American Federation of Labor to call a conference for the amalgamation of all the unions in each industry into one single organization "which shall cover an industry;" and in addition the convention recommended specifically a merger of all the 12 railway unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The state federations which have taken the same action on industrial unionism include Minnesota, Wisconsin, Washington, Iowa, Indiana, Nebraska, Michigan, Utah, Nevada, Oregon and Ohio. It will be seen from this list that Ohio appears as the first near-eastern state to line up with the radical western states on this much discussed question of organization.

In addition to the state federations, several powerful international craft unions have indorsed the plan, such as the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes and Railway Shop Employes, the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, the International Association of Machinists, and the International Association of Fire Fighters.—Locomotive Engineers' Journal.

Lewis's Gang Pilloried by Alex Howat

(Special to "The Worker")

CANONSBURG, PA.—The attempt of the henchmen of the president John L. Lewis machine of the United Mine Workers of America to intimidate the militant workers at this territory in order to stop the Howat meeting here last Sunday essentially failed.

Alexander Howat, former head of the Kansas miners and leader of the notable struggle against the infamous Industrial Court law of Governor Henry J. Allen, had been advertised to speak under the joint auspices of the Chartiers Valley Central Trades Assembly and the Canonsburg Labor Defense Council on behalf of the Fayette County Miners' Relief and the Labor Defense.

Before the meeting a gang of officials of District 5, United Mine Workers, led by one Fagan, District President, and Tom Hughes, executive board member tried to intimidate the officials of the Central Trades Council, and threatened to disrupt the meeting if Howat said anything against John L. Lewis, discredited president of the miners' union, and equally guilty with the unspeakable Allen for the imprisonment of Howat.

Fagan and Co. were informed that the committee in charge would conduct the meeting and that they would brook no interference from anyone and that they were determined to see that the meeting was orderly.

The meeting was opened by S. Baker, President of the Central Council and when Howat arose to speak he received a rousing ovation. He related the story of his expulsion and his fight against the Industrial Slave Law with telling effect, causing round after round of applause from the audience.

A resolution was adopted calling for the reinstatement of Howat in the miners' union with all rights and privileges enjoyed previous to their expulsion.

During the discussion of the resolution Fagan jumped to his feet and challenged Howat to debate him. The chairman refused to consider such a challenge, declaring it was out of order, but Howat arose and immediately accepted the challenge, declaring that the debate could be held right there. Then the owner of the hall interrupted and asserted that the hall had not been rented for that purpose and that no debate would be held.

Fagan and Co. continued to interrupt, but when the question was put the resolution was adopted unanimously. Many former Lewis supporters, who attended the meeting, were so disgusted with the tactics of the machine henchmen that they denounced them in disgust and declared that they would support Howat to the limit hereafter.

The visit of Howat to the Pennsylvania field is the worst blow so far delivered at the Lewis machine, and all the retainers of the misnomer ity of the labor movement, big and small, are scurrying for cover and trying to conceal their treachery by vilifying Howat, whose plain intimidation will not work. Everywhere the rank and file is anxious to learn the facts about the actions of Lewis in the Kansas expulsions and as soon as they learn, they immediately desert the Lewis standard.

The net proceeds of the meeting were divided so that 75 percent went to the Fayette Miners' Relief and 25 percent to the Labor Defense. Max Lerner spoke for the Labor Defense and received a rousing ovation.

Grafters in Russia Face Death Penalty

By ANNA LOUISE STRONG
Staff Correspondent, Federated Press and "The Worker"

MOSCOW. — A graft trial has opened in Moscow which may end in the death penalty for some of the 28 defendants.

Conspiracy on the part of several high officials in the Centrosoyus (Central Cooperative), together with a business man named Shane, is charged, with intent to defraud the state for private gain, by diverting large sections of the state fish business into a private trust named Ribac.

Shortly after the new economic policy began, more than a year ago, Shane began business with about $100, and within a few weeks was operating with 20 times this sum. He made connections with officials in the Centrosoyus, which had at that time the monopoly contract for disposing of all fish caught by the government fisheries, which are the main large scale fisheries in Russia.

Thru his confederates, Shane learned regularly the price at which the Centrosoyus was willing to sell fish, and then offered this fish himself at a higher price to the local cooperatives, while his confederates kept back the offers from the Centrosoyus. When Shane got orders he handed them over, as if coming direct from the local cooperatives, got permits on that basis, thus inserting himself as middleman and pocketing the difference in price. He also kept for long periods the sums advanced by purchasers, speculating on money which had been sent to the Centrosoyus.

A few months later, becoming richer and bolder, the group organized Ribac, a private fishing corporation, which aimed to control the market of Moscow. They intercepted goods sent to the Centrosoyus and handled the business themselves, even stealing letters which might have implicated them.

Graft of this kind, involving officials in control of public business and privileges, is regarded in Russia as "economic counter-revolution and treason."

The criminal code carries penalties as high as death to the principal participants, especially if they have been trusted officials.

Boston Strike Is Won by Solidarity of Rank and File

By WILLIAM SIMONS
(Special to "The Worker")

BOSTON, Mass. — The strike of the garment workers here has just been won. It took the workers just ten days to defeat the bosses. The strike was under the direction of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

The fight was won on the picket line. The rank and file worked as trained soldiers in the conflict and in spite of the police protection furnished scabs in and about the buildings affected by the strike and the series of assaults upon pickets by gangsters in the employ of the bosses, the strike from the first was so effective that there was never any doubt as to the certain victory of the workers.

The strike was really for the purpose of establishing the union thruout the jurisdiction; demands were made for increase in wages, pay for legal holidays and overtime at double rates even for piece workers and the establishment of the eight-hour day in all shops.

The most active members of the strike committee and the various picket lines were members of the Workers party.

Now that victory has been achieved in this immediate struggle, the energy of the militants will be devoted to the task of propagating amalgamation of unions in the needle trades industry.

Spend Much for Schools

By CARL BRANNIN

JALAPA, Mexico. — More than one-third of the entire budget for the state of Vera Cruz is spent by the department of education for the establishment and maintenance of schools—in round numbers 2,000,000 pesos ($1,000,000) per year. In the past two years 742 new schools have been established, 622 of which are in the country districts for the benefit of the children of peasants. These figures are independent of the schools maintained by each municipality and those of the federal government.

Frisco's Labor Czar Abdicates

For years the San Francisco labor movement has been cursed with a reactionary machine under the domination of P. H. McCarthy, a typical labor lieutenant of the capitalist class. The employing class always felt secure with the destinies of labor in the hands of McCarthy and his gang. He was their paid flunkey from the days of the graft prosecution, and devoted most of his energy to besmirching the names of radicals in the labor movement. There was no crime too vile for this creature to perpetrate against militant representatives of the interests of the rank and file. It was he who, as president of the California branch of the Civic Federation, a notorious crime and labor-spy organization, sanctioned the use of the state militia against Tom Mooney. It was McCarthy who furnished Adolph Germer, former secretary of the discredited Socialist Party, with information regarding the Mooney case that led Germer to admonish the Party members to go easy on the protestations of Mooney's innocence. It was McCarthy who blocked the endorsement of the Mooney defense by the San Francisco Labor Council. In every sense of the word this creature was the Czar of the San Francisco labor movement. His corruption of the labor movement covered a period of years. But at last he was proved to be a strike-breaker, a blackmailer and, a traitor to the working class.

McCarthy was caught selling out the labor movement of Frisco for $10,000 to a notorious scab-protecting and open-shop concern, the other day. Even his own mercenary associates who were part of his machine had to finally repudiate him after vainly trying to conceal the perfidy of their chief. The only thing left for the scoundrel was to abdicate his throne, which he did. Now comes an opportunity for militant labor to assert itself and wipe out the last vestige of the McCarthy machine by relegating to oblivion every member of that machine.

Vale the Social Revolutionaries

The remnants of the Social Revolutionary Party in Russia recently held a meeting by special permission of the Soviet Government and officially dissolved their organization.

Thus is concluded the history of the petty bourgeois Party that became a handmaiden of the French military mission in Russia in an effort to destroy the working-class revolution and crush the Russian workers into the strong hands of the Allied White Terror.

Now that the Party in Russia has, of its own accord, written its valedictory there is none that will begrudge it that privilege, unless it be Victor Tchernoff who still sits in Berlin in the employ of the propaganda bureau of Allied Imperialism and pens fifth rate libels against the Soviet. The end of the Social Revolutionaries sealed their moral and political doom. Until all the Social Revolutionaries sealed their moral and spiritual demise, so there was nothing further left for them to do except to close their record of treachery to the international proletariat by officiating at their own funeral.

Their only mourner in this country is the Socialist Party of America, whose leading theoretician, James Oneal, will have to locate some other intellectual lower out of which to pilfer material for his pusillanimous philippics against the revolutionary movement.

Gene Debs in A Call for the United Front Stand Against of All Labor on May Day, 1923

Hillquit et al

Eugene V. Debs in a letter to the editor of "The Worker", states that he would have voted to seat the Workers Party delegates to the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action. His statement also covers admission of the Workers Party to the recent conference of the New York American Labor Party.

In this Debs is in absolute disagreement with Morris Hillquit, Victor L. Berger, James Oneal and the other Socialist Party opponents who, at Cleveland and New York, spoke and voted against admission of Workers Party delegates.

Thus Debs takes a stand near to Scott Nearing who recently declared that the Workers Party had fallen heir to the radical situation in the United States. Debs' letter to "The Worker", exhibiting in some parts a bitterness foreign to his customary declarations, is as follows:

Chicago, Ill., March 17, 1923.

J. Louis Engdahl,
Editor, "The Worker",
799 Broadway, New York City.

MY DEAR LOUIS:—Your favor of the 12th inst. in duplicate has been received. In answer to your inquiry, it may be that the Socialist Party delegates at Cleveland and New York voted as they did in order that the delegates of the Workers Party might not suffer humiliation and imperil their revolutionary reputation by affiliating with "yellow-legged renegades", "agents of the petit bourgeoisie," and "traitors to the working class."

As to myself had I been a delegate of the Socialist Party I should have voted to admit the delegates of the Workers Party notwithstanding their organs and speakers having screamed themselves hoarse in their denunciation of the party I represented. This would have been my answer to their silly screeds and their vicious calumnies.

The wonderful meetings we are holding out this way and will hold elsewhere including New York, consisting of all the hitherto discordant elements among the workers, give assurance. I think, that the matter you bring to my attention will be adjusted in due course and meanwhile you will excuse me for declining to waste your time as well as my own in senseless and fruitless controversy.

With all personal regards and all wishes for a united working class, I remain, as ever,

Yours fraternally,
EUGENE V. DEBS.

No doubt Debs keeps but little in touch with developing events in the labor movement. If he did, we wonder if he would not more nearly agree with us that such "Socialists" in the labor movement as the Schlesinger officialdom in the International Ladies' Garment Workers, who have buttressed by the Hillquits and Cahans, as they delivered themselves into the camp of Gompers, Woll und Co. of the American Federation of Labor, clearly deserved the title of "yellow-legged renegades".

He must know by this time of the actions of the "Socialist" Kaufman officialdom, in the Furriers' Union, in New York City, in appealing to the district attorney's office for support against the militants in his organization, and against the Jewish Communist daily, "Freiheit". If such are not the "agents of the petit bourgeoisie", in beating back progress, we would like to know what they are.

Debs has been selected by the Socialist party national executive committee to go to Europe this summer. There he will meet J. Ramsay MacDonald, spokesman of the British Labor Party in the House of Commons, who recently donned silk knee breeches and silk stockings, in order that he might wear correct attire in wining and dining with his Royal Majesty, King George V. Even the stomachs of veteran parliamentarians in the British Labor Party were turned at the sight, and have made their protest. Debs has often bitterly denounced Gompers and others of his ilk for banqueting with the big industrial kaisers under the auspices of the National Civic Federation. We would like Debs to answer whether he thinks a "Socialist" in a similar role is less a "traitor to the working class".

Of course, Debs may thipk that pointing these things out, as they develop from day to day, may be "silly screeds" and "vicious calumnies". The raw truth often hurts. Controversy may be distasteful, but it is sometimes the only way of discovering the truth.

Four Points of Disagreement

We may point out that Debs finds himself in disagreement with the Socialist Party officialdom on several important issues:

FIRST:—On the question of the admission of the Workers Party to a coalition of labor's independent political forces as already pointed out.

SECOND:—Debs favors Amalgamation as it is conceived and being fought for by the Trade Union Educational League. The Hillquits and the Oneals, supporting the "Socialist" officialdoms of such unions as the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union and the Furriers Union oppose this effort.

THREE:—We do not doubt that Debs is opposed to such trading with the old political parties as the Wisconsin Socialists indulged in when they refused, last November to run a candidate against La Follette, thus assuring the election of Berger to Congress from Milwaukee. Debs is no doubt opposed to this expression within and drift of the Socialist Party toward the Johnston-Keating brand of pompartisan politics championed by them at Cleveland, an underhand sabotage of the growing sentiment for an all-inclusive Labor Party.

There remains, of course, the big issue of international affiliation. The Socialist Party is today ostensibly affiliated with the Two and One-Half (Vienna) International. Hillquit, Berger and Oneal will no doubt follow the Vienna International, at the forthcoming Hamburg Conference, into the camp of the Second (Socialist) International, of Scheidemann, Henderson, Vandervelde, Branting and the other war traitors and collaborators in capitalist governments.

Debs has been chosen as a delegate of the Socialist Party to the Hamburg Conference. The question arises, "Will Debs allow himself to be used to lead what remains of the Socialist Party membership back into the Second International, that has declared for a truce with capitalism and is participating in capitalist governments in various countries?"

Workers of New York Send Commune Day Greeting to Lenin

Jumping to their feet and cheering, the monster audience of New York's workers attending the annual celebration of the Paris Commune, 1871, in New Star Casino, approved the sending of a cablegram to Nikolai Lenin, premier of Soviet Russia, as follows:

"Great gathering celebrating anniversary of Paris Commune sends you, and all our comrades in the Red Workers' Republic fraternal greetings, hoping for your early recovery and return to activity in helping press forward the world social revolution".

Among the speakers were M. J. Olgin, H. M. Wicks, Alexander Chramoff, William F. Kruse and J. Louis Engdahl. Revolutionary songs and choruses led the audience in the singing of "The Infernational" and other revolutionary songs.

Verblin Is Cleared by Party Committee Report

Report of The Workers Party Investigation Committee on the Verblin Case to The Central Executive Committee, Workers Party:

Comrades:—The following is the Committee's report on the Verblin Case. A detailed report for purposes of record on all phases investigated is being drawn up and will be presented at the next meeting of your Committee.

The Committee has examined into all evidence available. It has reviewed the findings of the National Defense Committee which originally investigated the alleged spy charges against Verblin and which cleared him of this charge; it interviewed the General Executive Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers as well as members of the Trial Committee of the Amalgamated which convicted him of the charge; it has read and investigated the confession of Baim and the circumstances surrounding the confession upon which the alleged spy charge against Verblin was made; it has interviewed or received the statements of many persons who were either directly or indirectly involved in the case and nowhere has any evidence been presented which could be recorded as justifying the maintenance of the spy charge.

The Committee's Recommendations

The investigations of the WORKERS PARTY INVESTIGATION COMMITTEE have been carefully made and we now recommend to the Executive Committee to dismiss and publicly CLEAR Verblin of this charge.

May Day at Rochester, N. Y.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The biggest May Day celebration in Rochester's history is being planned by the Educational Committee of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The convention hall has been secured for the afternoon of May Day and it is likely that the celebration will end with a play to be presented at union headquarters.

Ohio Movie Censors Pass F. S. R. Film

(Special to The Worker.)

COLUMBUS, Ohio.—Reversing their original decision that the motion picture "Russia Today" is "unfit for exhibition because it contains matter portraying scenes and pictures which tend to debase, corrupt and impair the morals of children and adults", the Ohio State Board of Censors has given a license to permit the showing in Ohio theaters.

In appealing from the original flat refusal to grant a license, the film was offered the picture as changed to meet the demands of the Pennsylvania State Board. After seeing this revised picture the Ohio Board has added additional film to the original picture, and, after a second review as originally rejected, Another fifth was sent to Columbus and was passed without any eliminations.

The Chicago Police Department also passed the film against any change upon the presentation under the provisions of the city ordinances. The picture will be shown at Orchestra Hall, May 6th.

The picture has now been passed by every public authority to whom it has been shown. It has met with tremendous popular enthusiasm. Any organization or individual desiring to help raise funds by arranging for a showing in his community should communicate with the Friends of Soviet Russia, 201 W. 13th St., New York City, N. Y.

Plan Greater Activity for Party in New England

By WILLIAM SIMONS

BOSTON, Mass.—District One, Workers Party, with headquarters here is entering upon a program of great activity. Trade Union Educational League groups are being organized in every town and city, and the membership of all nationalities is participating in industrial work as never before. May Day United Front Celebrations are being arranged and the Cannon meetings are being met with great enthusiasm, one of them, in New Bedford, being arranged by a comrade Single-handed.

Besides this, the district is raising its One Day's Pay assessment for the Michigan defendants; is buying its quota of "Make the Party Grow" stamps, and is issuing a monthly bulletin of district activities. All workers who are interested in the Workers Party, and who reside within the jurisdiction of District One, should immediately communicate with William Simons, 60 Pemberton Square, Room 310, Boston, Mass.

Workers Back Sacco and Vanzetti

BOSTON, MASS.—The Needle Trades workers of Boston filled Faneuil Hall to-day when they protested against the frame-up of Sacco and Vanzetti, who for three long years have had hanging over them the death penalty for a crime which they did not commit. Attorney Moore proved conclusively that the men were innocent and that the prosecution's witnesses had changed their testimony so often that they were absolutely unreliable.

The workers produce all that is produced, and then hand it over to a gang of lordly idlers who produce nothing. Is this sensible?

70 NEW BRANCHES—600 MEMBERS ADDED TO THE PARTY

More than 600 members organized in 70 branches were added to the Party in the last six weeks, since the "Make the Party Grow" campaign began. These branches are the result of the work of special party organizers sent out by the Party organization to all parts of the country. These organizers report that the workers everywhere are eager to listen to the message of the Workers Party and ready to join in the revolutionary struggle. "The field is wide open for new propaganda and organization is the general report." A noteworthy point in this growth is the fact that this interest is not limited to any one locality or nationality." More organizers, more literature, more agitation means a greater, stronger, more powerful Party. Swell the ranks of the revolutionary army. Make the Party Grow! Purchase a "Make the Party Grow" Stamp Today!"

With the Young Workers

Marfin Abern, who is now touring the East reporting on the recent congress of the Ybung Communist International to which he was delegated by the Young Workers' League of America, reports excellent progress. Besides building up the old branches, such as Boston, which has started out to lead the country, he has organized a new branch in Norwood, Mass., of 35 members and another in Newark, N. J., the latter being formed of the majority of the Independent Yipsels there. The meetings are excellent, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York having already been covered.

Two things in particular were observed by Comrade Abern: That the "Young Worker", official organ of the Young Workers League, is increasing in circulation and that there is a great need of a junior organization.

From Upper New York State Comrade Abern is proceeding to Chicago, the Twin Cities, and the Great Lakes district where his extensive tour will probably end.

Wicks to Deliver Educational Course for Boston School

H. M. Wicks, labor editor of The Worker, has been engaged to deliver a course of four lectures on "The Role of Labor in American History" before the Boston School of Social Science, beginning Thursday, April 5, and every Thursday evening thereafter until the course is completed.

The Boston comrades and sympathizers should avail themselves of this opportunity to learn the real facts about the history of the United States with reference to the labor movement from Comrade Wicks, who is a thoro-going Marxian, and has made an exhaustive study of the history of the United States. He never attempts to explain any historical fact without first seeking its economic origin.

The meetings will be held at the Boston School of Social Science, 21 Middlesex Street, Boston, Mass.

Now that J. Ramsay MacDonald has become a bed-fellow at the royal palace in London, it is interesting to speculate what will be the relations between Hilliard and Victor Berger's office in London during the time they are abroad this summer.

Borah and Recognition of Russia

There are several motifs driving for recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States. Millions labor demands it, knowing it will be an aid to the Russian and the world revolution. Unthinking workers feel that it will provide more jobs, as it will, thru the development of trade, so they are for it. Farmers, similarly, see an outlet for the surplus from their fields. Industrial overlords behold new opportunities to profiteer. And all the time the old party politician assures himself of an opportunity to make political capital for himself.

We give U. S. Senator William E. Borah credit for being sincere in his desires for the opening of trade relations with and the recognition of the Russian Soviet Republic. Yet his speech at Madison Square Garden, Sunday night, left much to be desired. Since 16 different nations, among them Japan, have already cleared the way, it seems that a member of the foreign relations committee of United States Senate, as Mr. Borah is, could make a much stronger fight for a thing in which he deeply believes.

Mr. Borah's address was more an apology to, rather than a defiance of the great capitalist forces in the this country that have not only successfully opposed recognition of Russia's government, but have exerted their utmost strength in an effort to overthrow the First Workers' Republic.

It can not be that Senator Borah is merely using the recognition issue as a political football to keep himself in the limelight. Those who have suspicions in that direction will watch closely his promised trip to Soviet Russia. They will eagerly scan any statement of position upon his return. They will be watching to see whether Senator Borah will support his belief in recognition with the kind of a fight that will bring it about.

The Hon. Meyer London, late lone Socialist in Congress, has broken into the pages of "The American Federationist," edited by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, with an article on the supreme court. The Socialist Party has arrived—in Gompers' camp.

These Borers from Within

It is not beyond our modesty to accept of the recognition that comes thru republication of our editorial efforts. In fact we are rather enthused by the acceptance and the spreading of our ideas. So we cannot object if the New York Call saw fit, in its Sunday issue, March 18, to plaster its inguished columns the brief article, "The Cossacks in West Virginia," that appeared on this page of "THE WORKER," dated March 3.

No doubt Brother Editor Oneal will go on a rampage. He will charge it is the underhanded work of the Communist International. Somewhere he will drag in the Burns Detective Agency. But the explanation is very easy.

When we wrote the editorial, "The Cossacks in West Virginia," we had no hope, or even desire of boring from within the columns of "The Call." But the editorial was extensively copied, by Tom Mooney's Monthly, out on the Pacific Coast, that gave it the usual credit: by "Solidarity," official organ of the Industrial Workers of the World, that did not give credit to "The Worker." So "The Call" clipped it from "Solidarity" and gave the Wobbly organ the credit in its own columns that should have gone to "The Worker"

So it goes. Yet it might be well to comment on the fact that "The Call" regularly publishes extracts from "labor" papers stating their different views. It religiously omits any views from Communist publications. That we should have broken down this wall, inadvertently, will no doubt be considered a tragedy in "The Call"-office.

Similarly the monthly magazine, "Labor Age." For a time it quoted from Communist publications. But even this slight concession to labor militancy suffered a fade out. In this we are much encouraged. The militants will thus learn to support and build up their own press. The Labor Herald, the Liberator, the Soviet Russia Pictorial, the Voice of Labor, "THE WORKER" and their other publications. At least insofar as the anti-Communist press is concerned, there is no necessity for a boring from within policy. The Communist press can take care of itself.

Communist strength in Poland has forced the release of the Communist Deputy Krolikowski from prison. Krolikowski was sent to prison for three years after having been elected to parliament by the workers of Warsaw. The Communist amnesty campaign in Finland is also making headway. The oppressors of labor in the Baltic states must realize their grip is slipping.

Harding Sends Message to Congress

In the first message to congress of President Harding, the chief executive of the United States Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, "Labor's friend," is given a free hand.

Mr. Daugherty, infamous for his railroad strike injunction, notorious as the jailer of the class-war prisoners still remaining in Atlanta's bastilles, says, "The president will be commanded and not elected because the country will demand him" which is equivalent to saying that Daugherty will be the political candidate.

Daugherty's announcement will put life into the gang that rules Wall Street isn't worrying. Governor "Al" Smith of New York is just as safe as Senator Underwood, or any other performer the democrats may trot into the political ring. Wall Street will encourage a shift back to the democratic party. It will make democratic workers and farmers again feel that they are getting something while it will delay the formation of a labor party.

The militants in the labor movement must therefore put up the fight of their lives for independent working class political action. Real push must be put behind the drive for a labor party. Instead of allowing the workers and farmers to drift from the Republican party back into the democratic party, they must be won for mass-political action. The referendum of the Trade Union Educational League offers the opportunity to do this work now. This is an opportunity that must not be neglected, that must be taken advantage of to the very utmost.

Albert Thomas, renegade Socialist, has inaugurated "Disease" Month, and Tuberculosis Week in Geneva, where the Second Assembly of the League of Nations. Pretty soon there will be a Graft Week, to stimulate the zest of the capitalists for permitting labor even to grovel in the dust before the bench.

MacDonald Dines with the King

British labor is lashing itself into a fury. It is using hard words and speaking them loudly, since the hero of the Second (Socialist) International, J. Ramsay MacDonald, went to Buckingham Palace and dined with the pet of British imperialism, King George V, and his queen.

MacDonald is supposed to be the spokesman of "His Majesty's Opposition" in the House of Commons. But in the words of David Kirkwood, Scotch Labor Party member of Parliament, "the King is the pinnacle of a system which some of us are here to smash — the capitalistic system — and it isn't possible for us to fight those whom he represents and at the same time wine and dine with them."

Evidently Mr. MacDonald has come to that point where he feels, like Branting, of Sweden, and Vandervelde, of Belgium, that the necks of the workers merely form a stepping block to a premiership. The King's invitation forced MacDonald to decide, as between labor and its bosses, and he decided to betray the workers.

It is said that the King had his tables decorated with daffodils and mimosa. It is to be hoped that British labor will bufy MacDonald's political career deep beneath the daisies with its toes turned toward the skies.

MacDonald is one of the bitterest foes of the Communist International. He hates it because it unmasked the treason he would commit, long before he ever had an opportunity to commit it. MacDonald's visit to the King should have but one result — a tremendous increase in Communist strength in the British Labor Party, resulting in the dethroning of all traitors to labor.

Having failed to secure United States Negroes as strikebreakers for its imperialist ventures in the German coal mines of the Ruhr, the Paris diplomats are turning to the subjects of the vassal state, Poland, where we hope and expect they will meet with equal failure.

Freedom in Michigan

Assistant Attorney General G. L. Smith, of the State of Michigan, is suffering great agony because the Civil Liberties Union sent out 15,000 circulars in Berrien County discussing the issues at stake in the trial of William Z. Foster at St. Joseph. He charged that this interfered with the selection of a jury.

At no time have we ever seen a more complete unmasking of the hypocrisy of kept "justice" and capitalist "law and order."

This Michigan law officer expressed no horror when every prostituted sheet of the social system for which he stands poured forth an inky flood of vast proportions maligning those arrested at Bridgeman, and villifying their cause. There has been no abatement in this attack. The Detroit "Saturday-Night," an open-shop mouthpiece, with Foster on trial, continues its rabid bellowings calling for Foster's conviction. In this it is ably supported by the familiar propaganda of the Burns Detective Agency.

The Civil Liberties Union challenges Mr. Smith to point out a single misstatement in the circular it distributed in Michigan. It is asserted that, "the right of an organization interested in the principles at stake to circulate its views anywhere is just as lawful and proper as for a local newspaper to discuss those principles editorially."

The Michigan prosecutors must have little faith in the justness of their case. They have on their side the subsidized press, the courts and legal procedure fixed by precedent and things as they are, jurors mentally incapable of visualizing a new social order, and yet they are not contented. They want even that little ray of truth, that might come thru the distribution of a small leaflet, shut out from the people of Michigan. Surely the capitalists and their apologists fear greatly for the decaying social system disintegrating beneath their very feet.

Clara Zetkin Presides at Two-Day Conference of Women Internationalists Held in Moscow

By ELLA REEVE BLOOR

During the Fourth Congress of the Communist International, Clara Zetkin, the Grand Old Woman of the World Revolution, set apart two days to confer with the women delegates and visitors from many countries.

The first day was devoted largely to the discussion of the methods of organization that should be used to interest and educate women in the principles of Communism. There were women from Persia, Turkey, Egypt, Ireland, France, Germany, Poland, Finland, Sweden, America, Siberia, Bulgaria, Hungary and other lands.

Herta Sturm, the right hand woman of Comrade Zetkin, managed the discussion. Co-operative Society workers emphasized the opportunity of reaching middle class women and workers, thru their organization. Relief workers told of their work in interesting and educating the Youth thru the Famine Relief Week. Legislative work was discussed by the women from countries where Labor Parties have elected representatives.

One of the most powerful women, Marthe Bigot, came from France. She looked motherly with her good statesman-like manner, easily dominating a larger outside world, as a sympathetic mother dominates her household.

She was much interested in educational work among women in Trade Unions. The second day's conference was devoted entirely to that subject.

Minnie Burch, a forceful young woman delegate from England, told of the work of the communist unit of women for the union movement in Great Britain. A man from Poland seemed to think it rather reactionary and bourgeois (sic radical organizations even to talk about special problems of middle class women and workers, thru their organization. Relief workers told of their work in interesting and educating the Youth thru the Famine Relief Week. Legislative work was discussed by the committees, there in Germany and France, men served always with the women in charge of this special work. She showed how successful they had been in Germany in enlisting thousands of women members for the political movement by the intelligent co-operation with them in the union movement. It seemed to her a manifestation of ignorance for any Communist not to see the peculiar need of attracting the women away from the lure of the many women's organizations, constantly and unconsciously dictating and educating the working woman against the cause of working class solidarity.

Herta Sturm told us of the terrible poverty of the textile workers of Germany, and the work of Communist women on Shop Control Committees and in the unemployment organizations.

The young bride of Roderick Connolly (the son of James Connolly) from Ireland, told of the great courage of the textile workers of Ireland, and a young girl delegate to the League of Youth, from the Transport Workers of Ireland, told us of the spirit of co-operation between the men and the women comrades, and of the mass of Young Irish women intelligently and classconsciously pouring into the great struggle from the ranks of the Trade Union members.

Comrade Bloor spoke of the work of the women of America in the recent great railroad strikes, and told some incidents from the miners' strikes. She spoke also of the women of the west who erected commissary depot tents along the railroad lines and there, feeding the pickets all night long for many miles around the tents. She spoke of the work of the women in the work of Railroad and Machinists' unions, women's auxiliaries in going from house to house during the strikes, bringing up the spirits of the men strikers, and the courage of their wives.

Mother Ricardi, Rosenthal, Sp. 38 Berlin 2, 56 Hermann, and Marthe Bigot, 19 Rue Rottembourg, Paris, France, would appreciate very much any letters from American unions as to their methods of work and their educational literature. Any brief articles would be gladly received by them for their woman's magazine.

The Bulgarian and Far Eastern women are very active and put the western women to shame by their stories of persistent organized effort in spite of all their persecutions and the traditions of the slavery of the women of these countries. In India, followers of Ghandi have together with women from more revolutionary organizations instituted a feminist movement in opposition to child marriage and the seclusion of women. Ghandi has given his support to the movement and by co-operation with the work of Railroad and Machinists' unions, women's auxiliaries in going from house to house during the strikes, bringing up the spirits of the men strikers, and the courage of their wives.

Foster Trial Nears Verdict

Great Workers' Mass Meetings in All Sections of Land Parallel Anti-Labor Trial in Michigan

Big Meetings Show Labor Backs Foster

As the trial of William Z. Foster comes to a close, the interest of organized labor in particular and of all broad minded people in general is centered in St. Joseph, Michigan and in Foster himself. Under the auspices of the Labor Defense Council, mass demonstrations are being organized in all parts of the country for the purpose of voicing the determination of labor that Foster shall not be sent to prison, and as a means of adding to the defense fund to pay the expenses of the court trial.

[illegible] William Z. Foster [illegible] organization, as a signal for wide and prolonged ovations.

Such a mass meeting was held at the Central Opera House in New York City addressed by Robert M. Buck, editor, "The New Majority" official organ, Chicago Federation of Labor; Jerome T. De Hunt, of the Railway Clerks; Robert Minor, Elisabeth Gurley Flynn and M. J. Olgin.

The task of the progressive labor movement is to distill this spontaneous spirit into actual support for the defense which will result in financial returns to the Labor Defense Council and in the bringing of pressure to bear on public opinion and on the authorities of the state of Michigan.

Hundreds of local labor unions, city and state federations, have employed the method of sending resolutions to the Governor of Michigan and the Berrien County Prosecutor, voicing their protests against the illegal prosecution against labor men and women.

This has had telling effect on the morale of the prosecution who were assured by the federal detectives when the raids were instigated that this blow at labor could be taken under the guise of an attack on only an isolated labor group.

The knowledge that the prosecution is considered as an attack on the entire labor movement has had telling effect. The governor of Michigan, who has always considered labor support as part of his political strength is seeking for protection from conservative trade union leaders, most of whom have already been discredited in their own communities and organizations.

When You Scratch an Unhealthy Body

By MOISSAYE J. OLGIN

Editor, Freiheit, Jewish Communist Daily

"Scratch a Russian, and you will find a Tartar." . . . Scratch a union official of the prevailing species, and you will find a reactionary. Sometimes the gentlemen walk about in blissful nudity, open to the gaze of an uneasy world. But it is when they are being irritated that they reveal themselves in their truest beauty.

Such an irritation was sustained by Mr. Morris Kaufman, president of the International Fur Workers' Union, thru an editorial of the "Freiheit." The scratch, to be sure, was not deep. The editorial stated a fact widely known among members of the furriers union that its mention in a labor paper seemed a matter of course. Besides, the editorial merely quoted a letter of protest signed by a member of the furriers' union shop delegates. The writers accused the "Freiheit" of failing to record the evil of the strong arm which imperils the safety of the union opposition. Names of five victims were given and indignation was vented against the system that spells ruin for the organization. The paper, in reproducing the letter, joined its voice to the voice of the union members. "The cancerous growth should be cut out by the labor movement."

Foster Sees Labor Spurred Forward

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

Editor, The Labor Herald

It is idle to talk of Russia being conquered from within by capitalism. When we recollect also that the workers have complete control of the State, the army, the courts, the press, the schools, etc., such talk becomes absurd.

Two great facts stand forth from the present situation in Russia; first, the "economic retreat" is over, with the result that the toiling masses are gradually but surely lifting themselves out of the devastating industrial crisis; and second, the workers are firmly in control of the victorious new society.

The breaking of the Russian industrial crisis, expressed in its fundamental aspect of profound betterment in the workers' standard of living, is of major importance, not only to Europe but to all the world. It must inevitably cause such a tremendous outburst of revolutionary spirit and effort as to shatter, if not entirely destroy, international capitalism. Since the end of the war things have gone steadily from bad to worse in all capitalist European countries. But the workers, horrible as their conditions were, hesitated to rise and end the industrial system that was ruining them, because they feared an even worse fate if their revolution won.

Proletarian Russia, starving and apparently a gigantic failure, stood as a warning menace to any working class that dared to overthrow capitalism. The yellow leaders successfully preached the doctrine that the workers' society could come only by a gradual evolution from capitalism. It was fundamentally an anti-revolutionary situation.

But the dissolving of the Russian industrial crisis is rapidly giving the situation a positive and dynamic revolutionary character. Soon Russia, instead of being a horrible example and a deterrent to revolution, will be an inspiration to the workers and a powerful spur to have done with their economic masters.

All over capitalist Europe, as the industrial system disintegrates, the living standards of the workers are falling; while in Russia, with the new system evolving, the conditions of the workers are constantly bettering.

In Germany the real wages of the workers amount to only 25 per cent of their pre-war value, and still they fall; whereas, in Russia wages are already at 50 per cent of pre-war levels and are steadily increasing. This creates a decidedly revolutionary condition. When its import sinks into the minds of the workers, and this will not take long, their faith in the revolution will mount sky high and they will develop a determined offensive against capitalism.

Up till now the one factor wanting, to produce a really revolutionary situation in Europe, has been a demonstration by Russia that the revolution could be made a success. This demonstration is now just about at hand. The solving of the Russian industrial crisis sounds the death knell of capitalism.

Ruthenberg Says Court Is Capitalist But Jury Might Decide in Favor of Labor

By EARL R. BROWDER

Associate Editor, The Labor Herald

COURT ROOM, ST. JOSEPH, MICH.—"You believe this is a capitalist jury, do you not?" asked Prosecution Attorney Charles W. Gore of C. E. Ruthenberg. "You believe the Government of the United States is a capitalist government?" "You believe the Government of the State of Michigan is a capitalist government?" "You believe this court is a capitalist court?"

To all of which Ruthenberg had answered "yes," but the prosecutor was surprised when Ruthenberg answered, "The jury? That is a different matter."

Gore would not let Ruthenberg tell why the jury was a different matter, much to the amusement of the spectators, for in a few moments Walsh, over the heated objections of Gore and Smith for "the people," was [illegible] this question.

[illegible] and another.

And the jury was interested, as he finally, in spite of the continued interruptions by Assistant Attorney Smith, of Michigan, told them how it was possible for a jury, even in a capitalist court, to return verdicts in the interests of the workers instead of the capitalists, if the jury contained workers or working farmers who were not dominated by capitalist ideas or capitalist authority.

Smith must have thought this a terribly dangerous idea for the jury to have presented to them, for he fought for 15 minutes to prevent the question being answered, and then tried to have it stricken from the records, but as in so many other points in this trial, the prosecution thru its eagerness to appeal to petty prejudice had opened the way for the Defense to educate the jury.

And this trial is becoming, under the skilful direction of Walsh and the scathing testimony of Ruthenberg a veritable college in economic questions and the class struggle.

No longer does the jury shrink when the dread word "soviet" is mentioned. They know now that soviet is a council of workingmen and farmers, which runs the government in the interest of the workers and farmers, just as the capitalists run the government in the interest of the capitalists. They have been shown how it is necessary for the workers and working farmers to unite if they would prevent the capitalists from running things to the workers' disadvantage.

Where the Prosecution had misread from a document that "Communism must rule with blood and iron," the documents turn out to be an indictment of capitalism which it is shown must rule by "blood and iron" while Communism relies, not on the force of a minority group of exploiters, but upon the force of the masses of the workers.

The function of the Communists as a party is shown to be, not military adventures as the prosecution paints, but the mobilization of the power of masses for the mass action against the exploiters, and to set up a real government of the working masses.

It is not alone the jury that is getting this education. Every day numbers of students, youngsters from the schools, are attending the trial to see and hear the terrible Reds.

Buck Speaks in St. Louis

By MARTIN A. DILLMON

ST. LOUIS.—Speaking on the Michigan raid cases, Robert M. Buck, editor, New Majority, official organ of the Chicago Federation of Labor, at a mass meeting held here under the joint auspices of the local Labor Defense Council and metal trades council, said:

"This is the first case in the history of American criminal jurisprudence where a citizen has been brought to trial on the charges of 'assembling with.' Foster is charged with no criminal act; of advocating, nor preaching of violence. Foster is not charged with paying, writing or advocating anything; the charge on which his trial is based has been boiled down to that of 'assembling with'—the Communist Party of America."

Buck reviewed the history of American government, executive, legislative and judicial. He pointed out the usurpation of power by the U. S. supreme court to declare laws unconstitutional, and the use of injunctions in labor disputes.

Michigan Trial Shows Fidelity to Principles of Workers and Bitter Enmity of Capitalism

Finns Show Success of Cooperation

By ELLA REEVE BLOOR

Few American workers have ever achieved, perhaps not even considered, the remarkable efficiency of the Finnish workers in America.

In every industrial centre of America they have established large cooperatives, owning and operating large halls for entertainments, dances, and physical culture; stores of all kinds, restaurants and bakeries.

Recently I visited the large Finnish community in Brooklyn. Here hundreds of families of ordinary workers, the majority of them carpenters, own their own apartments of seven rooms. Thru the cooperative also they now have eleven modern apartment houses, a flourishing bakery which occupies nearly a block, a restaurant, stores, etc. By a small payment into the association, these workers get their large, airy apartments in a fine healthy location for an average cost of about $36 per month. How does this sound to you 100 per cent American worker paying $90 per month for a hall bed room?

I really went over to Brooklyn to visit the Karelian Trading Corporations store at 401S—8th Ave., where they now have on exhibition and sale the largest collection of Russian handmade linen laces ever shown anywhere in America.

During the great famine in Russia, large quantities of wheat flour were sent to the people of Karelia, Archangel and other northern parts of Russia. In appreciation of this, the peasants of Archangel and other districts near by have sent this wonderful hand made linen lace—over 32,000 yards—about 18 miles of peasant hand work. Original, artistic, and so cheap. The wider, heavy laces easily bring $2.50 per yard in department stores—selling here for 50 to 70 cents. The average prices are from 17 to 30 cents per yard.

The proceeds of this sale will go to the Karelian Trading Corporation to develop the industries of that new Soviet Republic on the White Sea. Its rich resources of mica mines, fisheries, furs—all waiting for the coming of machinery and efficient management for their growth.

It is worth going to Brooklyn or even much further to see this rich demonstration of the artistic accomplishment of the peasant women of the North—and while there, learn all you can about the co-operative movement in your own country.

Communist Principles on Trial in Person of Foster in Michigan

(Special to "The Worker")

ST. JOSEPH, Mich.—At the end of the first two weeks of the trial of William Z. Foster for "assembling with the Communist Party in the convention held at Bridgman, Michigan, last August, the lines of the struggle between the Prosecution and Defense stand out clearly, and the issue in the trial has been thrown into the spot-light.

As Attorney Frank P. Walsh argued, in demanding that C. E. Ruthenberg be permitted to make a complete statement of Communist principles, "It is Communist principles which are on trial here in the person of William Z. Foster."

From the statement of the Prosecutors and their questions put to witnesses it appears that they aim to create the impression on the jury that the meeting at Bridgman was a conspiracy of a secret band of conspirators who continually preach the use of force and violence by the workers in their struggle against the capitalists. The attempt is being made to make the jury believe that Communists are bomb throwers and are continually at work to incite the workers to riot and violence.

Against this contention of the Prosecution the Defense presents the Communist movement on its historical aspects. Thru the testimony of C. E. Ruthenberg, the Marxian analysis of previous historical epochs, the class struggle within the capitalist system, the forces which are destroying that system, and the part that force plays in the great historical changes was brought before the jury. The Defense does not contend that the Communists say the workers can achieve power and dominate the government as the dictatorship of the proletariat, without the use of force, either in achieving power or in protecting their rule after it is established. The Communist viewpoint that great historical changes have never come without a resort to force is boldly avowed, but is declared that this use of force must resolve out of the social and economic conditions, that Communists are not bomb throwers nor do they incite the workers to isolated acts of violence.

On the question of the Communist Party being a secret underground organization, the Defense cites the facts of the 1920 raids on the Communist Party, when six thousand of its members were arrested, many of them brutally manhandled, altho not one was indicted and convicted of crime and only a few out of six thousand were deported.

The Communist Party, the Defense says, went underground because of the persecution. Before the Bridgman convention a movement had begun to have the Communist Party again come out into the open. There was practically a tie vote on this question at Bridgman, and because the convention was interrupted, the matter never came to a definite decision, a compromise being made by the two groups. Since the Bridgman convention even the group which opposed coming out in the open has become convinced of the necessity of this action and the Workers Party has become the open Communist Party.

The Communists, the Defense contends, therefore stand before this court openly announcing their views seeking to hide nothing about their organization, but boldly demanding their right to publicly advocate their principles in the United States.

That is how the issue stands today. The open avowal of the Communist viewpoint, the frank acknowledgement that the Bridgman Convention was a convention of the Communist Party and that he, Ruthenberg, was at the time of the Bridgman Convention a member of the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party, by C. E. Ruthenberg, swept away the mystery and conspiracy with which the Prosecution has attempted to surround the case.

The issue has been drawn clearly. Are Communist principles criminal? It is that question which the nine farmers, the one railroad worker, the tradesman, and house wife on this jury are asked to decide. It is one of the ironies of history that the principles of a great historical movement such as that which is based upon Marxian principles should be on trial before a jury, a less competent one, than that which is to decide such a question, could not be imagined.

But the final decision will not be before this jury. It will be before the masses of the American workers and there the Communist principles will win a verdict of approval, even tho they lose before this jury.

Cross-Examination of Ruthenberg Begins

(Special to "The Worker")

ST. JOSEPH, Mich.—Cross examination of C. E. Ruthenberg, witness in the trial of William Z. Foster, by Prosecutor Charles W. Gore began Monday afternoon.

Prosecutor Gore proceeded by asking Ruthenberg questions about various documents which were in the case as exhibits, endeavoring to have Ruthenberg commit himself to the view that they were official documents of the Communist Party.

One of these documents purported to be the minutes of District Convention of the Communist Party and contained a resolution instructing Communists not to appear as witnesses in trial in the capitalist's courts.

"Is this a capitalist court," Gore inquired.

"Yes it is," flashed back Ruthenberg.

The Prosecutor then wanted to know whether the instruction to communists in regard to appearing in capitalist courts as a witness applied to him.

"I am here," was Ruthenberg's answer, "by direct instructions from the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party of America frankly and fully to state the position of the Communists, and am making this statement as part of the Communists' fight for the right openly and publicly to proclaim their principles."

Prosecutor Gore next asked Ruthenberg whether he was in correspondence with the Communist International, to which the witnesses replied that he had sent letters and reports to that body.

Gore sprung, what he evidently thought would be a surprise, when after asking Ruthenberg whether he spoke German, he asked, "Did you attend a meeting in New York City on Sunday, March 18, at which the question of an open Communist Party was discussed and did you translate from German the speech of a person named John Pepper."

Ruthenberg said he had been at the meeting and had translated the speeches of Pepper from the German. Reading from a document in his hand the Prosecutor then asked whether certain things had been said. Some of these Ruthenberg acknowledged as correct, others statements and others he denied as having been part of the speeches.

The meeting was a meeting of members of the former Communist Party who are members of the Workers Party and endorsed the proposal of the Central Executive Committee to fight for the open Communist Party by a vote of 34 to 4."

"Is it not a fact," Gore also wanted to know, from Ruthenberg, "that the Communist believes not only in the ballot but in any means, whether ballot or bomb, gun or torch, to accomplish its purpose." Ruthenberg answered, "it is not true."

Considerable amusement was created when Prosecutor Gore questioned Ruthenberg at length as to what he called "syndicalism" getting an invariable denial of the meaning it gave the word and then suddenly announced that he didn't mean syndicalism but sabotage.

Another prosecution witness, a young American railroad engineer, equal physically and mentally superior to the average run of witnesses in the employ of the "white" forces, is pounced on one morning upon his arrival at the court house. He had been talking with Communists during the week but they find nothing on him—neither bombs, dynamite or seditious literature. He comes in with a smile each day, following the trial closely, and loses of any adventure the gentlemen may force upon him.

The Jury—The Stools

Many groups new and strange the jurors might learn from Frank Walsh.

Another group is that of the "Communists" who have been "planted" in the Communist Party by the Department of Justice, the Lusk Committee, the Senate Committee, the Secret Service, the Military Intelligence, the Naval Intelligence, the Department of Labor, the Immigration Service, the Post Office Department, the Treasury Department, the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Trade Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Bureau of Internal Revenue, the Federal Farm Loan Board, the Shipping Board, the Panama Railroad Company, the Alien Property Custodian, the Federal Board for Vocational Education, the Federal Board of Mediation, the Federal Fuel Distributor, the Federal Grain Supervisors, the Federal Power Commission, the Federal Water Power Commission, the Federal Coal Commission, the Federal Oil Conservation Board, the Federal Board of Hospitalization, the Federal Employment Service

Loading the Dice Against Foster

Outrageously distorted evidence is one of the means employed by the court attack at St. Joseph, Mich., to load the dice against Foster. Note the introduction of the above cartoon, into the trial. This cartoon was drawn by Robert Minor, co-defendant with Foster, and shows the railroad systems plunging into the "open shop." It appeared just prior to the rail strike. The bottom of the abyss, into which the trains plunge, is inscribed with big letters, "Open Shop." The whole thing is intended to show the impending disaster to railroad workers if the railroads crush the labor unions and put into operation the open-shop system. The prosecutor knew this. But he presents his malicious misrepresentation to a jury that doesn't know the difference between and "open shop" and an "open switch." And they call that "Justice!"

Woolen Trust Boosts Wages

By JOSEPH MANLEY

President William M. Wood, of the American Woolen Company, attempts to pacify his 36,000 employees, in his 60 mills, that operate in New England, New York and Kentucky.

The textile workers are amongst the most militant of any industry. At present they are making new demands for increased pay.

The letter of President Wood addressed to his employees is a typical sample of the paternalistic attitude of the modern American employer. His letter is calling a National Textile Amalgamation Conference at New York City, May 5th. The purpose of this Conference will be to launch a great campaign of amalgamation in the textile industry. All local organizations of the textile workers are invited to send delegates to this New York City Conference.

> "Let me now say to you that all the money you can earn and that we can afford to pay," expresses the policy of the American Woolen Company, and has the true Gary ring. His closing statement: "Let me now take this opportunity to tell you that it is most gratifying and encouraging to know that you have shown and are showing confidence in the management of the company. As in the past, so now, it is my own concern to take care of your interests to the best of my ability. In whatever way your success can be promoted, it will be done."

Does this overlord of industry seriously believe that his employes are showing confidence in him? Not at all, this is the bunk peddled by his publicity agents, for wholesale consumption by a gullible public, who knows nothing of the actual conditions under which the enslaved workers of this giant industry operates.

The Textile industry above all others, has been torn, for many years, with strikes and industrial struggles. Few of these strikes have been successful, tho they have been of a distinctly militant character. The cause of this is the lack of solidarity that exists between the score of separate unions, each squabbling and fighting with each other.

Child Labor, long hours, overwork and unhealthy wofking conditions, are the curse of this great American industry.

The formation recently of the General Amalgamation Committee of the Textile Industry, will go a long way to help bring about the necessary solidarity. This Committee is calling a National Textile Amalgamation Conference at New York City, May 5th. The purpose of this Conference will be to launch a great campaign of amalgamation in the textile industry. All local organizations of the textile workers are invited to send delegates to this New York City Conference.

Fight Back at Cleveland.

By ALBERT COYLE

(Federated Press Correspondent)

CLEVELAND.—With the appointment of "political secretary" and numerous organizers thruout the United States, branches of the Fascisti organization are to be set up in all of our larger cities, according to Sylvester Tamburella, who has just organized the first Fascist band in Cleveland. The head of the Cleveland organization is a local Italian banker, who served as captain of the Italian navy during the war.

Charging that Fascisti sympathizers in this country are anti-labor, that they are responsible for the recent suppression of labor speakers in Lawrence, Mass., and Waterbury Conn., and that the proposed organization in America is composed of "the enemies of labor and socialism and the tools of international reaction, were made by Anthony D. Biasi of the joint board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. Di Biasi, who is the leading figure among the Italian organized workers in America, declares:

> "The Fascisti are beginning to organize in this country groups of the same caliber as the black shirts of Italy, which is an absolute contradiction of the established laws and the constitution of this country. As a result the Italian trade unionists have launched a campaign against the Fascisti movement, and will resent emphatically any attempt to drag Italian organized labor into the movement."

Preparing for the Next War!

By PAUL HANNA

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON.—Specific contracts for materials to be used in the next war are being prepared by the war departments, and will be placed tentatively with American manufacturers at an early date.

Final estimates have been made by the department of the exact amount of munitions and other supplies required to equip a field army of one million, to five or ten millions of men, for a modern campaign of six months, one year or a longer period.

Within a very short time, it is planned, tentative contracts for the needed supplies for the different sized armies will have been placed with the appropriate manufacturing concerns, with an agreement that they shall become operative the very hour that war shall be declared in Congress.

Coal Miners Are Tired of Pussyfooting

By JOHN MOSBY

Tired of the pussyfooting and mismanagement of the militant leaders of the coal miners' organization are combining together to bring about the formation of a new union in the United Mine Workers of America. They have launched a body to be known as the Progressive International Committee, of the United Mine Workers of America, with Thomas Myerscough of Local 4561, Lawrence, Kans., as secretary. This Committee will at once become active in lining up the militant elements thruout the mining districts in the anthracite as well as bituminous field. Later on a national gathering may be held.

The Progressive International Committee adopted a program, among the chief planks of which are the following: socialization of the coal fields, aggressive campaign against dual unionism, vigorous movement to organize the unorganized districts, election of organizers by the rank and file instead of their appointment by the International office, formation of a Labor Party, remodeling the constitution of the U. M. W. of A. so as to make fraudulent elections impossible, affiliation with the militant trade unionists of other countries, six-hour work day and five-day week, complete endorsement of amalgamation, not only of craft into industrial organizations but also of the latter into gigantic class unions, establishment of a national agreement to cover all coal miners, reinstatement of the Kansas miners, abolition of the "pay roll" vote at conventions, and immediate fighting alliance between the railroaders and miners.

Mismanagement and Treason

Grave discontent exists among the masses comprising the rank and file of the United Mine Workers of America. For this there is ample reason. The past several years have been marked by the most cynical disregard of the coal diggers' interests by the crowd now in power in Indianapolis.

The neglect to organize the unorganized miners of the country has become an open scandal in the union. The Union administration has found it politically profitable to allow the big, organized districts to drift along with only the faintest pretense of assistance, get them into a fight about election time, and then purchase their support with promises of financial assistance. This support never materializes in any effective way, so that the earnest and courageous miners who want to join the union, and wage vigorous battles for that privilege, are left to the mercies of the coal operators. In the meantime scores of "organizers" spend their time in the 100 per cent organized fields building political fences for the administration. Lewis is regarded to have said, in a recent moment, that it was best not to have West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Alabama, Tennessee and Colorado organized fully, because such tremendous power in the hands of the union would cause the Government to suppress it. One of the crying needs of the miners is a great organizing campaign, put on by men who are in earnest about it.

Consider West Virginia, for example. A finer struggle was never made than that in District 17. But the International administration has done nothing but play politics with it. After the miners there have gone thru two years of civil war, military suppression, wholesale arrests, trials for treason, murder, and the entire gamut of capitalist oppression, largely on their own slender resources, they are finding themselves sabotaged by the International office. What success they achieved was made by their own courage, and the councils they set up themselves to organize the finances of the battle. Now Lewis is outlawing these bodies.

One Dose of National Guardism Enough

By HARRY GODFREY

(Staff Correspondent, Federated Press and "The Worker")

ALBANY, N. Y.—Only a very small number of men re-enlist after having served a first enlistment in the New York national guard. Governor Smith is worried about it. He can't imagine why they don't rush to avail themselves of the "privilege" of the "honor" of the "duty" of his "service." Adj. Gen. C.W. Coal Miners Are Tired of Pussyfooting

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

Packed House Hears Cannon at Lawrence

(Special to "The Worker")

LAWRENCE, Mass.—A crowd that packed Wendham Hall to the doors heard James P. Cannon speak here on "Russia Today, After Five Years of Revolution." He held the close attention of the audience for nearly two hours with his graphic story of the heroic struggle of the Russian workers.

"Russia fought for four years with her back to the wall," he said. "But now, five years after the revolution, we can tell a brighter story. In 1922 Soviet Russia started on the upward track."

As evidence of this he cited an abundance of facts and figures about Russian industry which tell the story of Soviet Russia's progress during the past year. This was a feature of the lecture which distinguished it from many others heard about Russia. Declaring at the start that he was not a disinterested investigator or "fact finder," but a Communist and a partisan on the side of the Russian Revolution, Comrade Cannon, nevertheless, gave more information about Russia than we have yet heard. The question that all friends of Soviet Russia have been asking were answered in his lecture very fully and convincingly.

Here are some of the matters he dealt with: The New Economic Policy, what it is and how it works in actual practice; the political situation in Russia today and the attitude of the workers toward the Government; the trial of the Social Revolutionaries; the Trade Unions; the Red Army; the situation in Russian industry today as compared with recent years and with pre-war times; and the great demonstration of the Petrograd workers and the Red Army on the fifth anniversary of the revolution.

It was an inspiring story, told earnestly and forcefully, and the audience responded with real enthusiasm. Analyzing the international situation, he pointed out that the struggle of Soviet Russia against the imperialist world is the same struggle that the international labor movement must wage.

"In the last analysis," he said, "the fate of Soviet Russia is bound up with that of the international labor movement. They stand or fall together. That is why every class-conscious worker is a friend of Soviet Russia. The Russian Revolution was the beginning of the world revolution, and those who are against the Russian Revolution are also against the revolution in their own countries."

Among the Magazines

Pictorial Surpasses Itself

The April issue of the "Soviet Russia Pictorial", just off the press, contains an amazing wealth of interesting pictures and articles—as fine a collection of material on the new Russia as has ever been gotten out.

There are about 50 pictures in the issue, ranging in subject matter from cartoons to Red Army photos. A group picture shows the entire delegate body at the recent Berlin conference of the International Workers Relief. One page is given over to Vladivostok: "A Drama in Seven Scenes", showing the various armies entering the city—American, British, French, Japanese, Czecho-Slovak—with the triumphant Reds as the final scene. A new portrait of Lenin, whose birthday falls on the 23rd of April, is also included.

Among the leading articles are one on Russian Trade Unionism, by Earl R. Browder; "Russia's University of Oriental Communism", by A. C. Freeman; "Petrograd Impressions", by Rose Pastor Stokes; articles by Harold Ware and Helen Keller.

Russian "Survey Graphic"

The March issue of the Survey Graphic is almost entirely devoted to Russia. It contains numerous reproductions of Russian life, especially of the cultural life of the Russian worker and peasant today. There are original articles by such well-known and authoritative figures as Lunacharsky and his wife, Lozovsky, Mme. Lenin, Mistislavsky, Morris Cohen and Savel Zimand, thru whose efforts this very interesting issue was compiled.

Machinists for Amalgamation

WINNIPEG, MAN.—The convention of District 2, International Association of Machinists, comprising the whole of Canada, indorsed the amalgamation of all the rail unions, including the running crafts as well as the maintenance of way and equipment unions. While the vote was nearly unanimous for amalgamation, the Minnesota plan, adopted by many other labor bodies, was not specifically voted on.

The Beef Trust in Canada

By HAL WARE.

I met a Canadian farmer in Boston, Mass. He was young, with a weather-beaten complexion and experience. He comes from the St. John's district. He planted his orchard 12 years ago among the stumps. He is of the pioneer breed.

His story is typical of so many of our own farmers out in the North west. The same pitiful struggle to make 2 plus 2 = 5. A story of virgin lands, high hopes, endless labor, MORTGAGES and BANKRUPTCY.

But I want to tell you of a significant incident from his community, just as he told it.

"Last fall the majority of farmers in our country couldn't pay interest on mortgages or taxes. A lot of them would have thanked you for a ticket to get out of the whole mess. Leave it to the Banks or the Fertilizer people."

I asked who the "Fertilizer" people were.

"Why, Swift & Co. and others."

"Oh," I said, "the BEEF TRUST."

"Sure, they get us going and coming. They soak us a low price on the beef we sell and a high price on the bones we buy back. If we are good slaves and pay every cent over a bare existance to the Banks and the Fertilizer trust and the rest they will "carry" us as they have the nerve to call it.

"But let anyone eat too much, or put any money into pleasure of any kind and he gets a notice to pay up. Not long ago one of my neighbors got reckless and bought him a new buggy or something, and the Fertilizer Trust asked for payment. He couldn't pay, so they started to foreclose.

"The farmer came back with a suit for damages, claiming that the fertilizer was no good and had caused his crop failure. The Fertilizer Trust got a change of venue but it was a farmer jury in the next county just the same and they rendered a verdict for the farmer. They kidded the Trust by making the damages exactly equal to the fertilizer bill."

These farmers show another instance of a growing solidarity among farmers. They must learn next that only thru the solidarity of all workers: City Workers and Working Farmers: can they hold their land. For the Trust will "Appeal", the decision will be "Reversed" and another farmer will lose his land.

What common cell was it that caused these packs of jackals to bay and howl in unison? It was not all coincidence. What hope they had to cut-buy on the pages of the subsidized press any small particle of Communist truth that might drift into them from the Michigan Court Room!

But mingled with their hopes, there must also have been fears, abject fear of the unswerving purpose of the American Communist movement to drive ahead, to push forward in spite of all enemies. The more surrendered to the Michigan Court. Thirty-two in all await trial. William Z. Foster, the first to do battle for the principles of all, stands straight and fearless before his judge, his class enemy.

"The result of this trial means life or death to the American Communist Movement," announce the political lackeys of capitalism in Washington, in interviews with the kept press. But they hope for conviction and death, providing food for the carrion-feeding jackals.

That is what they said three years ago when J. Mitchell Palmer, Attorney General, launched his nation-wide raids, and thousands were put in prison. In those days the Russian Soviet Republic was given but a few more days to live.

But how different today! American Communism, in Michigan, and everywhere, hurls its challenge into the teeth of its enemies, with all their hordes of barking and snapping jackals. And the Russian Soviet Republic! It is beyond all danger. It stands as adamant against all its foes. The hungry are being fed, the naked are being clothed, the homeless are being sheltered. Workers' Rule in Russia is daily calling on labor everywhere to witness new achievements, to profit everywhere by following its example.

It is this success, this triumph of awakening labor, that the jackals of capitalism, from Secretary of State Hughes, and Secretary of Commerce Hoover, down to the renegade Socialist, Walling, and the hired falsifier, Whitney, fear on behalf of the disintegrating social system they serve.

The brilliant victories of the Communist struggle in Soviet Russia call the workers of all lands to new deeds of valor against their common oppressors. The frantic howling of the jackals in the night, in this wilderness of capitalism, is but the herald of the new dawn, the dawning day of Communism.

Butte Copper Miners Turn Out to Hear "Bill" Dunne

(Special to "The Worker")

BUTTE, Mont.—Unorganized as well as organized copper miners here turned out in large numbers to hear William F. Dunne, former labor editor of "The Worker," speak at the high school. This great gathering was a sort of home-coming for the former editor of The Butte Bulletin, who is back again at his old desk.

Things look mighty good for a strong copper miners' union with 2,500 workers already in the organization, and increasing every day. Outside camps are watching the Butte movement, and the outlook for building up a strong metal miners' union of the Western United States and Canada is bright.

Russian Film Scores in Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE, WIS. — "Russia Through the Shadows", the Friends of Soviet Russia film, scored a great success here. The demand for seats was so great that local theater owners have asked for bookings, as a business proposition. They were informed that the proceeds of all showings must go for the support of Russian children.

Teachers in the Normal School here advised their students to see the picture for its historical value.

Deny Charter to Militants in Mine Union

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The latest chapter in the tragic history of the betrayal of the Fayette county coal miners ended Sunday, March 26th, when John O'Leary, International Executive Board Member, speaking for the officialdom of the United Mine Workers of America, brazenly informed the delegates from 82 local unions of the coke field, most of whom have been locked out, in a convention at Brownsville, that it is useless for them to ask for a charter for the coke field district until the district should become self-sustaining.

This is the answer of the "gang" to the noble band of miners who have suffered for ten months, every form of persecution from the operators, the police and the treacherous officers of their own organization.

Convention To Demand Charter

For these well fed, highly paid organizers to taunt, these starving miners with the sneer that they can not have a district charter because they are not self-sustaining is nothing short of a crime against unionism.

The convention was held for the purpose of demanding a charter for the coke field district. During the strike Feeny continually referred to the coke field as "District Four United Mine Workers of America."

Now when the miners themselves demand the charter every obstacle is thrown in their way.

Try To Break Up Meeting

Following their customary tactics of rowdyism O'Leary, Feeny, Hynes, Robertson, Mike Egan, et al, lead a gang of disrupters into the meeting with the intention of breaking it up. O'Leary got up and objected to the meeting being held because the "gang" had not called it.

Fortunately the workers of Brownsville for generations have been more class conscious than the workers of Charleroi and most other towns of Western Pennsylvania. They have seen the necessity of political action and have done their best to elect political officials in the town who openly support the workers in their industrial struggles.

As a result the Burgess of Brownsville is a union blacksmith. In Charleroi the workers have not been so alive to their political interests. The result was the breaking up of the Union meeting in Charleroi by the police at the instigation of the "payroll gang" of the United Mine Workers of America. In Brownsville the result was different. When O'Leary and his crowd started disorder the Burgess backed by three of the police force, reflecting the class conscious spirit of the Brownsville Central Trades Council, notified O'Leary he would see to it that the first man who attempted to create disorder and disrupt this meeting would be thrown out of the hall. Chairman John Snyder, of the coke field miners, reminded O'Leary that he was not in Charleroi and then as if to put the "gang" to shame, stated that while the coke field miners were never given a square deal by the officials they believed in free speech and these officials would be allowed to speak during the meeting in spite of their contemptible conduct.

Progressives Favor Autonomy

The Progressive Miners' Group of District Five was represented by Thomas Myercough, William Gubler, Thomas Ray and others. Ray made a splendid reply to a vicious personal attack by O'Leary and frankly admitted that he did not consider O'Leary trustworthy and that many miners felt likewise. The Progressives heartily endorsed the effort of the coke field miners to secure a district charter.

The conduct of the Fayette strike was mercilessly scored by numerous speakers. The officials were not able to successfully defend the calling off of the strike.

The meeting ended by unanimously passing a resolution calling upon the International Executive Board to grant a charter to the coke region as autonomous "District Four."

CANADIAN WORKERS FOR INDUSTRIALISM

By JOHN ROBUR

(Staff Correspondent, Federated Press and "The Worker")

MONTREAL.—Without committing itself formally to industrial unionism the executive of the Montreal Trades and Labor council has gone on record in favor of closer union between the craft organizations. This action is the result of resolutions presented by the machinists and by the railroad shopmen. The machinists' proposal is for the amalgamation of unions by federation of the crafts. The shopmen urged the amalgamation of the 16 standard railroad unions into one industrial union.

While the machinists' resolution came before the trades council, it was referred to the executive. The daily press announced this as a defeat for industrial unionism, but it was in reality a victory. The declaration of policy which the executive has now promulgated contains this definite statement:

"Realizing that a greater amount of welfare, and working agreements more favorable to the worker, would be the result of a better understanding and of more unity and cooperation between the different crafts forming a given industry, the committee recommends:

"That in the opinion of this council it would be to the advantage of all parties interested, if the different crafts, forming one industry were more closely united in their efforts to obtain collective bargaining, be it thru amalgamation, federation or allied trades councils, as the wish of the workers interested or the needs of a particular industry would make available."

In sending out this recommendation, which has gone to the American Federation of Labor and to the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, as well as to the local Montreal Trades and Labor council has stated that action was taken by the executive rather than by the trades council because "trades councils are nothing more than legislative bodies, having no jurisdiction whatever over the form of organization adopted by the affiliated unions, providing they are recognized by the Trades and Labor Congress; and in view of the lack of unanimity with regard to the proposal for consolidation desired as shown in the resolutions submitted to the council for endorsement,"

Everywhere is the reverberation of the strong and authentic note they have raised in our theater. They have given it courage to match the strength and powerful sincerity of these artists from the capital of the Workers' Republic over the seas.

For the last six weeks of its run, after a record of 50 uninterrupted weeks, The Century Roof Theatre raises from its high scale of $5.50 a-seat to a popular scale ranging from $3.00 to $1.00. This Mr. Morris Gest, impresario of Russian art in America, believes should make the engagement of the Chauve-Souris accessible to all.

Urge "Anathema" in English

Maurice Swartz, director of the Yiddish Art Theatre, at which Andreyev's "Anathema" has been played for some weeks, has been urged to present an English version of the play, and to sooner urged than the announcement is made that it will be put on at the 48th Street Theatre starting April 2.

Plan "The Miracle" for "Garden"

Morris Gest announces he has received a cable from Max Reinhardt, in Vienna, accepting tentatively the invitation to come to this country next November to make a series of at least four productions in English, making use of American players. The full acceptance of the arrangements on Professor Reinhardt's personal observations of conditions in the American theater when he arrives in New York, for a two weeks' visit, about the middle of April. One of the plans under consideration by Mr. Reinhardt during his visit to New York will be to canvass the possibility of making the World famous production of the spectacular drama, "The Miracle," at Madison Square Garden.

"Gang" Getting Radical

That the merciless hammering of the Progressives and the campaign of publicity which is exposing the secret methods of the "machine" is having its effect is evidenced by several things.

One of the causes of discontent for years in this district has been the failure of the district officials to back up the grievances of the men when the contracts are violated by the operators. The miners of the Rich Hill mine at Meadowlands, Pa. were almost dumbfounded last week when they went out on a Strike in protest against the bosses of that mine doing the work of union miners and were upheld by the district officials. The officials informed the men they were within their rights and would have the support of the district organization.

There are even rumors that the district executive board is considering calling a sympathetic strike at two other mines of the same company to enforce the demands at this mine. The Progressives are given credit for making the "Pay-roll" act in this case.

At the same time Fagan, Van Bittner, et al, have begun a systematic tour of District Five appearing before local unions and delivering tirades against individuals who are considered Progressives. Their speeches are full of falsehoods, misstatements and slander. Last Thursday night, at Smithton, Van Bittner made so bold as even to attack Frank Keeney, President of District 17, who was recently acquitted of a charge of treason in West Virginia in connection with the famous Logan County march, in no mistake the "machine" is going they will drive practically every official and minor official of importance whatever into the Progressive camp.

Apply For Howe Meetings

Applications are pouring in for Howe meetings from all over the United States and Canada. Make your application at once. It will be the American theater which has brought the spirit of New York for a two weeks' visit, about the middle of April. One of the main features of this visit will be a lecture during his stay. New York will be to canvass the possibility of making the World famous production of the spectacular drama, "The Miracle," at Madison Square Garden.

Kept Women and Rubber Slaves

By NICHOLAS TREMN

A beautiful young model is found dead in her apartment and her murderer is unknown. The yellow press fills pages with reports on the progress of the investigation of the culprit. A young man is suspected by the police and the district attorney, but he is released by the New York District Attorney, Mr. Ferdinand Pecora, released to give his real name to the press, clothing it, instead, with mystery by calling him "Mr. Marshall." Mr. Pecora declares that "Marshall" is not his real name, but that he has an excellent social position, and, as another figure in the case put it, "is one of the biggest men in the country."

Mr. Pecora's attitude of secrecy, attitude of the District Attorney, that he is forced to divulge the real name of the man, and of those immediately concerned, Mr. Pecora's attitude is accordingly pedantic and solicitous over the unpleasant notoriety which would be the result of the uncovering of Mr. Marshall's identity.

The latter, it transpires, is none other than John Kearsley Mitchell, a well-known member of America's financial and social aristocracy in his capacity as confidant of Edward T. Stotesbury, the Goldbergs partner of the controller of America's credit, John Pierpont Morgan.

Due to the confidence of the wealthy quickly seized for the Rockefeller family, then the amusing McCormick, then the Goulds, occasionally the Morgan hierarchy, has broken into the columns of our jaundiced sheets with the most piquant piece of scandal since the Stillman incident of recent celebrity.

Mr. Mitchell, who is no doubt a lavish contributor to organizations that fight the Communists charging they spend a large part of their time trying to break up the family, and commit all the other crimes against the moral code, was a frequent visitor at the apartment of the murdered girl, also, a good fellow, when it was a matter of a new fur coat or a pearl necklace. Miss "Dot" King, the model, was quick to recognize in him a key to the wife that is. Mitchell was not the only sponge. Yet Mitchell was the last man seen to leave her apartment before the murderer, who chased her good-night as all true believers in the Sanctity of the Home and the Sacredness of the Marital Bed, did.

The fact that the model was found murdered by chloroform, her arms tattooed, genitally, and much of her body mutilated, is not the only thing of the weird sexual sort that her murderer or murderers were attempting to take from her, for Blackmail was also in the air. Miss Dot King, it is said, threatened Mitchell, in one of which he is said to have written that it was his desire to "kiss her pink little toes". This also, you will see, is in strict conformity with the sober, restrained and pious style of our foremost moralists who are always telling the "vulgar working classes" how to act as morally as the models which are set before them: the Master Class.

Besides this, there was found under a very intimate article of furniture, a pair of silk pajamas, which are admittedly the property of Mrs. Mitchell, who, while dressed in this charming garment was wont to read to Miss King the poems of Alfred Lord Tennyson. We have heard that Demosthenes shouted his orations to the thundering seas in order to acquire a powerful voice; that De Quincey smoked opium to induce his artistic creation, and that Mark Twain smoked endless cigars in bed in order to turn out his humorous works. But I must confess to a sad ignorance of the esthetic principle on which is based the reading of Tennyson, a pair of silk pajamas, which is admitted

Plan May Day Unity Parade for New York

The delegates of 35 labor organizations, representing over one hundred thousand workers, who participated in the May Day United Front Conference, March 24th, at the 58th St. Labor Temple, decided to celebrate the First of May with a Big Parade and Demonstration.

It was the unanimous decision of the Conference that the First of May should again revive the militant spirits of the workers. The Conference also went on record favoring the United Front of Labor in its fights against the open shoppers, and for Amalgamation, Labor Party and a Workers' Government.

A Provisional Committee was elected which is functioning in accordance with the decisions of the Conference.

A committee consisting of Julius Lipshitz, Local 5, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and Paul Agnelli, of the Amalgamated Metal Workers, was sent to the conference of the United Hebrew Trades, which had been postponed from March 17th to March 24th, inviting them to participate in the conference already called and functioning. It was also suggested that a joint conference be called including all the organizations participating in both conferences. The committee even suggested the forming of a joint May Day Committee as a last resort. Max Pine and the other officials of the United Hebrew Trades had the entire matter referred to their Executive Committee.

Upon the report of Delegate Agnelli it was decided that if the issue be further evaded, an appeal be sent direct to all the organizations affiliated with the United Hebrew Trades, and further that visiting committees be sent to these organizations to appeal direct to the rank and file.

The Italian Chamber of Labor has also been urged to participate in this Demonstration.

Besides the slogans of Amalgamation, Labor Party and a Workers' Government, slogans for the release of class war prisoners and against the Fascisti were also drafted.

Eleven additional members were added to the Executive Committee: Zuckerman, L. 1; Kaplan, L. 9; Goodman, L. 25 of the I. L. G. W. U.; Abrams, L. 2; Visotsky, L. 103 of the A. C. W.; Hoffbauer, of the Iron Workers; Marshen, Childrens' Shoe Workers; Zarkin, Amalgamated Shoe Workers; Steen, Hotel Workers; Von Paast, Amalgamated Tobacco Workers, and Gitlow, Public Service.

Italian Picnic on "Fourth"

All Workers Party branches and sympathetic organizations are requested to arrange no conflicting affairs for July 4, because on that day all the Italian branches of the Workers Party have arranged a grand picnic to be held in Floral Park, West Hoboken, N. J. There will be dancing, games, speeches, singing and many, many other attractions, Proceeds of the picnic will go to "Alba Nuova, official organ, Italian Federation, Workers Party.

Militant Program of Miners Halts Anthracite Secessionists

By JOSEPH MARLEY

[illegible] MASS MEETING [illegible]

[illegible] Workers Party [illegible] Pennsylvania and Mahanoy City, [illegible] membership of upwards of 40,000 [illegible]

The [illegible] arrived over the [illegible] summary of the district decisions to [illegible] the "town local" with the "colliery local". It has developed a situation that is fraught with the greatest peril to the miners' union in this great district, where the miners' union has carried on an heroic six-years' battle with the coal companies.

The "town local" is the old-style organization, a relic of the early days of the industry. Its meeting place and activities is based upon the residence location of its membership. The "colliery local" that now obtains in practically all other districts of the United Mine Workers of America has as its principle that its membership shall be based not upon where they live, but where they work.

The membership of this District of 85 per cent foreign born, mostly Lithuanian, Hungarian and Italian. The membership of many of the "town locals" is composed exclusively of members of any of the above races, especially the first. The business is all transacted in the language of the nationality and good attendances had at the local meetings because the members come to pay dues. In many of the colliery locals the attendance at meetings is poor because dues are collected at work.

Very little confidence in the District officials is felt by the foreign-born workers and any new measure, especially one that so changes the system of things, is looked upon with distrust and suspicion.

Due to the nature and location of these large mines the successful and democratic carrying on of union business, under the colliery local system, needs a progressive official dom that can inspire the rank and file with confidence; that can educate them so that they can adapt themselves to new forms. Many of the large collieries employing several hundred men are situated miles out of town with poor transportation. No satisfactory explanation has been given by the District officials, who now claim that they have "carried on a wide educational and agitation", as to how the many workers who would compose a "colliery local" in a colliery situated half way between two towns with little or no transportation between them, could meet with a fair representation, without the fear of having a handful living close to the colliery, influenced by company men and tools of the officials, dominate the affairs of the union.

The controversy over this matter has been raging for months. Of late, conventions of delegates of the "town locals" threatened by the constitutional enactment which says their members must transfer to "colliery locals" before April 1st, 1923, are meeting every couple of weeks.

The writer attended one of these conventions, Sunday, March 25th, at Mahanoy City. Delegates of 37 "town locals" participated. The active work of the convention was carried on by a handful of English speaking delegates most of them members of a committee far from capable of representing the foreign-born membership who for obvious language reasons, elected them, at the previous convention, held two weeks previous at Ashland.

The "program" of this committee was blind opposition to the "colliery locals", following the action and instructions of the Ashland convention. They had engaged the services of two lawyers to negotiate with the District officers and if unsuccessful to secure an injunction restraining the District officers from dissolving the "town locals". The committee reported that the two lawyers "had quit" and in quitting had recommended that the membership of the "town locals" seek redress for their grievances by the regular constitutional measures, such as an appeal to the next District convention.

Backing any constructive suggestion this committee bitterly attacked the District officials, charging off a financial statement of their high wages and expense accounts. One member of the committee in particular lashed himself into a frenzy denunciation of the colliery locals and lawyers and then unconditionally advocated the hiring of another lawyer who, he said, would have to be shown the "long green" (money) before his services could be secured.

Following this bitter tirade, a motion was made to "assess the locals $25.00 each". This same committeeman then arose to protest that a bond for the secretary-treasurer was unnecessary." His suggestion was followed.

A motion was carried to enlarge the committee and the chairman appointed all native-born delegates, so that one can see how democratic this "leadership" is and to what an end this revolt, under such leadership would come.

I succeeded in getting the floor for "10 minutes" over the protest of the same above-mentioned committeeman. I spoke for 40 minutes and, while admitting the probably justifiable anger, warned against the danger of secession and the lack of an intelligent leadership and program. I pointed out the many isolated fights in the various U. M. W. of A. Districts and the need of making a fight, not on a District but on a National basis. I recommended the program of the Progressive International Committee of the United Mine Workers of America: Nationalization of Coal Mines, Need of a Labor Party, Aggressive Organization Campaign, Alliance Between Miners and Railroad Workers, Reinstatement of Howat and other Kansas miners, National Agreements Only, Direct Election of Organizers, Amalgamation, Six Hour Day and Five Day Week, Secession and Dual Unionism, and International Affiliation.

These recommendations were received with applause and enthusiasm and had the effect of showing the assembled delegates the dangers of secession, dual organization and the need of a clear headed, militant progressive leadership, which is alone capable of understanding the national significance of all these local "district" issues, a leadership that can express the militant sentiment of a united, giant, all-powerful organization of miners.

Police Net But One Experience in Life of "God of Vengeance"

By JOHN DALE

The history of the play, "The God of Vengeance", now presented to crowded houses at the Apollo Theatre, is as interesting as the story of the play itself, and as gripping as the acting of the excellent cast headed by Rudolph Schildkraut.

When Sholom Asch penned this tragedy of an obscure Jew, keeper of a brothel in one of Poland's larger towns, it is doubtful if he even hoped or dreamt that it would be translated into nearly a dozen languages, and acted on the stages of almost that many different nations.

Nor did Schildkraut, in 1910, in the Deutsches Theater, in Berlin, where he first created the role of Yekel, vision the time when he would be appearing in the same role on the English speaking stage, but a few steps from Times Square, New York.

To be sure, Schildkraut had to work his way uptown with his company. First at the Provincetown Playhouse, then to the Greenwich Village Theatre, then the leap to the Apollo Theatre, and into the police net, because somebody suddenly discovered the play was immoral. I have heard several versions of this "discovery" and none of them find their source in police stations. Police never discover anything. They just get kicked into doing things, and in this instance it seems that some rich Jews, merchant princes, bankers and others with the Midas touch, aroused the forces of "law and order" because they thought their race was being besmirched by Asch's bold realism, altho the unhappy members of any other race 'neath the sun might have been picked to walk the stage thru the same experiences.

But while the case is still "pending" in the courts, the company is out on bail and the crowds come to witness the efforts of Yekel to marry off his daughter, desperately trying to save her from the meshes of the trade in which he is engaged, a trade that her mother had followed for 13 years. He tastes all the bitter poignancy of complete failure as the inmates of his own house of prostitution make way with his beautiful daughter, to capitalize her attractions in establishing a brothel of their own.

To say that the play is immoral is but to indict the social system under which we live. But there is no danger that capitalism will be placed in the dock in the police court. That would be too much of a confession of the rottenness of things as they are. So it may be expected that the morality hounds will in time be called off from their pursuit of "The God of Vengeance".

In the meantime it is hoped that the great significance of Yekel's efforts to break with his social environment will get over to these beyond the footlights. We venture the prediction that 99 per cent of the those who come looking for smut, go away with the feeling that this is a hellish world, and that religious make-believe and commercial exploitation are two of its worst products. And that should be victory enough for Sholom Asch, and for Rudolph Schildkraut and his able, supporting company.

TEN WORKERS SHOULD READ THIS COPY OF THE WORKER; KEEP IT IN CIRCULATION

Close to Half-Million Mark!

The latest word from the shipping room of the Workers Party National Office states that the first quarter's drive for the 500,000 copies of the Party Program are being shipped out for distribution.

Orders of from a few hundred to twenty and thirty thousand copies of this splendid program leaflet have been received at the National Office from every part of the United States. At the present rate of distribution it is safe to say that not a single Party branch will have failed to respond to the call for a "program" leaflet campaign by April 15th.

This is the good ice for this bit of propaganda work. The distribution to date shows that every Party member is anxious to get the leaflet out into the hands of the workers. Let every Party member do his part in the matter and make a record to be proud of. See that YOUR branch sends in its order at once if it has not done so.

"Make the Party Grow!" is not a mere slogan to inspire you and other Party members. To make the Party grow means to make the Communist movement grow, to give to all its activities a greater scope and meaning. It means to give the Party more meetings, more activity in the unions. It means to build up the literature department of the Party, which is more than any other department of the Party work, the most necessary.

You can do all of these things by buying one or more of the "Make the Party Grow" stamps of your Branch secretary. Get in good standing by buying one at your next meeting. Keep in good standing by increasing your Party activity.

Manley at Bronx Forum

Joe Manley, Eastern Organizer of the T. U. E. L., will speak on "William Z. Foster: His Significance to the American Labor Movement!" in connection with Foster's trial in Michigan. This talk by his friend and co-worker of the last dozen years will be of great interest. Place and date are, Bronx Workers Hall, 1347 Boston Road (near 169th St.), Sunday, April 1, at 8.15 P. M. Questions and discussion will follow the lecture.

Reactionaries Split the Unions

When the majority of the delegates to a convention of the Esthonian labor unions recently held in Reval elected Communists as presiding officers, 43 of the workers' representatives left the hall and held a rump convention. German Communist papers assert that the seceding delegates represented only 2,800 persons, while the majority delegates represented 18,000.

"The Goose Step" Digs Deep into Capitalism

By NANCY MARKOFF

Upon Sinclair has written another book that digs deep. The "Brass Check" was received enthusiastically by radicals of every shade. Now "The Goose Step" is being hailed with approbation.

In the "Brass Check" Sinclair gave us an account of the way news is controlled by big business that owns the capitalist press. In the "Goose Step" he shows us that these same money interests control institutions of learning.

Of course, there is nothing new in the information that in a capitalist state the institutions of that state voice only such opinions and circulate only such news as tend to strengthen and advance the capitalist viewpoint. And we also know that the more uncertain the stability of that state the greater the pressure brought to bear upon the avenues of publicity for making propaganda.

We can quite easily understand with what painstaking precaution institutions of learning are fine-combed and cleared of professors who stubbornly persist in indulging in discourses on such dangerous subjects as labor troubles, Recognition of Russia, War and Bolshevism. So when Upton Sinclair says, "I have written a book which shows that our educational system is perverted to suit capitalist interests," we are prone to sit back and say: "Tell us something we don't know."

But Upton Sinclair does not generalize. He is specific—very specific indeed in his information. He says the education our youth receives is old and stodgy and false. And he proceeds to show why it is so. He proves that the "Interlocking Directorates", the money power that owns and controls railroads, telegraphs, telephones, electricity, land, etc., also owns and controls EDUCATION.

The book is an encyclopedia of names of people who direct all capitalist activity in this country. You learn that the members of the boards of trustees of universities and colleges are not scholars, but business men, and consequently all real knowledge is thwarted to further the interests of big business.

The scab is of course hailed as the greatest American hero.

Harvard Students were enlisted to break the strike of the Lawrence, Mass., Textile Mill workers and the strike of the Boston policemen.

In 1913 during the San Francisco Bay District gas and electric strike the president of the Gas Trust, a member of the board of regents, called on his university, the University of California, for help and it was then the engineering department were given credit for a full semester's work for their services as "scabs".

And they have even stooped to the conducting of a spy system. In some colleges, the professor is at the mercy of the students in his class who happen to be the sons of the influential men in the community. These boys are encouraged to spy upon the professors and make report to the authorities any radical tendency in the professor's lecture.

The book treats each college individually and links up with it the specific money interests that dictate its policy. The cases of Beard, Dana, Calhoun, Nearing, and others are cleared and the causes leading up to their dismissal exposed.

The "Goose Step" is written in an engaging style and is as interesting as a fascinating novel.

Study Lenin's Classic

Comrade Fanny Jacobs will take up Lenin's "The State and the Revolution" with her class in Communism which she conducts every Saturday afternoon at 4:30 under the auspices of the Harlem Young Workers' League Branch and the Harlem English Branch, Workers Party, at the Harlem headquarters, 145 East 103rd Street. Party members and sympathizers are invited to join the class.

What's in Foster's Books?

William Z. Foster, now on trial for "criminal syndicalism" at St. Joseph, Michigan, has recently written a number of books. These comprise Foster's thoughts about the American labor and revolutionary movements. Foster is regarded as a menace by the Kings of Coal and Steel and Railways because of what he says in these books. It is because of what Foster says in these books that he is charged with violation of the law. The Michigan trial affords these Pirates of Industry the chance they have long looked for to "get Foster."

Read these booklets and understand what "crime" Foster has committed.

Workers' Republic Still Unrecognized

Recognition has again been refused the Russian Soviet Republic by the United States Government. Secretary of State Hughes told a delegation of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom that it must not be.

The women found Mr. Hughes in mourning at the state department. He was still lamenting the loss of $187,000,000 that he claims the United States government loaned Mr. Alexander Kerensky, now a waiter in a London hotel, when ... ing a government in Moscow seeking to checkmate the ... tion. Mr. Hughes' voice grew husky as he told again, for the benefit of the women, how the Russian Communists had repudiated this Kerensky debt, and that, therefore, the Workers' Republic must continue to be considered an outlaw among nations.

To be sure, Mr. Hughes pulled another anti-Soviet card out of his sleeve, in the shape of a quotation, from one of Zinoviev's speeches, that, "the eternal in the Russian Revolution is the fact that it is the beginning of the world revolution," and Mr. Hughes fears for American capitalism.

Thus we learn that it is the $187,000,000 that keeps Mr. Hughes awake nights. It is the spectre of the repudiated Kerensky loan that haunts him and his Wall Street friends. This in spite of the fact that Senator Borah assures his fellow republicans in Washington that the Soviets will even agree to talk business on this obligation of a dead and departed regime.

But Senator Borah also points out that the United States handed the British many times that $187,000,000 in lowering the interest rate on the British war debt. It is also a small sum compared to the financial backing given by this country to Russian counter-revolutionary adventurers, from Yudenitch to Kolchak, not to mention the heavy cost of American military intervention at Archangel and Vladivostok.

If the United States would restime trade relations with Russia, factories here would receive large orders, and American workers could deposit many times that $187,000,000 in wages in their pockets, where they are now jobless and pennyless. Poverty stricken and bankrupt American farmers could take in many times that amount if they could ship their surplus crops, now allowed to rot in the fields, to the Russian market, still depleted by the Volga famine.

But the Hughes-Harding administration is interested in neither workers' wages nor farmers' crops. Its main concern is the stability of the profit system, and it sees that system menaced in the words of Zinoviev, by the Soviet Republic. So in blind and futile rage they withhold recognition from it, a recognition that lessens in importance, so far as Soviet Russia is concerned, with the passage of each new day.

Greetings! Comrade Kalinin!

Kings, premiers, statesmen of all kept brands, have visited these shores, from all the lands of the earth, and American "democracy" has kissed the dust at their feet. American snobocracy has licked the boots of the visiting aristocracy and considered itself blessed.

In the days just ahead there is going to be a new deal. The United States is to have a visitor, greater than all the rest, and she comes from the people, from the mighty masses of the Russian workers and peasants.

Ekaterina Ivanova Kalinin, the wife of Michael Kalinin, peasant-president of the Russian Soviet Republic, is coming here. She does not come in royal robes, wearing a crown and carrying a sceptre. Instead the Russian proletarian womanhood, that fights side by side with Russian proletarian manhood, for the victory of the revolution, says she has "two dresses and a coat, isn't that enough?" and she isn't going to stop even in Berlin, not for a moment, to replenish her wardrobe.

Imagine "Catherine the Great," Russia's most famed czarina, or Queen Victoria, Queen Elizabeth or Queen Mary, England's royal monarchs, coming to the United States under similar conditions. And if they had come, they would have made of their visit an occasion for self-display and regal pomp. They would, above all else, have been silent on oppressive conditions at home.

Our Comrade Kalinin comes here, not under the auspices of Chambers of Commerce, or any other exploiters' organization. Her two months' visit will be under the direction of the American Committee for the Relief of Russian Children, and she will tell all America the truth about the agony of Russia's women and children during the Allied blockade. She has been granted admission to this country by the state department at Washington on condition that she does not use her visit to spread "political propaganda." So does American capitalism fear the womanhood of the Workers' Republic.

To our Comrade Kalinin we extend our greetings, the greetings of the awakened masses of American labor. Her presence alone, in this land, will be an inspiration to those who struggle for the new day. Greetings, Comrade Kalinin! Greetings to you, and thru you to Russia's revolutionary womanhood.

Fan Call Is Issued

It is an unbelievable but true fact that the call for the convention of the American Federation of Labor, issued by President Gompers, has been received by the Workers' Party of America, the Communist Party, the Communist Labor Party and the Communist International Association, and that the call for the convention was issued by Gompers without the knowledge that any of these organizations existed.

Gompers has made an excellent organization executive in the A. F. of L. He comes from the bench, where he has learned to grind. So he has plenty of time to baste with one hand while he grinds with the other. He is a master of the art of basting.

It would seem that with this record, on top of the fact that he can no longer function within his own organization, that Duncan would be willing to retire. But reaction doesn't function that way. It just hangs on, with teeth, nails and toes. You can't get it. Note James O'Connell, deposed by William H. Johnston from the presidency of the Machinists' Union. O'Connell is still hanging on as head of the Metal Trades Department of the A. F. of L., with Johnston almost ready for a similar berth himself. There are a lot of barnacles on the ship of labor. No wonder it has such slow progress thru the seas of adversity. What it needs is a good militant cleansing and overhauling. The time for that is long over due. It is a big job, but it must be gone thru with, and that soon.

Socialist Party not Socialist

That there are still definite cleavages within the Socialist Party is shown by the proposals urged in the agenda for the National Convention to be held in New York City, April 28. These are more fully given on the questions of the Labor Party and international relations.

What is still "left" in the Socialist Party demands a return to the isolation that prohibits "all forms of fusion or co-operation with other political parties or organizations." This is a confession on the part of these "left" Socialist elements that they feel co-operation, as interpreted by Hillquit, Berger and Oneal, means not only a coalition with other workers' political organizations, but fusion and co-operation with non-working class elements, or even anti-working class elements.

Berger will no doubt have a hard time trying to keep his political trade with LaFollette ashes during the April gathering. There may even be some delegate hardy enough to challenge the admittance by Hillquit and Oneal, of the Single Taxers to the New York American Labor Party Conference, while the delegates of the Workers Party were denied this recognition.

We feel that these "left" Socialists are wrong in their isolation attitude. Yet their fears are well grounded. They have seen the politicians within their ranks use the Labor Party coalition idea as a vehicle for trading political favors [illegible] With Tammany. The answer is that the Socialist Party is no longer even Socialist. Only the Workers Party is so organized, and so disciplined that it can maintain its organizational autonomy and class integrity in the face of the temptations offered by a growing Labor Party, presenting as it does, glowing opportunities to political adventurers and parliamentary careerists. This the "left" elements in the Socialist Party will learn in time, and as a result they will no doubt find their place in the real vanguard of the drive for the class Labor Party so much needed by America's workers.

Help Put It Over, Big!

The truth always did have a difficult time making itself heard. This was never more apparent than now, especially the truth about conditions in Soviet Russia, with every agency of the capitalist system busy propagating and expanding on every falsehood it can invent.

It is the duty of every reader of "The Worker" to start the backfire that will meet and overcome this malicious campaign of slander and prevarication. No greater effort calls for your support and hearty co-operation.

It is within the power of every one of our readers to help thru giving their aid and support to the national speaking tour of James P. Cannon, national chairman of the Workers Party. Cannon is just back from Russia. He has brought the truth with him. He has been telling it to the workers in New England. They have responded in inspiring fashion. How about the workers in your town?

Cannon comes to New York City for his meeting in the nation's metropolis, at the Central Opera House, this Friday night, March 30. Thousands of workers should turn out to hear him, to become acquainted with his message in order that they may carry it to greater numbers of their fellow-men and women who labor.

These Cannon meetings are being held on a subscription basis for "The Worker." Every admission ticket means a 20-weeks' sub for the official publication of the Workers Party. That means that the truth, driven home by Cannon in his talk, will be reinforced each week for 20 weeks by the arrival of new issues of "The Worker."

This is a task for you. You must not shirk it. Help put it over big. Defeat those who spread lies about the Workers' Republic.

Do you agree with us? Then join the Workers Party!

They Are Hungry in Berlin

By ISRAEL AMTER
(Our European Staff Correspondent)

Berlin is hungry . . . not hungry for art, not hungry for diversion, not hungry for every kind of spicy entertainment, to arouse the nerves and tickle up sensual desires . . . Not hungry for luxuries, for beer and butter, for a piece of meat, for a roll smeared with margarine.

There is real hunger in Berlin . . . possibly the hunger that preceded Revolutions.

It is cold in Berlin . . . and there is little coal—because of the Ruhr occupation. Coal is obtained from England, but at fearful prices. It is a good business for the British capitalists . . . and no doubt the British miners are delighted with the steady work they are now getting—scabbing for their fellow miners in the Ruhr, and the French and Belgian miners who have just gone on strike.

"Briquettes" are dear in Berlin, the cheap fuel must be saved on heating. But food is dearer, so Berlin children and mothers, Berlin girls and fathers go hungry . . .

It is cold and it is hungry in winter, when the cold pinches your nose and lets the wind sweep thru your body as if it were made of straw. Berlin is a city of unheated streets. It was during the war, when there was a scarcity of everything and all the food and drink was sent to the front to help German soldiers save German capitalism. There was a slight improvement after the war, but gradually that sank . . .

And now, with the American dollar the standard of the world, and the German mark not worth a fraction of a penny, with speculation running riot, with the cost of living rising daily, while the dollar has sunk in value, with milk so dear in Berlin that hardly one-quarter the amount is consumed that Berlin used before the war, with American prices for Swift's lard sold on the streets, with unemployment increasing daily, with poverty, there are all separate chapters. There is food in Berlin. For the well-to-do—those who can reckon in dollars, there is plenty food. And so much pleasure—theatres and concerts . . . Berlin's rich and the foreigners who have dollars and pounds in their pockets have a good time—a very good time. And it costs them very little, the German mark is worth so little . . . you get 20,000 for a dollar. A week ago you received 50,000!

But the workers are not paid in dollars—they are paid in German paper money that is turned out by the Government printing presses by the billions of marks a week. German workers don't get 50,000 marks a week . . . still they must live. Not that many think it not worth the trouble . . . But the habit is strong and they hope for better days.

So they are hungry in Berlin . . . the workers are, their wives and daughters and the little children. They sell matches and chocolate. The little boys, bedraggled and pale, want to run errands for you, carry your luggage . . . do anything to earn a worthless piece of paper that won't buy even a roll.

Soviet Russia's New Economic Policy Is of Great Importance to Workers of All Lands

By ARNE SWABECK
Delegate of the Trade Union Educational League to the Second World Congress of the Red International of Labor Unions

"Is the New Economic Policy, now in operation in Russia, a departure from the communist policy once declared by the Soviet Government? This question has been asked by many, both supporters and opponents of Soviet Russia. The capitalist press says it is; but give the lie to their contention by continuing their Anti-Soviet campaign. This is an acknowledgment of the fact that the Russian government is securely in the hands of the workers, that it is frankly pro-working class and that the whole machinery of production is controlled by the workers.

The answer to the question was given categorically at the Fourth Congress of the Communist International. The New Economic Policy is a necessary step in Russia's transition from capitalism to Communism, for, as stated by Trotsky, "We have learned in the elementary school of Marxism that there is no possibility of making one leap from a capitalist society to a Socialist one. Nor did any of us believe that it would be possible, with one leap, to move from the realm of necessity to the realm of freedom. Not one of us believed that a new society could be built "twixt night and dawn."

Is Russia today operating on a communist basis? No,—the mere fact that there exists a state altho controlled by the workers and frankly pro-working class, proves this. Are the broad masses of Russian peasants and workers thinking and acting communistically? Hardly. Yet the young Soviet Republic is on the road which leads definitely to communism and that is the spirit now penetrating the broad masses. However, the revolutionary struggle never goes in a straight upgrade line, as proven by history and the progress of the policy of the Russian communists can only be understood by realizing that political necessity and economic expediency does not always harmonize.

"During the civil war period political necessity demanded the replacement of the shattered apparatus of production by a centralized state apparatus and so originated the period of "war-communism." Now peace has come to Russia, the counter-revolutionary leaders have gone, some of them to join Nicholas Romanoff and others hiding safely in foreign countries. The imperialist countries as well have realized the futility of carrying on war against Russia. The formerly acute political situation no more dictates a policy of compliance and it is possible to apply new measures according to economic expediency.

The great problem now facing Soviet Russia is the rehabilitation of industry. In the light industries already a marked improvement can be noticed. Despite the fact that scores of the police of Czarism still prevail —people clad in rags providing their scant means of big by pimping the pleasures of the bourgeois—begging is blossoming as in any of the so-called civilized countries. Activity can be noticed everywhere. Stores display their goods in gorgeous fashion, and here and there are factories with modern equipments. This, however, is not saying that during this short period the industrial mechanism has been very far developed. The workers are yet compelled to make heavy sacrifices in order to pull thru and make possible for such developments in the future. But rapid progress is being made every day. It was even possible last year, in many cities, to start an elaborate program of repairing buildings and streets and for the erection of new structures a special bank was organized in Moscow, of course, under the control of the workers. . . . And industrial production has practically the same development in the famine stricken regions. Embracing a total of 30 million inhabitants, reached 75 per cent of prewar production. The peasants are satisfied and produce for the open market.

"In contemporary Russia we are engaged in a great experiment directed by historical necessity. A new class is building up a new system, and is doing so by old methods; for the latter alone which can only be developed out of the old ones, have not yet come into being".

Thus stated Comrade Trotsky at the Fourth Congress, and it is a most important consideration. The old methods are the existing capitalist organization of economic life, of the division of products and the assignments of labor power, adjusted according to the material possibilities available and the modified requirements of the new order.

And again, speaking of the dangers of the New Economic Policy, Comrade Trotsky said: "No one will believe that when capitalism is hastening to its fall the world over, ... blossoming time is at hand in the revolutionary Russia.

To the world revolutionary proletariat, the policy embodied in the New Economic Policy is of tremendous importance, inasmuch as it will most likely have to be applied in every country, after the conquest of power by the proletariat, to more or less degree, for as Comrade Zinoviev put it: "The New Economic Policy represents the alliance of power between the peasantry and petty bourgeoisie on the one hand and the revolutionary workers on the other."

Long Debate Over Verdict Holds Out Hope for Disagreement in Now Famous Michigan Case

Italian Labor for May Day United Front

United May Day Front Plans for New York City were given considerable impetus by the decision of the Italian Chamber of Labor to give its complete co-operation. This action, enlists the great masses of Italian workers in the May Day Demonstration being planned for the national metropolis.

Efforts are still being made to win over the United Hebrew Trades to this Joint May Day celebration, demanding unity of effort in the struggle against the open shoppers, amalgamation of craft unions into industrial unions, war on Fascism, release of the class war prisoners, a Labor Party and a Workers' Government.

Final plans for the parade and demonstration will be discussed at the next May Day Conference to be held Sunday, April 8th, at 2 p. m., at the Labor Temple, 243 E. 84th St., to which all labor unions, co-operative, political and fraternal organizations are urged to send their delegates. Where these organizations do not meet they should be represented, by their officials.

Champions of Workers in Michigan Communist Trial

From left to right, we have Attorney Frank P. Walsh, famed for his labor defenses, who is defending the Communists; William Z. Foster, Secretary of the Workers Party, who explained the position of the Communist Movement, nationally and internationally, and William Z. Foster, Secretary of the Workers Party, who is one of the defendants to go to trial. Ruthenberg will tell the story of the trial Friday night, at Webster Hall, in New York City.

Invite Workers Party to Chicago Political Conference, July 3rd

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—Both the Workers Party and the Socialist Party are included in the invitation for a national coalition convention sent out by the national committee of the Farmer-Labor Party. The convention is to be held in Chicago July 3.

"Our object is to bring together all political parties that are opposed to the two old party organizations," said National Secretary Jay Brown. "It addition we want to weld into one political unit all the labor organizations that are not explicitly opposed to political action. Farmer organizations are also included and we want the women's organizations that are not auxiliaries to the old parties."

The Liberal Party, an outgrowth of the Committee of 48 which met in convention with the Farmer-Labor Party in 1919, will be welcomed to the July gathering. The I. W. W. are not included in the call, it being understood that their last convention indorsed their traditional stand against political action.

Wm. Z. Foster—Revolutionary Leader

By JOHN PEPPER

The American Face of Communism

There are two outstanding features to the great Communist trial at St. Joseph, Michigan: 1. This trial afforded the first opportunity to present Communism, in its entity, before the entire American people. 2. This was the first occasion in the United States for the presentation of Communism, openly, to the whole working-class, by a typical American worker, a genuine trade union militant.

The capitalist government and press succeeded in their common effort to link the name of William Z. Foster with Communism in the eyes of our working masses—to make William Z. Foster and Communism synonymous to the American workers. In reply to the question, "What is a Red?", one of the prospective jurors answered, at the outset of the trial; "An ignorant foreigner." At the end of the trial, however, American public opinion was compelled to admit that a "Red" is, in reality, no one else but a militant American trade unionist, armed with the weapons of a scientific Marxian, Communist education. At the very moment when the State prosecution put William Z. Foster on trial, on the mere charge of being a Communist, it unintentionally presented full American citizenship to the hitherto foreign labelled Communism.

Until this trial, the caricature mirrors of the Capitalist press could hide the face of Communism with the mask of the "East Side Jew" or the "imported Russian Bolshevik". The trial at St. Joseph has shown our working class the real face of Communism personified in the splendid, typical characteristics of the American workers composite in the Irish-American trade unionist, William Z. Foster. The capitalist prosecuting attorney baptised Communism "American" at the moment that he cited from Foster's book the simple, masterly formula: "To me the Russian Revolution did not seem difficult to

This issue of "The Worker" went to press, Wednesday night, April 4, with the jury still debating the verdict in the trial of William Z. Foster, at St. Joseph, Mich. The jury had been out all day and the only report from the jury room was that Mrs. Bertha Ostert, the only woman on the jury, wept during the closing argument of Attorney Frank P. Walsh, for the defense, who was holding out against the former members.

Early in the evening the jury came back for instruction from the court, but Judge White referred them to his declaration of the morning. It was thought that the jury, upon returning to its deliberations, would soon reach an agreement. At the evening session it was announced that the jury was hopelessly deadlocked.

Following instructions from Judge Charles White, the case of William Z. Foster was turned over to the jury on Wednesday morning. Conviction carried with it a sentence of 10 years imprisonment or a $5,000 fine, or both.

The jury went out at 9.45 o'clock, a. m., and the lunch hour arrived with no verdict reached. It had been instructed by Judge White that Foster was guilty of violation of the Michigan law against criminal syndicalism, at the time he attended the convention last August among lonely dunes on the shores of Lake Michigan, was a society formed to advocate and teach criminal syndicalism, and if

2. Foster assembled with the convention delegation voluntarily, or, in the words of the court, "with conscious design and purpose to further and promote the teaching and advocacy by the Communist party of the doctrines of criminal syndicalism.

Labor's Foes Prosecute Foster

In his closing address, Attorney Frank P. Walsh told the jury that Foster is being persecuted by the enemies of organized labor.

"The whole thing is a frame-up and a conspiracy to get a man who has sought to bring about better conditions to the workers," said Walsh.

Walsh told the jurors he could appreciate Foster's hopes, ambitions and ideals.

"This case is one unique in the annals of the law," said Attorney Walsh.

"It is based wholly upon the construction of words. If William Z. Foster is convicted, he is not dishonored. You can crucify him, but he will go to prison and come back out again with a clear conscience."

Quoting Plato, Socrates, Lincoln, Jefferson, Wendell Phillips, Daniel Webster and others, Attorney Walsh in his argument for the defense declared that Foster, like any one else, had the right to his beliefs, to believe in and advocate Communism, to point out and try to correct the abuses of the capitalist system and the republican form of government, and to advocate the Soviet form of government and dictatorship of the proletariat.

Ruthenberg Case Is Set for April 16th

(Special to "The Worker")

COURT ROOM, ST. JOSEPH, MICH.—With the turning of the Foster case over to the jury, Judge White definitely set the case of C. E. Ruthenberg, Secretary of the Workers Party, the next to be tried, for Monday, April 16.

Repeal Syndicalism Law, Demand of Labor

(Special to "The Worker")

LANSING, Mich.—Repeal of the Michigan criminal syndicalism law, as demanded by the Michigan State Federation of Labor, will be considered by the judiciary committee of the assembly after the first of the red raid trials in Berrien county has been completed.

President Albert Saether of the state federation appeared before the judiciary committee and was given the promise of an early hearing on the bill. The committee, however, did not wish to embarrass the prosecution in the Foster trial by conducting hearings to repeal the law under which the case is being tried.

Sentiment in favor of wiping out this war hysteria statute is expected to develop, tho sufficient strength to kill the measure cannot yet be predicted.

Ruthenberg to Tell Story of Foster Trial at St. Joseph, Mich.

C. E. Ruthenberg, who was the only defense witness in addition to William Z. Foster at the Michigan Communist Trial, will be the principal speaker at the mass meeting to be held this Friday, April 6, 8 p. m., at Webster Hall, 119 East 11th St., near Third Ave. He has just come from the court room at St. Joseph, Mich., and will tell the story of this latest attack on the American Communist movement. There will be other speakers in Jewish, Russian and Lithuanian.

Zinoviev Shows Foster Is True Friend of the Interests of America's Workers and Farmers

(Special Cable to "The Worker")

MOSCOW.—Charging that the big bosses of American industry are trying to railroad William Z. Foster to prison for serving the interests of the American working class, Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, has an article in Pravda, official organ of the Russian Communist Party, here as follows:

* * *

By GREGORY ZINOVIEV.

"The American bourgeoisie are trying to railroad Foster to jail for serving the interests of the working class. That is a matter of greatest importance to the American labor movement.

"According to the newspapers, Foster is charged with 'criminal syndicalism'. These are the old tactics employed by the capitalists in every country whenever the workers organize for the purpose of improving their conditions. Labor unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor have often been charged with having similar objects when they have struck for better conditions. Several members of the American Federation of Labor were charged with wrecking a train in Indiana last August during the shopmen's strike, altho the derailment was proven due to defective rails. Was not E. C. Gregor, a striking railroad worker, lynched by an Arkansas mob for alleged burning of bridges, altho it was proven that the damage was due to faulty firing on the engines? The record of the American labor movement is one of persecution and attacks by the capitalist class thru the means of armed guards and detective agencies striving to destroy the labor organizations.

"What are the real facts about Foster? Foster was the organizer of the Trade Union Educational League, an organization welding together the militant elements in the trade unions and demanding improvement in the American labor movement. The Trade Union Educational League advocates amalgamation of the craft unions into industrial unions so as to form an organization corresponding to the development of American capitalism, and thus make the labor organizations efficient agencies for the protection of the workers. The propaganda of the Trade Union Educational League is making tremendous progress. Large organizations belonging to the American Federation of Labor are on record as favoring its program. This causes hatred on the part of the 'open shop' capitalists and the reactionary leaders of the American Federation of Labor. The Trade Union Educational League has also recently advocated the formation of a Labor Party, recognizing that the workers must have an independent party representing their interests, just as the workers in other countries have. Foster and his comrades are convinced that these are the only steps for the development of the American labor movement.

"America today is under the absolute dictatorship of Wall Street. The Government of the United States openly placed itself at the service of the capitalist class last summer when Attorney General Daugherty stated that the Government will use all its force in the maintainance of the open shop'.

"The American workers and farmers have been made to feel the dictatorship of capitalism. The radical workers advocate a government of the workers and farmers, operating in the interests of the workers and the exploited farmers, just as the capitalist government is operating in the interests of the capitalists. The militants know that the capitalists will not surrender power so readily but they are convinced that when a majority of the workers and farmers are won over to their program and properly organized, the power of the capitalists will be broken and a government of the producing classes will be established. With this program the militants organized the Workers Party which is conducting a campaign for the emancipation of the workers.

"Foster is accused of subscribing to these principles. We cannot understand how a thinking worker or farmer living in America under the oppression of billionaire capitalism hesitates to accept this program. This is called a crime in free America. We believe that the American workers and farmers will pronounce it no crime but the right of every American; not only his right, but a duty to himself and his family. Foster is a true friend of the interests of the American workers and farmers."

Michigan Trial Has Shown America's Workers the Real Face of American Communism

understand. It is only our own labor movement carried to its logical conclusion."

From Militant Worker to Communist

William Z. Foster is the typical representative of the American militant workers. He narrated the story of his life to the Court. This story was a veritable picture of every phase of the life of the hard working proletariat. He started to work at the age of ten as an apprentice to a sculptor and wood-cutter. He then went to the type foundry from the type foundry to the fertilizer factory; and from the fertilizer factory to the steam-fitter's shop. En route West, he turned wood man in Washington and Oregon. At twenty-four he took to sea, serving three years before the mast. Then a year or so in Europe studying languages and the Labor movement. Coming back, Foster turned to railroading, joined the Railway Carmen's Union, and rose to hold every office in the Union.

Restless and inquisitive, he passed from craft to craft, went thru all the trades of the American worker. For he wanted to see with his own eyes and move the various phases of the workers' life. Slowly he grew from the status of his own individual life to become the leader of the masses . . . secretary of the Syndicalist League . . . officer of the Railway Carmen's Union . . . 1917, secretary of the Organization Committee in the Packing Industry . . . secretary of the Organization Committee of the Steel Industry in 1918, . . . and in 1921 Organizer of the Trade Union Educational League.

And even in his political development. Foster portrays all the phases of the American militant worker—Socialist Party, Industrial Workers of the World, Syndicalist League, Farmer-Labor Party, American Federation of Labor. He personally went thru all these phases of the militant worker. Along with the Socialist Party he reaped the wrong evaluation of revolutionary tactics. Then he went astray with the Industrial Workers of the World. In their midst he saw the complete failure of direct action. Here he went wrong with the Syndicalists in their denial of the role of political party and the political revolution. There, along with the American Federation of Labor, he was mistaken in failing to consider the role of the United States in the revolutionary minority. He experienced all these mistakes. However, these mistakes were never his own individual errors but always in quest of possible steps of advance for the American workers. Himself, Foster, has always been honest and militant. He could testify before the Court with the greatest justification: "Ever since I had anything to do with the Labor movement I sought to put the power into the hands of the workers."

Foster's Contribution

It is this which has permeated Foster's life so all that was good and worth while and left behind it the big harvest and worthwhile things in the Labor movement acquired an appreciation of the value of systematic propaganda. In the I. W. W. he was imbued with the dynamic forces of the method of "boring from within". From the Syndicalists he learned to belittle the pure and simple parliamentarism—parliamentary cretinism. In the American Federation of Labor he learned the great significance of the economic struggles of the workers. In the great Steel Strike, whose very guiding spirit he was, he mastered the art of directing great masses of workers. In Soviet Russia, during the sessions of the Third Congress of the Communist International, he acquired a thoro understanding of the dynamics of the proletarian revolution—the role of the Communist Party.

Field General of the Revolution

In the trial at St. Joseph we live thru a remarkable performance. Before our eyes grew before the leader of the Labor revolutionary workers. The capitalists, who are always the pace makers of the proletarian revolution, have themselves made it possible for this trial for all the working masses to look up to Foster and recognize him as their leader. Even before this event the American workers knew Foster. They knew him as a former syndicalist leader; as the organizer of the great Steel Strike; as the founder of the Trade Union Educational League, but they did not know him as the Communist revolutionist, as the mortal enemy of the Capitalist system.

This is a great historical trial. For the first time there appears before the American workers a man who is at once blood of the blood, flesh of the flesh of the working masses; a real leader of the masses, a real master, a trade unionist, a revolutionist, a Marxian and a Communist.

The bourgeois press must gnash its teeth; must grudgingly admit: "He gave the impression of sincerity and frankness . . . Foster gave the impression that he did not care much whether he went to jail or not. There does not seem to be any doubt that he is willing to sacrifice himself for the cause he believes in. And at the same time, the same New York Times must pale, and with teeth chattering with fear, grant that: "Foster made one think of the field general" of the revolution.

From every point of view the trial is a historical symbol. Foster, as the representative of the American militant workers, appears before the capitalist judiciary and a farmer jury will render the verdict on him. Here are arrayed before us the three most important classes of American society—the worker, the capitalist, and the farmer. The leader of the first, the master, a trade unionist, a revolutionist, a Marxian and a Communist, the defendant; the capitalist is the prosecutor; and the farmer will give the verdict. A historical symbol truly reflecting the historical situation! The working masses march on as the active forces of the revolution. The capitalists oppress these masses ever more fiercely thru the governmental powers of suppression. And the victory in this ever sharpening class conflict will go to that class which receives the support of the farmers.

We do not yet know whether in this first struggle between the advanced posts the farmers' jury will convict Foster: whether the capitalist conspiracy will be victorious; but Foster, free or jailed, the American revolutionary will, after St. Joseph, know that Foster is their leader. And the Workers Party salutes in his name its proud Red Flag of the Revolution!

Trial Bares Tyranny of Mine Guards

By McALISTER COLEMAN
(Staff Correspondent, Federated Press and "The Worker")

MARION, Ill.—Seventeen witnesses, the greatest number to take the stand in any one day of the present case, told of the deeds of Wm. J. Lester's gunmen at the second of the Herrin riot trials. They were farmers, miners, coal company officials, taxi drivers, store keepers, men and women from all walks of life, come to tell the jury about the manner in which a nonresident coal operator invaded a peaceful Illinois county.

Several of them swore that the fighting at the strip mine began June 21 when a machine gun on the mine wall, camouflaged by bushes, began sweeping the country side and mortally wounded Jordan Henderson, an unarmed union miner, the first to fall. Others testified to listening in on telephone conversations between Lester and Supt. McDowell, the day before the fighting. McDowell boasted that he could hold off a crowd reported to be coming from West Frankfort, Johnston City and Marion. "Let 'em come," he told his boss. "We can handle 'em. Some of 'em will never get here."

Farmers and miners picking berries in the vicinity of the mine, said they were stuck up by Lester's guards who came up behind them and dug rifles into their ribs.

There was a mass of testimony to the effect that as soon as the white flag appeared on the mine wall, the flag upon which the prosecution laid so much stress, men were shot along side of it and under it shooting away at the attacking forces in the woods.

Several witnesses told of being beaten and jerked out of autos by the mine guards, who stopped machines on the public roads near the mine and dragged their occupants up to the mine office for examination.

"Tell the ——— union men we're going to run this mine if we have to run it with blood," said McDowell to one of the captives. "Tell them to keep off this road or they'll have their ——— heads blown off. See that man out there" (pointing to a mine guard sitting outside the office with a rifle over his knees). "That's old Paddle Foot, he's a dead shot. He can kill a man a mile away."

McDowell showed this witness a machine gun which stood in the mine office, called it a "real" gun and said that it worked on a tripod.

Another witness told of being held up by a guard who kept shouting "I'm a man eater. I eats 'em alive. I love hot blood. Shoot his heart out and feed it to me."

When State Senator Glen for the prosecution asked, "You weren't really afraid, were you?" the witness answered emphatically: "I was so scared I could feel my hat crawling right up off my hair."

Asked to describe the "man eater" the witness said, "He was a mean, snaggle toothed fellow."

Communist International Sends Greeting to the "Freiheit" on Its First Birthday

Calling upon the militant Jewish workers of America to increase the circulation of the Jewish Communist daily, "Freiheit," to 100,000 for its second anniversary, the Communist International sent greetings to the First Annual Jubilee of the "Freiheit," held in New York City, Sunday, as follows:

"The Communist International congratulates 'The Freiheit' on its first birthday. The Jewish workers of America have long needed a militant organ like 'The Freiheit' to lead the struggle against the bourgeoisie and the reactionary labor officialdom and the yellow Socialists. The Communist 'Freiheit' is conducting a splendid fight against the treacherous 'Forward,' and in consolidating the 'left wing' forces for the emancipation of the American workers. The Communist International calls upon the militant Jewish workers to support 'The Freiheit' and bring its circulation to the 100,000 mark for its Second Anniversary."—

The cablegram was read to the masses gathered in the Lexington Opera House, Sunday. Hardly had Mossaye J. Olgin, editor of the "Freiheit" finished reading the cablegram, when cheers burst forth in the singing of "The International," followed by repeated salvos of cheering. There was renewed enthusiasm when it was voted to send return greetings to the Communist International at Moscow.

The Struggle in the Textile Industry

By JOSEPH MANLEY

The present struggle for higher wages raging amongst the Textile Workers of New England very well illustrates the crying need for solidarity in this great industry. The Textile Workers are permeated with a spirit of militancy, but lack the organizational strength to adequately express it.

In Fall River, Mass., a city that employs 38,000 cotton operatives, the Textile Council (a federation of six of the independent textile unions) is making a demand for a 15 per cent increase. The Textile Council while in conference with the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of Fall River, were offered an increase of 12½ per cent. The unions affiliated with the Textile Council are now calling meetings to act on the 12½ per cent offer. At the same time the United Textile Workers (the A. F. of L. union) has authorized a demand for a 20% per cent increase, and says it will enforce this demand, if necessary with a strike.

President William Wood, of the American Woolen Trust, has just set the pace for the whole Textile Industry, by increasing wages of his employes 12½ per cent. This increase was made in an attempt to forstall the terrible discontent existing amongst the textile workers, and is being followed with almost mechanical precision in all the great textile centers, both in the North and in the South.

Time after time have the Textile Workers in their many unions gone against this solid phalanx of employers, and time after time have they suffered a set back after most heroic struggles. At present there are but 100,000 organized workers in this great industry that have a total number of 1,600,000.

Few realize that there are over a score of competing unions, in the Textile Industry. These many separate organizations, even the some of the independents are loosely joined in a Federation, cannot meet the solidly organized employers.

The militants in the textile industry are awakening to this great need for solidarity, and are preparing to launch a tremendous drive for amalgamating their many organizations. This campaign will be inaugurated at the coming National Textile Amalgamation Conference, to be held in New York City, May 5th. All Textile Local Unions, Independent and A. F. of L. are invited to send delegates to this Conference.

They Are Hungry in Berlin

By ISRAEL AMTER
(Our European Staff Correspondent)

There is hunger in Berlin.

There is a window just above the entrance to a house. And in that window there stand a mother, a boy of about twelve and a girl of ten. They are as pale as wax. There seems to be oh blood in their bodies. They stand there counting, assorting and tying up little bundles of pictures. Their hands move fast. They hardly notice the passers-by, their eyes are riveted to their work. They do not speak, a smile does not escape them. They must work . . . or they starve.

The sound of a violin on the streets in the middle of the city . . . This is no ordinary fiddler . . . no old rake who has lived and fiddled away his talent and strength . . . It is a young fellow with the beautiful flowing hair that musicians affect.

He stands there in the cold of the night, hungry, fiddling an air from Tosca. The acoustics are fine. The sound travels far . . . He is a MUSICIAN.

But he stands there, hungry, getting alms that will provide him with a meal . . . .

And how many American girls, without an ounce of talent, waste the money that their American fathers steal from the American workmen . . . waste it taking lessons, while this poor boy, hungry and cold, plays into the night . . . for something to eat!

An actor stops me on the streets —Hinter den Linden, where the nabobs live. He begs help . . . You help him, tears stream down his face. He has eaten nothing for two days, the union gives him too little help. He cannot even ride home to his family . . . which probably, too, is starving.

And the blind, the war cripples, the gassed and the maimed . . . The war veteran, a cripple, walking down the principal thorofare with his wife on one side, his child on the other. Waxy, with hopeless eyes, stopping to look into your face . . . the look of a dog . . . Hunger, hunger, hunger, hopelessness and hunger.

It is the hunger that precedes a Revolution. It is the hopelessness that makes wild fighters of men . . . and of women.

They still laugh at Soviet Russia in Germany . . . Soviet Russia that had to fight thru war, destruction, counter-revolution and famine. This is capitalist Germany . . . with Social-democrats in the Government.

But the workers of Germany, with their wives and daughters in the homes, in the shops, offices and professions turned into prostitutes to get bread . . . the workers of Germany are hungry . . . .

It is the hunger that precedes Revolution . . .

Stinging Rebuke Hits Socialists in Chicago

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO.—Another stinging rebuke was administered the Socialist Party here when its candidate for mayor, William A. Thomas, received a bare 40,000 votes, the usual Socialist strength. William E. Dever, democrat, was elected with 387,961 votes.

The Socialists entered the campaign refusing to co-operation with the Workers Party and the Farmer-Labor Party in a united political front. The aldermanic candidates of all the working class parties were defeated in the February primaries.

Anthracite Miners Fight Wage Slash

(Special to "The Worker")

CLEARFIELD, Pa.—The union anthracite coal miners in Dist. No. 2, with headquarters here, have not sanctioned a cut in the scale of union wages and will not do so, despite the Lewis commission to end this unfair practice. Accordingly a brief was prepared by Atty. J. J. Kintner based upon evidence submitted in November, 1922 by the district officers before the commission.

Mr. Kintner presented this brief to the commission this month. Upon being questioned by the commissioners, Mr. Kintner said in effect that the miners would accept a wage reduction of 20 per cent if the assigned car was eliminated and continuous work was assured. This statement, by any other relating to wages, he had no authority to make. Mr. Kintner admitted that he had spoken on this subject without authority.

"I now learn that Acting President Murray has used his repudiated statement as a basis for a lengthy circular letter, dated March 22, implying that Dist. No. 2 was willing to consider wage reductions. Mr. Murray is very well aware that District No. 2 has consistently stood for a no wage reduction policy even under the most adverse conditions, and in large measure their drive on the non-union fields during the general strike made possible success and the maintenance of the present wage rate. We will not yield that which was so dearly bought."

Canadian Bosses Unite to Fight the Militant Mine and Steel Workers

(Special to "The Worker")

SYDNEY, N. S., Canada.—The Sydney Board of Trade today called on the Canadian Federal and Provincial governments to uphold "law and order" if the joint strike of the steel workers and the coal miners goes into effect in Cape Breton. This is said to be the first step on the part of the Canadian capitalists to try to stamp out any vestige of radicalism in Nova Scotia.

It is well known that the Nova Scotia coal miners maintain an unofficial adherence to the principles of the Red Trade Union International and that the heretofore unorganized steel workers were recently brought into the Union by the energetic efforts of Canadian militants, foremost among them being members of the Workers Party of Canada.

The rebels in this part of the country do not intend to rest until they have lined up all Labor into solid, class-conscious industrial unions, and they will not be frightened by any action which may be taken by the servile tool of the bourgeoisie, the Canadian Government and its cossack-like Mounted Police. As a result the work of organization and agitation is going on unabated and with renewed zeal.

Near-East Protest Meeting

Sunday, April 15th, the Near-East branches of the Workers Party are having a protest meeting at Bryant Hall, 6th Ave. and 40th St. The principal speaker of the day will be Captain Partein Hibben; also speakers in all the Balkan languages. Caleb Harrison will be the chairman.

This Week!

Just when the MacDonalds and the Snowdens, no doubt, felt they had killed all Communist sentiment within the British Independent Labor Party, along comes the party's annual conference and affiliation with the Communist International becomes the chief topic of debate.

It will be remembered that it was a large section of the British I. L. P. that joined with the British Socialist Party in forming the British Communist Party, which today contains all the really militant elements in the British labor movement.

The Anti-Soviet officialdom of the British I. L. P. was given the trouncing of its life when it dared assert that the Communist International did not speak for the Russian workers and peasants.

It was reported at the conference that 80 of the 144 Labor Party members of parliament are members of the I. L. P., which therefore must be held responsible for the knee breeches and the silk stocking policies of the parliamentary labor bloc. No wonder the membership of the I. L. P. is turning Communist.

Then, just to show its mettle, the conference disapproved these visits to King, Queen and Lady Astor. MacDonald will no doubt charge this to Moscow influence—another "Red Plot" against "Socialist" respectability.

Gompers Stands by Lewis

Sam Gompers has come to the support of his friend, President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, in the declaration against the nationalisation of the coal industry. Gompers has his views published in the reactionary weekly, "The Outlook." He thinks all the evils in the mining industry can be eliminated by "proper collaboration of both organized owners and organized workers." Gompers would be put he "owners" first, unless it is an admission that such collaboration would be, as it has always proven to be in the interest of the bosses. Gompers' alliance with the exploiters grows with each passing day.

Let "Socialists" Learn

It is going rather hard with the world's reactionaries these days. The liberal peasant government in Bulgaria has sentenced to life imprisonment six members of the Rasolavoff cabinet that held office when Bulgaria entered the world war. Another blow to a few archbishops, priests or rabbis.

One million dollars per month is the pocketbook ache that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., takes from labor in the oil industry thru his ownership of 7,638,390 shares in nine of the Standard Oil Trust tentacles. On Sundays John D., Jr., in church, thanks God for these rich gifts, while oil slaves over the world work on the Sabbath, as well as week days, in order that these blessings may be fulfilled. The time is rapidly approaching, however, when the oil slaves will seek blessings, not in Heaven, but upon this Earth, NOW for themselves.

"Chauve-Souris" in Repertoire

In the second bill of the repertory season with which Balieff's Chauve-Souris, under Morris Gest's direction, is winding up their stay in New York, included such tried favorites of this little Russian Theatre as "The Moscow Financees", "The King Orders The Drums To Be Beaten," "As In Front Of Our Gates" and "The Three Huntsmen", not to mention, of course, the perennially delightful "Parade Of The Wooden Soldiers".

Lovestone Lectures in Harlem

Harlem will have the opportunity to hear Jay Lovestone, author of "The Government as Strike-Breaker", who will hold a public lecture on the topic: "Problems of the Workers Party", on Friday evening, April 13th, at the Workmen's Circle House, 143 E. 103d St.

Militants in Needle Trades to Meet in National Conference

The call for the National Conference of all Needle Trades Militants, to be held in New York City, May 5th, has been sent out. It is as follows:

The influence of the militants in the American labor movement is assuming ever greater proportions.

In the Needle Trades the militants can with just pride claim the honor of being the pioneers of all advanced ideas in the trade union movement of America. As far back as 1913, they organized into various groups. No matter what the name, the purpose was fundamentally the same, to solidify the workers, wrest the power of the unions from a small number of officials and place it in the hands of the rank and file.

Never before has an opportunity of realizing these aims presented itself as at present. The experience of the needle workers during the last two years when because of their existence as separate Internationals, they were compelled to carry on heroic struggles in isolated unions against the combined strength of the employers. These struggles have demonstrated to ever greater and greater numbers, the crying need of amalgamating the separate International unions into one union of needle workers.

It is the duty of the militants to crystallize this sentiment in favor of amalgamation, and lead it into definite channels.

The movement for amalgamation in the needle trades is no longer confined to one city or any special territory. Wherever there is a local of needle workers, there you will find sentiment for amalgamation. The problem that confronts our movement is how to unite the scattered groups into a national and international movement.

The recent conventions of the Amalgamated, "International", and Furriers have proven, that the movement of militants, that is not nationwide in scope, and the activities of which are not unified and coordinated, cannot hope for success.

To formulate a definite program and plans of carrying on a great campaign for amalgamation; to clarify the aims and tactics of our movement, and coordinate the activities of all leagues, a National Conference of Needle Trades Militants has been arranged for New York City, May 5th. Leagues in the various needle trades centers must by all means be represented at this conference.

This National Conference will mark the first step in a movement, that will mean nothing short of welding together the present separate unions into one great organization of the needle workers. Let all militant needle workers rally to this call.

Red Factory Managers Razzed by the Workers

MOSCOW,—Thirty factory managers are looking for a job as a result of a contest just ended on Who is the Best Factory Manager, in and around Moscow. It was conducted by means of letters sent to Pravda, the Moscow daily, by workers in factories, of which were invited to describe and criticise their director from the standpoint of his management, his production record and his care of the workers under him. Thirty managers have been fired as a result.

A festive banquet in the corridors of the Pravda editorial headquarters was given to the manager-winners, together with the worker correspondents who had written the most intelligent letters. Archangelsk, manager of the largest cloth factory of the Moscow Clothing Trust, stood at the head of the list, and announced in a jesting speech that this new honor would be a great embarrassment to him, "Since now that I have a reputation to maintain as the best of the best, how will I ever dare refuse a worker anything?"

Rose Pastor Stokes Tours for Defense

Rose Pastor Stokes who is well known from coast to coast as a Party worker and able speaker will tour the Eastern States, beginning April 15, speaking on the Communist Defense in Michigan. Bridgeport has been the first to apply for a meeting. Comrade Stokes is one of the thirty-three under bail and one of the ten who voluntarily surrendered to the Michigan authorities.

The Michigan defense is one of the most dramatic episodes in the history of the class struggle in this country. The bold, defiant stand taken by the Communists in support of their principles must be told to the workers everywhere. Comrade Stokes attended the trial of Wm. Z. Foster and can tell the story from personal knowledge.

Applications for meetings from branches in the Eastern District must reach the National Office not later than April 10th.

The terms for her meetings are a collection for the defense fund to be taken up, out of which the expenses of the meeting will be paid. The balance to be turned over to the speaker for the defense fund.

Branches should apply at once for these meetings and help bring the lessons of these persecutions to the great masses of workers.

Join the Union!

Every Worker in the Union by May 1st, 1923

The Industrial Committee of Local New York has decided that every member of the Party, eligible to membership in a union, shall be in a union by May 1st.

One of our duties as Communists is to strengthen the organized labor movement. This can be done only when we are all active members of the union ourselves. "Amalgamation" is one of our slogans to strengthen the labor unions, but that alone, no matter how important, is not sufficient to put the union up to the necessary fighting strength.

Every union should have within its make-up an active body of fighting spirits that will make of the union the militant organization that can challenge successfully the enemies of the working class; and can command the respect of the millions of unorganized.

When this condition is reached, the class struggle in America will enter new and higher stages and organizing the unorganized will become a possibility.

Every militant in the union, is the first necessary step in this direction. If you are a militant and not merely "a dues paying member" of the Party, you will report immediately to the Branch Industrial Organizer who will check up every Party member in their respective branches as to union affiliation and activity. All reports are to be sent to the Industrial Department, Workers Party, 208 E. 12th St., New York City.

Down in Washington

Editor, The Worker:—At the last meeting of the League for Industrial Democracy here, Comrade Evans gave me the floor to announce the Cannon meeting. After I announced it, William V. Mahoney, (a blue-law "red"?") made a motion that "here after no Workers Party member be allowed to make announcements". Nobody seconded the motion.

One League member shouted to Mahoney, "Are you afraid of too much democracy?"

Comrade Evans then pointed out that it ill-behooved Socialists to take such an attitude, as they had too often suffered from such intolerance at the hands of the capitalists.

Several League members at the end of the meeting shook hands with Workers Party members and invited us to attend all of their meetings.—Edward J. Irvine.

Mine Union Militants in New Victory

By MARGARET UNDJUS
(Special to "The Worker")

FAIRMERSVILLE, W. Va. — Two years ago the International Union of the United Mine Workers of America inserted a clause into its constitution according to which all members of the Union must immediately transfer to locals having jurisdiction (colliery locals) over the mine in which they work. This meant that all independent and language locals were to be abolished.

During the two years, officials of District No. 9, in the anthracite fields, failed to carry this ruling of the international union into effect. Not until after the last convention of District No. 9, where certain language locals offered resolutions favoring reduction of salaries of the officials and other radical resolutions, did the officials take any steps to carry out the decision of the international union. By ignoring the ruling of the international union for two years and endeavoring to apply it only after discovering that certain language locals in District No. 9, awoke to the realization that officials of the union do not conscientiously support the miners in their struggles, the officials of District No. 9 aroused the antagonism of many of the language locals. Many miners are of the opinion that the motive of the officials is to disband the progressive language locals by transferring members of such locals to various conservative colliery locals.

Conventions of the opposition locals were called. The officials of District No. 9, were present at several of such conventions. The "leaders" at the head of this opposition movement, who control the conventions are of a "jelly fish" type. They have no concrete plans on which to base their work.

"We must show our teeth to the officials of the Union", is all they have to offer to the antagonized miners.

The intent of these "leaders" is secession from the Union. Only corrupt persons who under instructions work for the expulsion of progressive workers from their union or ambitious would be "leaders". who are not capable of leadership of the workers can get the way these opposition "leaders" are doing.

The miners of one of the language locals of Minersville are more keen in detecting the fallacies of officials of the Union than their brothers in other locals. These miners refuse to be blindfolded by these new "leaders", who favor secession from the Union. On March 28th, all their local meeting, after hearing the report of their delegates to the Mahanoy City, Pa., opposition convention, unanimously adopted a motion instructing the committee of the local to make out transfer cards to colliery locals for every member of the local. A motion to contribute $400 to the courageous Western Pennsylvania miners was unanimously carried. The news of the formation of a Progressive Miner's Group was received with great enthusiasm. Several hundred miners pledged to join the Progressive Miners Group and work in co-operation with the progressive miners in District No. 5 District No. 14 and other Districts.

Telegrama sent by Alex Howat and William Z. Foster urging the miners in District No. 9 to stay in the union and to carry on the fight within the organization, to co-operate with progressive miners in other districts broke the opposition sentiment against tranferring to the colliery locals in a large Mahanoy City local. Out of 80 opposition locals, 20 have withdrawn their delegates from the opposition convention. (There are 162 locals in District No. 9. Out of this number 74 are independent locals without representation on the grievance committees.)

The newly formed progressive Miners' Group in Minersville is determined to carry its message to miners in other locals of District No. 9.

The Progressive Miners have won a victory against a split in District No. 9 of the United Mine Workers of America.

Metal Trades T. U. E. L. will meet every second Saturday of the month at 208 E. 12th, Room 2. Next meeting Saturday, April 14th, 3 P.M.

Harding Returns from Florida—Yes, and Napoleon Came Back from Elba

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

Napoleon came back from Elba, and President Harding is coming back from Florida. Napoleon landed at Cannes, March 1st, 1815, and President Harding landed at the White House, March 4th, 1921.

Napoleon marched triumphantly to Paris, and President Harding is coming back with flying colors to the national capital. Napoleon, Bonaparte's banner, Napoleon, the Conqueror, was to prove first among peaceful politicians, no matter how acquisitive we may consider them. Warren Gamaliel Harding, the Ohio politician, was destined as the throne of this world by powerful political backing, in the shape of huge banking and industrial interests. Napoleon played with huge armies, sending hundreds of thousands to the slaughter. America's political czar plays golf where the sun's rays are the warmest while the conquest of the nations is planned from the office of J. Pierpont Morgan, in Wall St., N. Y. C.

In March, 1814, Napoleon suffered great military losses. Paris capitulated, the Emperor abdicated and fled the country, hooted by royalist mobs, seeking refuge for 11 months on the Island of Elba under British guns.

American capitalism, scored its greatest political victory in the election of Harding in 1920. But the President repudiated at the November, 1922, elections, stuck it out thru a hang-over congress and then fled to the warm sunshine of orange-growing Florida.

By all the promises of those political soothsayers who label themselves "progressives", Warren Gamaliel Harding, World-Caesar thru the growing power of the Almighty American Dollar, should now be coming back to his throne in Washington, a bumbled man, trying to sneak out of the 1924 republican party nomination for re-election. But the wish has usually been the father of the thoughts of Johnson, Borah and LaFollette. So it is now.

"Warren the Golfer" still stands ace high with the money lords, and the money bags of these same money lords control the Wall Street political parties. So Warren is coming back from Florida an ambitious man, seeking new triumphs on behalf of the bosses against labor.

His Imperial Lordship, Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, also seeking recuperation midst the balmy zephyrs of Florida's beaches, announced to the world that this Excellency, "Warren the Golfer", would be a candidate for re-election. Daugherty, thru the aid of his Sherlock Holmes, Detective William J. Burns, had discovered that "the country needs Harding". Yes, Workers of America, this Daugherty-Burns combination, that tried to smash the railroad and miners' union, discovered not only that the country needs Harding, but that "The country wants Harding", for another term.

So Harding has come back from Florida and he is going before the country, urged by his great financial backers, to make the demand that the "Open Shop" the big issue in the campaign.

With the Harding Houseboat Party, touring thru Florida, was Charles G. Dawes, former Director of the Budget, the Chicago banker, who helped put over the Landis award paving the way for the open shop in the Chicago Building Trades. Dawes was always with Harding whispering into his ears the business side of the war upon the Illinois Miners' Union, waged thru the trials at Herrin, Illinois.

We are indebted to the St. Augustine, Fla., correspondent of the New York Times for the information that, "Conversations with employers, bankers and railroad executives, who were spending the winter between here and Miami, have brought out a striking unanimity of opinion that if the two dominant political parties are to survive they must not escape the responsibility of meeting controversial issues. They appear to decree that the open Job is the clearest issue, the one least complicated by other considerations, and on which there can ,be no middle-ground opinion."

So that is settled. Harding is to be the dollar candidate in 1924. The considerations of labor's economic organizations is to be the issue, with the Republican Party in favor of their destruction. The planning and scheming has begun with Harding's return to the White House.

The year 1922 gave organized labor a taste of the union-smashing activities of the Harding-Daugherty republican administration. The labor crushing "Open Shop" is to be officially recognized by Washington. The demand for it is to be made the slogan of the 1924 campaign.

All this while the alleged spokesmen of labor have been flirting with these same political henchmen of Wall Street, and proclaiming that the time is not yet ripe for a third party, an independent class Labor Party of all workers.

If When Napoleon came back from Elba he ruled for a hundred days and then met his Waterloo, to end his time in exile on St. Helena.

There is but one power in America that can send the Hardings and the Daughertys, with the robber social system for which they stand, to their Waterloo and their St. Helena. That power is the solidarity of American labor. That solidarity is being developed, must be brought to great strength immediately under the slogans of "Amalgamation and the Labor Party".

Workers! Support the drive for amalgamation in your unions. Give all possible aid to the Labor Party Referendum of the Trade Union Educational League. Organize the unorganized!

That is our best possible preparedness campaign against the days ahead, when the Wall Street banking and industrial kaisers, thru their political puppets in Washington, will officially recognize the "Open Shop", and use every power of the government to force it upon the oppressed working masses.

Workers! Prepare during these dark days for the darker days ahead, so that the bright day of our emancipation may break soon with the passing of this utter blackness before the dawn.

Production Increasing in Russia

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

Altho the blockade, in its various aspects, still bears heavily upon Russia, its evil effects are steadily diminishing. The revolutionaries have pierced it definitely in its three essential features, commercial, financial, political. Now they are rapidly widening these break-through points. Soon the whole structure will collapse. We can say positively that the last blockade has been broken. This steel clamp, crushing and devitalizing, has been stricken from the heart of the Russian revolution.

Side by side with the breaking of the blockade goes a steady increase in Russian industrial production. Reporting to the 10th All-Russian Soviet Congress, Bogdanov, of the Supreme Economic Council, declared that in the past year production increases in the various industries range from 150 per cent to 400 per cent, which brings the general average of production in all industries up to about 25 per cent of pre-war times.

The ratio of increase gains with the passing months. Textiles are at 70 per cent of pre-war figures, and petroleum at about 50 per cent.

In 1921, the low point of production generally there were 1,000,000 poods of cotton yarn produced; in 1922 this was increased to 2,800,000. Coal has reached 34 per cent of 1914 figures, and Bogdanov declared the final crisis practically solved. In 1914 car loadings, all kinds of freight, averaged 30,000 daily. By 1918 these had fallen to 6,000. In 1921 they mounted to 9,500, and in 1922 they went up to 11,500. Now the increase is taking place faster than ever. In 1918 production of gold stopped altogether; in 1922 it reached 30,000 pounds, and in 1923 at the lowest estimate it will be 50,000. Production in the heavy metal industry, while showing 100 per cent improvement in the past year, still lags and is very inadequate.

Joffe Gives Interview to "The Worker"

By GERTRUDE HAESSLER
(Staff Correspondent, Federated Press and "The Worker")

TOKIO.—Considering it of great importance to get workers' news to the workers, A. A. Joffe, Russian envoy extraordinary, and plenipotentiary to China, on an earthstopping tour to The Federated Press and "The Worker" in spite of the fact that he is very sick, and has refused to see other correspondents, including reporters. Joffe was ill in bed when he answered the questions put to him.

In touching on the recent conference at Changchun between Russia and Japan, he represented Russia, Joffe said: "Some good has resulted from the Changchun conference, the neither party realized its definite aims. The Japanese on one hand were at last made to understand to a small extent what new Russia is and in what tone one can speak to Russia. The Russians on the other hand, have become a little better acquainted with Japan."

Joffe's secretary, Sergius C. Shvarsalon, discussed at some length after the interview, in Joffe's name, many aspects of the Russian problems of today. He was particularly interested in telling of the educational system of Russia, which is so arranged that the boys and girls are glad to go to school and do not have to be driven to it.

He claims that many of the former capitalists of Russia, who lost their wealth during the revolution, are coming back, sincerely desirous of working for the best interest of the present Russian government. They do manual labor in many instances. Their skill, acquired in training, they are given technicians' work in the mills and factories. Gradually good will is being restored and people who at first opposed the soviets are becoming adjusted and cooperate with the government.

Shvarsalon was an officer in the Russian imperial army during the great war, and was wounded in the leg. When the revolution came he quickly found an important niche to fill, for with his education and training, his command of the important languages of the world, he has become indispensable to Joffe, as secretary in the work being done to promote amicable relations among the Far Eastern people.

THE BOSS GETS SIX-WEEK VACATION

EDITOR, WORST BOSS STORIES:—For thirty-two years I have operated all kinds of wood-working machinery and had all kinds of bad bosses. But the worst boss is the one NOW employing me and others. This boss is a woman who has the permission to go to the country for a week.

Another comrade working in the same planing mill, had permission to go to the sea-shore for three days. I was nine days "Down on the Farm" and my fellow-comrade stayed at the seashore seven days. After crowding the whole summer into the nine days, I came back to work for mill." That would be possible, if the present system of production would be scrapped, and all workmen produce for use, instead of for profits. What fellow-pays me is the "Worst Boss Ever." This winter when the majority of the men are wondering when and where they will get their next bucket of coal, our boss has deliberately gone to California for six weeks. And what makes him the "Worst Boss"? He never asked permission. The capitalistic system gives him that right. He can enjoy his vacation knowing his profits are assured. If it was not for the "Worst Boss" we ALL could go to California.—H. F., Philadelphia, Pa.

"My Bosses"

Editor, "Worst Boss Stories":—Many people may not think that my boss is a boss, but she is—and a mean one too. My boss, or rather bosses are my teachers.

Sickness means nothing to them. I have to work twice as hard for being sick. They say in answer to my objections, "When I am sick I have to do the same." They waste time in class by preaching on subjects which do not interest me, or have no connection with the classroom, and then send me home with a pile of lessons in order to make up for it. Their reason for this is obvious. They do this so that I might not find time after school hours to think of such naughty, forbidden things as reading "The Worker" and the "Liberator" or to go to meetings where speakers tell the truth. My boss does not let me disagree with her about current topics. Her word is law.

The more I adhere to my convictions, and the more I argue, the lower my marks get. Therefore I shall eventually become a jellyfish and get the highest marks. My teacher tells me about freedom of speech in American History, but does not see any reason for my availing myself of that privilege. My teacher does not care that I have five others beside her, but gives me two or three hours worth of lessons and lets me fight it out with the rest of them. My orthodox friends are in for trouble. I escape. When they must stay away for religious reasons, the boss finds it exceedingly necessary to give an examination on that very day. I call that freedom of religion.

Sometimes I cannot blame her. She earns her living this way. But most of the time I find that the boss, with all her intelligence and learning, is a willing and loyal tool of the system which will always find a boss for me.—M. S., Washington, D. C.

"Tranquillity" in England

By JACK CARNEY

The present government in Britain rose to power with the rallying cry of "tranquillity", in opposition to the plea for war against Turkey made by the Lloyd George Cabinet.

As to how much tranquillity there is in Britain, under the Bonar Law regime, may be judged by the critical situation prevailing in the industrial field, where over 30,000 farm hands are resisting a reduction of wages from 12 to 11 cents per hour and an increase of hours to fifty-four per week.

On the top of the farm strike comes the announcement of a lockout of half a million building workers and the decision the National Union of Railwaymen executive has been instructed by a delegate conference of the union to declare a national strike in event of a war bonus of $1.50 being taken away from the shopmen.

The miners are also suffering from the effects of the "tranquility" of Mr. Bonar Law, according to the following question recently asked in the British parliament, by a Labor member for a mining constituency: "Is the Prime Minister aware that a further reduction in wages starts in Durham today, that the people there are going without proper food and clothing, and that there is terrible distress?"

That the situation is not very promising is seen in the announcement of the proposed government amending unemployment doles. The government realizes that to withdraw the dole immediately would precipitate revolution, as it proposes to grant the unemployment benefits for a certain period and then the unemployed person will go without food for a few weeks. By increasing the weeks without the dole the dole itself will be gradually reduced.

Following a joint deputation from the National Union of Agricultural Laborers', the Workers' Union and the Farmers' Union, visited the British premier, Bonar Law. He informed them that he could not offer them any hope. He stated that the government was not in a position to do anything, altho he knew that the wages of the farm laborers were as low as $6.25 per week for fifty hours work. Yet two weeks previous the government voted $45,000,000 to carry on a military adventure in Mesopotamia.

There is no hope of an increase in the standard of living of the British workers, for such a hope implies an increase in trade and that is not with, in the immediate view of things. British labor faces a problem no less different to that of the French, Italian, German and American workers. The country is overloaded down with war debts, find themselves compelled to reduce wages in order to obtain trade, and out of the war has come that ghastly paradox whereby skilled workers gave up their lives to drive the German workers down a standard of living that beggars description.

As a result the low standard of living obtaining in Germany the British employers are up against it, They must meet this German competition and they can only meet it one way and that is by placing their goods on the market on equal terms. In other words by reducing the cost of production, that is the standard of living of the working class.

That the British working class is growing restless is seen in the recent political victories gained by the labor party in such reactionary strongholds as Liverpool, where for the first time in history labor has sent a working man to parliament.

On the industrial field there is a growing demand for amalgamation. Solidarity on the industrial field and continued victories on the political field foretell which way the workers are travelling. At the present time they are passing thru a stage that all workers pass thru, a stage in which they believe that the position is more effective than the lancet. They will pass thru this stage and become disillusioned and finally will turn to the Communist party, thoroly purged of any faith in the methods of reformists and accept the only solution—the establishment of a social order where in those who serve society rule society.

Labor Fights Joint Action With Bosses

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.
(Staff Correspondent Federated Press and "The Worker")

BERLIN.—There is a conflict going on behind the scenes in the German trade union movement over the question of aid to the suffering populations in the Ruhr valley.

When it became evident that the Ruhr population was in for hard times, due to the fact that the industry there is shot to pieces, that in many places postal, telephone and telegraph service has been interrupted, and railway service effected owing to the refusal of German railwaymen to work under French orders, a national collection on a grand scale was undertaken, which became known under the name "Ruhrhilfe."

For the administration of this fund, it was suggested that a committee be formed, on which there were to be representatives in equal numbers of labor and of capital. On the labor side, the General Federation of Free Trade Unions, as the largest labor body in Germany, was to have chief representation, tho also the Catholic and the Democratic unions were to be represented.

The General Federation accepted the invitation, and it has since endeavored to persuade every worker to sacrifice one hour's wages to the Ruhr cause. The daily newspapers of the Social-Democratic party, working in close cooperation with the trade union officials, supported the move by daily appeals to the workers to do their bit.

The communist members of the federation objected. They said they could not support a movement in which the bosses and the wage earners joined hands for nationalistic purposes. They agreed that the workers in the Ruhr must have support, and they also agreed that the French must be opposed. But they held that the workers must stand their own ground without joining hands with "Brother Capital."

Next the leader of the largest single union within the General Federation, Robert Dissmann, president of the metal workers' union, which numbers some 1,600,000 members, objected. He is a former Independent Socialist and a man of radical tendencies. He, too, objected to a joint fund administered with the employers. When him went a tremendous following, so that a rather lively fight has ensued between him and the group now in control of the federation.

World War Veterans in War on Fascisti Here

MINNEAPOLIS. — The World War Veterans, with headquarters in this city, have issued a warning against the Fascisti in America, which says in part.

"You comrades recall the bales of empty promises that were made to us in 1917. You also recall to date we have received nothing but these hypocritical promises. It was just thru such means that the powers that be found it impossible to organize ex-service men of Italy into an organization known as the Fascisti. They have set up a dictatorship there a hundred percent under the control of the financial interests and have sent their agents to America to organize the Italians, and others at a later day we are told.

"For what reason? Just this, comrades; the powers of Italy cannot fulfill those promises which they were to place extraordinary burdens on themselves. This, quite naturally, they will not do. They dare not further oppress their people or revolution would be sure to come, so they seek for new fields where somebody can be made to bear the burden. So they agents come to America and tell what a wonderful industrial program Italy is about to undertake, how engineers from the United States are already on the job, and with the International Chamber of Commerce in convention there.

"The financial powers of America look with greedy eyes upon the industrial program as painted by the Fascisti. Internationalists, every one of them, when it yields them gold."

Hit Officials Who Stood by Lewis "Gang"

(Special to "The Worker")

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Just a year ago, the Pennsylvania district witnessed remarkable and unexpected action which resulted in a few days in an almost complete walk-out on the part of the membership of the miners who had been considered unorganizable.

Those of this number who were starved back to work-weak with the fire of unionism still burning in their hearts and great discontent has been reported to exist among the newly imported men.

As nuclei for a strike this year exist the dozens of groups, including hundreds of men who were locked out by the operators and are still in the region. Consequently there have been persistent rumors for weeks that there would be another strike.

That the operators feel that these rumors are very likely to prove true is indicated by the prohibition this past week of all miners meetings in Connellsville, the city in Fayette County from which the Connelsville Coke Region takes its name, and which was the center of the strongest spirit of resistance in the last strike.

Charlerol Repudiated Burgess

Events have already shown that the actions of Pat Fagan and his "pay-roll gang," in disrupting the meeting of miners at Charleroi, March 18, and keeping Alexander Howat from exposing the crimes in Kansas and in the coke region of the International officials of the miners union, will prove a boomerang to the machine. Numerous local unions of the miners have already voted funds to assist in defraying the expenses of another meeting for Howat at Charleroi and are making careful preparations to prevent the gang from staging any exhibitions of back-alley mendacity at future meetings. Even those miners who were "on the fence" as to Howat's case have become enthusiastic in their support of him in view of the "gang's" evident desperate fear of his speaking. It has been authoritatively stated that at the Canonsburg meeting of March 11, and which the "gang" unsuccessfully tried to disrupt, 40 per cent were Lewis men at the beginning but Howat men at the end.

The sympathy for Howat and resentment against the "gang" has been accompanied by a revulsion of feeling against the disgraceful and cowardly actions of the Charleroi Burgess and the police force, who went back on their duty and pledged to promptly stop disorder in the meeting by ejection if necessary.

Instead they permitted the "gang" to create all the turmoil desired and then stopped the meeting just at the moment the collection was to be taken. This virtual assistance to the machine was so flagrant as to give rise to the report that the action of the Burgess was all arranged for by the "gang" in advance.

To the credit of the workers of Charleroi, it is said that they have decisively repudiated the actions of the police department. This department had been for some time getting more and more into bad repute because of its apparent inability to keep down gambling, bootlegging and other vice. Its behavior at the March 18th meeting proved to be the last straw, and on the following Thursday, March 22, the Committee of 100, of Charleroi, held a public Mass Meeting on the question of the Police Department, which was attended by over 400 people, including a large number of miners. The chairman, Rev. Lake, called on William Guiler, a miner and Chairman of the March 18th meeting, to make the second speech. Guiler minced no words, but accused the burgess and the policemen of violating their oath of office, by permitting the "Mine Workers' Officials, with the aid of a gang of roughnecks, hoodlums and stool-pigeons" to create a tumult and break up the meeting. Guiler was received both before and after his speech with prolonged applause.

William Feeny, International Organizer of the Miners' Union, and one of the chief disrupters of the March 18th meeting, made a sickly attempt to discredit Guiler by stating that the meeting had been in charge of a committee wearing "big red badges."

A resolution was enthusiastically adopted, with but one dissenting vote, calling upon the Charleroi Borough Council to remove from office the Burgess and policemen-for violation of their oaths of office in failing to prevent and suppress vice and crime and interference with the rights of free assemblage and free speech.

Cannon Gets Big Ovation in New York

James P. Cannon, chairman of the Workers Party, was given a big ovation at the Central Opera House, New York City, Friday night, March 30. This was his first public appearance in New York since returning from Russia. He came to the New York meeting direct from a tour of the New England states, and preparatory to starting on his western tour to the Pacific Coast.

Cannon spoke on "Russia Today," and made a great impression with his interesting narrative of experiences during his six month's stay in the Soviet Republic.

"The story of Soviet Russia for the first four years after the revolution was a story of desperate struggle against tremendous odds," said Cannon.

"The fight of the Russian workers did not end with their victory over the bourgeoisie within Russia. The Capitalist class of the entire world came to the aid of Russian capitalism. The Russian workers were compelled to fight the whole capitalist world.

"The Workers' Republic was blockaded and shut off from the world. Counter-revolutionary plots and uprisings inside of Russia were financed and directed from the outside. Mercenary invading armies, backed by world capital, attacked Soviet Russia on all sides. On top of all this came the terrible famine which threatened to deal the final blow. Against all these enemies—the civil war, the blockade, the intervention and the famine, the Russian workers, led by the Communist Party, fought, and fought successfully.

"In those four years Soviet Russia indeed went "through the shadows." But now, after five years of the revolution, we can tell a brighter story. In 1922 Soviet Russia began to emerge from the shadows and started on the upward track. The long and devastating civil war was at an end and the counter revolution stamped out. The great famine was conquered. The last of the invading foreign armies—except the Japanese in the Far East—had been driven from Russian soil; and the Workers' Government, freed from war necessities, was enabled, for the first time, to turn its efforts and energies to the great constructive task of building a new Russia on the ruins of the old.

"While I was yet in Russia the Red Army drove the Japanese out of Vladivostok and set up the Soviets again. And before the Fourth Congress of the Communist International was ended, we had the joy of hearing Comrade Lenin state that all the territory of Russia was at last living in peace under the Red Flag of the Soviets."

Can't Wear White Collars?

(Special to "The Worker")

REVERE, MASS.—In spite of the fact that he had listened to the address on "Russia Today!" by James P. Cannon here, Henry J. Skeffington, former U. S. immigration commissioner, broke loose the next day before the St. Mary's C. T. A. Society, at Lynn, with a tirade attack on Soviet Russia and Communists.

The temper of his remarks may be judged from this anti-Communist declaration, "They don't tolerate cleanliness. If you are caught wearing a white collar, they stand you up against a wall and shoot you." Other statements were just as laughable.

Local comrades got Skeffington to subscribe to "The Worker", so that, if he cares to read, he may become better informed in the future.

COMRADES:—The period originally set for the sale of the "Make The Party Grow" stamp has passed, but the reports thus far received do not show the returns which the National Office should have received if every branch had waged a campaign to have each member purchase a "Make the Party Grow" stamp.

On account of this situation the Central Executive Committee has decided to extend the period for the sale of the "Make the Party Grow" stamp for another month.

We ask of each branch that it make this month count in providing the means of carrying the constructive work of the party organization. The "Make the Party Grow" stamp was issued to finance the new party activities—field organizers, speakers, work among the farmers. The work along these lines has begun. We are securing good results. The continuance of the work depends upon every member contributing 50 cents for it thru the purchase of a "Make the Party Grow" stamp.

In order that April may count big in getting results we urge every party branch to take the following action: Appoint a committee of three, which should include the financial secretary. Have this committee examine the books of the branch and find out which members have purchased a "Make the Party Grow" stamp. Have the committee make a list of those who have not yet purchased this stamp, and bring the matter to the attention of these members.

It should be a matter of pride for every branch to get a hundred per cent return from its members on the sale of the "Make the Party Grow" stamp. The National Organization has not asked for a contribution before, which will mean as much to the organization as the money secured from the "Make the Party Grow" stamps. The party is facing a great opportunity to strengthen its organization and to increase its influence. It must send workers into the field to achieve these results.

What has already been done shows the great possibilities before us. A hundred per cent return from the sale of the "Make the Party Grow" stamp will enable us to reap even a greater harvest.

Take notice at once, comrades. Find out what the situation is in your branch, and then see that during the month of April your branch becomes one of those which has sold a "Make the Party Grow" stamp to each member.

That will make the party grow!

Fraternally yours,

C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary.

Hotel Owners Fear Radicals

As a result of the intensive agitational and organizational campaign being carried on by the Amalgamated Food Workers among the Hotel Workers, R. A. Muschenheim, of the Hotel Astor, at the quarterly meeting of the Hotel Association of New York scared the plute hotel owners with the announcement that "agitators" were organizing the slaves in the industry, and warned the bosses against the union. Let the workers keep on organizing until we have scared the bosses off the earth!

Two Labor Defense Dates

This is to notify all labor and radical organizations that two Monster Defense Affairs are being planned by the Labor Defense Council. On Saturday evening, May 12th, there will be a Spring Festival and Dance at Webster Hall, and on Sunday, August 5th, a picnic will be held at Fuhrer's Elmhurst Park. Propose Plan for Unity of the Negroes

By JEANETTE PEARL.

Six Negro "Civic" Organizations responded to the Call for a United Front of Negroes jointly by the National Equal Rights League and Prof. Kelly Miller, dean of Howard University. They were represented by 16 delegates who attended the preliminary conference held in New York City. The Call adopted was as follows:

"The world today has come to a critical period of its existence. Our race likewise has reached a brutal situation. The promises of athelioration and of full citizenship so easily made during the critical period of the Great World War have failed of fulfillment. In this time of readjustment there is growing a very menacing spirit of animosity against the race and a determination to thrust the Negro down into the most servile and degrading status and to maintain him there forever.

"Now, while world readjustment is in progress and when every other oppressed group is exerting itself to the utmost to gain its rights and liberties, the Negro race must bestir itself, must concentrate its best thought and energy to withstand the terrible onslaughts made against it and secure its due and rightful status—equal manhood rights and opportunities in every department of life. The Race must be stimulated to utilize all available opportunities or constructive endeavor and must be brought into harmonious working relationship with the white race.

"The need is urgent, may, therefore, the assembling of a National All-Race Conference to consider the present position of the race, to ferret out and unmask the hostile forces arrayed against it, to formulate a plan of defense and protection, to discover the forces, agencies and organizations which may be utilized in that defense, to effect a United Front of the Race, and to devise ways and means for a full and complete emancipation.

"The attention of the Conference must be focussed upon the following Race prejudice; Legal discrimination; Economic Exploitation; Racial Self-Respect; Religious awakening; Moral and Social Betterment; Co-operation within the Race and between the races; Political Action; Industrial Betterment. Also such as: Lynching; Ku Kluxism; Segregation; Disenfranchisement; Unequal Enforcement of law and Peonage.

A detailed call specifying time and place will be issued later by the Committee of Arrangements. Every organization should begin at once to move in this direction, and the attention and energy of the Race should be centered upon the success. of this conference. To this end we call on that race should at last achieve that improvement of its status for which we all hope and strive.

African Blood Brotherhood, Richard B Moore, W. A. Domingo, Otto R. Huiswood, Frieda S. Wayne Brandon, Geo. A. Schuyler; National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, James Weldon Johnson, Robert W. Bagnall, Richetta G Randolph; National Equal Rights League, James L. Neill, Mathew A. N. Shaw, Rev. Monroe Trotter; National Race Congress, Kelly Miller; International Uplift League D. H. R. Campbell.

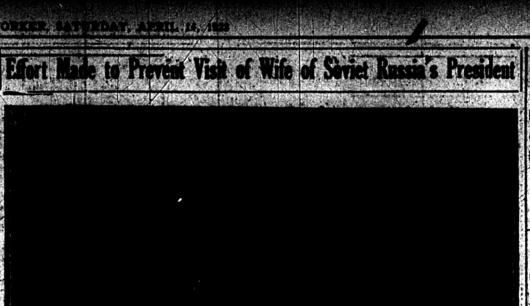
The preliminary conference was opened with addresses by Cyril Briggs, Prof. Kelly Miller, Richard B. Moore, Jas. Weldon Johnson, and Dr. Mathew A. N. Shaw presided, and Cyril Briggs acted as secretary.

They spoke on the status and difficulties of the Negro in the United States and other countries.

The time is past due for Negroes to silently and meekly accept discrimination fostered by racial prejudices. On the contrary the Negro has been relegated to a position of inferiority in modern society and in order to keep him in that inferior position, intensive efforts have been multiplied against him, so that the Negro is not only more readily exploited, but also more easily used by the struggle of labor against the white worker.

The Negro is now called upon by the leaders of his own race to cease being a submerged element in existing society; to no longer meekly accept poverty, discriminations and bitter outrages.

Effort Made to Prevent Visit of Wife of Soviet Russia's President



The Woman Patriot Publishing Co., of Washington, D. C., has again come to the front. It tried to prevent Isadora Duncan landing in her native country. It joined in a petition to Attorney General Daugherty to investigate a long list of Communists and Communist sympathizers. And now it is urging that efforts be taken to prevent the visit to this country of Ekaterina Ivanova Kalinin, wife of Michael Kalinin, President of the Russian Soviet Republic. Comrade Kalinin has been granted permission to come to this country to make a tour for the relief of Russia's orphans. The above picture shows Comrade Kalinin with her husband studying a map of Soviet Russia during the height of the famine. The insert shows two types of the Russian peasants caught in the famine, but who fought thru it to victory. There is an ever-growing Communist sentiment among the peasants.

This American Democracy; A Capitalist Dictatorship

"Many of our people are convinced that the Constitution was intended to aid the rich and powerful; that it affords unwarranted immunities to the railroads and is an instrument of oppression to the poor . . .

"We are convinced that if it should be submitted to a vote a large number of our citizens would vote in favor of abolishing the Constitution entirely."

From the report of the Special Committee of the American Bar Association, Federal Judge Martin J. Wade of Iowa, Chairman.

By JAY LOVESTONE

An understanding of the nature and structure of the American Government is indispensable to an understanding of the class conflict in which America is being more and more engulfed.

In every country where the means of production and exchange are owned by the capitalists, the employers of labor have in their hands an immensely organized power of oppression. This is the STATE. In America, where capitalism is most highly developed and the capitalists are safely entrenched, the employers of labor in control of a very powerful State having a gigantic governmental apparatus of many ramifications.

This State is the unified and centralized power of the whole employing, ruling class. Thru their State the capitalists are able to enforce the law and order of profits—maintain the present system of the exploitation of the workers.

The employers' State, the capitalist State, whether it be democratic or monarchical in form, is an intricate machine of oppression. It grips every walk of life. No worker can avoid its heavy hand. The National, State and Municipal Legislatures, the Executive Departments, the courts, the army, the navy, police, spies and detective bureaus, private gunmen and scab-herding agencies, the Employers' ex-soldier organizations, the Ku Klux Klan, the Chambers of Commerce, the numerous Manufacturers' Associations, the press, the church, the schools, the theatres, and the dominant political parties serve as extra-legal tentacles of the State stretching out in all directions.

In the United States

American capitalism is maintained by what is perhaps, today, the most gigantic organ of oppression. Vigor and dash mark its brutality, which is painfully prompt and sure in overcoming the enemy of the capitalist class—the working class. The long and severe prison sentences handed out to the leaders of the workers, "Government by injunction," military crushing of strikes, disenfranchisement of workers on account of color or birthplace, the removal or assassination of governmental officials even suspected of being sympathetic to the workingmen, tarring and feathering, kidnapping and lynching, raids and deportation, poisonous propaganda and fraudulent learning, a prostituted church, the killing and wounding of hundreds of thousands in war, ruthless exploitation, and denial of the rights of assembly, speech, and press to the workers—these make up the bountiful crop of "the greatest democracy in the world". Our "democracy" crushes the workers with an incomparable readiness and fervor. In theory, the United States Government is a model of the "pure and abstract" capitalist democracy preserved at the cost of the lives of ten million workingmen. In practice, the United States Government is the model servant of the employing class.

Our exploiters and oppressors have raised a halo about the American Government. Thru their ownership of the press, schools, churches and countless other organs of information and misinformation, they can strongly influence the minds of the workers. The average American honestly believes all the fantastic stories about the great kindness and holy glory of our "democracy". He is ready to die for it. The workingman's ideology is largely a product of his employer's skilful propaganda spread by the newspaper, church, motion picture and school room.

The reactionary trade union bureaucrats and their sycophantic allies, the reform-socialists, have rendered admirable service to the capitalists by strengthening the faith of the workers in the whole governmental machinery of the employers' State.

Insure Against Revolution

GLASGOW, Scotland.—J. Jones, Labor member of parliament, speaking at Glasgow, said the workers today are in revolt against a system which gives 15 000 pounds yearly to a duke, while the government can only afford 15 shillings' weekly for workers idle against their will. He declared that the unemployment dole is state insurance against unemployment but against revolution.

Fascisti in Mexico Force Labor Unity

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE
(Special to "The Worker")

MEXICO CITY.—The threatening Fascisti movement of Mexico is forcing a United Front of all factions in the Mexican labor movement.

I have already reported a strike of the American-owned Mexican Sewer Pipe Company, in which the pro-labor government of the municipality of Tacuba had arrested 60 scabs attempting to enter the factory. The company complained to the American Embassy and the workers responded by extending the strike, which had already lasted five weeks, to the general offices of the Company, many miles from the factory and situated in the heart of Mexico City.

In broad daylight at two o'clock in the afternoon while the general offices of the Company were closed for the afternoon siesta (all workers here get two or three hours or more for lunch) the pickets arrived, put up a red and black flag, the usual emblem of the Labor Federation hung over buildings were strikes are being conducted, and when General Manager French and his staff came back from their midday meal, they found their entrance barred. French went to the police who told him he would enter the office at his own risk. Being a citizen of the United States, he immediately went to "our" embassy.

The red and black flag continued to fly in the heart of the business district of Mexico City, a fearful portent to other business houses, until the Fascisti took a hand in the matter. They attacked the pickets and tore down the flag.

The Fascisti Party of Mexico is numerically not very strong and the Mexican labor movement was making preparations to "clean up" the Fascisti when the strike was suddenly terminated by a victory of the workers. But not before statements had been issued by various leaders of the labor movement to the effect that both factions of the movement, the so-called "Red Unions" and "Yellow Unions" would unite forces if necessary against the Fascisti.

One of the prominent leaders of the "yellow" or majority unions has given an interview to the press in which he declared:

"We have in it: past ignored the Fascisti movement because we considered it too insignificant to merit our attention. But if it tries any more stunts like this, it will find that the Red and the Yellow unions, whatever may be their differences, can unite against this common enemy."

Fight Jingoism in the Schools

BRISBANE, Queensland.—The labor government of Queensland has prohibited the saluting of the flag and the recital of a loyalty ritual by the school children in the state schools. The Labor minister for education said that the Labor government was determined to have no jingoism in the schools. He added that some of the school teachers went "over the odds" in their jingoism and it was time they were brought to a realisation of what their proper duties were as educators of the young.

Soviet Russia Fights Bootleggers

By ANISE

(Staff Correspondent, Federated Press and "The Worker")

MOSCOW.—Every day the war on bootlegging and vice gathers strength in Russia. The front pages of the papers are full of projects and suggestions for getting rid of this evil.

Ruthless publicity is the order of the day in Russia. Men written in to the papers giving addresses and names of bootlegging establishments, and these are subsequently raided. To add insult to injury, occasionally the government-owned moving picture man travels around with the police, and after the victims are caught, he makes them go thru the motions of the discovery and arrest, in order to take their pictures for use in anti-booze propaganda. I have seen several such pictures, in which the victims were registering terror" with all the skill of a good actor.

Our Program Stirs Tools of Steel Trust

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

(Special to "The Worker")

AMBRIDGE, Pa.—George Lunen, federal government agent, who snoops around this district getting police officials of small towns to prefer charges which the federal authorities dare not make themselves, got busy here recently. When arrests are made the above self styled "experts" on radicals testify against them.

Three of our Croatian comrades were the first of such tactics on the part of federal agents in this town, owned lock, stock and barrel by the American Bridge Co., a subsidiary of the U. S. Steel Corporation. The following are the names of the arrested: Geo. Maich, Paul Abradovich and Joe Pernat. They were arrested for distributing Workers Party Program, and practically held incommunicado for three days, while they were grilled by above named federal agent, who has nothing to do with state affairs.

The district office on learning of their arrest immediately dispatched Comrade Max Lerner to investigate the matter. Upon Lerner's inquiry as to the cause of their arrest he was refused information. On demanding to know he was ordered out of the town and given 15 minutes to do so. Once again he demanded to know the legal basis for the order. "My law," the defender of the law replied, and instantly placed him under arrest, charging him with "interfering with an officer."

Under federal agent George Lunen's direction he was systematically searched, even to his shoes and stockings; they also attempted to turn the lining of his coat in their ambitious effort to "find" something. As usual "sleuth" George Lunen found no incriminating evidence. Lerner was held for 28 hours and later released upon the payment of $3.90 in costs, after being found guilty. The three other comrades were released on $3,000.00 bail each, charged with violating the state sedition law. This charge carries with it a maximum sentence of 20 years and $10.000 fine.

The village policeman appeared as the prosecutor at the hearing, claiming that the pamphlet "stirred up the people", and also charged that the distribution by Boardman Robinson, on the fourth page of the Program, was also seditious. The defense desired to be enlightened how a cartpon, showing an individual in the act of laying bricks, can be misconstrued as seditious. The "prosecutor" apparently, was not a pedagogue, and refused the enlightenment, but insisted in his claim. He was sustained by the Squire in his misconstruction of the cartoon.

Fight Tyranny in Ohio

BELLAIRE, Ohio.—The organized workers of Bellaire and vicinity have officially formed the John Buksa Defense Committee to take up the active work in the defense of John Buksa, a member in good standing of Yorkville, O., local of the United Mine Workers, and secretary of the Yorkville South Slavic Branch, Workers Party, recently arrested in Wheeling, W. Va., for circulating the official program of the Workers Party, a direct violation of his constitutional rights as a naturalized citizen.

Local No. 1840 U. M. W. of A., has donated $100.

East Liverpool, O., workers report they are taking up a collection, and urge their fellow workers at other points along the Ohio river in the Wheeling-Bellaire district to follow their example.

Zepliak or Gregor

There is a great tumult in the world about an archbishop. He is faced with death for plotting against the life of the Russian Workers' Republic. Kept statesmen from Warsaw to Washington utter frantic pleas "in the name of humanity" that he may live. The Pope of the Catholic Church in Rome, demands his liberation "in the name of God." Such is capitalism's worry over Archbishop Zepliak. It rallies to the support of one of its greatest props—RELIGION—in order that the Dollar Temple may not collapse.

We have not heard that the Roman pope has protested against the slaughter of thousands of workers slain by the Italian Fascisti Dictatorship, nor the Horthy Terror against labor in Hungary, both inspired by his religion's ethics. Mussolini blesses his murders of workers under the Popels benediction.

And so at home. Hughes, Harding and the rest, hands dripping blood, must have had a difficult time of it writing their protests of state to the Russian Soviet Regime, lest the paper they wrote on be not stained red. There is the blood of E. C. Gregor railroad worker, hanged by a chamber of commerce "law and order" mob to a railroad bridge at Harrison, Ark. No voice has been raised by hypocritical bosses' church or state against this murder. That was a life taken that capitalism might live, that the most barbarous social system the world has yet known might endure a little longer. He was faced with no charges. He was given no trial. He died a martyr to labor's cause.

Capitalism recognizes its own in Archbishop Zepliak, and it is naturally putting up a fight for him. Capitalism sees in Gregor and his kind, enemies to its continued existence, and these may be murdered and the assassins blessed by church and recognized as heroes by its laws.

As we go to press sentence of death against Zepliak is commuted to 10 years' imprisonment. It is reported, however, that the death sentence has been carried out against Monsignor Constantine Butchkavitch, guilty of numerous crimes against the Soviet Regime, of opposing the decree separating church and state, of opposing the sequestration of church treasure to combat the famine along the Volga, of conducting Anti-Soviet agitation among the Russian people; and of communicating with the Polish government while that nation was at war with Russia. The Soviet government announces it will tolerate no interference from foreign capitalist nations in protecting the Workers' Republic against its internal enemies.

The United States government is worried sick over a just verdict returned against an Archbishop of the Roman Catholic Church in far away Soviet Russia. It does not give a single thought to the murder of an E. C. Gregor, just a worker, except to approve of it.

Labor is making these comparisons and will in time realize their full significance. It will then worry less about the Zepliaks and more about its own, the Gregors, and the many victims of attempted judicial assassination—Sacco and Vanzetti, Mooney and Billings, Ford and Suhr, Della and Kowalski, Chaplin and Bentall, and hundreds of others.

Buying the United States

The Russians are of the opinion that anything can be bought in the United States, even the government's consent to recognition and opening of trade relations with what it now considers an outlaw—the First Workers' Republic. So they have announced, in reply to Secretary of State Hughes' recent stand on the question of recognition, that they are willing to begin pourparlers on that basis.

Soviet spokesmen are direct in their declarations that the United States might just as rightfully pay Germany's debts, as to expect the Soviet Government to pay the debts of the Czarist and Kerensky regimes. Which Washington must admit isn't bad logic. Surely the Czarists and the Kerenskyites were greater enemies of Soviet Rule, than the Germans of Kaiser and Ebert have been or are against Washington capitalist rule.

The Russian Soviet press has given considerable space to the discussion of Hughes' latest anti-Soviet declarations. The replies have been aggressive and full of spirit, and have the Washington diplomats on the defensive. Soviet Russia is not going begging for recognition. It is the United States that will soon be in the role of beggar, on the question of recognition, and a beggar never did receive much for his wares. The price of American recognition of the Workers' Republic is falling every day. It will soon not be worth the proverbial nickel—not to mention the debts of the czar and the counter-revolution. Our tip to Washington, get busy while there is still a basis for a bargain. Absolutely no charge for this advice.

In "The Goose Step"

The piercing truth, [illegible] much that "The Goose Step" stirs up in [illegible] America's schools and colleges. No lie is too low, it is employed in keeping alive the enthusiasm and prejudices of the youth and children of the heroic days of United States history.

In order that no one get out of the step that made the Kaiser's military machine famous in its day, James Fellow, chairman of book committee of the San Jose, Cal., Library, has put the brand of his disapproval on three American histories. He has denounced them as un-American and ordered them removed from the shelves of the library.

This is what the white terror governments in Europe are doing, especially the Mussolini Fascisti Rule in Italy, and the Horthy terror in Hungary. The books banned in the California city are "The Epochs of American History," by the series of "Formation of the Union," by Albert Bushnell Hart, Professor of History at Harvard University; "National Ideals of History Traced," by the same author, and "The American Revolution" by C. H. Van Tyne, Professor of History at the University of Michigan.

This follows close on the heels of declarations that evolution must not be taught in Oklahoma and Minnesota, and the action in Wisconsin that ousted all text-books not teaching the particular brand of 100 per cent pay-triotism required in this state.

"The Goose Step" in education is rapidly developing a nation of young men and women fit only to feel the lash of the exploiters and too ignorant to rebel against it. May Upton Sinclair's book bearing this name, achieve the same result for American education that Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" brought about in the struggle for the abolition of chattel slavery. The grip of the bosses upon the schools must be broken or all intellectual progress will come to a standstill in the black night of ignorance.

The Suicide of War Veterans

There were 12,000 cases of self-murder in the United States last year. The New York Times finds its headline in the fact that 70 of these suicides were millionaires and hides as detail the information that 1,000 of them were shell-shocked veterans of the late war, who had "given way to helpless despair," in the words of the Save-a-Life League.

We have no tears for the millionaires. Most of them were victims of the bitter, fiendish, animal struggle for power in the capitalist industrial world. They played the game for what it was worth. They lost.

But the nation's youth was lied to and lured into the world war, to serve as cannon fodder in foreign lands. They did not know. Late they learned. They found out that a shell-shocked war victim doesn't make a good industrial slave and so he is cast on the scrap heap by a cannibal social system that feeds on its own young.

Yet the youth of the land might now consider the prospects for the next capitalist world war, in which the United States will play a greater role than in the last, in which there will no doubt be millions, instead of thousands American slain.

World Communism alone struggles for the ending of all wars it sends forth its demands for peace today and every day thru the Russian Soviet Republic. There is a response from the growing Communist movements in every land.

Those 1,000 suicides each year of shell-shocked war veterans, victims of "helpless despair" should be a spur urging every young worker in this country to get in touch with and help carry forward the struggle of Communism in America. Hope displaces despair in the march toward the new social order. Join the growing procession!

Militancy in "The East"

Militant workers thruout the nation are watching the Eastern District Conference of the Trade Union Educational League planned for New York City, May 6th. They want to know, what this conference should show, the progress that militancy has been making in "The East" during the past year.

The two greatest conferences of militants, so far held, have been the gatherings of the railroaders at Chicago, and the miners at Pittsburgh. The New York Conference will be general in its nature, including the needle, textile, boot and shoe, leather, metal and railroad trades. It will bring delegates from the territory reaching from New York City to Pittsburgh, and from Boston to Washington, probably the most compact industrial section of the whole United States, with its millions of cruelly exploited and poorly organized workers.

It should not be necessary to point out the importance of this meeting of labor's advance guard. It will bake history for the whole American working class. It will mark the speeding up of the drive for amalgamation, for a real Labor Party, thruout the entire East.

No militant group anywhere thruout the Eastern District can afford to remain in contemplative-rested. There is yet time to act. A few weeks remain during which even the smallest vanguard at the most isolated outpost in the working class struggle in this district can take up this question of representation and put a delegate on the job.

Militant workers of "the East"! The militants of the entire nation are watching you. Make good on this May 5th Conference and you will inspire with new enthusiasm the militant cause thruout the length and breadth of the land.

Buying the United States

The Russians are of the opinion that anything can be bought in the United States, even the government's consent to recognition and opening of trade relations with what it now considers an outlaw—the First Workers' Republic. So they have announced, in reply to Secretary of State Hughes' recent stand on the question of recognition, that they are willing to begin pourparlers on that basis.

When the Smile Disappeared

The editorial smile boasted by the "Call" lived a short life. It was a venom [illegible] more revealing than ever. This face of the "Socialist" [illegible] in new efforts to frighten Communism, which causes new hatreds to wrankle still more within them. Debs and Upton Sinclair, and Helen Keller, and many others stand solidly with the Friends of Soviet Russia in the relief efforts of this organization.

The Call dare not discuss the stand that Debs, Sinclair, Miss Keller, and the rest have taken, and that they still hold to. Instead The Call garbs itself in the slimy skin of a snake and hisses something as follows: "We only observe that this morbid offshoot of capitalism is the lunatic fringe of the labor movement." That will make comical reading for the growing numbers of militants in the powerful left wings of the miners' railroaders', steel, textile and clothing workers' unions.

Thus, for instance, Captain Paxton Hibben, executive-secretary of the American Committee for the Relief of Russian Children, can easily answer for himself when he is attacked in the April 1st issue, first page, of The Call, in an article that oozes gall in every syllable. We quote the opening paragraph only:—

"Apologists for the Communists in the United States are beginning to marshall their forces in a heavy phalanx, and to go before the people in public meetings, and in the press wherever they can get in, seeking to take the 'r' out of revolution when used by the Communists."

Thus Captain Hibben, who has waged a valiant fight against the attacks of Hoover and other foes of the First [illegible] public is now denounced as an "apologist" by this yellow "Socialist" organ for a speech he made before the Single Tax Forum in New York City, in support of the Michigan Defense. We wonder who will be the next target of this venal "Socialist" hatred that knows no bounds.

Who Is Alexander Howat?

By JOHN DORSEY

Among the most outstanding characteristics of our trade union leaders are their lack of principles and their general spinelessness. In their company Alexander Howat is as a lone pine in a landscape of sage brush. He is honest and fearless.

His connection with the labor movement has been one long struggle against terrific odds for the principles that are within him. Howat is a striking example of the kind of labor man we stand most in need of, one who has the integrity to advocate something worth while, and the courage to fight for it.

Alexander Howat was born in Glasgow, Scotland, September 10th, 1872, of a coal-mining family.

He came to the United States when three years of age. His people settled in Illinois. Here he went into the mines at the age of 10. Three years later he went to Kansas, where, with the exception of one year that he spent working on the mines of Scotland, he has been employed ever since in connection with the mining industry. He was elected President of District 14, including Kansas and three Missouri counties, in 1902, and has been re-elected for each succeeding term, until the present.

One of the strongest characteristics of Howat is his unswerving opposition to dual unionism. He is an old experienced fighter in the organization and has no sympathy whatever for the elements that say nothing can be done.

He has learned from past fights that where the militant elements put up even a little fight an organization effort they are bound to get results.

In the capitalist press recently stories appeared to the effect that Howat, upon his release from jail, would start a dual organization in opposition to the United Mine Workers.

This was a lie cut from whole cloth and was circulated by his coal-operator and union bureaucracy enemies to discredit him.

What Is a Militant?

By JAY FOX

A militant in the labor movement is a fighter for the freedom of his class, a soldier in the army of industrial progress. Does this soldier of labor carry arms? He certainly does. He packs around a pocket full of redhot pamphlets and a head full of high explosive arguments designed to prove to you and me why we should be even as he.

The militant worker is not merely a man dissatisfied with things as they are. He is not just a grumbler.

The world is full of grumblers who growl at the boss, the wages and the hours, but never do anything to remedy the evils of which they complain. The militant is not of that ilk. He sees clearly the wrongs inflicted upon his class by the robber system of industry under which we are compelled to live. He examines the machinery of capitalism carefully to see where the defect is, for he generally has no other thought than that a few changes in the system will insure justice to labor.

But after a more examination of capitalism he is forced to the conclusion that no amount of alteration would insure labor a square deal.

He finds that the capitalist system was originally designed as a means of exploiting labor and robbing the workers of the product of their toil and therefore cannot be altered to serve the ends of justice.

Then he looks around for plans of a new system of labor and a way to get it into operation and having found it, gets busy at once telling you and me the things he knows as the Trade Union Educational League.

When you see a labor union with a punch in it, look behind the punch and you will find a bunch of militants.

Editor of "The Liberator" Suggests Books for Workers to Read and Tells How to Read Them

By JOSEPH FREEMAN
Editor, "The Liberator"

To get the most out of books it is necessary to be free of two illusions. Perhaps the most common of these illusions is that books are infallible. Greater than his respect for law and government is the average worker's respect for the printed word. He will swallow at grind what he would scorn to listen to in conversation. Hence the facility with which newspapers and "experts" are able to spread all sorts of superstitious bunk about the world we live in. Books are valuable only in so far as they provoke thought. They are written by human beings, with all the virtues and vices of human beings; they are the expression of desires, fears, and prejudices which are colored by the culture of the class from which the writer springs. This point is particularly important. Just as the rulers of the middle ages bamboozled the masses into believing that the Bible is the "word of God" so the industrial barons of our own times, who control the press and the universities, try to bamboozle the masses into believing that economics, philosophy, and history are impersonal, disinterested studies of life. Science, no less than religion, is often a mask for tyranny. It is therefore the workers' first duty to himself to think out carefully everything he reads, to test it by the light of his own reason, to compare theories and stories with his own experience. He must suspend his natural reverence for "authority". He must remember that books are merely elaborate conversations, requiring a careful and critical attitude.

The second illusion is that there is a mysterious and fundamental difference between literature and propaganda. If there is a difference, it can be stated thus: literature is propaganda in favor of accepted ideas; propaganda is literature in favor of new ideas. All the important books which have ever been written have some message; they are based upon some definite philosophy of life, some distinct conception of good and evil, right and wrong, justice and injustice. Rousseau's Social Contract is a tract in favor of individual liberty; Milton's Paradise Lost was written, as the poet himself says, "to justify the ways of God to man"; Victor Hugo wrote Les Miserables to paint the miseries of poverty; Machiavelli's Il Principe, taught in the literature courses of most universities, is an essay on the dictatorship of princes; Trotzky's Dictatorship and Democracy is just as great literature; and because it discusses the dictatorship of workers it is more important for workers to read.

With these two illusions out of their minds workers can approach the following books which are frankly critical of the present order of things. They are books which provoke thought and which give a picture of the world that will stand the test of examination and that can be borne out by the experience of workers.

It would be a good thing to begin with the syllabus on Contemporary Civilization gotten out by the Columbia University. This will furnish a good background, since it deals with the physical nature of the world, some psychology and some history. It should be supplemented with James Harvey Robinson's Mind in the Making and John Dewey's Human Nature and Conduct. Both of these books will give the worker an idea of how human beings behave, the origin and nature of their feelings and ideas. They will begin to understand why the world has been so slow in making progress. Knowing something about the nature of man and the nature of man's environment, they can now take up Well's Outline of History which is an interesting and fairly accurate account of man's career in this environment. They will observe that the two great factors of modern civilization are religion and capitalism; and they can begin to read something about these two forces in detail. Christ and Anti-Christ, by Friedrich Nietzsche will prove a good mental purgative for those minds which are still constipated with the pussilanimous and hypocritical morality preached—but never practiced—by the various churches.

There are any number of vivid pictures of capitalism in the United States. Main Street and Babbit by Sinclair Lewis; Moon Calf by Floyd Dell, The Jungle by Upton Sinclair; The Iron Heel and Martin Eden, by Jack London; The Genius, The Titan, and The Financier by Theodore Dreiser; and The Harbor by Ernest Poole are imaginative and accurate studies of American life under the rule of the machine and stock-holders. They paint the scene not in abstract generalities but in concrete pictures of the lives of families and individuals, and therefore dig down to the very vitals of our civilization.

One ought now to begin analyzing the picture of dullness and oppression which these novelists paint. Veblen's Theory of the Leisure Class and Engel's Origin of the Family, Private Property and the State will cast a bright light on the workings of this monstrous machine which passes by the name of "civilization." The History of Great American Fortunes, by Gustavus Meyers; The American Empire, by Scott Nearing; and the report of the Steel Strike issued by the Interchurch Movement will give one a detailed analysis of the workings of capitalism. The nature of the American forces and of American "higher" education is exposed by Upton Sinclair in The Brass Check and The Goose Step; and war, which is one of the standard features of capitalism, can be realized in the pages of Henry Barbusse's Under Fire and Andreas Latzko's Men and War; and its nature understood in Bertrand Russel's Why Men Fight and Norman Angell's Great Illusion.
